

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Harvard

EAR

HARVARD LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY

National Reporter System—State Series

THE SOUTHEASTERN REPORTER

WITH KEY-NUMBER ANNOTATIONS

VOLUME 71
PERMANENT EDITION

CONTAINING ALL THE DECISIONS OF THE

SUPREME COURTS OF APPEALS OF VIRGINIA AND WEST VIRGINIA
THE SUPREME COURTS OF NORTH CAROLINA AND SOUTH CAROLINA, AND THE SUPREME COURT AND COURT OF APPEALS OF GEORGIA

WITH TABLE OF SOUTHEASTERN CASES IN WHICH REHEARINGS HAVE BEEN DENIED

MAY 20—SEPTEMBER 30, 1911

ST. PAUL
WEST PUBLISHING CO.
1911

KF
135
100
56

COPYRIGHT, 1911
BY WEST PUBLISHING COMPANY
(71 S.E.)

JUDGES

OF THE

COURTS REPORTED DURING THE PERIOD COVERED BY THIS VOLUME

GEORGIA—Supreme Court.

WILLIAM H. FISH, CHIEF JUSTICE.
BEVERLY D. EVANS, PRESIDING JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

J. H. LUMPKIN.
MARCUS W. BECK.

SAMUEL C. ATKINSON.
HORACE M. HOLDEN.

Court of Appeals.

BENJAMIN H. HILL, CHIEF JUDGE.

JUDGES.

RICHARD B. RUSSELL

ARTHUR G. POWELL.

NORTH CAROLINA—Supreme Court.

WALTER CLARK, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

PLATT D. WALKER.
GEORGE H. BROWN.

WILLIAM A. HOKE.
WM. R. ALLEN.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Supreme Court.

IRA B. JONES, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

EUGENE B. GARY.

C. A. WOODS.

DANIEL E. HYDRICK.

VIRGINIA—Supreme Court of Appeals.

JAMES KEITH, PRESIDENT.

JUDGES.

RICHARD H. CARDWELL.
JOHN A. BUCHANAN.

GEORGE M. HARRISON.
STAFFORD G. WHITTLE.

WEST VIRGINIA—Supreme Court of Appeals.

L. JUDSON WILLIAMS, PRESIDENT.

JUDGES.

HENRY BRANNON.

GEORGE POFFENBARGER.

WILLIAM N. MILLER.

IRA E. ROBINSON.

AMENDMENTS TO RULES

COURT OF APPEALS OF GEORGIA¹

It is ordered that rule 8 of this court [Civil Code (1910), § 6332] be amended so as to read as follows (the amendment to relate to all bills of exceptions signed after September 1, 1911):

Bills of exceptions must distinctly specify the points on which error is assigned. Where the error alleged is in the granting or denying of a new trial, one assignment of error is sufficient to reach all the grounds of the motion on which the grant or refusal was based; except that where a plaintiff in error in a criminal case intends to insist in this court that the verdict is without evidence to support it because the venue was not properly or sufficiently shown, or the time the offense was committed was not properly or sufficiently proved, and this particular point is not specifically raised in the motion for a new trial, the bill of exceptions shall specifically assign error as to this point or it will be treated as waived; and if such an assignment of error is made, there shall be incorporated into the bill of exceptions a statement of the evidence relating to the point, or a statement that the evidence on the subject has been set forth fully in the brief of the evidence. Counsel, when signing bills of exceptions, or acknowledging service thereof, will add to their signatures their post-office addresses; and upon failure of counsel to do this, they shall not be entitled to the benefit of any notices required by these rules to be given by the clerk.

¹For original rule, see 57 S. E. 2.

SUPREME COURT OF NORTH CAROLINA

Rules of Practice

Rule 29¹ shall be amended so as to read as follows:

29. HOW PRINTED.

The transcript of an appeal shall be printed under the direction of the clerk of this court, and in the same type and style, and pages of same size, as the reports of this court, unless the transcript is printed or is being printed when the appeal is docketed. If the transcript of an appeal is not printed or is not being printed when the appeal is docketed, and the transcript is required by this rule to be printed under the direction of the clerk of this court, the appellant shall deposit with the clerk of this court an amount sufficient to cover the estimated cost of printing the transcript, and said estimate shall be made by the clerk of this court at the rate of sixty cents per printed page (which includes 10 cents per page to the clerk). When it appears that the clerk has waived the requirement of a cash deposit by appellant to cover estimated cost of printing, and the cost of printing has not been paid when the case is called for argument, the court will, in its discretion, on motion of counsel for appellee or a statement by the clerk, dismiss the appeal.

Adopted by Supreme Court of North Carolina, May 30, 1911.

¹For rule as originally adopted, see 66 S. E. v.

COURT RULES

SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS OF VIRGINIA

I. MOTIONS.

No affidavits shall be read in support of, or opposition to, any motion hereafter made to the court, unless reasonable notice, in writing, be given to the opposing party of the time and place of taking the same; and every motion which is not a motion of course, shall be supported by affidavit.

II. BRIEFS.

A clear and concise printed brief of the points intended to be insisted on by each party in an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, and the authorities in support thereof, signed by his counsel, on the part of the appellant, shall be filed in the clerk's office fifteen days before the argument of the case begins; and the appellee's brief shall be filed with the clerk at least eight days before the argument begins, and the reply of the appellant shall be filed at least two days before the argument begins, in which he shall insert all the authorities relied on by him; and no error other than such as shall be pointed out and insisted on in such brief, on the part of the plaintiff or appellant, shall (without leave of the court) be admitted as a ground for argument, on the hearing of the cause. No cause shall be proceeded in without such brief. But a party who has prepared and filed a brief may insist on a hearing when the cause is regularly called, although no brief shall have been made on the part of his adversary. If one of the parties omits to file such a brief, he cannot be heard, and the case will be heard ex parte upon the argument of the party by whom the brief is filed. The plaintiff or appellant may adopt the petition as his brief. If no brief be filed by either party when a cause is called, it shall stand continued until the next term, unless the court shall otherwise order.

Counsel must mail or deliver to the opposing counsel a copy of his brief within the prescribed time for filing briefs.

III. ATTORNEYS AND ARGUMENTS.

When there are two or more counsel on the same side, no one of them shall argue twice, except by leave of the court; nor shall more than two counsel, representing the same interest of one or more party or parties, be permitted to argue for such party or parties.

IV. AS TO READING RECORDS AND CITING AUTHORITIES.

In no case is it necessary or proper to read the record to the court; but counsel may refer thereto, and state what they consider as proved, on which they rely. And in all cases it is recommended to the gentlemen of the bar to select and cite only the most pertinent authorities.

V. ARGUMENTS UPON EXCEPTIONS TO REPORTS.

No oral argument will be permitted upon exceptions to a master commissioner's report, except upon naked questions of law, without reference to details of evidence, or upon any motion to advance a cause to the privileged docket, or upon any motion to require new or additional security upon, or to increase the penalty of an appeal or supersedeas bond. Counsel are required to state the grounds for and against such motions in writing.

VI. CAUSES HEARD OUT OF COURSE.

No cause shall be taken up out of order on the docket, or be set down for any particular day, except under special and peculiar circumstances, to be shown to the court, by motion, in writing, after notice of at least two days to the opposite party.

VII. CERTIFICATES OF JUDGMENTS, DECREES, ETC.

No certificate of a judgment or decree of the Court of Appeals shall, without the special direction of the court, be transmitted to any inferior court in less than sixty days from the rendition thereof, unless the court shall previously have adjourned for one or more weeks.

VIII. CONSIDERATION OF GENERAL ERROR.

In any appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, if error is perceived against any appellee or defendant, the court will consider the whole record as before them, and will reverse the proceedings, either in whole or in part, in the same manner as they would do were the appellee or defendant to bring the same before them, either by appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, unless such error be waived by the appellee or defendant, which waiver shall be considered a release of all error as to him.

IX. REINSTATEMENTS OF APPEAL.

No appeal which shall have been dismissed or abated by the court shall be reinstated or revived after the lapse of sixty days from such dismissal or abatement, except for good cause shown the court, verified by affidavits, and upon reasonable notice to the adverse party of the time of making the motion; nor then, except in very special cases, unless such motion be made within one hundred and twenty days from the time of such dismissal or abatement; provided, that if the court shall not be in session on the day to which such notice shall be given, a further time of ten days shall be allowed the party to exhibit his motion after the next meeting of the court.

X. CERTIFICATE OF CLERK.

When an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas shall be awarded by this court, it shall be the duty of the clerk to issue a copy of the order allowing such appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas, to certify the fact of the allowance thereof to the court below.

XI. NOTICE TO ABSENTEES.

Whenever it is necessary that a nonresident party should have notice of an order of this court, it shall be published once a week, for four successive weeks, in the manner prescribed by the act of assembly, in the case of absent defendants.

XII. ORDER OF ARGUMENT.

The court on the first day of each term will commence calling the cases for argument, in the order in which they stand on the docket, and proceed from day to day during the term, in the same order, and if the parties, or either of them, shall be ready when the case is called, the same will be heard; and, if neither party shall be ready to proceed in the argument, the case shall go down to the foot of the docket. Ten causes only shall be considered as liable to be called on each day during the term, including the one that may be under argument. No cause shall be taken up out of order on the docket, or be set down for any particular day, except causes which, from their own peculiar character, or the mandate of the law, are regarded as privileged cases.

XIII. TIME OF ARGUMENTS.

In the argument of causes one hour and fifteen minutes will be allowed each side, except in felony cases, in which two hours will be allowed each side, and no more, in either class of cases, without special leave of the court. The time thus allowed may be apportioned between the counsel on the same side, at their discretion; provided always, that a fair opening of the case shall be made by the party having the opening and closing arguments, in which he shall cite all the authorities intended to be relied on by him.

XIV. CALL OF THE DOCKET.

When any case, which shall be called in the due course of the regular calling of the docket, shall be passed, because the proper process has not been executed, though such case shall not lose its place on the docket, yet it shall not be again called until the next regular calling of the docket.

XV. CAUSES MAY BE SUBMITTED ON PRINTED ARGUMENTS.

When a cause shall be called for hearing, the court will receive printed arguments (a copy for each judge) if the counsel on either or both sides shall choose so to submit the same, and the cause shall stand on the same footing as if there were an appearance by counsel. But when a case is taken up for trial upon the regular call of the docket and argued orally in behalf of only one of the parties, no printed argument shall be received, unless it be filed as prescribed by rule two, and the court will proceed to consider and decide the case upon the ex parte argument.

XVI. PROCEEDINGS IN CRIMINAL CASES.

When a writ of error in any criminal case shall be awarded by a judge in vacation, the same shall be made returnable the first day of the next term thereafter, and if awarded by the court when in session, it shall be made returnable forthwith; and in either case the same shall be heard as soon as the record shall be printed, in preference to any civil business on the docket. And when judgment shall be given in any criminal case, the same shall be certified forthwith to the court from which it came, without further orders.

XVII. REHEARING.

No application for a rehearing will be entertained unless made within ten days after the decision is announced (except as otherwise authorized by law) and no rehearing will be allowed unless one of the judges who concurred in the decision shall be dissatisfied with it and desires a rehearing. And an application under the Code chapter 170, section 3492, to rehear and review any case decided by this court within the last fifteen days of the preceding term, shall be made before the end of the said term, or within the first fifteen days of the next succeeding term, and not thereafter. And no application for a rehearing will be entertained by the court, in any case, unless the reasons therefor, printed, shall be filed at the time such application is made.

XVIII. ARGUMENT DOCKET.

It shall be the duty of the clerk, at the commencement of each session, to make a list of all causes ready for hearing and represented by counsel on either side, which shall constitute the argument docket. A cause may at any time, on motion, without notice, be placed on this docket by order of the court.

XIX. MANDAMUS AND PROHIBITION.

Applications addressed to this court for the issue of writs other than the writ of habeas corpus, by virtue of its original jurisdiction, will be placed upon the general docket as they mature, and be heard when reached, upon the regular call thereof; subject, however, to be advanced for good cause shown in accordance with rule six.

The records shall be printed under the supervision of the clerk, as in other cases, and must be submitted upon printed briefs, unless the court shall otherwise direct.

XX. FOREIGN ATTORNEYS.

Foreign attorneys who desire to obtain a certificate from the Court of Appeals to practice law in the courts of this State as provided by section 3192 of the Code of 1904, without standing a law examination, must furnish a certificate from the court of last resort in the state, territory, or District of Columbia, wherein he has qualified, that he has practiced law for three or more years in said court, that he is of good moral character, and a proper person to be licensed to practice law. This certificate must be signed by the Chief Justice, or President, of said court, whose signature must be attested by the clerk of the said court and under the seal thereof.

In addition, a certificate must be furnished from two practicing attorneys of such state, territory, or District of Columbia, practicing in said court, that the applicant is of good moral character and a proper person to be licensed to practice law, whose signatures must be attested by the said clerk in like manner.

Rules and Regulations Prescribed by the Board of Law Examiners for Licensing Persons to Practice Law.

1. Until otherwise provided, examinations will be held under the act of the General Assembly amending and re-enacting section 3191 of the Code, approved March 14, 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 238), as follows:

At the capitol in Richmond on the first Wednesday in November, and at Roanoke on the fourth Wednesday in June, in each year.

2. Every person over twenty-one years of age applying for a license to practice law, must first have obtained from the circuit court for the county, or the corporation court of the city, wherein he resides, a certificate that he is a person of honest demeanor, is over the age of twenty-one years, and has resided in this State the preceding six months.

The application for such certificate shall be in writing, addressed to the court, specifying the day of the month when the motion therefor to the court will be made, and be accompanied by the written recommendation of two members of the bar of his judicial circuit, who are practicing attorneys in the Supreme Court of Appeals, speaking of their personal knowledge, that he is of good moral character and a proper person to be licensed to practice law. Such application and recommendation shall be filed with the clerk of such circuit or corporation court ten days before the day on which the court will be asked to grant the said certificate, and a copy thereof forthwith delivered by the clerk to the judge of the court.

3. Every person over nineteen and under twenty-one years of age applying for a license to practice law must first have obtained from the circuit court for the county, or the corporation court of the city, wherein he resides, a certificate that he is a person of honest demeanor; that he is over nineteen years of age; that he has studied law for a period of two years in a law school of this State, or in the office of a practicing attorney of this state (as the case may be); that he will attain the age of twenty-one years on the — day of —, 19—, (giving the exact date); and that he has resided in this state the preceding six months; said certificate to be obtained in the manner prescribed for persons over twenty-one years of age.

4. Every person who desires to be examined shall file with the secretary of this board a certified copy of his application, of the recommendations of the members of the bar, and of the certificate of his circuit or corporation court, accompanied by a fee of $10.00, in certified check, money order or cash (which shall cover all costs of examination, including license), and should the aggregate of the fees prove excessive, after deducting the expense of examination, such excess shall be returned to the applicants ratably. Said papers are to be filed and deposited at least five days prior to the day of examination, and should be addressed to M. B. Watts, Secretary, etc., Richmond, Va., to whom all correspondence also should be addressed. The papers filed must show upon their face that the order of court granting the certificate was made on the day named in the application, or that the application was docketed on that day. Applicants are urged and expected to see personally that their applications, the court order thereon and other papers conform strictly to these rules.

5. Any applicant failing to pass an examination may, after six months, again apply in writing, addressed to the secretary of the board, setting forth that he has diligently pursued the study of the law for six months prior to the second examination, and specifying the school where he has pursued his studies or the course of reading which he has followed, and shall not be required to pay an extra or additional fee for the second examination; and if any applicant who fails to pass the second examination apply again, he shall proceed in the same manner as a new applicant.

6. Any applicant failing to appear shall be charged with his proportionate part of the cost of the examination for which he made application, but may stand any subsequent examination within two years from the date of his original application on his original papers and without additional charge; provided he shall give reason satisfactory to the board for his failure to appear.

7. Applicants must provide themselves with fountain pens or indelible pencils for use in the examination room.

8. The questions and answers of every examination will be in writing, but where is doubt as to the results of the examination of any applicant, he shall be liable also to an oral examination.

9. The board, in grading papers, will take into consideration not only the legal learning of the applicant, but his general qualification to practice in the courts of this state as an attorney and counsellor at law.

10. All applicants will be liable to be examined on the following subjects, viz.: Real and Personal Property, Domestic Relations, Contracts, Agency, Partnership, Negotiable Instruments, Insurance, Corporations, Wills and Personal Representatives, Torts, Equity Jurisprudence, Pleading and Practice at Law and in Equity, Evidence, Crimes and Criminal Procedure, Powers and Duties of the Corporation Commission, Code of Virginia, Constitutional Law, and the Code of Legal Ethics as adopted by the Virginia State Bar Association.

11. Every applicant will be required to affix to his examination and subscribe with his own name the following pledge: "I hereby certify that I have neither received nor given aid or assistance in any manner during this examination."

In case any applicant shall violate this pledge, he will be denied a recommendation for admission to the bar.

*

CASES REPORTED

	Page		Page
Abbott v. Padrosa (Ga.).....	419	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Ohandler v. (Ga.)	1066
Adams Exp. Co., Fielder & Turley v. (W. Va.).....	99	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Farmers' & Spinners' Co. v., two cases (S. C.).....	991
Adel Lumber Co., Valdosta, M. & W. R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	803	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Goldsboro (N. C.).....	514
Aetna Indemnity Co. of Hartford, Conn., Commissioners of Lexington v. (N. C.)..	214	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Graham v. (S. C.)	235
Aiken, Shell & Southerland v. (N. C.).....	230	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Jenkins v. (S. C.)	1010
Ailes v. Hallam (W. Va.).....	273	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Jenkins v. (S. C.)	1018
Akridge v. State (Ga. App.).....	494	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Lane & Autry (Ga. App.).....	918
Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Allison (Ga.)	800	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Locklear (Ga. App.).....	683
Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Daffron (Ga.)	799	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Middleton & Ravenel v., two cases (S. C.).....	991
Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Jones (Ga.)	787	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Seaboard Air Line Ry. (S. C.).....	84
Albritton v. Tygart (Ga. App.).....	512	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Seaboard Air Line Ry. (S. C.).....	89
Alderman v. Valdosta, M. & W. R. Co. (Ga. App.)	931	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Washington v. (Ga.)	1006
Alderman & Sons Co., Hunter v. (S. C.)..	1082	Atlantic Coast Line R. R., Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. v. (N. C.).....	71
Aldridge v. Cole (Ga.).....	891	Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp., Crawford v. (S. C.)	1049
Alexander v. North Carolina Sav. Bank & Trust Co. (N. C.).....	69	Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. v. E. P. Burton Lumber Co. (S. C.).....	820
Allen v. Clara (Ga.).....	896	Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp., Flagler v. (S. C.)	848
Allen v. Clara (Ga.).....	1101	Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp., Hodge v. (S. C.)	1009
Allen, Heckheimer v. (S. C.).....	1033	Atlantic Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Savannah (Ga.).....	1115
Allison, Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.)	800	Augusta-Aiken R. Co., Craig v. (S. C.).....	983
Allison v. Fredericksburg (Va.).....	525	Auld v. Southern R. Co. (Ga.).....	426
Allworden v. Nelson (S. C.).....	982	Austin Mfg. Co. v. Coffman (W. Va.).....	383
Alt, Harman v. (W. Va.).....	709	Averill v. Boyer (W. Va.).....	707
American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Graham (Ga. App.).....	761	Ayers, Morehead v. (Ga.).....	798
American Agr. Chemical Co. v. Shy (Ga. App.)	876	Backus v. Norfolk & A. Terminal Co. (Va.) ..	528
American Car & Foundry Co., Chandler v. (W. Va.).....	387	Bacon, Ellis v. (Ga.).....	1050
American Car & Foundry Co., Denny v. (W. Va.).....	706	Bagwell v. Milam (Ga. App.).....	684
American Nat. Bank, Steed v. (Ga.).....	1116	Baker v. Berry Hill Mineral Springs Co. (Va.)	626
American Suburban Corp., Anderson v. (N. C.)	221	Baker, Gauding v. (Ga. App.).....	1013
Anderson v. American Suburban Corp. (N. C.)	221	Baker v. Kendrick (Ga. App.).....	498
Anderson v. Anderson (Ga.).....	6	Baker v. State (Ga. App.).....	594
Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, Clarke v. (Ga. App.).....	1122	Baker, State v. (W. Va.).....	186
Anderson v. Nelson (Ga.).....	160	Baker v. White (Ga.).....	871
Anderson Phosphate & Oil Co., Sing Sisk v. (Ga. App.).....	763	Baldwin, Roberts v. (N. C.).....	319
Andrews v. Atlanta (Ga. App.).....	493	Baldwin, Saunders v. (Va.).....	620
Appleby v. State (Ga. App.).....	876	Baldwin, State v. (N. C.).....	212
Arminius Chemical Co. v. White's Adm'r (Va.)	637	Bamberg v. Harrison (S. C.).....	1088
Arnall, Roberts v. (Ga. App.).....	590	Bank of Gassaway v. Stalnaker (W. Va.)..	183
Arnold-Forrest Horse & Mule Co. v. Fleeman (Ga. App.).....	766	Bank of Mecklenburg, Saunders v. (Va.)..	714
Arp, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	867	Barnes v. Maddox (Ga.).....	129
Ashecraft Bros., Unitype Co. v. (N. C.).....	61	Barnes v. Peterson (Ga.)	163
Ashe, State v. (S. C.).....	827	Barrow, Edmunds v. (Va.).....	544
Athens Mut. Ins. Co. v. Evans (Ga.).....	892	Barry, Mattox v. (Ga.).....	155
Atkinson, Battle v. (Ga. App.).....	775	Bartlett, Millan v. (W. Va.).....	13
Atlanta Home Ins. Co. v. Smith (Ga.).....	902	Bartoli v. Grandy (S. C.)	280
Atlanta Ice & Coal Co. v. Reeves (Ga.).....	421	Barwick, State v. (S. C.).....	839
Atlanta Oil & Fertilizer Co., Coffee v. (Ga.) ..	3	Bashinski Bros. v. Lake (Ga. App.).....	702
Atlanta Steel Co. v. Hughes (Ga.).....	728	Bates, State v. (S. C.).....	664
Atlanta Steel Co. v. Hughes (Ga. App.).....	964	Batchelder v. Randolph (Va.).....	533
Atlanta & C. Air Line R. Co., Murphy v. (S. C.).....	296	Battle v. Atkinson (Ga. App.).....	775
Atlanta & C. Air Line R. Co., Rookard v. (S. C.).....	992	Baxter, State v. (S. C.).....	83
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Boney v. (N. C.)	87	Bazen, State v. (S. C.).....	779
		Beard, Clark v. (W. Va.).....	188

	Page		Page
Beck & Gregg Hardware Co. v. G. E. Lyndon & Co. (Ga. App.).....	763	Carnahan, Myers v. (W. Va.).....	15
Belcher, State v. (W. Va.).....	272	Carolina, C. & O. Ry., Berry v. (N. C.)...	322
Bell, Mills v. (Ga.).....	1120	Carolina Portland Cement Co., Central Georgia Brick Co. v. (Ga.).....	1048
Benton v. State (Ga. App.).....	8	Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Marshall (Ga. App.).....	942
Benton v. State (Ga. App.).....	498	Carpenter v. Camp Mfg. Co. (Va.).....	559
Berkeley County Court, Hannis Distilling Co. v. (W. Va.).....	576	Carpenter v. Crowley (Ga.).....	2
Berkstein v. Atlanta (Ga. App.).....	432	Carr v. Ratledge (Ga.).....	773
Berry v. Carolina, C. & O. Ry. (N. C.)....	322	Carr v. Rountree (Ga. App.).....	589
Berry Hill Mineral Springs Co., Baker v. (Va.).....	626	Carter v. Gabrels (Ga.).....	8
Bethune, State v. (S. C.).....	29	Carter v. Keeton & Coleman (Va.).....	554
Biggin, Cavanaugh v. (Ga. App.).....	779	Carter v. Walden (Ga.).....	1047
Bird, Parish v. (Ga. App.).....	494	Carter-Patterson Detective Agency v. Harris (Ga. App.).....	497
Blackmon v. Taylor (Ga.).....	139	Carter & Co. v. Coston (Ga. App.).....	764
Blake, Hawkins v. (W. Va.).....	191	Carter & Co. v. Swift Fertilizer Works (Ga. App.).....	494
Blount v. State (Ga. App.).....	377	Cary, Harris v. (Va.).....	551
Blue Ridge Lumber Co. v. Greenwood (Ga.)	135	Cary, Milledgeville Cotton Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	503
B. M. & L. F. Grant v. Elrod (Ga. App.)	501	Cason v. Tye (Ga. App.).....	593
Board of Education of Paulding County, Meadows v. (Ga.).....	146	Castle v. Castle (W. Va.).....	385
Board of Trustees of Youngsville Tp. v. Webb (N. C.).....	520	Castle v. Gibson (W. Va.).....	385
Boney v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (N. C.)	87	Cavanaugh v. Biggin (Ga. App.).....	779
Bonner v. State (Ga.).....	8	Central Georgia Brick Co., Butler v. (Ga.)	1090
Bonner, Willis v. (Ga.).....	1048	Central Georgia Brick Co. v. Carolina Portland Cement Co. (Ga.).....	1048
Bostwick v. Massee & Felton Lumber Co. (Ga. App.).....	499	Central Inv. Co., Englehart-Hitchcock Co. v. (Ga.).....	787
Bosworth v. Rome (Ga.).....	770	Central of Georgia R. Co., Ethridge v. (Ga.).....	1063
Boyd v. State (Ga.).....	416	Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gill (Ga.)...	166
Boyd, Timmons v. (S. C.).....	298	Central of Georgia R. Co., Howard v. (Ga. App.).....	1017
Boyd v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.)...	28	Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Macon Ry. & Light Co. (Ga. App.).....	1076
Boyer, Averill v. (W. Va.).....	707	Central of Georgia R. Co., Morrison v. (Ga.).....	674
Boynton, State v. (N. C.).....	841	Chamlee Lumber Co. v. Crichton (Ga.)....	673
B. S. Josey & Co. v. Burris (S. C.)....	469	Chandler v. American Car & Foundry Co. (W. Va.).....	387
Branch v. Johnson (Ga. App.).....	1123	Chandler v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (Ga.).....	1066
Branch, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga. App.)....	696	Charleston & W. C. R. Co., Traynham v. (S. C.).....	813
Bridges, Loveless v. (Ga.).....	166	Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Harvey Coal & Coke Co. v. (W. Va.).....	178
Bridges v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (Ga.).....	161	Chestnut Hill Cemetery Ass'n, Town of Constitution v. (Ga.).....	1037
Bright, State v. (S. C.).....	821	Chichester, Buford v. (W. Va.).....	120
Broad River Lumber Co., Younce v. (N. C.)	329	Childs, Glass v. (Ga. App.).....	920
Broom v. Grizzard (Ga.).....	430	Chiles, Shaw v. (Ga. App.).....	745
Brotherton v. Stricklin (Ga.).....	774	Christenbury, Piedmont Lumber Co. v. (N. C.).....	337
Brown v. Dennis (Ga.).....	421	Citizens' & Southern Bank, Lynah v. (Ga.)	469
Brown v. Green (S. C.).....	958	City Council of Augusta, State v. (S. C.)...	366
Brown v. Hutchison (N. C.).....	302	City Council of Greenville, Bruce v. (S. C.)	817
Brown v. Rape (Ga.).....	802	City of Anderson v. Gist (S. C.).....	50
Brown Carriage Co. v. Dowd (N. C.).....	721	City of Atlanta, Andrews v. (Ga. App.)...	493
Brownlee, Waters v. (Ga.).....	6	City of Atlanta, Berkstein v. (Ga. App.)...	432
Bruce v. City Council of Greenville (S. C.)	817	City of Atlanta, Lumpkin v. (Ga. App.)...	755
Bryan v. Meaders Bros. (Ga. App.).....	491	City of Atlanta, May v. (Ga. App.).....	499
Bryant, White v. (Ga.).....	677	City of Atlanta, Oldknow v. (Ga. App.)...	1015
Buford v. Chichester (W. Va.).....	120	City of Atlanta, Union & Mechanics Club v. (Ga.).....	1060
Burdett, People's Nat. Bank v. (W. Va.)...	399	City of Atlanta, Watson v. (Ga.).....	664
Burnsides, Myers v. (S. C.).....	977	City of Bainbridge, Manor v. (Ga.).....	1101
Burris, B. S. Josey & Co. v. (S. C.).....	469	City of Brunswick v. Deaver (Ga.).....	242
Burton v. Melnert & Miller (Ga.).....	870	City of Columbia, Corry v. (S. C.).....	49
Burton v. State (Ga. App.).....	1006	City of Cordele v. Jeter (Ga. App.).....	589
Burton Lumber Co., Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. v. (S. C.).....	820	City of Elberton, Tate v. (Ga.).....	420
Bush, Hudkins v. (W. Va.).....	106	City of Elkins, Heavner v. (W. Va.).....	184
Butler v. Central Georgia Brick Co. (Ga.)...	1090	City of Forsyth, White v. (Ga.).....	1073
Butterick Pub. Co., Paxson Bros. v. (Ga.)...	1105	City of Fredericksburg, Allison v. (Va.)...	525
Butts County v. Jackson Banking Co. (Ga.).....	1065	City of Goldsboro, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. (N. C.).....	514
Butts County v. Johnson (Ga.).....	428	City of Hazlehurst, Langston v. (Ga. App.)	592
Butts County v. Wright (Ga.).....	1048	City of Jackson, King v. (Ga. App.).....	491
Cabe v. Southern R. Co. (N. C.).....	453	City of Moultrie, Horkan v. (Ga.).....	785
Cabell County Court, Kirtley v. (W. Va.)...	401	City of Portsmouth v. Lee (Va.).....	630
Cable Co., Ivey v. (Ga.).....	129	City of Rome, Bosworth v. (Ga.).....	770
Calder v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.).....	841	City of Rome, Lanham & Sons Co. v. (Ga.)	770
Caldwell, Fort v. (S. C.).....	360	City of Rome, Martin v. (Ga. App.).....	879
Calhoun v. State (Ga. App.).....	765	City of Savannah, Atlantic Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. (Ga.).....	1115
Camden Water, Light & Ice Co., McKain v. (S. C.).....	949
Camp Mfg. Co., Carpenter v. (Va.).....	559
Camp Mfg. Co., Seward v. (Va.).....	614
Campbell, Patterson v. (Ga.).....	1117
Campbell, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga. App.)...	934
Cannon v. Gorham (Ga.).....	142
Caraker v. Hicks (Ga. App.).....	765
Caraker, Miller v. (Ga. App.).....	9

	Page		Page
City of Savannah v. Standard Fuel Supply Co. (Ga.).....	787	De Loach, Durden v. (Ga. App.).....	493
City of Thomasville, Mosley v. (Ga. App.).....	765	De Loach, Tippins v. (Ga. App.).....	497
Clare, Allen v. (Ga.).....	896	Dempsey v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. (W. Va.).....	284
Clare, Allen v. (Ga.).....	1101	Dennis, Brown v. (Ga.).....	421
Clark v. Beard (W. Va.).....	188	Denny v. American Car & Foundry Co. (W. Va.).....	706
Clark, Hammond v. (Ga.).....	479	Devlin v. Devlin (S. C.).....	960
Clarke v. Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson (Ga. App.).....	1122	Di Bacco, Hunt v. (W. Va.).....	584
Clarke County v. Gamble (Ga.).....	797	Dickey, Osborne v. (Ga. App.).....	763
Clemens, Harrison v. (Va.).....	538	Dickey, Southern Pine Co. v. (Ga.).....	1110
Clements, Rawlins v. (Ga. App.).....	490	Dicks v. Nimmons (S. C.).....	47
Cleveland Mill & Power Co., Town of Shelby v. (N. C.).....	218	Dillard, Holtzendorff v. (Ga.).....	132
Cline v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. (W. Va.).....	705	Dillard, Holtzendorff v. (Ga.).....	133
Clyatt v. Taylor (Ga.).....	1076	Dinsmore, Westerman v. (W. Va.).....	250
Cobb v. Hall (Ga.).....	145	Dotson v. State (Ga.).....	164
Coffee v. Atlanta Oil & Fertilizer Co. (Ga.).....	3	Doughitt v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ga.).....	470
Coffield v. E. A. Jenkins Motor Co. (S. C.).....	969	Douglasville Banking Co., Garner v. (Ga.).....	478
Coffman, Austin Mfg. Co. v. (W. Va.).....	383	Dowd, Brown Carriage Co. v. (N. C.).....	721
Cole, Aldridge v. (Ga.).....	891	Drew v. State (Ga.).....	1108
Coleman v. State (Ga. App.).....	493	Droney Lumber Co., Comstock v. (W. Va.).....	255
Coles' Heirs v. Jamerson (Va.).....	618	Du Bose, Georgia, S. & F. R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	945
Collier, Hamby v. (Ga.).....	431	Du Bose v. Kell (S. C.).....	371
Collins, Currie v. (Ga.).....	798	Du Bose v. Thomas (Ga.).....	1106
Collins v. White Oak Fuel Co. (W. Va.).....	277	Dukes v. State (Ga. App.).....	921
Columbia Electric St. Ry., Light & Power Co., Harrell v. (S. C.).....	359	Dunbar, Tidwell v. (Ga.).....	872
Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., In re (S. C.).....	1013	Dunlop v. Smith (Ga.).....	3
Columbus Iron Works Co., Sharpe v. (Ga.).....	787	Durden v. De Loach (Ga. App.).....	493
Commissioners of Lexington v. Aetna Indemnity Co. of Hartford, Conn. (N. C.).....	214	Durham, State v. (S. C.).....	847
Commonwealth, Jessie v. (Va.).....	612	Durham Traction Co., Houston v. (N. C.).....	21
Commonwealth, Washington Southern R. Co. v. (Va.).....	539	Durr, State v. (W. Va.).....	767
Comstock v. J. R. Droney Lumber Co. (W. Va.).....	255	Duval v. Mathews (Ga.).....	1111
Consoivo & Cheshire v. Ferries Co. (Va.).....	634	D. W. Alderman & Sons Co., Hunter v. (S. C.).....	1082
Cook, Mullen v. (W. Va.).....	566	E. A. Jenkins Motor Co., Coffield v. (S. C.).....	969
Cooke v. Young (S. C.).....	837	Easterling v. State (Ga. App.).....	774
Cooper, Leitner v. (Ga. App.).....	596	Eastman Cotton Mills v. Suggs (Ga.).....	667
Copp v. State (W. Va.).....	580	Eaton v. State (Ga. App.).....	1004
Corley v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.).....	1035	Eberhardt v. State (Ga. App.).....	948
Corry v. Columbia (S. C.).....	49	Edge v. Thomas (Ga. App.).....	875
Costner v. Piedmont Cotton Mills Co. (N. C.).....	85	Edgell, Mills v. (W. Va.).....	574
Coston, Carter & Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	764	Edinger v. Southern Oil Co. (W. Va.).....	266
Craig v. Augusta-Aiken R. Co. (S. C.).....	983	Edmonson v. Thomason (Va.).....	536
Crapps v. Smith (Ga. App.).....	501	Edmunds v. Barrow (Va.).....	544
Crawford v. Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. (S. C.).....	1049	Edwards, Hall v. (Ga.).....	901
Crenshaw, Seneca Co. v. (S. C.).....	1031	Edwards, State v. (S. C.).....	826
Crichton, Chamlee Lumber Co. v. (Ga.).....	673	El Goldman & Co., T. I. Thomason & Son v. (Ga. App.).....	596
Crotty, McDonald Colliery Co. v. (W. Va.).....	568	Elder v. Woodruff Hardware & Mfg. Co. (Ga. App.).....	806
Crow v. Southern R. Co. (Ga.).....	665	Elledge v. Wharton (S. C.).....	657
Crowley, Carpenter v. (Ga.).....	2	Ellington-Guy Timber Co., Smith v. (N. C.).....	445
Crummey v. Spell (Ga.).....	790	Elliott v. Southern R. Co. (N. C.).....	339
Cummings, Gass v. (Ga.).....	135	Ellis v. Bacon (Ga.).....	1050
Currie v. Collins (Ga.).....	798	Ellis, Dawkins, v. (W. Va.).....	182
Curry, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	1123	Ellison, Son & Co. v. Flat Top Grocery Co. (W. Va.).....	891
Curtis v. Piney Colliery Co. (W. Va.).....	207	Elrod v. B. M. & L. F. Grant (Ga. App.).....	501
		Emmett Shaw Co., Trigg Candy Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	679
Daffron, Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	799	Empire Bldg. Trust v. Medlock (Ga.).....	676
Dandridge, Kerfoot v. (W. Va.).....	396	Englehart-Hitchcock Co. v. Central Inv. Co. (Ga.).....	787
Daniel v. State (Ga. App.).....	875	English v. Hogan (Ga.).....	663
Daniels & Co., Wyone Shoe Co. v. (Ga.).....	1	E. P. Burton Lumber Co., Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. v. (S. C.).....	820
Darley v. Mallary Bros. Machinery Co. (Ga.).....	471	Eplee v. Southern R. Co. (N. C.).....	825
Darnell v. Flynn (W. Va.).....	16	Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States, Security Bank of Richmond v. (Va.).....	647
Darnell v. Musick (W. Va.).....	16	Estes v. Estes (Ga.).....	1120
Darvey v. State (Ga.).....	661	Estes v. Palmour (Ga. App.).....	590
Dave, Hawkins v. (Ga.).....	873	Estes v. Winn (Ga.).....	470
Davis v. Moore (Ga.).....	135	Ethridge v. Central of Georgia R. Co. (Ga.).....	1063
Davis, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	1005	Evans, Athens Mut. Ins. Co. v. (Ga.).....	892
Davis v. State (Ga. App.).....	603	Evans, Saffold v. (Ga.).....	663
Davis Mercantile Co. v. Walker (Ga.).....	663	Everett & Son, National Bank of Webb City, Mo., v. (Ga.).....	660
Davis Trust Co., Maxwell v. (W. Va.).....	270	Ewing, Young v. (Ga.).....	5
Davis & Brandon v. Seaboard Air Line Ry. (Ga.).....	428
Dawkins v. Ellis (W. Va.).....	182	Fain & Stamps v. Manos (S. C.).....	464
Dean v. State (Ga. App.).....	597	Fann v. North Carolina R. Co. (N. C.).....	81
Dean v. State (Ga. App.).....	932
Deaver, City of Brunswick v. (Ga.).....	242
De Laperriere, Johnson v. (Ga.).....	874

	Page		Page
Farmers' & Merchants' Bank v. Pirkle (Ga. App.).....	946	Goldman & Co., T. I. Thomason & Son v. (Ga. App.).....	596
Farmers' & Spinners' Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., two cases (S. C.).....	991	Goodson v. Powell (Ga. App.).....	735
Farrar Lumber Co., Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	769	Gordon v. Joyner (Va.).....	652
Feder v. Hager (W. Va.).....	107	Gordon, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	763
Felton v. Underwood (Ga. App.).....	498	Gordon, Sprunt v. (S. C.).....	1033
Ferguson v. Henderson (S. C.).....	831	Gorham, Cannon v. (Ga.).....	142
Ferries Co., Consolvo & Cheshire v. (Va.).....	634	Graded School Trustees of Elizabeth City v. Hinton (N. C.).....	1087
Few v. Supreme Lodge K. P. (Ga.).....	130	Graham v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (S. C.).....	235
Fielder & Turley v. Adams Exp. Co. (W. Va.).....	99	Graham, American Agr. Chemical Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	761
First Nat. Bank v. Kittle (W. Va.).....	109	Grandy, Bartoli v. (S. C.).....	230
First Nat. Bank v. Messer (Ga.).....	143	Granite City Crush Stone Co. v. Southern Marble & Granite Co. (Ga. App.).....	495
First Nat. Bank, O'Neal v. (Ga. App.).....	807	Grant v. Elrod (Ga. App.).....	501
Fisher v. Fisher (S. C.).....	803	Grant v. Mitchell (N. C.).....	1087
Fisher Motor Car Co. v. Seymour & Allen (Ga. App.).....	764	Grant, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	422
Fitzgerald v. State (Ga.).....	123	Grant v. State (Ga.).....	789
Flagler v. Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. (S. C.).....	849	Gray v. Ogleby (Ga. App.).....	605
Flat Top Grocery Co., J. W. Ellison, Son & Co. v. (W. Va.).....	391	Green, Brown v. (S. C.).....	858
Fleeman, Arnold-Forrest Horse & Mule Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	766	Green v. State (Ga. App.).....	875
Florida Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Ricker (Ga.).....	734	Green, State v. (S. C.).....	847
Flynn, Darnell v. (W. Va.).....	16	Green's Adm'r v. Marye (Va.).....	555
Forbes, McDermitt v. (W. Va.).....	193	Greenwood, Blue Ridge Lumber Co. v. (Ga.).....	135
Ford v. Pigeon River Lumber Co. (N. C.).....	439	Griffeth v. State (Ga.).....	146
Forehand v. Taylor (N. C.).....	433	Griffin, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	470
Fort v. Caldwell (S. C.).....	360	Griffith & Boyd, Freitas v. (Va.).....	531
Foster, Sweeney v. (Va.).....	548	Grizzard v. Broom (Ga.).....	430
Fraser v. Stokes (Va.).....	545	Gruenstein & Bishop, Pope v. (Ga. App.).....	493
Freitas v. Griffith & Boyd (Va.).....	531	Guthrie v. Huntington Chair Co. (W. Va.).....	14
Fricks, Pertest v. (Ga. App.).....	1121	Guthrie v. State (Ga. App.).....	944
Fulcher v. Moore (Ga. App.).....	1030
		Hackett, West v. (Ga.).....	477
Gabrels, Carter v. (Ga.).....	3	Hager, Feder v. (W. Va.).....	107
Gaddis v. Southern R. Co. (Ga. App.).....	7	Haig & Puryear, Western & A. R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	792
Gadsden, In re (S. C.).....	952	Halle Gold Min. Co., Williams v. (S. C.).....	26
Gainesville Midland R. Co., Moore v. (Ga. App.).....	808	Hale, Martin v. (Ga.).....	183
Gamble, Clarke County v. (Ga.).....	797	Hall, Cobb v. (Ga.).....	145
Gamble, Wright v. (Ga.).....	795	Hall v. Edwards (Ga.).....	901
Garner v. Douglasville Banking Co. (Ga.).....	478	Hall v. Hall (W. Va.).....	106
Garner, Rockmore v. (Ga. App.).....	506	Hall v. Martin (Ga.).....	803
Gass v. Cummings (Ga.).....	135	Hallam, Alles v. (W. Va.).....	273
Gate City Terminal Co. v. Thrower (Ga.).....	903	Hamby v. Collier (Ga.).....	481
Gaulding v. Baker (Ga. App.).....	1018	Hamby v. Young (Ga.).....	431
Gazzam v. German Union Fire Ins. Co. (N. C.).....	434	Hamilton, Gibbs v. (S. C.).....	1029
Gelders v. Kennedy (Ga. App.).....	503	Hamilton v. State (Ga. App.).....	593
G. E. Lyndon & Co., Beck & Gregg Hardware Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	763	Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., S. M. Smith Ins. Agency v. (W. Va.).....	194
Geo. A. H. Harris & Son, Pace v. (Ga. App.).....	1006	Hammond v. Clark (Ga.).....	479
Georgia Coast & F. R. Co., Parker v. (Ga.).....	1090	Hannul Distilling Co. v. Berkeley County Court (W. Va.).....	576
Georgia Cotton Co. v. Hogg (Ga.).....	124	Hans Rees Sons, Sircy v. (N. C.).....	310
Georgia R. R. v. Hunter (Ga. App.).....	681	Hans Rees' Sons Co., Reid v. (N. C.).....	315
Georgia Ry. & Electric Co., Lawrence v. (Ga. App.).....	593	Happ Bros. Co. v. Hunter Mfg. & Commission Co. (Ga.).....	1099
Georgia Ry. & Electric Co. v. Rich (Ga. App.).....	759	Harman v. Alt (W. Va.).....	709
Georgia Southern & F. R. Co., Jackson v. (Ga.).....	3	Harmon v. Harmon (S. C.).....	815
Georgia Steel Co. v. White (Ga.).....	890	Harrell v. Columbia Electric St. Ry., Light & Power Co. (S. C.).....	359
Georgia, S. & F. R. Co. v. Du Bose (Ga. App.).....	945	Harrell v. State (Ga. App.).....	1030
Georgian Co. v. Kuhnien (Ga.).....	138	Harris, Carter-Patterson Detective Agency v. (Ga. App.).....	497
German Union Fire Ins. Co., Gazzam v. (N. C.).....	434	Harris v. Cary (Va.).....	551
Gibbes v. Hamilton (S. C.).....	1029	Harris, State v. (W. Va.).....	609
Gibbs v. Land (Ga.).....	136	Harris & Son, Pace v. (Ga. App.).....	1006
Gibson, Castle v. (W. Va.).....	385	Harrison, Bamberg v. (S. C.).....	1086
Gibson v. Ward (Ga. App.).....	506	Harrison v. Clemens (Va.).....	538
Gill, Central of Georgia R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	166	Harrison, McCray v. (Ga.).....	789
Gillis, Pye v. (Ga. App.).....	594	Hartfelder-Garbutt Co., McIntire v. (Ga. App.).....	492
Gilpin v. Smith (Ga. App.).....	944	Hartz v. Sobel (Ga.).....	995
Gist, City of Anderson v. (S. C.).....	50	Harvey Coal & Coke Co. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. (W. Va.).....	178
Glass v. Childs (Ga. App.).....	920	Harwell v. Mansfield (Ga. App.).....	764
Glawson v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (Ga. App.).....	747	Haselden v. Haselden (S. C.).....	232
Golden v. O'Connell (W. Va.).....	384	Hawkins v. Blake (W. Va.).....	191
		Hawkins v. Davie (Ga.).....	873
		Hawkins, State v. (N. C.).....	826
		Hawkins v. Studdard (Ga.).....	1112
		Hazard v. Southern Life Ins. Co. (S. C.).....	867
		Healy Real Estate & Improvement Co., Nort v. (Ga.).....	471

	Page
Heard v. Sheffield (Ga.)	1118
Hearn v. McDonald (W. Va.)	568
Heath, Whitmire v. (N. C.)	313
Heavner v. Elkins (W. Va.)	184
Heckheimer v. Allen (S. C.)	1033
Henderson, Ferguson v. (S. C.)	831
Henderson v. Henderson (Ga. App.)	876
Henderson v. Henrie (W. Va.)	172
Henderson, Palmetto Bank of Laurens v. (S. C.)	831
Hendley v. Sirmons (Ga. App.)	492
Henrie, Henderson v. (W. Va.)	172
Henry v. Hilliard (N. C.)	439
Herndon v. State (Ga. App.)	944
Herring v. Warwick (N. C.)	462
Hicks, Caraker v. (Ga. App.)	765
Hicks, Hinton v. (N. C.)	1086
Hill, Kennedy v. (S. C.)	974
Hill Lancaster v. (Ga.)	731
Hilliard, Henry v. (N. C.)	439
Hillyer v. Robinson (Ga.)	790
Hilton Dodge Lumber Co., Roberts v. (Ga.)	786
Hindman, Raines v. (Ga.)	738
Hinton, Graded School Trustees of Elizabeth City v. (N. C.)	1087
Hinton v. Hicks (N. C.)	1086
Hodge v. Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp. (S. C.)	1009
Hoffman v. Shoemaker (W. Va.)	198
Hogan, English v. (Ga.)	663
Hogan, Kuniansky v. (Ga. App.)	777
Hogg, Georgia Cotton Co. v. (Ga.)	124
Holland, Williams v. (Ga. App.)	700
Hollar v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (N. C.)	316
Holliday v. Pegram (S. C.)	367
Holly, State v. (N. C.)	450
Holton v. State (Ga. App.)	599
Holtzendorff v. Dillard (Ga.)	182
Holtzendorff v. Dillard (Ga.)	183
Horkan v. Moultrie (Ga.)	785
Horne, Wheeler v. (Ga.)	901
Hornsby v. State (Ga. App.)	490
Hotel Randolph Co., Ward v. (W. Va.)	105
Houser, Munson v. (Ga. App.)	595
Houston v. Durham Traction Co. (N. C.)	21
Houston, State v. (N. C.)	65
Howard v. Central of Georgia R. Co. (Ga. App.)	1017
Howell, Southern Ry., Carolina Division v. (S. C.)	972
Hudgins v. State (Ga.)	1065
Hudkins v. Rush (W. Va.)	106
Hughes v. Atlanta Steel Co. (Ga.)	728
Hughes v. Atlanta Steel Co. (Ga. App.)	934
Humphrey v. Palmer (S. C.)	977
Hunt v. Di Bacco (W. Va.)	584
Hunter v. D. W. Alderman & Sons Co. (S. C.)	1082
Hunter, Georgia R. R. v. (Ga. App.)	681
Hunter, State v. (S. C.)	823
Hunter Mfg. & Commission Co., Happ Bros. Co. v. (Ga.)	1099
Huntington Chair Co., Guthrie v. (W. Va.)	14
Hurst, Witherspoon v. (S. C.)	232
Hutcheson, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.)	802
Hutchins v. State (Ga.)	162
Hutchison, Brown v. (N. C.)	302
Independent Sawmill Co. v. Thomas (Ga. App.)	491
Irwin, Teter v. (W. Va.)	115
Ivey v. Cable Co. (Ga.)	129
Ivey v. Payne (Ga.)	886
Jackson v. Georgia Southern & F. R. Co. (Ga.)	8
Jackson, State v. (S. C.)	284
Jackson Banking Co., Butts County v. (Ga.)	1065
Jamerson, Coles' Heirs v. (Va.)	618
Jamison v. State (Ga. App.)	491
Jeffers v. Jeffers (S. C.)	810
Jenkins v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (S. C.)	1010

	Page
Jenkins v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (S. C.)	1013
Jenkins v. Jones (N. C.)	1050
Jenkins, Lambert v. (Va.)	718
Jenkins v. Southern R. Co. (Ga.)	804
Jenkins Motor Co., Cofield v. (S. C.)	969
Jennison v. Jennison (Ga.)	244
Jensen v. Watters (Ga.)	1104
Jessie v. Commonwealth (Va.)	612
Jeter, City of Cordele v. (Ga. App.)	589
J. H. Carter & Co. v. Swift Fertilizer Works (Ga. App.)	494
J. H. Everett & Son, National Bank of Webb City, Mo., v. (Ga.)	660
Jenkins v. Norfolk & S. R. Co. (N. C.)	213
Joe v. State (Ga. App.)	499
John Newton Porter Co., Piedmont Candy Co. v. (Ga.)	241
Johnson, Branch v. (Ga. App.)	1123
Johnson, Butts County v. (Ga.)	428
Johnson v. De Laperriere (Ga.)	874
Johnson v. Lassiter (N. C.)	23
Johnson v. Pappa (Ga. App.)	1122
Johnson v. Reeves (Ga.)	2
Johnson v. Sams (Ga.)	891
Johnson v. State (Ga. App.)	507
Johnson County Sav. Bank v. W. L. Richardson & Son (Ga. App.)	757
Joiner, Wrightsville & T. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	126
Jones, Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.)	787
Jones, Jenkins v. (N. C.)	1050
Jones, Marbury v. (Va.)	1124
Jones, Merritt v. (Ga.)	1092
Jones, Miller v. (Ga.)	910
Jones, Miller v. (W. Va.)	248
Jones v. Norton (Ga. App.)	687
Jones, Oats v. (Ga.)	1097
Jones v. Ragan (Ga.)	1098
Jones v. Spillers (Ga. App.)	777
Jones v. State (Ga.)	6
Jones, State v. (S. C.)	291
Jones v. Williams (N. C.)	222
Jordan v. State (Ga. App.)	875
Josey & Co. v. Burris (S. C.)	469
Joyner, Gordon v. (Va.)	652
Joyner & Long v. Scottish Fire Ins. Co. (N. C.)	434
J. R. Droney Lumber Co., Comstock v. (W. Va.)	255
Justice v. Moore (W. Va.)	204
J. W. Ellison, Son & Co. v. Flat Top Grocery Co. (W. Va.)	391
J. W. McGarrity & Co. v. Thomas (Ga. App.)	948
Kanawha Water & Light Co., Runyan v. (W. Va.)	259
Keen v. Tanner (Ga.)	141
Keenan, Scott v. (W. Va.)	570
Keeton & Coleman, Carter v. (Va.)	554
Kell, Du Bose v. (S. C.)	371
Kelly, State v. (S. C.)	29
Kelly, State v. (S. C.)	987
Kendrick, Baker v. (Ga. App.)	498
Kendrick, West Yellow Pine Co. v. (Ga. App.)	504
Kennedy, Gelders v. (Ga. App.)	503
Kennedy v. Hill (S. C.)	974
Kennedy, Wadley Southern B. Co. v. (Ga.)	740
Kerfoot v. Dandridge (W. Va.)	396
Kimsey & Dopson v. Macon Lumber Co. (Ga.)	675
King v. Jackson (Ga. App.)	491
King v. Porter (W. Va.)	202
King v. State (Ga.)	1093
King v. State (Ga. App.)	943
King v. Yarbray (Ga.)	131
Kirby v. Mathis (S. C.)	862
Kirtley v. Cabell County Court (W. Va.)	401
Kittle, First Nat. Bank v. (W. Va.)	109
Kuhnen, Georgian Co. v. (Ga.)	138
Kuniansky v. Hogan (Ga. App.)	777
Kutres, Wingfield v. (Ga.)	474

	Page		Page
Iafferty, Steelman v. (Va.).....	524	McPhail, Means v. (S. C.).....	1009
Lagorio, Wells v. (Va.).....	713	McWhirter v. McWhirter (N. C.).....	59
Lake, Bashinski Bros. v. (Ga. App.).....	702	McWhorter v. State (Ga. App.).....	589
Lambert v. Jenkins (Va.).....	718	Maddison & Johnson v. Piedmont Stone
Lancaster v. Hill (Ga.).....	731	Co. (Ga.).....	135
Lancaster v. Southern Life Ins. Co. (S. C.).....	864	Maddox, Barnes v. (Ga.).....	129
Land, Gibbs v. (Ga.).....	136	Maddox v. State (Ga. App.).....	498
Lane & Autry, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.		Mahon, Stone v. (S. C.).....	300
v. (Ga. App.).....	918	Mahone v. State (Ga. App.).....	878
Langston v. Hazlehurst (Ga. App.).....	592	Mallory Bros. Machinery Co., Darley v.
Lanham & Sons Co. v. Rome (Ga.).....	770	(Ga.).....	471
Lanning v. Western Union Tel. Co. (N. C.).....	309	Manor v. Bainbridge (Ga.).....	1101
Lassiter, Johnson v. (N. C.).....	23	Manos, Fain & Stamps v. (S. C.).....	484
Latson v. Wells (Ga.).....	1052	Manson & Shell v. Rawlings' Ex'x (Va.)..	564
Laughlin, McCook v. (Ga. App.).....	917	Marbury v. Jones (Va.).....	1124
Lawrence v. Georgia Ry. & Electric Co.		Marshall, Carolina Portland Cement Co.
(Ga. App.).....	593	v. (Ga. App.).....	942
Lawson v. Lyon (Ga.).....	149	Marshall v. Pierce (Ga.).....	898
Lawson v. State (Ga.).....	662	Marshall, Robertson & Creed v. (N. C.)...	67
Leach v. Martin (W. Va.).....	170	Martin v. Hale (Ga.).....	133
Leader, Mendel v. (Ga.).....	753	Martin, Hall v. (Ga.).....	803
Ledingham, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	663	Martin, Leach v. (W. Va.).....	170
Lee, City of Portsmouth v. (Va.).....	630	Martin v. Rome (Ga. App.).....	879
Lee v. North Western R. Co. (S. C.).....	840	Martin v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.).....	236
Lee, Sibley v. (Ga.).....	160	Marye, Green's Adm'r v. (Va.).....	555
Leitner v. Cooper (Ga. App.).....	596	Massee & Felton Lumber Co., Bostwick v.
Lenox Mercantile Co., L. Mohr & Sons v.		(Ga. App.).....	499
(Ga. App.).....	493	Mathews, Duvall v. (Ga.).....	1111
Lewis v. State (Ga.).....	417	Mathis, Kirby v. (S. C.).....	862
Life Ins. Co. of Virginia, Wilson v. (N. C.).....	79	Mattox v. Barry (Ga.).....	155
Linden Oil Co., Smith v. (W. Va.).....	167	Maughon v. State (Ga. App.).....	922
Litz v. Lowry (W. Va.).....	263	Maxwell v. Davis Trust Co. (W. Va.).....	270
Livingston, Stanley v. (Ga. App.).....	878	Maxwell v. Maxwell (W. Va.).....	571
L. Mohr & Sons v. Lenox Mercantile Co.		May v. Atlanta (Ga. App.).....	499
(Ga. App.).....	493	Maybank & Co. v. Rogers (S. C.).....	48
Locklear, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.		Mayhew, State v. (N. C.).....	447
(Ga. App.).....	683	Meaders Bros., Bryan v. (Ga. App.).....	491
Logan, Southern Life Ins. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	742	Meadows v. Board of Education of Paul-
Logan Coal & Supply Co., Southern Cement		ding County (Ga.).....	146
Stone Co. v. (Ga.).....	915	Means v. McPhail (S. C.).....	1009
Loudermilk, Stephens v. (Ga. App.).....	1004	Medlock, Empire Bldg. Trust v. (Ga.).....	676
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Arp (Ga.).....	867	Meinert & Miller, Burton v. (Ga.).....	870
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Curry (Ga. App.).....	1123	Melton, Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. (W.
Louisville & N. R. Co., Doughitt v. (Ga.)...	470	Va.).....	19
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Peoples (Ga.).....	805	Mendel v. Leader (Ga.).....	753
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Reece (Ga.).....	675	Mercer v. Morgan (Ga.).....	1075
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Roberts (Ga.).....	425	Merck v. Merck (S. C.).....	969
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Rogers (Ga.).....	1102	Merritt v. Jones (Ga.).....	1002
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Smith (Ga.).....	774	Messer, First Nat. Bank v. (Ga.).....	148
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Southern Flour		Middleton & Ravenel v. Atlantic Coast Line
& Grain Co. (Ga.).....	894	R. Co., two cases (S. C.).....	991
Loveless v. Bridges (Ga.).....	166	Miko, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	241
Lowry, Litz v. (W. Va.).....	263	Milam, Bagwell v. (Ga. App.).....	684
Lucas, State v. (S. C.).....	27	Milam, State v. (S. C.).....	833
Lumpkin v. Atlanta (Ga. App.).....	755	Millan v. Bartlett (W. Va.).....	18
Lynah v. Citizens' & Southern Bank (Ga.).....	469	Milledgeville Cotton Co. v. Cary (Ga.
Lynch, National Bank of Weston v. (W.		App.).....	503
Va.).....	889	Miller v. Caraker (Ga. App.).....	9
Lyndon & Co., Beck & Gregg Hardware Co.		Miller v. Jones (Ga.).....	910
v. (Ga. App.).....	763	Miller v. Jones (W. Va.).....	248
Lyon, Lawson v. (Ga.).....	149	Miller v. Roberts (Ga. App.).....	927
		Miller, Smith v. (N. C.).....	353
McAlhany v. Murray (S. C.).....	1025	Miller, Smith v. (N. C.).....	355
McBrayer v. Virginia Carolina Chemical		Miller v. State (Ga. App.).....	1021
Co. (S. C.).....	980	Miller, Winn v. (Ga.).....	658
McCray v. Harrison (Ga.).....	789	Mills v. Bell (Ga.).....	1120
McComb, Newman v. (Va.).....	624	Mills v. Edgell (W. Va.).....	574
McCook v. Laughlin (Ga. App.).....	917	Mills v. McDaniel (N. C.).....	339
McDaniel, Mills v. (N. C.).....	339	Mills, Moring v. (Ga. App.).....	490
McDermitt v. Forbes (W. Va.).....	193	Milner v. Tyler (Ga. App.).....	1123
McDonald, Hearn v. (W. Va.).....	568	Mitchell, Grant v. (N. C.).....	1087
McDonald Colliery Co. v. Crotty (W. Va.).....	568	Mixon v. Walker & Walker (Ga. App.).....	1007
McEachern, Wilson v. (Ga. App.).....	946	Mobley, New York Life Ins. Co. v. (S. C.).....	817
McGarrity & Co. v. Thomas (Ga. App.).....	948	Mohr & Sons v. Lenox Mercantile Co.
McIntire v. Hartfelder-Garbutt Co. (Ga.		(Ga. App.).....	496
App.).....	492	Montgomery v. United States Fidelity &
McJimpsey v. Southern Ry., Carolina Divi-		Guaranty Co. (S. C.).....	1064
sion (S. C.).....	42	Moore, Davis v. (Ga.).....	135
McKain v. Camden Water, Light & Ice Co.		Moore, Fulcher v. (Ga. App.).....	1086
(S. C.).....	949	Moore v. Gainesville Midland R. Co. (Ga.
McKay, State v. (S. C.).....	858	App.).....	806
McNaughton v. State (Ga.).....	1038	Moore, Justice v. (W. Va.).....	204
Macon Lumber Co., Kimsey & Dopson v.		Moore v. Southern Exp. Co. (Ga. App.)...	763
(Ga.).....	675	Moore v. State (Ga.).....	595
Macon Ry., & Light Co., Central of Georg-		Morehead v. Ayers (Ga.).....	798
ia R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	1076	Morgan, Mercer v. (Ga.).....	1075

	Page		Page
Morgan, Sharp v. (Ga. App.).....	766	Pennington v. Pennington (S. C.).....	825
Moring v. Mills (Ga. App.).....	490	People's Nat. Bank v. Burdett (W. Va.)...	899
Morrison v. Central of Georgia R. Co. (Ga.)	874	Perry, Williams v. (Ga.).....	886
Morse v. State (Ga. App.).....	699	Perteet v. Fricks (Ga. App.).....	1121
Morton's Ex'r v. Southern R. Co. (Va.)...	561	Peterson, Barnes v. (Ga.).....	163
Mosley v. Thomasville (Ga. App.).....	765	Peyton v. Stephens (Ga.).....	741
Moulder v. State (Ga. App.).....	682	Phillips, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	414
Mozley, Wheeler v. (Ga.).....	790	Philpot v. State (Ga. App.).....	876
Mullen v. Cook (W. Va.).....	566	Phinizy v. Wallace (Ga.).....	896
Muller, Verner v. (S. C.).....	654	Piedmont Candy Co. v. John Newton Por-
Munson v. Houser (Ga. App.).....	595	ter Co. (Ga.).....	241
Murphy v. Atlanta & C. Air Line R. Co. (S.		Piedmont Cotton Mills Co., Costner v. (N.
C.).....	296	C.).....	85
Murray, Ex parte (S. C.).....	465	Piedmont Lumber Co. v. Christenbury
Murray, McAlhany v. (S. C.).....	1025	(N. C.).....	337
Murray, State v. (S. C.).....	465	Piedmont Stone Co., Maddison & Johnson
Musick, Darnell v. (W. Va.).....	16	v. (Ga.).....	135
Myers v. Burnside (S. C.).....	977	Pierce, Marshall v. (Ga.).....	893
Myers v. Carnahan (W. Va.).....	15	Pigeon River Lumber Co., Ford v. (N. C.)
Mylius v. Raine-Andrew Lumber Co. (W.		Piney Colliery Co., Curtis v. (W. Va.)...	207
Va.).....	404	Pipkin, Stacey Cheese Co. v. (N. C.).....	442
National Bank of Columbus, Roberts v.		Pirkle, Farmers' & Merchants' Bank v.
(Ga.).....	1047	(Ga. App.).....	946
National Bank of Webb City, Mo., v. J. H.		Pittsburg-Bartow Min. & Mfg. Co., Wash-
Everett & Son (Ga.).....	660	ington Trust Co. v. (Ga.).....	125
National Bank of Weston v. Lynch (W.		Pleasanton, Vaughan v. (Va.).....	529
Va.).....	389	Poe, State v. (W. Va.).....	177
Nelson, Allworden v. (S. C.).....	982	Pope v. Grovenstein & Bishop (Ga. App.)
Nelson, Anderson v. (Ga.).....	160	Porter, King v. (W. Va.).....	202
New v. Southern R. Co. (Ga.).....	1104	Porter Co., Piedmont Candy Co. v. (Ga.)
Newman v. McComb (Va.).....	624	Pounds v. Pounds (Ga.).....	137
New York Life Ins. Co. v. Mobley (S. C.)...	817	Powell, Goodson v. (Ga. App.).....	765
Nimmons v. Dicks (S. C.).....	45	Powell v. State (Ga. App.).....	1013
Norfolk Fire Ins. Co. v. Talley (Va.).....	534	Powell, Vinton v. (Ga.).....	1119
Norfolk & A. Terminal Co., Backus v. (Va.)		Price, Reynolds v. (S. C.).....	51
Norfolk & S. R. Co., Jenkins v. (N. C.)...	213	Price & Co. v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical
Norfolk & W. R. Co., Cline v. (W. Va.)...	705	Co. (Ga.).....	4
Norfolk & W. R. Co., Dempsey v. (W. Va.)		Puckett v. Southern R. Co. (Ga. App.)....	944
Norman v. Wynne (Ga.).....	140	Pye v. Gillis (Ga. App.).....	594
Nort v. Healy Real Estate & Improvement		Ragan, Jones v. (Ga.).....	1098
Co. (Ga.).....	471	Raine-Andrew Lumber Co., Mylius v. (W.
North Carolina R. Co., Fann v. (N. C.)...	81	Va.).....	404
North Carolina Sav. Bank & Trust Co.,		Raines v. Hindman (Ga.).....	738
Alexander v. (N. C.).....	69	Randolph, Batchelder v. (Va.).....	533
North Western R. Co., Lee v. (S. C.).....	840	Randolph, Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. (Ga.)
Norton, Jones v. (Ga. App.).....	687	Randolph v. State (Ga. App.).....	877
Oats v. Jones (Ga.).....	1097	Rape, Brown v. (Ga.).....	802
O'Connell, Golden v. (W. Va.).....	384	Ratlidge, Carr v. (Ga.).....	773
Oglesby, Gray v. (Ga. App.).....	605	Rawlins v. Clements (Ga. App.).....	490
Oldknow v. Atlanta (Ga. App.).....	1015	Rawlings' Ex'r, Manson & Shell v. (Va.)...	564
O'Neal v. First Nat. Bank (Ga. App.).....	807	Reddish v. Reddish (Ga. App.).....	764
Osborne v. Dickey (Ga. App.).....	763	Reece, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)...	675
Owen v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.)...	782	Rees Sons, Sirecy v. (N. C.).....	310
Owens v. State (Ga. App.).....	680	Rees' Sons Co., Reid v. (N. C.).....	315
Oxford v. Oxford (Ga.).....	883	Reeves, Atlanta Ice & Coal Co. v. (Ga.)...	421
Pace v. Geo. A. H. Harris & Son (Ga. App.)		Reeves, Johnson v. (Ga.).....	2
Padgett v. Reidsville & S. E. R. Co. (Ga.		Reid v. Hans Rees' Sons Co. (N. C.).....	315
App.).....	490	Reidsville & S. E. R. Co., Padgett v. (Ga.
Padrosa, Abbott v. (Ga.).....	419	App.).....	490
Pageton Lumber Co., Welch Lumber Co. v.		Rembert v. Vetoe (S. C.).....	959
(W. Va.).....	282	Reppard, Smith v. (W. Va.).....	115
Palmer, Humphrey v. (S. C.).....	977	Reynolds v. Price (S. C.).....	51
Palmetto Bank of Laurens v. Henderson (S.		Rich, Georgia Ry. & Electric Co. v. (Ga.
C.).....	831	App.).....	759
Palmour, Estes v. (Ga. App.).....	590	Richardson & Son, Johnson County Sav.
Pappa, Johnson v. (Ga. App.).....	1122	Bank v. (Ga. App.).....	757
Parish v. Bird (Ga. App.).....	494	Rickard, Spencer v. (W. Va.).....	711
Parker v. Georgia Coast & P. R. Co. (Ga.)		Ricker, Florida Coca Cola Bottling Co. v.
1090		(Ga.).....	784
Parris, State v. (S. C.).....	808	Riedel v. Wheeling Traction Co. (W. Va.)
Patten, Stoner v. (Ga.).....	802	Robertson, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	129
Patterson v. Campbell (Ga.).....	1117	Roberts v. Arnall (Ga. App.).....	590
Patterson, Roddenberry v. (Ga.).....	138	Roberts v. Baldwin (N. C.).....	819
Patterson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.)		Roberts v. Hilton & Dodge Lumber Co.
235		(Ga.).....	786
Paxson Bros. v. Butterick Pub. Co. (Ga.)...	1105	Roberts, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)...	425
Payne, Ivey v. (Ga.).....	886	Roberts, Miller v. (Ga. App.).....	927
Payne v. Supreme Ruling of Fraternal Mys-		Roberts v. National Bank of Columbus
tic Circle (Ga.).....	1113	(Ga.).....	1047
Peoples, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)...	805	Robertson & Creed v. Marshall (N. C.)....	67
Peoples, Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. (Ga.		Robinson, Hillyer v. (Ga.).....	790
App.).....	758	Robinson v. St. Matthews (S. C.).....	234
Pegram, Holliday v. (S. C.).....	367	Rockmore v. Garner (Ga. App.).....	506
Pendarvis, State v. (S. C.).....	45	Roddenberry v. Patterson (Ga.).....	138

	Page		Page
Rogers, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	1102	Smith, Dunlop v. (Ga.)	3
Rogers, Maybank & Co. v. (S. C.)	48	Smith v. Ellington-Guy Timber Co. (N. C.)	445
Rookard v. Atlanta & O. Air Line R. Co. (S. C.)	992	Smith, Gilpin v. (Ga. App.)	944
Roseman, Shell v. (N. C.)	86	Smith v. Linden Oil Co. (W. Va.)	167
Rountree, Carr v. (Ga. App.)	589	Smith, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	774
Rouse v. State (Ga.)	667	Smith v. Miller (N. C.)	353
Rowe v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.)	833	Smith v. Miller (N. C.)	355
Rowe, Spencer v. (Ga.)	157	Smith v. Reppard (W. Va.)	115
Rowe, State v. (N. C.)	332	Smith v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.)	47
Royster v. State (Ga. App.)	491	Smith v. Smith (Ga.)	158
Rudisill, Appeal of (N. C.)	85	Smith v. Smith (Ga.)	869
Rulong, Snedeker v. (W. Va.)	180	Smith v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.)	899
Runyan v. Kanawha Water & Light Co. (W. Va.)	259	Smith v. State (Ga. App.)	606
Russell v. Tillman (S. O.)	836	Smith, State v. (N. C.)	305
		Smith, State v. (S. C.)	830
		Smith v. Thomas (Ga.)	741
Saffold v. Evans (Ga.)	663	Smith Ins. Agency v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co. (W. Va.)	194
Sams, Johnson v. (Ga.)	891	S. M. Smith Ins. Agency v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co. (W. Va.)	194
Sams, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga.)	1106	Snedeker v. Rulong (W. Va.)	180
Sanburn, Warfield v. (Ga. App.)	703	Sobel, Hartz v. (Ga.)	995
Saunders v. Baldwin (Va.)	620	Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., Bridges v. (Ga.)	161
Saunders v. Bank of Mecklenburg (Va.)	714	Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., Glawson v. (Ga. App.)	747
Savannah River Power Co., Yoe v. (S. C.)	979	Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., Hollar v. (N. C.)	816
Schley v. State (Ga. App.)	494	Southern Cement Stone Co. v. Logan Coal & Supply Co. (Ga.)	915
Schumpert v. State (Ga. App.)	879	Southern Exp. Co., Moore v. (Ga. App.)	762
Schwab v. Washington Luna Park Co. (Va.)	542	Southern Flour & Grain Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	884
Scott v. Keenan (W. Va.)	570	Southern Life Ins. Co., Hazard v. (S. C.)	867
Scottish Fire Ins. Co., Joyner & Long v. (N. C.)	434	Southern Life Ins. Co., Lancaster v. (S. C.)	864
Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (S. C.)	39	Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Logan (Ga. App.)	742
Seaboard Air Line Ry., Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. (S. C.)	84	Southern Marble & Granite Co., Granite City Crush Stone Co. v. (Ga. App.)	495
Seaboard Air Line Ry., Davis & Brandon v. (Ga.)	428	Southern Oil Co., Edinger v. (W. Va.)	266
Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Peebles (Ga. App.)	758	Southern Pine Co. v. Dickey (Ga.)	1110
Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Randolph (Ga.)	887	Southern Power Co. v. Walker (S. C.)	356
Seaboard Air Line Ry. Receivers, Singletary v. (S. C.)	57	Southern R. Co., Auld v. (Ga.)	426
Seaboard Air Line Ry., Town of Cheraw v. (S. C.)	40	Southern R. Co. v. Branch (Ga. App.)	696
Security Bank of Richmond v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States (Va.)	647	Southern R. Co., Cabe v. (N. C.)	453
Segusky v. Williams (S. C.)	971	Southern R. Co., Calder v. (S. C.)	841
Seneca Co. v. Crenshaw (S. C.)	1081	Southern R. Co. v. Campbell (Ga. App.)	934
Setzer, Yount v. (N. C.)	209	Southern R. Co., Corley v. (S. C.)	1035
Seward v. Camp Mfg. Co. (Va.)	614	Southern R. Co., Crow v. (Ga.)	685
Seymour & Allen, Fisher Motor Car Co. v. (Ga. App.)	764	Southern R. Co. v. Davis (Ga. App.)	1005
Shaffer v. Shaffer (W. Va.)	111	Southern R. Co., Elliott v. (N. C.)	339
Sharp v. Morgan (Ga. App.)	768	Southern R. Co., Eplee v. (N. C.)	325
Sharpe v. Columbus Iron Works Co. (Ga.)	787	Southern R. Co. v. Farrar Lumber Co. (Ga.)	769
Shaw v. Chiles (Ga. App.)	745	Southern R. Co., Gaddis v. (Ga. App.)	7
Shaw Co., Trigg Candy Co. v. (Ga. App.)	679	Southern R. Co. v. Gordon (Ga. App.)	763
Sheffield, Heard v. (Ga.)	1118	Southern R. Co. v. Grant (Ga.)	422
Shell v. Roseman (N. C.)	86	Southern R. Co. v. Griffin (Ga.)	470
Shell & Southerland v. Aiken (N. C.)	230	Southern R. Co. v. Hutcheson (Ga.)	802
Sherrill v. Western Union Tel. Co. (N. C.)	330	Southern R. Co., Jenkins v. (Ga.)	804
Shoemaker, Hoffman v. (W. Va.)	198	Southern R. Co. v. Ledingham (Ga.)	663
Shy, American Agr. Chemical Co. v. (Ga. App.)	876	Southern R. Co., Martin v. (S. C.)	236
Sibley v. Lee (Ga.)	160	Southern R. Co. v. Miko (Ga.)	241
Simmons v. State (Ga. App.)	876	Southern R. Co., Morton's Ex'r v. (Va.)	561
Sims & Sons v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.)	783	Southern R. Co., New v. (Ga.)	1104
Singletary v. Seaboard Air Line Ry. Receivers (S. C.)	57	Southern R. Co. v. Phillips (Ga.)	414
Singletary v. Watson (Ga.)	162	Southern R. Co., Puckett v. (Ga. App.)	944
Sing Sisk v. Anderson Phosphate & Oil Co. (Ga. App.)	763	Southern R. Co. v. Roberson (Ga.)	129
Sirmons, Hendley v. (Ga. App.)	492	Southern R. Co., Rowe v. (S. C.)	833
Sircey v. Hans Rees Sons (N. C.)	310	Southern R. Co. v. Sams (Ga.)	1106
Slapney v. Sumner (Ga.)	1075	Southern R. Co., Smith v. (S. C.)	47
Slater v. Williamsburg City Fire Ins. Co. (W. Va.)	197	Southern R. Co., Smith v. (S. C.)	989
Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., Thompson v. (Ga. App.)	1024	Southern R. Co., Wade v. (S. C.)	859
Smathers v. Western Carolina Bank (N. C.)	345	Southern R. Co., Wesley v. (S. C.)	855
Smiley v. Smiley's Adm'r (Va.)	532	Southern R. Co. v. Wiley (Ga. App.)	11
Smiley's Adm'r, Smiley v. (Va.)	532	Southern R. Co., Williams v. (N. C.)	346
Smith, Atlanta Home Ins. Co. v. (Ga.)	902	Southern R. Co., Wright v. (N. C.)	306
Smith, Crapps v. (Ga. App.)	501	Southern R. Co., Zuber v. (Ga. App.)	937
		Southern Ry., Carolina Division, v. Howell (S. C.)	972
		Southern Ry., Carolina Division, McJimpsey v. (S. C.)	42
		Spell, Crumney v. (Ga.)	790
		Spencer v. Rickard (W. Va.)	711
		Spencer v. Rowe (Ga.)	157
		Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. Melton (W. Va.)	19

	Page		Page
Spillers, Jones v. (Ga. App.).....	777	State, Miller v. (Ga. App.).....	1021
Sprunt v. Gordon (S. C.).....	1033	State, Moore v. (Ga.).....	895
State, Stacey Cheese Co. v. Pipkin (N. C.).....	442	State, Morse v. (Ga. App.).....	699
Stalnaker, Bank of Gassaway v. (W. Va.).....	183	State, Moulder v. (Ga. App.).....	682
Standard Fuel Supply Co., City of Savannah v. (Ga.).....	787	State v. Murray (S. C.).....	465
Stanley v. Livingston (Ga. App.).....	878	State, Owens v. (Ga. App.).....	680
State, Akridge v. (Ga. App.).....	494	State v. Parris (S. C.).....	808
State, Appleby v. (Ga. App.).....	876	State v. Pendarvis (S. C.).....	45
State v. Ashe (S. C.).....	827	State, Philpot v. (Ga. App.).....	876
State v. Baker (W. Va.).....	186	State v. Poe (W. Va.).....	177
State, Baker v. (Ga. App.).....	594	State, Powell v. (Ga. App.).....	1013
State v. Baldwin (N. C.).....	212	State, Randolph v. (Ga. App.).....	877
State v. Barwick (S. C.).....	838	State, Rouse v. (Ga.).....	667
State v. Bates (S. C.).....	664	State v. Rowe (N. C.).....	332
State v. Baxter (S. C.).....	33	State, Royster v. (Ga. App.).....	491
State v. Bazen (S. C.).....	779	State, Schley v. (Ga. App.).....	494
State v. Belcher (W. Va.).....	272	State, Schumpert v. (Ga. App.).....	879
State, Benton v. (Ga. App.).....	8	State, Simmons v. (Ga. App.).....	876
State, Benton v. (Ga. App.).....	498	State v. Smith (N. C.).....	305
State v. Bethune (S. C.).....	29	State v. Smith (S. C.).....	830
State, Blount v. (Ga. App.).....	877	State, Smith v. (Ga. App.).....	606
State, Bonner v. (Ga.).....	3	State, Stewart v. (Ga. App.).....	755
State, Boyd v. (Ga.).....	416	State, Strickland v. (Ga. App.).....	919
State v. Boynton (N. C.).....	341	State v. Suber (S. C.).....	466
State v. Bright (S. C.).....	821	State, Twilley v. (Ga. App.).....	587
State, Burton v. (Ga. App.).....	1006	State v. Vaughan (N. C.).....	1069
State, Calhoun v. (Ga. App.).....	765	State, Vaughan v. (Ga. App.).....	945
State v. City Council of Augusta (S. C.).....	366	State, Walden v. (Ga. App.).....	945
State, Coleman v. (Ga. App.).....	493	State, Watson v. (Ga.).....	122
State, Copp v. (W. Va.).....	580	State, Watson v. (Ga.).....	789
State, Daniel v. (Ga. App.).....	875	State, Watts v. (Ga. App.).....	766
State, Darsey v. (Ga.).....	661	State v. Weldon (S. C.).....	33
State, Davis v. (Ga. App.).....	603	State v. Weldon (S. C.).....	828
State, Dean v. (Ga. App.).....	597	State v. Western & A. R. Co. (Ga.).....	1055
State, Dean v. (Ga. App.).....	932	State, White v. (Ga.).....	135
State, Dotson v. (Ga.).....	164	State, White v. (Ga. App.).....	499
State, Drew v. (Ga.).....	1108	State, White v. (Ga. App.).....	879
State, Dukes v. (Ga. App.).....	921	State v. Williams (S. C.).....	832
State v. Durham (S. C.).....	847	State, Williamson v. (Ga. App.).....	509
State v. Durr (W. Va.).....	767	State, Withrow v. (Ga.).....	139
State, Easterling v. (Ga. App.).....	774	State, Wood v. (Ga. App.).....	500
State, Eaton v. (Ga. App.).....	1004	State, Worley v. (Ga.).....	153
State, Eberhardt v. (Ga. App.).....	948	State, Wright v. (Ga.).....	1063
State v. Edwards (S. C.).....	826	State, Wright v. (Ga. App.).....	500
State, Fitzgerald v. (Ga.).....	128	State v. Yates (N. C.).....	317
State, Grant v. (Ga.).....	789	Steed v. American Nat. Bank (Ga.).....	1116
State v. Green (S. C.).....	847	Steelman v. Lafferty (Va.).....	524
State, Green v. (Ga. App.).....	875	Stephens v. Loudermilk (Ga. App.).....	1004
State, Griffith v. (Ga.).....	146	Stephens, Peyton v. (Ga.).....	741
State, Guthrie v. (Ga. App.).....	944	Stewart v. State (Ga. App.).....	755
State, Hamilton v. (Ga. App.).....	593	Stewart v. Stewart (N. C.).....	308
State, Harrell v. (Ga. App.).....	1030	Stokes, Fraser v. (Va.).....	545
State v. Harris (W. Va.).....	609	Stone v. Mahon (S. C.).....	300
State v. Hawkins (N. C.).....	326	Stoner v. Patten (Ga.).....	802
State, Herndon v. (Ga. App.).....	944	Stricklin v. Brotherton (Ga.).....	774
State v. Holly (N. C.).....	450	Strickland v. State (Ga. App.).....	919
State, Holton v. (Ga. App.).....	599	Studdard, Hawkins v. (Ga.).....	1112
State, Hornsby v. (Ga. App.).....	490	Suber, State v. (S. C.).....	466
State v. Houston (N. C.).....	65	Suggs, Eastman Cotton Mills v. (Ga.).....	667
State, Hudgins v. (Ga.).....	1065	Sumner, Slappey v. (Ga.).....	1075
State v. Hunter (S. C.).....	823	Supreme Lodge K. P. Few v. (Ga.).....	130
State, Hutchins v. (Ga.).....	162	Supreme Ruling of Fraternal Mystic Circle, Payne v. (Ga.).....	1113
State v. Jackson (S. C.).....	234	Sweeney v. Foster (Va.).....	548
State, Jamison v. (Ga. App.).....	491	Swift Fertilizer Works, J. H. Carter & Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	494
State, Joe v. (Ga. App.).....	499
State, Johnson v. (Ga. App.).....	507
State v. Jones (S. C.).....	291	Taggart v. Taggart (S. C.).....	1081
State, Jones v. (Ga.).....	6	Talley, Norfolk Fire Ins. Co. v. (Va.).....	534
State, Jordan v. (Ga. App.).....	875	Tanner, Keen v. (Ga.).....	141
State v. Kelly (S. C.).....	29	Tate v. Elberton (Ga.).....	420
State v. Kelly (S. C.).....	987	Taylor, Blackmon v. (Ga.).....	139
State, King v. (Ga.).....	1093	Taylor, Clyatt v. (Ga.).....	1076
State, King v. (Ga. App.).....	943	Taylor, Forehand v. (N. C.).....	433
State, Lawson v. (Ga.).....	662	Teter v. Irwin (W. Va.).....	115
State, Lewis v. (Ga.).....	417	Thigpen v. Thigpen (Ga.).....	790
State v. Lucas (S. C.).....	27	Thomas, Du Bose v. (Ga.).....	1106
State v. McKay (S. C.).....	858	Thomas, Edge v. (Ga. App.).....	876
State, McNaughton v. (Ga.).....	1038	Thomas, Independent Sawmill Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	491
State, McWhorter v. (Ga. App.).....	589	Thomas, J.W. McGarrity & Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	948
State, Maddox v. (Ga. App.).....	498	Thomas, Smith v. (Ga.).....	741
State, Mahone v. (Ga. App.).....	878	Thomason & Son v. El Goldman & Co. (Ga. App.).....	596
State, Maughon v. (Ga. App.).....	922
State v. Mayhew (N. C.).....	447
State v. Milam (S. C.).....	833

	Page		Page
Thomasson, Edmonson v. (Va.).....	536	Washington Southern R. Co. v. Common-	539
Thompson v. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron		wealth (Va.).....
Co. (Ga. App.).....	1024	Washington Trust Co. v. Pittsburg-Bartow
Thompson v. Wilkinson (Ga. App.).....	678	Min. & Mfg. Co. (Ga.).....	125
Thrower, Gate City Terminal Co. v. (Ga.)	903	Waters v. Brownlee (Ga.).....	6
Tidwell v. Dunbar (Ga.).....	872	Watson v. Atlanta (Ga.).....	664
Tillman, Russell v. (S. C.).....	836	Watson, Singletary v. (Ga.).....	162
Timmons v. Boyd (S. C.).....	298	Watson v. State (Ga.).....	122
Tippins v. De Loach (Ga. App.).....	497	Watson v. State (Ga.).....	789
T. I. Thomason & Son v. E. Goldman &		Watters, Jensen v. (Ga.).....	1104
Co. (Ga. App.).....	596	Watters, Whitley v. (Ga.).....	1103
Torley, Wickham v. (Ga.).....	881	Watts v. State (Ga. App.).....	766
Towaliga Falls Power Co. v. Washington		W. D. Price & Co. v. Virginia-Carolina
(Ga.).....	731	Chemical Co. (Ga.).....	4
Town of Cheraw v. Seaboard Air Line Ry.		Webb, Board of Trustees of Youngsville
(S. C.).....	40	Tp. v. (N. C.).....	520
Town of Constitution v. Chestnut Hill		Welch Lumber Co. v. Pageton Lumber Co.
Cemetery Ass'n (Ga.).....	1037	(W. Va.).....	282
Town of Greenwood v. Yoe (S. C.).....	238	Weldon, State v. (S. C.).....	33
Town of Mansfield, Harwell v. (Ga. App.)	764	Weldon, State v. (S. C.).....	828
Town of St. Matthews, Robinson v. (S. C.)	234	Wells v. Lagorio (Va.).....	718
Town of Shelby v. Cleveland Mill & Power		Wells, Latson v. (Ga.).....	1052
Co. (N. C.).....	218	Wesley v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.).....	835
T. P. Sims & Sons v. Western Union Tel.		West v. Hackett (Ga.).....	477
Co. (S. C.).....	783	West Yellow Pine Co. v. Kendrick (Ga.
Traynham v. Charleston & W. C. R. Co.		App.).....	504
(S. C.).....	813	Westerman v. Dinsmore (W. Va.).....	250
Trigg Candy Co. v. Emmett Shaw Co. (Ga.		Western Carolina Bank, Smathers v. (N.
App.).....	679	C.).....	345
Tunney v. Wheeling Steel & Iron Co. (W		Western Union Tel. Co., Boyd v. (S. C.)..	28
Va.).....	110	Western Union Tel. Co., Lanning v. (N.
Turner v. Woodward (Ga.).....	418	C.).....	309
Twilley v. State (Ga. App.).....	587	Western Union Tel. Co., Owen v. (S. C.)	782
Tye, Cason v. (Ga. App.).....	593	Western Union Tel. Co., Patterson v. (S.
Tygart, Albritton v. (Ga. App.).....	512	C.).....	235
Tyler, Milner v. (Ga. App.).....	1123	Western Union Tel. Co., Sherrill v. (N.
		C.).....	330
Underwood, Felton v. (Ga. App.).....	498	Western Union Tel. Co., T. P. Sims &
Union & Mechanics' Club v. Atlanta (Ga.)	1060	Sons v. (S. C.).....	783
United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Mont-		Western & A. R. Co. v. Haig & Puryear
gomery v. (S. C.).....	1084	(Ga.).....	792
Unitype Co. v. Ashcraft Bros. (N. C.)....	61	Western & A. R. Co., State v. (Ga.).....	1055
		Wharton, Elledge v. (S. C.).....	657
Valdosta, M. & W. R. Co. v. Adel Lumber		Whitley v. Watters (Ga.).....	1103
Co. (Ga.).....	803	Wheeler v. Horne (Ga.).....	901
Valdosta, M. & W. R. Co., Alderman v. (Ga.		Wheeler v. Mozley (Ga.).....	790
App.).....	931	Wheeling Steel & Iron Co., Tunney v. (W.
Vaughan v. Pleasonton (Va.).....	529	Va.).....	110
Vaughan v. State (Ga. App.).....	945	Wheeling Traction Co., Riedel v. (W. Va.)	174
Vaughan, State v. (N. C.).....	1089	White, Baker v. (Ga.).....	871
Vaughan, Wrightsville & T. R. Co. v. (Ga.		White v. Bryant (Ga.).....	877
App.).....	691	White v. Forsyth (Ga.).....	1073
Verner v. Muller (S. C.).....	654	White, Georgia Steel Co. v. (Ga.).....	890
Vetoe, Rembert v. (S. C.).....	959	White v. State (Ga.).....	135
Vinton v. Powell (Ga.).....	1119	White v. State (Ga. App.).....	499
Virginia Carolina Chemical Co., McBrayer		White v. State (Ga. App.).....	879
v. (S. C.).....	980	White Oak Fuel Co., Collins v. (W. Va.)..	277
Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., W. D.		White's Adm'r, Arminius Chemical Co. v.
Price & Co. v. (Ga.).....	4	(Va.).....	637
Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. v. Atlantic		Whitmire v. Heath (N. C.).....	513
Coast Line R. R. (N. C.).....	71	Wickham v. Torley (Ga.).....	881
		Wiley, Southern R. Co. v. (Ga. App.).....	11
Wade v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.).....	859	Wilkinson, Thompson v. (Ga. App.).....	678
Wadley Southern R. Co. v. Kennedy (Ga.)	740	Williams v. Haile Gold Min. Co. (S. C.)...	26
Walden, Carter v. (Ga.).....	1047	Williams v. Holland (Ga. App.).....	760
Walden v. State (Ga. App.).....	945	Williams, Jones v. (N. C.).....	222
Walker, Davis Mercantile Co. v. (Ga.).....	663	Williams v. Perry (Ga.).....	886
Walker, Southern Power Co. v. (S. C.).....	356	Williams, Segusky v. (S. C.).....	971
Walker & Walker, Mixon v. (Ga. App.)...	1007	Williams v. Southern R. Co. (N. C.).....	346
Wallace, Phinizy v. (Ga.).....	896	Williams, State v. (S. C.).....	832
Ward, Gibson v. (Ga. App.).....	506	Williamsburg City Fire Ins. Co., Slater v.
Ward v. Hotel Randolph Co. (W. Va.).....	105	(W. Va.).....	197
Warfield v. Sanburn (Ga. App.).....	703	Williamson v. State (Ga. App.).....	509
Warfield, Winoker v. (Ga.).....	1051	Williamson v. Youmans (Ga.).....	138
Warren v. Wilson (S. C.).....	513	Willis v. Bonner (Ga.).....	1048
Warren v. Wilson (S. C.).....	818	Wilson v. Life Ins. Co. of Virginia (N. C.)	79
Warren v. Wilson (S. C.).....	992	Wilson v. McEachern (Ga. App.).....	946
Warwick, Herring v. (N. C.).....	462	Wilson, Warren v. (S. C.).....	513
Washington v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.		Wilson, Warren v. (S. C.).....	818
(Ga.).....	1066	Wilson, Warren v. (S. C.).....	992
Washington, Towaliga Falls Power Co. v.		Wingfield v. Kutres (Ga.).....	474
(Ga.).....	731	Winn, Estes v. (Ga.).....	470
Washington Luna Park Co., Schwab v.		Winn v. Miller (Ga.).....	658
(Va.).....	542

	Page		Page
Winoker v. Warfield (Ga.).....	1051	Wrightsville & T. R. Co. v. Vaughan (Ga. App.)	691
Witherspoon v. Hurst (S. C.)	232	Wynne, Norman v. (Ga.).....	140
Withrow v. State (Ga.).....	139	Wyone Shoe Co. v. Daniels & Co. (Ga.)....	1
W. L. Richardson & Son, Johnson County Sav. Bank v. (Ga. App.).....	757	Yarbray, King v. (Ga.).....	131
Wood v. State (Ga. App.).....	500	Yates, State v. (N. C.).....	317
Woodall v. Woodall (Ga.).....	1099	Yoe v. Savannah River Power Co. (S. C.)..	979
Woodruff Hardware & Mfg. Co., Elder v. (Ga. App.).....	806	Yoe, Town of Greenwood v. (S. C.).....	238
Woodward, Turner v. (Ga.).....	418	Youmans, Williamson v. (Ga.).....	138
Worley v. State (Ga.)	153	Younce v. Broad River Lumber Co. (N. C.)	829
Wright, Butts County v. (Ga.).....	1046	Young, Cooke v. (S. C.).....	837
Wright v. Gamble (Ga.).....	705	Young v. Ewing (Ga.).....	5
Wright v. Southern R. Co. (N. C.).....	806	Young, Hamby v. (Ga.).....	431
Wright v. State (Ga.).....	1063	Yount v. Setzer (N. C.)	209
Wright v. State (Ga. App.).....	500
Wrightsville & T. R. Co. v. Joiner (Ga.)..	128	Zuber v. Southern R. Co. (Ga. App.).....	987

REHEARINGS DENIED

[Cases in which rehearings have been denied, without the rendition of a written opinion, since the publication of the original opinions in previous volumes of this Reporter.]

VIRGINIA.

Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Wills, 68 S. E. 395.	Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Wheeler, 68 S. E. 1001.
Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Viers, 68 S. E. 976.	Haynor v. Haynor, 70 S. E. 531.

THE SOUTHEASTERN REPORTER VOLUME 71

(126 Ga. 192)

WYONE SHOE CO. v. DANIELS & CO.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 47*)—SALES IN BULK—NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Under the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 92), the requirement that the purchaser of a stock of goods in bulk shall, at least five days before the completion of said purchase or the payment therefor, "notify, personally or by registered mail," each of the creditors of the vendor, is met by sending the proper notice by registered mail at least five days before the completion of the purchase or the payment therefor. It is not necessary that the notice so mailed shall be received by the creditor five days before such completion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Dec. Dig. § 47.*]

2. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 47*)—SALES IN BULK—NOTICE TO CREDITORS—REQUISITES.

The act requires that such notice shall show "the proposed sale, the price to be paid therefor, and the terms and conditions thereof, together with a copy of the statement of the assets and liabilities, as furnished him by the vendor."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Dec. Dig. § 47.*]

3. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 47*)—SALES IN BULK—NOTICE TO CREDITORS—REQUISITES.

It was not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the act stated in the preceding headnote to send a notice which contained only the following statement of the terms and conditions of the sale: "The terms and conditions of said purchase being as follows: Cash payment, $3,000; $8,000 in stock in the Wyone Shoe Company; balance in deferred payments."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Dec. Dig. § 47.*]

Error from Superior Court, Lowndes County; R. G. Mitchell, Judge.

Action between the Wyone Shoe Company and Daniels & Co. Judgment in favor of the latter, and the former brings error. Affirmed.

G. A. Whitaker, for plaintiff in error.
Woodward & Smith, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. The second section of the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 92), regulating the sale of stocks of goods, wares, and merchandise in bulk, reads as follows: "Thereupon it shall be the duty of the purchaser, at least five (5) days before the completion of said purchase, or the payment therefor, to notify, personally or by registered mail, each of said creditors, of the said proposed sale, the price to be paid therefor, and the terms and conditions thereof, together with a copy of the statement of the assets and liabilities as furnished him by the vendor." Two questions arise for decision: First, was it a sufficient compliance with the requirement of the act that the notice was sent by registered mail to a non-resident creditor of the vendor at least five days before the completion of the sale or payment therefor, or was it necessary that such notice should be received, by the person to whom it was sent, five days before such completion? and, second, was the notice which was sent in this case sufficient in its terms to comply with the act?

[1] 1. It is made the duty of the purchaser "to notify, personally or by registered mail," each creditor of the vendor at least five days before the completion of the purchase. Does the expression, "to notify . . . by registered mail," mean that the purchaser must place the notice in the mail duly registered, or that the person to whom it is addressed must receive it before it becomes a notice? The act is dealing with the duty of the purchaser. If he adopts the method of giving notice by mail, when he places the notice in the mail, duly registered, he has done all that he can do to comply with the law. Whether such notice reaches the creditor or not, or whether it reaches him promptly, is a matter over which the purchaser has no control. If there should be a delay in handling the mails, or if the creditor should be sick, or absent from home on a journey, there might be a long delay; and if the sale could not be completed until five days after every creditor had received the notice personally, and its validity should depend upon the proof of such receipt, sales in bulk would be practically impossible. The provisions of the act are somewhat stringent, but they do not go to that extent.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[2] 2. 8. Omitting the date, direction, and signature, the notice sent was as follows: "You are hereby notified that the Wyone Shoe Company, a corporation under the laws of Georgia, has traded for and agreed to purchase the entire stock of merchandise owned by O. M. Tift, in Valdosta, Ga., and that said purchase and sale will be fully consummated on Thursday, the 19th inst. You will find inclosed herewith copy statements of assets and liabilities of O. M. Tift, together with the addresses and amount due to each creditor; also copy inventory taken by the purchaser and seller, showing articles purchased and the cost price thereof, as furnished by O. M. Tift. The terms and conditions of said purchase being as follows: Cash payment, $3,000; $6,000 in stock in the Wyone Shoe Company; balance in deferred payments."

[3] This did not comply with the requirement of the act above cited. It did not show what was "the price to be paid therefor, and the terms and conditions thereof." It merely mentioned two payments, one of $3,000 in cash, and the other of $6,000 in stock in a shoe company, and added, "balance in deferred payments." When such deferred payments were to be made, or what was their amount, or what was the total purchase price, was not stated, as the act required. The judgment of the presiding judge, to whom the case was submitted without a jury, holding that the sale was not valid as against the creditor to whom the notice above quoted was sent, was right, though we cannot agree with him in declaring that the registered notice must have been received by the creditor five days before the consummation of the sale.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 166)

JOHNSON v. REEVES.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The evidence was conflicting, but was sufficient to authorize the verdict, and there was no error in overruling the motion for a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Webster County; Z. A. Littlejohn, Judge.

Action between W. A. Johnson and J. A. Reeves. From the judgment, Johnson brings error. Affirmed.

W. H. Gurr, for plaintiff in error. J. F. Souter and J. B. Hudson, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 179)

CARPENTER et al. v. CROWLEY et al. (Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INJUNCTION (§ 137*)—GROUND.

Under the evidence and pleadings in this case, there was no abuse of discretion on the part of the court below in refusing to grant an injunction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 307-309; Dec. Dig. § 137.*]

Error from Superior Court, Cobb County; N. A. Morris, Judge.

Bill by H. W. Carpenter and others against one Crowley and others. Judgment for defendants, refusing an interlocutory injunction. Plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

H. M. Broadwell and Mozley & Moss, for plaintiffs in error. D. W. Blair, for defendants in error.

BECK, J. Three named persons, alleging themselves to be three out of the total number of five trustees of the Roswell Methodist Episcopal Church South, brought their equitable petition against the other two trustees and a third person, who they allege is not a trustee, seeking to enjoin the sale of the Roswell Church building and lot by the defendants, who they allege are threatening to sell the same and turn the property over to the purchaser. Later, by appropriate amendment, the plaintiffs struck one of the named trustees as a defendant, leaving their petition to stand against one trustee and one person who they allege is not a trustee, though claiming himself to be and proposing to act as such. It is further alleged in the amendment that, "since the filing of said suit, the trustees in a regular meeting called by the chairman by a majority vote have declared against the sale of the property, and petitioners insist that no sale of the property in question can be made without the joint act of all the trustees." The defendants answered these and other allegations of the petition, and on the interlocutory hearing the court refused to grant the injunction prayed, to which ruling the plaintiffs excepted.

Whether under the express provisions of the trust deed by which the property in controversy was conveyed to the original trustees and their successors in office, the trustees of the Roswell Methodist Episcopal Church South, would have authority to sell the property or permit it to be devoted to other uses than those pointed out in the deed, it is not now necessary to decide. Under the pleadings and evidence in the case, the court did not abuse his discretion in refusing the interlocutory injunction sought by petitioners, as it appears, according to the allegations in the petition and the amendment thereto and the contentions of the petitioners, as shown by the evidence introduced by them, that less than a majority of the trustees are undertaking to dispose of the property; i. e., the Roswell Church building and lot upon which it is erected. Under this showing the court might well refuse to grant the injunction sought by the petitioners, inasmuch as the parties whom they sought to restrain from selling the property were powerless to accomplish that which it is alleged they were attempting to do. Injunction, therefore, was not necessary to prevent the threatened act, and the court did not err in refusing the injunction at the interlocutory hearing.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 194)

JACKSON v. GEORGIA SOUTHERN & F. R. CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 276*)—INJURIES TO EMPLOYÉ—NONSUIT.

This case was before the Supreme Court on a former occasion. Jackson v. Georgia Southern & Florida R. Co., 132 Ga. 127, 63 S. E. 841. Upon the evidence then properly brought to this court, the judgment of nonsuit was reversed. Upon a subsequent trial of the case, the evidence submitted was substantially different from that adduced on the former trial, as appeared in the record, and was sufficient to show affirmatively that the deceased, who was an employé of the railroad company, was at fault, and there was no error in granting a nonsuit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 276.*]

Error from Superior Court, Lowndes County; R. G. Mitchell, Judge.

Action by Josephine Jackson against the Georgia Southern & Florida Railroad Company. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

W. E. Thomas and Roscoe Luke, for plaintiff in error. Jno. I. Hall, J. E. Hall, and E. K. Wilcox, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 148)

COFFEE et al. v. ATLANTA OIL & FERTILIZER CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INTERLOCUTORY INJUNCTION.

Under the pleadings and evidence, there was no abuse of discretion on the part of the court below in refusing the grant of an interlocutory injunction.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by P. T. Coffee and others against the Atlanta Oil & Fertilizer Company. From a judgment refusing an interlocutory injunction, plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

Green, Tilson & McKinney, for plaintiffs in error. Tye, Peeples & Jordan, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 148)

DUNLOP v. SMITH et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INTERLOCUTORY INJUNCTION.

Under the evidence contained in the record, the court did not err in refusing the injunction prayed by the plaintiff in this case.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by G. A. Dunlop against C. R. Smith and others. From a judgment refusing an injunction, plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Lewis W. Thomas, for plaintiff in error. Westmoreland Bros., for defendants in error.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 157)

BONNER v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

No error of law is complained of, and the evidence supports the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Carroll County; R. W. Freeman, Judge.

Neal Bonner was convicted of crime, and he brings error. Affirmed.

Hamrick & Thomasson, for plaintiff in error. J. R. Terrell, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

EVANS, P. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 177)

CARTER v. GABRELS, Sheriff.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

HABEAS CORPUS (§ 113*)—RELEASE ON BOND—DISMISSAL OF WRIT OF ERROR.

Where a person instituted habeas corpus proceedings to secure the release of one confined in jail, alleging that his detention there was illegal, because the commitment was illegal and void, being based upon a warrant which itself was defective and void, and upon the hearing of the habeas corpus case the trial judge refused to order the discharge of the person from custody, but remanded him to jail, and a writ of error to this order was sued out, the same will be dismissed, where it appears that, subsequently to the order complained of, the person was indicted by the grand jury of the county for the same offense for which he had been committed, and upon giving bond had been released from custody, although a decision in the case would determine which of the parties to the habeas corpus proceedings was liable for costs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Habeas Corpus, Cent. Dig. §§ 102-115; Dec. Dig. § 113.*]

Error from Superior Court, Habersham County; J. J. Kimsey, Judge.

Application by Jim Carter for writ of habeas corpus against J. M. Gabrels, as Sheriff. From an order denying the writ, relator brings error. Dismissed.

J. C. Edwards, for plaintiff in error. I. H. Sutton, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Jim Carter instituted habeas corpus proceedings, alleging that he was illegally restrained of his liberty by J. N. Gabrels, sheriff and jailer of Habersham county, and that he was being confined in the common jail of that county under and by virtue of a pretended commitment, which was based upon a warrant which was void because of certain irregularities pointed out in the petition. Petitioner also contended that the commitment was void on its face, on the ground that it failed to "set forth any offense against the laws of the state of Georgia," and prayed an examination into the cause of his detention. Gabrels filed his answer to the petition. Upon the hearing the court remanded petitioner to the custody of the sheriff, and ordered that he be admitted to bail in the sum of $100. To this order petitioner excepted, and sued out a writ of error to this court. When the case was called for hearing in this court, the same being submitted on briefs, a motion to dismiss the writ of error was made by counsel for the defendant in error, upon the ground that, since the hearing before the court below, the plaintiff in error had been indicted in the superior court of Habersham county upon the charges which constituted the basis of the commitment alleged in the habeas corpus proceedings to be irregular and void, that he had been arrested under that indictment, that he had given bond, and that the case below is now pending. A certified copy of the indictment and bond referred to were attached to the motion to dismiss. Counsel for plaintiff in error filed an answer to the motion to dismiss, but did not deny the material allegations contained in the motion. While it is plainly inferable, from the motion to dismiss and the answer of counsel for plaintiff in error, that the plaintiff in error had been released from custody, it was not expressly stated in the motion or in the answer that he had been so released; and this court passed an order, a certified copy of which was duly mailed to counsel for plaintiff in error, directing that plaintiff in error or his counsel have 10 days from the date of such order in which to make specific denial under oath of the facts alleged in the motion to dismiss, and that upon failure to make such denial the writ of error would be dismissed. The period of 10 days within which plaintiff in error was allowed to make answer in response to the order referred to above has elapsed, and the answer has not been filed.

It is insisted in the answer to the motion to dismiss, as made by counsel for defendant, that the writ of error should not be dismissed, but that the question made in the bill of exceptions should be decided, inasmuch as upon the decision of the assignment of error for or against the plaintiff in error depends the question as to whether or not the plaintiff or defendant will be liable for costs. But this position of counsel for plaintiff in error is not tenable. Under the decision in the case of Tabor v. Hipp, 136 Ga. —, 70 S. E. 886, it was held that a case would not be retained in this court for decision solely upon the ground that a decision of the case would determine the question as to which of the parties to the case here would be liable for the costs. It is therefore ordered that the writ of error be dismissed.

Writ of error dismissed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 175)

W. D. PRICE & CO. et al. v. VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ACTION (§ 50*)—MISJOINDER.

A petition against two defendants, containing an alternative statement of facts, wherein the plaintiff alleges that if one statement be the truth one defendant is indebted to him, and if the other statement be true the other defendant would be indebted to him, and praying that the defendants be required to interplead, so as to determine which one is liable to him, and, upon the liability being fixed, that the plaintiff have judgment against such defendant, is multifarious.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. INTERPLEADER (§ 3*)—PROCEEDINGS—SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION.

A plaintiff, on a petition against two defendants containing an alternative statement of facts, wherein plaintiff alleges that if one statement be true one defendant is indebted to him, and if the other statement is true the other defendant is indebted to him, and praying that defendants be required to interplead, so as to determine which one is liable to him, and, upon the liability being fixed, that plaintiff have judgment against such defendant, cannot require such defendants to interplead and settle their respective rights, to determine which one is liable to plaintiff; Civ. Code 1910, § 5471, providing that whenever one is possessed of property, or owes a debt or duty, to which more than one person lays claim, and the claims are such as to render it doubtful or dangerous for the holder to act, he may apply to equity to compel the claimants to interplead.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Interpleader, Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

Error from Superior Court, Johnson County; B. T. Rawlings, Judge.

Action by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company against W. D. Price & Co. and another. A demurrer to the petition was overruled, and the mentioned defendants bring error. Reversed.

The Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company filed its petition against W. D. Price & Co. and the Citizens' Bank of Kite, Ga., alleging as follows: That on May 1, 1908, W. D. Price & Co. executed and delivered to petitioner their note for $648.11, due November 1, 1908, and payable at the Citizens' Bank of Kite. Petitioner discounted the note before maturity, and in due course of trade it became the property of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Chicago. That the Corn Exchange Bank, shortly before the maturity of the note, sent same for collection to the Citizens' Bank of Kite, but never received any remittance from that bank, nor was the note ever returned. That W. D. Price & Co. claim that they paid the note in full to the Citizens' Bank of Kite on the 3d of November, 1908, which is denied by that bank, which also denies, that it ever received such note for collection. That petitioner has paid the Corn Exchange Bank the amount of the note, but has never been able to obtain possession of the note. That if the note was paid by W. D. Price & Co. to the Citizens' Bank of Kite, then that bank is indebted to petitioner for the amount of the note; but if it was not so paid, as claimed by Price & Co., then the note has been lost, if it was never received by the Citizens' Bank of Kite for collection; or, if it was received by the bank, the latter has appropriated and converted it to its own use. That either W. D. Price & Co. or the Citizens' Bank of Kite is indebted to petitioner in the amount of the note. The prayer of the petition was that W. D. Price & Co. and the Citizens' Bank of Kite be required to interplead, whether W. D. Price & Co. had paid the note to the Citizens' Bank of Kite, as they claimed, or whether said note had never been received by the bank, as claimed by it, and that petitioner have judgment against whichever of the defendants it should appear owed the amount of its note. It was alleged by amendment that petitioner was without any adequate remedy at law, and that, in order to prevent a multiplicity of suits and settle the contentions of the parties by one decree, it was necessary that a court of equity should take jurisdiction. Price & Co. demurred to the petition, on the grounds that no cause of action was set out, that the petitioner is not entitled to the relief sought, either legal or equitable, and because separate and distinct actions against separate and distinct defendants are joined in the petition, and there is a misjoinder of parties defendant. The court overruled the demurrer, and Price & Co. excepted.

A. L. Hatcher and Hines & Jordan, for plaintiffs in error. Green, Tilson & McKinney, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. (after stating the facts as above). [1, 2] Under the allegations of the petition, the plaintiff is not entitled to have the defendants engage in an internecine legal battle to settle which one of them should pay the money which it claims to be due from one or the other. The Code declares that "whenever a person is possessed of property or funds, or owes a debt or duty, to which more than one person lays claim, and the claims are of such a character as to render it doubtful or dangerous for the holder to act, he may apply to equity to compel the claimants to interplead." Civ. Code 1910, § 5471. Instead of alleging that he has funds belonging to one or the other of the defendants, whom he invites to settle their respective rights to the same, the plaintiff alleges that he is entitled to recover of one of the defendants a certain sum of money on an alternative state of facts, and asks that they litigate between themselves which state of facts presents the truth, and which one of the defendants is liable to him. This is not permissible. If the bank collected the note, it is accountable to the plaintiff, and that is one cause of action. If the makers have not paid the note, they are liable thereon to the plaintiff, and that is an altogether different cause of action. The petition contains two distinct causes of action against different defendants, and violates the fundamental principle of pleading, which prohibits the inclusion of separate and independent controversies against different parties in the same action.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 172)

YOUNG v. EWING et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 977*)—REVIEW—GRANT OF NEW TRIAL.

The evidence did not demand a verdict in favor of the party in whose favor it was found, and the first grant of a new trial will not be reversed. Cox v. Grady, 132 Ga. 368, 64 S. E. 262.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3863; Dec. Dig. § 977.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 793*)—CROSS-BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—DISMISSAL.

As the grant of a new trial is affirmed, the cross-bill of exceptions is dismissed, without prejudice to the right of the defendant in error in regard to a future determination of his exceptions pendente lite. Armour & Co. v. Burkhalter, 130 Ga. 370, 60 S. E. 850; Purser v. Thompson, 135 Ga. 732, 70 S. E. 569.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 793.*]

Error from Superior Court, Irwin County;
U. V. Whipple, Judge.

Action between E. J. Young and F. E. Ewing and others. From the judgment, E. J. Young brings error, and F. E. Ewing and others assign cross-error. Judgment on main bill of exceptions affirmed, and cross-bill of exceptions dismissed.

A. J. McDonald, H. J. Quincey, and Haygood & Cutts, for plaintiff in error. L. Kennedy and O. H. Elkins, for defendants in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment on main bill of exceptions affirmed. Cross-bill of exceptions dismissed, without prejudice to exceptions filed pendente lite. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 165)

ANDERSON v. ANDERSON, Judge.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

MANDAMUS (§ 48*)—REVIEW—DISCRETION OF LOWER COURT—REFUSAL TO GRANT MANDAMUS.

The Supreme Court will not interfere with the refusal of the judge of the superior court to grant a mandamus nisi, calling upon the judge of the city court to show cause why a mandamus absolute should not be made against him, requiring him to hear and determine a given case pending in the city court of which he is judge, and which he has continued to await the final determination of another case which has been appealed from such city court to the superior court; it appearing that there was no abuse of discretion in the ruling made by either of such judges.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mandamus, Cent. Dig. § 95; Dec. Dig. § 48.*]

Error from Superior Court, Morgan County;
H. G. Lewis, Judge.

Mandamus by Ola V. Anderson, administratrix, against K. S. Anderson, Judge. From a judgment denying a writ nisi, plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

M. C. Few, for plaintiff in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 182)

WATERS et al. v. BROWNLEE et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ACTION (§ 50*)—PARTIES (§ 25*)—MULTIFARIOUSNESS—MISJOINDER OF PARTIES.

A petition by children, alleging that their father purchased land, taking the title in his own name, and used their money in part payment of the purchase price, and that subsequently the land was bought at sheriff's sale, under process against their father, by others, with notice of an implied trust, who sold to others, who also had notice of the trust, and in the petition both the father and those ultimately holding under the purchaser at sheriff's sale being defendants, and the prayers being to declare a trust and for an accounting against each for the mesne profits during the time the respective defendants were in possession of the land, is not multifarious, nor subject to objection on the ground that there is a misjoinder of parties defendant. See Conley v. Buck, 100 Ga. 187, 28 S. E. 97.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 490-547; Dec. Dig. § 50.* Parties, Cent. Dig. §§ 36-40; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—ABANDONMENT.

Other grounds of demurrer to the petition were urged, and error was assigned upon the judgment overruling the demurrer; but in the brief of counsel for plaintiffs in error no question was referred to, except as dealt with in the first headnote. The assignments of error on the other questions of demurrer will therefore be considered as abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

Error from Superior Court, Early County;
W. O. Worrill, Judge.

Action between R. O. Waters and others and Stella Brownlee and others. From the judgment, Waters and others bring error. Affirmed.

Glessner & Park, for plaintiffs in error.
Chas. D. Russell and Byron R. Collins, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 187)

JONES v. STATE.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 956*)—NEW TRIAL—MISCONDUCT OF JURY.

In regard to the ground of the motion for a new trial which alleged misconduct on the part of the jurors in separating while deliberating on the case and in discussing it with persons other than members of the jury, and on the part of the officers in charge in permitting this, in talking to the jury about the case, and in otherwise misconducting themselves, the evidence adduced before the presiding judge on the hearing of the motion for a new trial was conflicting, and there was no error in overruling such ground.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2373-2391; Dec. Dig. § 956.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 731*)—PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY—INSTRUCTIONS.

It furnished no ground for reversal that the presiding judge failed to charge the jury that they were judges of the law and facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1694, 1695; Dec. Dig. § 731.*]

3. REVIEW OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence supported the verdict, and there was no error in overruling the motion for a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Baker County; Frank Park, Judge.

Ed Jones was convicted of crime, and brings error. Affirmed.

E. E. Oox, for plaintiff in error. W. E. Wooten, Sol. Gen., F. A. Hooper, and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(9 Ga. App. 272)

GADDIS v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(No. 3,136.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. April 24, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

RAILROADS (§ 405*)—KILLING DOG ON TRACK—LIABILITY OF ROAD.

There was no error in sustaining the certiorari. A suit cannot be maintained against a railroad company for the negligent killing of a dog, and there is no evidence in this case that the killing was wanton or malicious. The decision is controlled by the rulings of the Supreme Court in Jemison v. Southwestern Railroad, 75 Ga. 444, 58 Am. Rep. 476, and Strong v. Georgia Railway & Electric Company, 118 Ga. 515, 45 S. E. 366.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 1399; Dec. Dig. § 405.*]

Error from Superior Court, Floyd County; J. W. Maddox, Judge.

Action by W. H. Gaddis against the Southern Railway Company. Verdict for plaintiff. From an order sustaining the certiorari, he brings error. Affirmed.

J. F. Kelly and Eubanks & Mebane, for plaintiff in error. Maddox, McCamy & Shumate and Geo. A. H. Harris & Sons, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Gaddis filed a suit against the Southern Railway Company for damages on account of the killing of a dog by the willful and negligent running of the defendant's train. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, and the defendant filed a petition for certiorari. The judge of the superior court sustained the certiorari, and entered a final judgment in the case in favor of the railway company, and error is assigned thereon.

According to the testimony, there was no eyewitness of the killing of the dog; and though it is perfectly plain that the dog was killed by one of the trains of the railway company, the manner of his death can only be derived from circumstances, and from these circumstances it must be determined whether the railway company is liable to the owner of the dog. One witness heard a freight train of the railway company coming, and it blew several times. He could not see the train, but saw the smoke. He thought something was on the track, and after the train had passed went down to the railroad, and found Mr. Gaddis' dog lying on the side of the track, dead. He saw where the dog had run along the track for about 10 steps, and then saw hair and blood, where it had been struck and dragged by the train. He did not see the train hit the dog, and surmised that the dog must have been running a rabbit. Another witness heard the train blow several times, but did not see it kill the dog. He testified that the train got faster after it blew. Both witnesses testified that the track is straight for about 200 yards from the direction in which the train was going up to where the dog was killed, and that the engineer could have stopped the train from the time he came into sight of where the dog was killed up to the place of the killing. There was other testimony that the track was straight at the point where the dog was killed. There was also testimony as to the value of the dog.

As we view this evidence, it is not sufficient to support the inference that the death of the dog was due to negligence; and it is certainly insufficient to establish that the dog was wantonly or maliciously killed by the running of the train. Therefore we conclude that the judge of the superior court very properly sustained the certiorari. The dog appears to have run only about 10 steps on the track before he met his death. The testimony that he was running a rabbit seems to be based upon a mere conjecture, for the witness states that he was not at a place where he could see the train, the dog, or the supposed rabbit. But, granting that the dog was in hot pursuit of a rabbit, he was perhaps so deeply engrossed in the instinctive love of the chase that he was oblivious of his surroundings and unduly negligent of his own safety; and it is possible he ran upon the track in front of the engine when it was too late for the engineer to stop the train, even if he saw him. But, be that as it may, it must be remembered that in the case of the killing of a dog no presumption of negligence arises from the mere fact of the killing itself. Jemison v. Southwestern Railroad, 75 Ga. 444 (1). And under the evidence in this case a finding in favor of the plaintiff would not have been justified, even if there could be a recovery for negligent killing of the dog, for the reason that the plaintiff failed to show that the servants of the defendant company were negligent.

The learned counsel for the plaintiff, reasoning from the fact that a dog may be levied on and sold to satisfy the debt of his owner (Vaughn v. Nelson, 5 Ga. App. 105, 62 S. E. 708), and that a dog is a subject of taxation, asks: "Why should not the courts of Georgia hold straight out that a recovery may be had for the negligent killing of a dog?" This court is controlled by the decisions of the Supreme Court as precedents, and therefore our reply must naturally be taken from the ruling in the Jemison Case, supra, reiterated in Strong v. Georgia Railway & Electric Company, 118 Ga. 515, 45 S. E. 366. For further answer, we refer all who are interested in the subject (as Judge Cobb did in delivering the opinion in the Strong Case) to the General Assembly. The question of recovering the value of a dog which has been negligently killed is absolutely foreclosed by prior adjudications to which we have referred, and hence the trial judge could only determine whether the evidence was sufficient to establish that the dog was wantonly killed.

Omitting any consideration of the fact that in the summons which brought the defendant into court at Popskull it was charged only with killing a black bloodhound by the willful and negligent running of its train, and not with having killed him wantonly and maliciously (for that point does not appear to have been raised by demurrer), the single question, under the evidence, is whether the evidence, in any view of it, is sufficient to show that the dog was wantonly killed. The blowing of the whistle, which appears to have been so unusual in its character as to attract the attention and presence of the witnesses, would seem to indicate that the agents of the company, if they saw the dog, used all ordinary diligence to arrest his attention and to drive him from the track to a place of safety. On the other hand, if the servants of the railroad company did not see the dog (and there is no evidence that they did), of course, they could not be said to have wantonly killed him. Although there is testimony that the point where the dog was killed could be seen at a considerable distance by the engineer, there were no tracks of the dog on the railroad track, except for about 10 steps, and no circumstances from which it is to be inferred that the dog was more likely on the railroad track at a time when the engineer could have seen him than that he ran upon the track and made these few steps when the engineer did not see him, or when, if he did see him, it was impossible for him to stop the train.

Judgment affirmed.

(9 Ga. App. 291)

BENTON v. STATE. (No. 8,183.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. April 24, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 286*)—CRIMINAL LAW (§ 762*)—ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO MURDER—INSTRUCTIONS.

In a trial for assault with intent to murder, the judge charged the jury as follows: "You would consider the testimony precisely as you would if death had resulted from any injury inflicted by the defendant, if any has been proven before you in this case. The only difference is that when death results, the intention to kill is presumed until the contrary appears; but when death does not result, the intention to kill is never presumed. It is a matter of proof, to be determined by the jury under the circumstances." Held, this instruction aptly and correctly defines the law applicable to assault with intent to murder, and does not intimate an opinion on the facts, is not in any manner calculated to confuse the jury as to the evidence necessary to prove malice in such cases, and is not error for any of the reasons assigned, nor for any other reason, so far as this court can discover. Whitsett v. State, 115 Ga. 203, 41 S. E. 699.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 586-591; Dec. Dig. § 286.* Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1731, 1750, 1754, 1758, 1759; Dec. Dig. § 762.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 784*)—ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO MURDER—NECESSITY FOR INSTRUCTIONS—CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

The witnesses for the state having testified that they were present and saw the shooting by the accused with a pistol in a few feet of the prosecutor, and that the shot took effect, producing a serious and dangerous wound, the jury were authorized to infer the existence of the specific intent to kill, and the judge was not required to charge the law of circumstantial evidence. Nelson v. State, 4 Ga. App. 223, 60 S. E. 1072; Paschal v. State, 125 Ga. 279, 54 S. E. 172; Johnson v. State, 4 Ga. App. 59, 60 S. E. 813; White v. State, 4 Ga. App. 72, 60 S. E. 803, and cases cited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1883-1888, 1922-1960; Dec. Dig. § 784.*]

3. HOMICIDE (§ 286*)—ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO MURDER—INSTRUCTIONS.

On a trial under an indictment for assault with intent to murder, it is not error for the court, where the evidence makes the law applicable, to give in charge to the jury the definition of implied malice as laid down in section 62 of the Penal Code of 1910. In a case of assault with intent to murder, malice may be implied "where no considerable provocation appears, and where all the circumstances" of the attempt to kill "show an abandoned and malignant heart."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 586, 591; Dec. Dig. § 286.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 789*)—INSTRUCTIONS—REASONABLE DOUBT.

An instruction to the jury that "a reasonable doubt, in terms of the law, is a doubt that legitimately springs from the evidence, or from the want of evidence, or from a conflict in the evidence," was not erroneous in failing to state that the reasonable doubt might arise from a consideration of the defendant's statement; the court charging fully and correctly on the weight which the jury might give to the statement. Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 S. E. 1063.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1846-1849, 1904-1922; Dec. Dig. § 789.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 797*)—INSTRUCTIONS.

In charging the jury that, if they should find the defendant guilty of the felony charged, they could recommend that the felony may be treated as a misdemeanor, it was not error for the judge to state that the recommendation would not be effective unless approved by the court. Such is the statute. Pen. Code 1910, § 1062; Echols v. State, 109 Ga. 508, 34 S. E. 1038.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1935-1937; Dec. Dig. § 797.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 685, 1153*)—TRIAL—CONDUCT OF TRIAL—PERMITTING WITNESS TO REMAIN IN COURTROOM TO ASSIST A PARTY—DISCRETION OF COURT.

It has been repeatedly held that it is within the discretion of the trial judge to permit a witness to remain in the courtroom to assist either the state or the accused; and while it is better that the witness should be first examined, this, too, is a matter of discretion, and the action of the court in these respects will not be reviewed. Carter v. State, 2 Ga. App. 266, 58 S. E. 532; Shaw v. State, 102 Ga. 667, 29 S. E. 477.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1549-1566½, 3065; Dec. Dig. §§ 665, 1153.*]

7. NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

Some of the testimony alleged to be newly discovered would be inadmissible, because hearsay, and that which would be admissible would probably not change the result, being purely cumulative.

8. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

No error of law appears, and the verdict is amply supported by the evidence.

Error from Superior Court, Dougherty County; Frank Park, Judge.

W. L. Benton was convicted of assault with intent to murder, and he brings error. Affirmed.

J. W. Walters, Jr., R. J. Bacon, and Ben T. Burson, for plaintiff in error. W. E. Wooten, Sol. Gen., and F. A. Hooper, for the State.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

(9 Ga. App. 255)

MILLER v. CARAKER. (Nos. 2,927-2,931.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. April 24, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. DEMURRERS PROPERLY OVERRULED.

There was no error in overruling the special demurrer to the mortgage foreclosure.

2. AFFIDAVITS (§§ 9, 12*)—EVIDENCE (§ 431*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—ADMINISTRATION OF OATH TO AFFIANT.

A written signed statement of facts, purporting to be the statement of the signer, followed by the certificate of an officer authorized to administer oaths that it was sworn to and subscribed before him, is a lawful affidavit. It is not necessary that it should be stated in the instrument, prior to the signature of the affiant, that the declaration was made under oath, if in fact the oath was administered. Whether the oath was or was not administered is a matter as to which the certificate of the officer is prima facie evidence, but as to which parol evidence is admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Affidavits, Cent. Dig. §§ 38-41; Dec. Dig. §§ 9, 12; Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 431.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. AFFIDAVITS (§ 1*)—DEFINITION.

An "affidavit" is a statement or declaration, reduced to writing and sworn to or affirmed before some officer who has authority to administer an oath (citing Words and Phrases, vol. 1, p. 240).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Affidavits, Cent. Dig. §§ 1-4; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

Error from City Court of Sylvester; J. B. Williamson, Judge.

Actions by O. T. Caraker against Needy Miller, against Needy Miller and others, against Rowell Chevers, against J. H. Kinchen and others, and against Will Gardner. Judgments for plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Reversed.

Claude Payton and O. E. Hay, for plaintiffs in error. R. J. Bacon and W. E. Grubbs, for defendant in error.

POWELL, J. [1] Caraker foreclosed a number of chattel mortgages against different defendants, and from these cases the present writs of error arise. They are separate cases, but they all involve identically the same points. In each case there was a demurrer to the foreclosure, because of the inadequacy of the description of the mortgaged property. The court overruled the demurrers. We may say, without going into details, that in each case the description of the mortgaged property was sufficient, at least as between the parties to the instrument.

In each of the cases the defendant resisted the foreclosure by filing the defense of non est factum. This defense was presented in a writing in the following form: The case is duly stated. Then comes the statement that the defendant, without waiving his demurrer, "enters a plea of non est factum, and says that the mortgage shown to be foreclosed in the above-stated case was never executed by the defendant, nor by any person authorized by the defendant, and the same is not the act of this defendant, nor has same been in any way ratified by this defendant." The plea concludes in the usual form, demanding jury trial, and is signed by the defendant, followed by a jurat as follows: "Sworn to and subscribed before me this Jan. 10, 1910. J. W. Warren, C. S. C." The court struck this defense, on the ground that it was not verified by the affidavit of the defendant.

[2] It is to be understood, of course, that a defense to the foreclosure of a mortgage on personalty is, in this state, to be made on affidavit of the defendant, and in all cases it is necessary that a plea of non est factum should be sworn to. The question is whether this plea, signed by the defendant and followed by the jurat of the clerk of the superior court, certifying that it had been sworn to, constitutes a lawful affidavit. The controlling point, therefore, is whether the failure to state in the body of the affidavit that it is made under oath or is sworn to is a fatal lack; and we use the words "fatal lack" intentionally, for the defendant in each case offered to prove by parol that the oath as to the truthfulness of the contents of the plea was administered before the plea was signed and attested by the officer.

[3] According to the very general consensus of authority an affidavit is "a statement or declaration reduced to writing and sworn or affirmed to before some officer who has authority to administer an oath," or, as it is sometimes stated, "is simply a declaration on oath, in writing, sworn to by a party before some person who has authority under the law to administer oaths." See Words and Phrases, vol. 1, p. 240. In many jurisdictions it is held that the signature of the affiant is not an essential; but in this state the contrary rule has been adopted. See Meadows v. Alexander, 1 Ga. App. 40, 57 S. E. 901, and cases there cited. So that, to give a definition of an affidavit according to the law as in force in this state, we may say that it is a statement or declaration reduced to writing, sworn to or affirmed before some officer who has authority to administer the oath, and duly signed by the affiant. It has been held in a number of cases that the jurat is not, strictly speaking, a part of the affidavit, but is merely a certificate by which the fact that the affidavit was sworn to is prima facie proved. If the officer fails to sign it originally, he may sign it afterward. Further, "it is not indispensable that the jurat should be signed by the officer who administers the oath, the material question being whether or not the oath was actually administered and taken; and in the absence of the officer's certificate to this effect, all unde testimony may be received to establish this material fact." Beach v. Averett, 106 Ga. 73, 31 S. E. 806, 71 Am. St. Rep. 239; Smith v. Walker, 93 Ga. 252, 18 S. E. 830; Veal v. Perkerson, 47 Ga. 92.

We understand that the chief distinction recognized by the courts as to jurat and affidavit is this: That nothing to which the officer alone certifies is to be regarded as a part of the affidavit, considering the affidavit in a substantive sense, and as being what the affiant in fact swore to; and, on the other hand, that the certificate of the officer is sufficient prima facie evidence to establish the fact that the contents of the writing to which it is attached were sworn to. Under the practice in the British courts, great strictness was formerly required as to the forms of affidavits, and any departure from the prescribed form would vitiate the affidavit. But none of the American courts, so far as our investigation goes, has ever given any great weight to mere form in these matters, and it is well recognized in this state that no particular form is required, provided the facts sworn to are committed to writing and signed by the affiant, if, as a matter of fact, the oath was administered. Now, on account of the requirement in England that in the body of the affidavit itself the words "upon oath," or "being sworn," should be used, it has been held in a number of English cases that the omission of these words is fatal, even though the jurat attests the fact that the statements of the affidavit were made under oath or were sworn to.

This strictness of the British courts was noticed and commented on in the case of Veal v. Perkerson, supra, and the fact was also stated in that case that such formality was not observed in Georgia.

It may be safely said that if one should have before him all of the affidavits which have ever been made in connection with judicial proceedings in this state, from its organization down to the present time, he would hardly find in 10 per cent. of them the statement of the affiant himself that he was sworn or that he was under oath; for, while affidavits occasionally begin, "I, the affiant, do swear," or, "I, the affiant, on oath, do say," still the most common form of introducing an affidavit is, "Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, an officer authorized to administer oaths, the affiant [naming him], who, on oath [or, who being duly sworn], deposes and says." It will be noticed that in this form, which is commonly used, the statement that the affiant was duly sworn is not the statement of the affiant, but on its face purports to be the statement of the attesting officer. It is substance; not mere form, that is to be observed. The affidavit is therefore good, provided (1) that there is a written statement; (2) that the oath is administered to the affiant; and (3) that he signs the statement. The verification of the magistrate to the fact that the oath was administered may as completely appear from the jurat as from the mere introductory clause preceding the written statement of the facts sworn to.

Almost the identical point was before the Supreme Court in Loeb v. Smith, 78 Ga. 504, 3 S. E. 458. There the body of the paper which was signed by the affiant contained no statement that it was on oath or sworn to, and the fact of its being made under oath appeared only from the jurat of the notary who attested it. But as Judge Bleckley said in that case: "We think the fair construction of the whole document, taken together, is that the agent [the affiant] swore to the truth of the petition. By the terms 'sworn to,' as used in the jurat, the magistrate meant to say, and did say with sufficient certainty, that the petition was sworn to; and to swear to an instrument of writing, such as a petition, is to declare on oath that its contents are true." Chief Justice Bleckley did, in the course of the argument, suggest that this might not amount to a formal affidavit, though it is plain from all he said that he leaned most strongly to the opinion that it did. In that case it was held that a formal affidavit was not necessary.

In the present case, where a formal affidavit is necessary we hold that the writing before us constitutes an affidavit which is sufficiently formal, thus giving effect to what the learned justice intimated, but was not called upon to decide judicially.

Judgment reversed.

(3 Ga. App. 240)

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. WILEY.

(No. 2,898.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. April 24, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)1. TRIAL (§ 250)—INSTRUCTIONS.

Where a suit to recover damages was based on the theory of a willful and wanton act, and a recovery was authorized only on that theory, it was error to instruct the jury in effect that the defendant would be liable on proof of negligent conduct alone.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 584-586; Dec. Dig. § 250.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)2. RAILROADS (§ 312)—DEATH OF PERSON ON TRACK — NEGLIGENCE — FAILURE TO GIVE CROSSING SIGNAL.

Failure of those in charge of a locomotive to sound a crossing signal at a crossing several hundred yards from the point where the engine struck and killed a person walking upon the track was not of itself negligence as to the person so killed, but could only be considered as a circumstance, in connection with other facts, indicating negligence at the place of the killing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 988-1001, 1003; Dec. Dig. § 312.*]

3. TORTS (§ 18*)—NEGLIGENCE (§ 100*)—WANTON AND WILLFUL INJURY.

There may be a recovery for a willful and wanton injury inflicted upon another, though such other may be a trespasser or wrongdoer, and may be himself guilty of contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Torts, Cent. Dig. § 25; Dec. Dig. § 18.* Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 85; Dec. Dig. § 100.*]

Error from City Court of Hall County; Geo. K. Looper, Judge.

Action by Mrs. W. J. Wiley against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

C. B. Faulkner, Ed Quillian, and Jno. J. Strickland, for plaintiff in error. H. H. Dean, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. This is a suit brought by the plaintiff against the railroad company to recover damages for the wanton and willful killing of her husband. She recovered a verdict for $1,500, and the defendant's motion for a new trial was overruled. The evidence is within a narrow compass, and briefly stated is as follows:

The decedent, 60 years of age, was walking on the track of the railroad several hundred yards from a public crossing. He was quite deaf, the wind was blowing at a high rate directly in his face as he walked, and a freight train, running from 20 to 30 miles an hour, coming up behind, ran over and killed him. The engineer saw him walking on the track at a distance of between 300 and 400 yards before he reached him. There was a pathway on the side of the track for pedestrians, although pedestrians were in the habit of using the middle of the track at that place. As to this point there is no controversy in the evidence. The plaintiff's witnesses testified that the engineer did not blow the whistle at the public crossing, about 300 yards from where the deceased was killed, and did not blow the whistle or ring the bell, or apparently make any effort to check the speed of the train, before reaching the decedent.

The engineer testified that he did blow the whistle at the blow post when approaching the crossing, some 300 yards from where the decedent was killed; that when he first saw the decedent walking on the track he assumed that he would get off the track before the train reached him, but, realizing in a few seconds that the decedent did not intend to get off the track, he blew his whistle, put on the brakes, including the emergency brakes, and did all he could to stop the train, but that it was impossible to stop it in time to prevent the homicide. The other employes of the company substantially corroborate this testimony of the engineer, especially as to the signals which he gave and the efforts which he made to stop the train.

[2] From the undisputed facts it is clear that the decedent was a trespasser, and that he was guilty of contributory negligence. As Chief Justice Bleckley says in the case of Central Railroad & Banking Co. v. Smith, 78 Ga. 698, 3 S. E. 398, under somewhat similar facts: "It is manifest that plaintiff was out of his place at the time he was injured. Grant that the track was often used by persons to walk along it and there was no objection to such use, and that plaintiff was there by implied or tacit license, he was there under circumstances which required him to have all his senses on the alert for trains, and to get out of the way when any of them approached." Here, according to plaintiff's own language, as well as the allegations of the petition, the decedent "was quite deaf and very hard of hearing." It cannot be questioned that for a person with this infirmity to walk on a railroad track, where many trains were running at all hours of the day, without constantly using his sense of sight to guard against the approach of a train, was negligence. Indeed, it is not denied that the decedent was a trespasser, or that he was guilty of contributory negligence; and the suit is based entirely on the theory that even though he was a trespasser, and guilty of contributory negligence, the railroad company is nevertheless liable for his death, because the killing was willful and wanton. In other words, the suit is not one to recover damages due to the negligent conduct of the employes of the railroad company, which caused the death of the decedent. It was within its rights in the running of its cars at that place at the rate of speed that the evidence, even for the plaintiff, shows it was running; and as the decedent was some distance from the crossing, even if it had failed to obey the crossing law with reference to signals, this was not an act of negligence of itself, in so far as the decedent was concerned, and could only be considered as a circumstance, in connection with other facts, indicating negligence at the place of the killing; and the engineer had the right to presume that the decedent, who apparently was capable of taking care of himself, would get out of the way of the approaching train. And while it may be true that, when the engineer first saw the decedent walking on the track, it may have been his duty, out of abundance of caution, to blow the whistle as a warning of approaching danger, yet, having no knowledge of the decedent's deficiency in his faculty of hearing, it was not unreasonable for him to assume that the sound of the running train would be sufficient to give warning of its approach, and his failure then to sound the whistle could only be considered, at most, as an act of negligence.

[3] The recovery in this case, therefore, can be sustained only on the theory that the decedent was killed by the willful and wanton conduct of the engineer; it being well settled that there can be a recovery for a willful and wanton injury inflicted upon another, even though that other may be a trespasser or wrongdoer, and may be himself guilty of contributory negligence. 3 Elliott on Railroads, § 1253; Central Railroad Co. v. Denson, 84 Ga. 774, 11 S. E. 1039; W. & A. Railroad Co. v. Bailey, 105 Ga. 101, 31 S. E. 547; Central Railroad Co. v. Brinson, 70 Ga. 227. Was the engineer, under the facts, guilty of willful and wanton conduct in killing the deceased? There is no evidence that he willfully or intentionally killed him, or that his conduct was so reckless as to amount to wantonness, and, if guilty of either willfulness or wantonness, it arises from the failure to use reasonable care to avoid injury to him after discovering his danger; for, as held by this court in Charleston & Western Carolina Railroad Company v. Johnson, 1 Ga. App. 441, 57 S. E. 1064, "a failure to exercise ordinary care to prevent injuring a person after his presence in a position of peril becomes known is so much akin to wantonness and willfulness as to create liability." De Vane v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co., 4 Ga. App. 140, 60 S. E. 1081. This is but the enunciation of the general rule on the subject. Elliott on Railroads, §§ 1253 and 1257; Central of Georgia R. R. Co. v. Denson, supra, and many cases there cited.

When did the engineer first see, or in the exercise of ordinary case could he have seen, the perilous position of the decedent? Clearly this situation was not perilous when he first saw him, for he was between 300 and 400 yards distant, and he had a right to presume, in the absence of any knowledge of any physical deficiency in the decedent, that he could hear the approaching train and would get off the track in time to prevent the homicide. The principle of law applicable to this case is tersely laid down in 2 Rorer on Railroads, § 1122, as follows: "At places other than crossings, or on public highways, a railroad track is the private property of the company, and no one other than the company's servants or employes, in the necessary discharge of duties there, have any right to be thereon, and more especially as to their using the same as a thoroughfare or pathway, on which to walk or travel. And though the company may not wantonly injure persons thus intruding upon and using the same, yet if the person be an adult, not known to those in charge of the train to be deficient in discretion, or in physical ability to take care of himself, or not known to be deficient in his faculty of hearing, and not in any way presenting indications of being disabled, or incapable of taking care for his safety, then the persons in charge of the train have a right to conclude, and to act on that conclusion, that such person is in possession of all his proper faculties to enable him to do so, and will leave the track in time to save himself from injury, and are not bound to stop or check up the train on his account." The learned author adds, however: "But as a matter of ordinary prudence and care, it is their duty to sound the whistle and ring the bell, as a warning of the approaching danger." This apt enunciation of the law has been approved by the Supreme Court in frequent decisions. Central Railroad Co. v. Denson, supra, and many cases there cited. In the Denson Case the verdict was approved, because the facts in that case showed negligence per se in the failure to observe the blow post law, and also strongly indicated such reckless conduct on the part of the engineer as amounted to wantonness.

Here the engineer testified that, as soon he saw the decedent on the track some 300 or 400 yards away, he sounded his whistle; but the jury were authorized from the plaintiff's evidence to infer that this was not true. The engineer further testified that, when he saw that the decedent did not show any indication of getting off the track, he again blew his whistle repeatedly, and at once put into operation every means at hand to check the running train in time to prevent the homicide. The evidence for the plaintiff would probably have authorized the jury to infer that he did not blow the whistle until after the homicide; but there is no evidence that he did not endeavor by every means possible to check the rapid movement of the train when he realized the decedent's danger. Of course, under the facts of this case, in view of the undisputed evidence as to the decedent's deafness, the blowing of the whistle would have been ineffective, and the timely checking of the train was the only act of prudence that the engineer could have adopted to have been available in the emergency.

The exact period of time in which ordinary diligence would have required him to discover that the decedent would not get off the track was necessarily largely a matter of judgment under the circumstances, and if he failed to exercise proper judgment in realizing when the exact moment of peril would begin, this failure certainly could not be counted against him as willful or wanton, although it might have been charged against him as simple negligence. While we think the evidence in this case is exceedingly close on the question of liability, we are so reluctant to decide that the verdict of the jury on questions purely of fact is unsupported by any evidence, and therefore contrary to law, that we prefer to grant another trial on a specific error of law, if such is disclosed by the record.

[1] In this case error of law appears in the charge of the court, when considered in the light of the evidence. Here was a suit based solely on the willful and wanton conduct of the engineer in a failure to exercise ordinary prudence in reference to a trespasser on the track who was in a position of peril and whose position of peril was known to the engineer, or could have been known to him by the exercise of ordinary care. The learned trial judge failed in any part of his instructions to restrict the right of recovery to the evidence of willful and wanton conduct on the part of the engineer, but distinctly instructed the jury that they would be authorized to find a verdict against the railroad company, if they found from the evidence that the defendant's employes were guilty of negligence in causing the homicide of the decedent. He several times instructed them that if the engineer, after he discovered the decedent on the track, continued the operation of the train at full speed, without sounding any alarm or making any effort to prevent the killing, they would be authorized to find that the defendant was negligent, and was therefore liable. Here the decedent was an admitted trespasser. The railroad company owed him no duty until his position of peril was discovered on the track. His position of peril did not arise as soon as the engineer saw him on the track, for he was then several hundred yards distant, and the engineer had the right to assume that he would get off the track in time to prevent the accident. The duty of diligence to the trespasser arose only when the engineer saw that he did not intend to get off the track. The repeated instructions of the judge that the engineer, in the exercise of ordinary diligence, should have done all he could do to prevent the injury as soon as he discovered the decedent walking on the track, or the railroad company would be liable for negligence, was not the enunciation of a correct principle of law as applicable to the facts of this case. In other words, the suit was based on the theory of a willful and wanton killing, and a recovery was authorized only on that theory. The charge of the court allowed a verdict against the railroad company if the engineer was only negligent.

The assignments of error made in the motion for a new trial complain of this theory of the case presented in the charge, and we think this objection is well founded, and, in view of the very close character of the evidence on the question of liability, we are constrained for this reason to hold that the court below erred in refusing to grant a new trial.

Judgment reversed.

(30 W. Va. 155)

MILLAN v. BARTLETT.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CONTRACTS (§ 168*)—CONSTRUCTION—COVENANTS IMPLIED.

An express covenant to perform certain acts implies a covenant to refrain from performance of other acts which operate to defeat performance of the express covenant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 751; Dec. Dig. § 168.*]

2. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 74*)—OIL LEASES—BREACH OF COVENANT.

A covenant by the assignor of an interest in an oil lease that he will pay the rental and prevent a forfeiture is broken by a sale thereafter of the lease to another, who makes a surrender of it, or who by failure to pay the rental suffers a forfeiture.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 74.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Marion County.

Action by Alpheus F. Millan against Fred W. Bartlett. Judgment of dismissal, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

U. N. Arnett, Jr., and Thos. P. Jacobs, for plaintiff in error. W. B. Cornwell and W. S. Meredith, for defendant in error.

WILLIAMS, P. Plaintiff has obtained a writ of error to a judgment of the circuit court of Marion county, pronounced on the 16th of June, 1908, sustaining a demurrer to his amended declaration in an action for breach of covenant, and, on his declining to further amend, dismissing his bill.

[1] The sole question presented is whether the amended declaration sufficiently states a good cause of action. It avers that defendant, for valuable consideration fully paid, assigned to plaintiff, by contract in writing under seal, an undivided one-eighth working interest in 21 certain oil leases, describing them by the dates of their execution, the names of the lessors, the number of acres of land embraced in each, and the terms of years they had to run. It also avers that defendant made certain covenants with plaintiff, which he has since broken, whereby plaintiff has suffered damages to the amount of $50,000. Stripped of the verbiage of formal pleading, the covenants alleged are: (1) That Bartlett agreed to relieve Millan of the payment of any part of the money necessary to keep the leases in force; or, if Bartlett preferred to suffer the leases to lapse, which it is alleged he had a right to do, then he was bound to notify Millan, and thus give him an opportunity to pay the rental and prevent their forfeiture; and (2) that Bartlett was to assign to Millan, on his request, such leases as Bartlett might decide he would not continue to pay the rental on.

Briefly stated, the breaches assigned are: (1) That Bartlett did not relieve plaintiff of the payment of the rental necessary to keep alive the leases, and did not pay it himself; (2) that he did not notify plaintiff of his intention to let any of said leases lapse; (3) that he did not assign to plaintiff such leases as he did not desire to keep in force; (4) that, without notice to plaintiff, he sold and conveyed an undivided one-half interest in the leases to Neely and Sheakley, and afterwards united with said Neely and Sheakley in a sale of the whole to the Fairmont Gas & Light Company; and (5) that the Fairmont Gas & Light Company immediately surrendered the most valuable ones of said leases, and thereafter obtained new leases for the same property. The breach is sufficiently averred; the declaration states a good cause of action. Its averments show that defendant broke his covenants by voluntarily putting it out of his power to perform them. True he did not covenant not to sell the leases, but it is also true that he could not escape liability by a sale and transfer of them. There was, at least, an implied covenant that he would not sell, if by selling he would put it out of his power to perform his covenants. He agreed not to let any of the leases lapse without notifying plaintiff. This was to give him an opportunity to pay the rental himself, and thereby prevent a forfeiture. He also agreed to assign to plaintiff such leases as he (Bartlett) might not wish to keep alive. He was bound to keep alive the leases, or to notify Millan if he decided not to do so.

[2] It is averred that the Fairmont Gas & Light Company acquired the whole of the leases, which, of course, included plaintiff's one-eighth of the working interest, and that it then suffered the most valuable ones to become forfeited, and thereafter obtained new leases of the same lands. This defeated the rights of plaintiff, which Bartlett was bound either to protect or to notify plaintiff, and thereby afford him an opportunity to protect for himself. The sale to, and later forfeiture by, the Fairmont Gas & Light Company constituted a breach of Bartlett's covenants for which he is liable to plaintiff. The averments show that he has caused to occur, by indirection, that which he had covenanted should not occur directly.

It was error to sustain the demurrer and dismiss plaintiff's action, and the judgment complained of will be reversed; and this court will enter an order overruling the demurrer and reinstating the action, and will remand the case for further proceedings, to be had according to law.

(89 W. Va. 152)

GUTHRIE v. HUNTINGTON CHAIR CO.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PAYMENT (§ 59*)—PLEADING (§ 139*)—SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

Sets-off and partial payments must be specified in a plea or in an account filed, to be provable. Code 1906, c. 126, § 4.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Payment, Cent. Dig. § 143½; Dec. Dig. § 59;* Pleading, Cent. Dig. § 287; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 518*)—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—EVIDENCE.

Evidence to show failure of consideration in a promissory note must clearly show that the thing on which the failure rests entered into the consideration of the note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Dec. Dig. § 518.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Cabell County.

Action by J. W. Guthrie against the Huntington Chair Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Geo. S. Wallace, for plaintiff in error.
Holt & Duncan and W. K. Cowden, for defendant in error.

BRANNON, J. The Tucker Chair Company sold out its manufacturing plant to the Huntington Chair Company; the sale including some lumber in the yard. The Huntington Chair Company executed to the Tucker Chair Company four promissory notes. One of these notes was transferred by the Tucker Chair Company to J. W. Guthrie, and upon it he brought an action of assumpsit against the Huntington Chair Company, and the court directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and a verdict and judgment were rendered for him, and the Huntington Chair Company has brought this writ of error.

The Huntington Chair Company asked a witness what was the consideration for the note, and offered to show that "the consideration for those notes was a part of the purchase price paid by the Huntington Chair Company to the Tucker Chair Company for certain assets of the Tucker Chair Company, sold by it to the Huntington Chair Company; the purchase price to be a certain price, paid for certain machinery, plus an amount or so much per car, for certain stock then on hand, by the Tucker Chair Company, and that the Huntington Chair Company made certain advances to the Tucker Chair Company upon such purchase price, before the stock in the yard of the Tucker Chair Company was delivered by it to the Huntington Chair Company, and that it afterwards turned out that the amount so advanced by the Huntington Chair Company was largely in excess of the purchase price agreed to be paid by it to the Tucker Chair Company, and that there is now due it (the Huntington Chair Company) by the Tucker Chair Company, on account of money advanced in excess of the purchase price, a large sum in excess of the notes herein sued on." The court refused to allow the question to be answered. It will be seen that this evidence would not show that the advances were made before notice to the Huntington Chair Company of the transfer of the note to Guthrie. The evidence shows that they were made after notice.

[2] This proposed evidence would not show that the note was a part of the consideration, both for the machinery and the lumber in the yard. It would not show whether the notes were given for the machinery alone, leaving the lumber in the yard to be priced and paid for in addition to the notes. The language of the proposed evidence indicates that the notes were given for the machinery, and that the lumber was to be paid for at so much per car, without stating that the price was then fixed. The evidence would not show that this lumber was priced and made a part of the $3,000 for which the notes were taken. Unless that lumber on which the advances were made was a part of the $3,000, the failure in quantity of that lumber would not be a failure of consideration for the notes. It does not say that the advance was in excess of the price agreed to be paid for both. In other words, it would not show clearly that the lumber was a part of the $3,000. In fact, the evidence shows that the lumber was to be paid for in addition to the $3,000, at a price thereafter to be fixed, and to be delivered thereafter. These advances could not be payments, because not offered or accepted as payments.

[1] Payment is a matter of contract; and, secondly, there was no specification of payments filed. Nor could they be treated as sets-off, because there was no specification filed; and, secondly, the proposed evidence did not show that the advances were made before notice of the assignment. Counsel does not seem to rely very much upon these advances as payments or sets-off, but on the theory that the lumber was a part of the consideration for which the notes were given; but the proposed evidence would not show that.

The question was asked a witness, "I will ask you to state whether or not the Huntington Chair Company did pay the Tucker Chair Company for the lumber," and the court would not allow the question to be asked. The defendant offered to show that at the time the contract was made it was agreed that the Huntington Chair Company would take from the Tucker Chair Company certain stock in material that it had on hand, from time to time as needed, and that before the stock was delivered the Huntington Chair Company, "from time to time, made certain advances to the Tucker Chair Company," and at the time of the assignment of the notes the "Tucker Chair Company was largely indebted to the Huntington Chair Company, and the Huntington Chair Company was entitled to offset that amount." Now this is a claim to set off, and it cannot be allowed, because, if for no other reason, there was no specification of them filed. They are not and cannot be treated as payments, because there is no specification of them as partial payments, and because they were neither offered nor accepted as payments. Payment is a matter of contract. The evidence clearly shows that the four notes of $750, each, were for the purchase price of the machinery and plant, and that the lumber in the yard, to be thereafter delivered by car loads, from time to time as needed, was to be paid for in addition to the $3,000 represented by said notes.

We cannot see any error in the case, and therefore affirm the judgment.

(69 W. Va. 136)

MYERS v. CARNAHAN et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 80*)—DECISIONS REVIEWABLE—FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.

A decree sustaining the demurrer of plaintiff to a petition or answer of defendant, filed after final decree, seeking a decree against plaintiff for sums alleged to have been expended in drilling, equipping, and operating an oil well on plaintiff's land, but which decree does not finally dispose of such petition, is not final, and an appeal from such decree will be dismissed as improvidently awarded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 429, 432, 450, 456, 457, 494-509; Dec. Dig. § 80.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Monongalia County.

Suit by Solomon Myers against John E. Carnahan and others. Decree for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Dismissed and remanded.

W. S. Meredith and Edmond Englert, for appellants. Moreland, Moreland & Guy and S. F. Glasscock, for appellee.

MILLER, J. This appeal is a sequel to Myers v. Carnahan, 61 W. Va. 415, 57 S. E. 134. On the former appeal we affirmed the decree below in favor of plaintiff, adjudging that a certain lease for oil and gas purposes, executed by plaintiff to O. O. Bradley, October 12, 1899, was fully terminated and ended from and after October 12, 1904, and that the title of the plaintiff to the oil and gas in controversy be quieted; and that defendants and other persons be enjoined and inhibited from extracting the petroleum oil and gas from plaintiff's land, described in said lease, and from committing further acts of irreparable injury thereto. Said decree, on motion of the plaintiff, also provided, that the cause be retained upon the docket for further proceedings contemplated by the plaintiff, to adjudicate, settle and determine questions in regard to rents and profits, and damages to the real estate.

After affirmance of that decree, and the cause had been remanded to and re-docketed in the circuit court, the defendants presented in that court, what they call their petition, or second amended and supplemental joint and several answer, in which, upon the allegations made therein, they represent that they are advised and believe they are entitled to recover from the plaintiff, defendant thereto: "First, the value of all property of every character and kind owned by these defendants upon the lands of plaintiff on the 12th day of October, 1904; second, the value of all property of every character and kind thereafter placed on said land and used in the drilling of said well together with the amount of money expended in drilling, and completing said well after the said 12th day of October, 1904; third, the amount of all moneys expended by these defendants in caring for the well drilled on said premises as aforesaid together with the value of tools, machinery and fixtures placed thereon for said purpose."

The decree appealed from overruled plaintiff's objections and exceptions to the filing of said petition and answer, and ordered that the same be filed, and recites that, plaintiff thereupon entered his demurrer thereto, alleging that the same was not sufficient in law; and the court having maturely considered said demurrer, adjudged only that the plaintiff's said demurrer be sustained. There was no leave given to amend, and there was no decree dismissing said petition for failure to amend or on other grounds.

It has been many times decided by this court that a judgment or decree which on demurrer sustained does not finally dispose of a suit or action is not final, and that no writ of error or appeal will lie from this court thereto. Kirk v. Camden Interstate Railway Co., 66 W. Va. 486, 66 S. E. 683; Barker v. Stephenson, 68 S. E. 113; Bower v. Virginian Ry. Co., 70 S. E. 369, and cases cited.

We therefore dismiss the appeal as having been improvidently awarded, and remand the cause to the circuit court for such further proceedings as the appellant may be advised to take.

(80 W. Va. 146)

DARNELL v. FLYNN et al.

DARNELL et al. v. MUSICK et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 904*)—REVIEW—PRESUMPTIONS—PROCESS SERVED.

Where a decree declares that a case is heard upon process served, it will be taken for true that there was such process, and that it was served.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3671; Dec. Dig. § 904.*]

2. INFANTS (§ 115*)—DECREE—DEFECTS IN PROCEEDINGS—REVERSAL.

The omission of a clerk to enter orders at rules, showing the filing of a bill and setting the cause for hearing, will not reverse decrees as to infants, rendered upon their answer by guardian ad litem.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Infants, Cent. Dig. §§ 326-332; Dec. Dig. § 115.*]

3. INFANTS (§ 115*)—DECREE—NOTICE TO SUSTAIN—FAILURE TO SET FOR HEARING AT RULES—REVERSAL.

Where a case is heard as to infants, upon their answer by guardian ad litem, a decree will not be set aside, on the ground that the case was not set for hearing at rules.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Infants, Cent. Dig. §§ 326-332; Dec. Dig. § 115.*]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1166*)—GROUNDS FOR REVERSAL—FAILURE TO PLACE ON HEARING DOCKET.

The omission of a case from the hearing docket of a chancery court will not reverse decrees in it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4527-4530; Dec. Dig. § 1166.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 321*)—PLEADING—"FILING OF BILL."

Delivery of a bill in a chancery suit to the clerk in his office is a "filing of the bill," though no indorsement on it of filing is made (citing 3 Words and Phrases, 2764).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 629-632; Dec. Dig. § 321.*]

6. TAXATION (§§ 798, 697*)—SALE FOR TAXES—SUIT TO ANNUL TAX DEED—PARTIES ENTITLED TO SUE.

A person having no title to land, or right to redeem, cannot maintain a suit to annul a tax deed for it, or to redeem it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1583, 1394-1400; Dec. Dig. §§ 798, 697.*]

7. TAXATION (§ 734*)—SALE FOR TAXES—VALIDITY OF TAX DEED.

That the sheriff's affidavit to a list of sales of land for taxes is not signed or sworn to will not invalidate a tax deed under a tax sale.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1470-1473; Dec. Dig. § 734.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Cabell County. Consolidated bills by Viola Darnell against Amy Flynn and others, and by Viola Darnell and others against E. E. Musick and others.

From the joint decree, Musick and others appeal. Reversed, and dismissed.

Marcum & Marcum, Edward C. Lyon, and Sheppard, Goodykoontz & Scherr, for appellants. J. S. Miller, for appellees.

BRANNON, J. Francisco died, leaving Amy, his widow, who later married Flynn, and two infant children, Viola, who married Darnell, and Maggie, who married McTuree. At his death Francisco owned a tract of 150 acres of land. He was indebted to McCoy, and McCoy brought a chancery suit against Francisco's estate to subject the land to the payment of McCoy's debt, and decrees were rendered therein, subjecting the land to sale to pay the debt, and confirming the sale, and directing a deed to be made to Musick, the purchaser under the judicial sale, and the deed was made by a commissioner under decree to Musick. Over six years after the last decree and deed, Viola Darnell brought a chancery suit against Musick and others, claiming the land under him, having for its object the setting aside of all the decrees in said McCoy case, and the deed made to Musick under them, and this suit resulted in a decree setting aside and declaring void all the decrees in the McCoy case and the deed of the commissioner.

The said land, having been returned delinquent for nonpayment of taxes for the years 1895 and 1896, was sold therefor in December, 1897, and purchased by Varney, who received a tax deed therefor. In 1906 Viola Darnell and Maggie McTuree brought a suit to set aside the tax sale and deed for defect in the proceedings under which the same were made. This case was heard along with the case above mentioned, of Darnell against Amy Flynn, Musick, and others, and a joint decree rendered therein, holding the tax deed valid, but allowing Viola Darnell and Maggie McTuree to redeem the land from the tax sale. E. Musick and others interested in the land appeal from this decree.

[1] We first deal with the case of Darnell against Flynn and Musick brought to annul the decrees in the McCoy case. It is claimed that the decrees therein are utterly void. One reason pointed out for this contention is that there was no summons issued in the McCoy case and therefore no suit. We do not find this to be so. That summons is not found in the papers; but the clerk, speaking from the chancery process book, and from memory, swears that a summons in chancery was issued in the case December 31, 1892. Further, there was found among the papers of the sheriff an official copy of this summons and it was proven by two deputy sheriffs that that summons was served by the deputy sheriff on Amy Flynn and Viola and Maggie Francisco. The copy of the summons is filed in the case and is identified by evidence. Further still on this point of the want of a summons to commence the suit we have a decree which declares that it appeared to the court that process had been duly executed upon all the home defendants, and we have other decrees treating the case as a case and proceeding upon that assumption. Can we say, under these circumstances, that there was no process to commence the suit? Can we say that the judge solemnly proceeds in the case by numerous decrees without looking to whether he had a suit before him?

[2] Another ground of attack upon the decrees is that there was no bill in the case. We have the bill before us in the file of papers, perfectly identified as the genuine original bill. It is not denied that this is the bill; but it is said that no rules were indorsed on it, and that there were no rules entered in the rule book, or any order, showing that the bill was filed, and no order setting the case for hearing, and the case was not properly on the court docket. In answer to this contention we find a decree stating that the process had been duly executed on all the home defendants, and order of publication duly published and posted as to nonresidents, and "the cause having been regularly matured and set for hearing at rules in the clerk's office of this county, and this cause now coming on this day to be heard upon the plaintiff's bill and exhibits therewith filed." Here we have a declaration and adjudication by the court that the bill was present, and that the case had been regularly brought on by proceedings at rules. We have another decree, allowing the bill to be amended. We have still another decree, saying that "this cause came on this day to be heard upon the plaintiff's bill," and the case was heard on both those hearings, and decrees made therein. Do we need authority to show that when a court declares such facts by adjudication they are to be held as true, in the absence of fraud? In Scott v. Luddington, 14 W. Va. 392, it is held that when a decree finds that an order of publication was duly executed it is taken for true in an appellate court. The same principles in Moore v. Holt, 10 Grat. (Va.) 284, and Riggs v. Lockwood, 12 W. Va. 133. Furthermore this bill was presented with the original file of papers and identified as the true bill by the present clerk, as an original paper, and by the clerk in office at the time the bill was filed, and by the attorney who prosecuted the McCoy suit.

It does seem to be asking a stretch of power to ask, under such circumstances, that the court, after six years, be called upon to say that there was no suit at all in court. But it may be that we are too broad in saying that counsel alleges that there was no bill, as he means only to say that there is no bill, because not so indorsed and not entered in the rule book. But the court treated the case as matured at rules, and as a pending suit, and a bill as present, which was so in fact. Now it cannot be that indorsements on the back of a bill, which are mere memoranda, are essential to show it to be a bill. I do not see that they have any legal force, except for identification. The counsel relies with stress upon the fact that no rules were taken up and the case not set for hearing. The court treated it otherwise.

[5] In the first place, that bill was delivered to the clerk, and that is all that is required of the plaintiff. "A paper is said to be filed when it is delivered to the proper officer, and by him received, to be kept on file." Bouvier's Law Dictionary, 782; 3 Words & Phrases, 2764; Beebe v. Morrell, 76 Mich. 114, 42 N. W. 1119, 15 Am. St. Rep. 288, and note. The cases of Beverly v. Ellis, 1 Rand. (Va.) 102, and Horsley v. Garth, 2 Grat. (Va.) 472, 44 Am. Dec. 393, are here apt authority. The taking of the rules is purely a ministerial, not a judicial, act. The omission to enter them cannot overturn proceedings. In Shelton v. Welsh, 7 Leigh (Va.) 175, it was held that a failure at rules to enter an inquiry of damages was a clerical error. In Southern Express Co. v. Jacob, 109 Va. 27, 63 S. E. 17, it is held by the Virginia court that: "Where plaintiff has done all that was required to entitle him to his office judgment, he could not be prejudiced by the failure of the clerk to enter the rules properly." See, for the same principle, Digges v. Dunn, 1 Munf. (Va.) 56, and Shadrack v. Woolfolk, 32 Grat. 715.

In connection with this point that no rules were taken up, I have to say that the claim is that Amy Francisco, widow, and Viola and Maggie Francisco, infants, were not served with process in the McCoy case. As to Amy Francisco, it is clearly proven that she was served with the summons, though she swears she was not, and the decree says that all the home defendants were served, and she and the infants were home defendants. [3] The argument is that the case was not set for hearing at rules, and an opinion drawn by me is cited from Gallatin v. Davis, 44 W. Va. 117, 28 S. E. 747, taking the position that it is error to decree, where a case was not set for hearing at rules. That was not an actual decision of the court. Probably it is correct in the case of an adult. It may be that he could say that, where the case was heard without being set for hearing at rules, it was a surprise upon him to hear the case without his appearance. But as to Amy Francisco, she had no estate in this land. A widow has no vested estate until dower assigned. "Upon the husband's death, the dower right of the wife loses its contingent character, and becomes 'consummate,' as it is called. It is not, however, yet an estate, but is merely a right in action, until the land in which the widow is to hold her dower is set off to her; this being termed the 'assignment of dower.'" 1 Tiffany Mod. R. Prop. § 198. See many authorities for this cited in George v. Hess, 48 W. Va. bottom page 535, 37 S. E. 564. Having no vested estate, her land is not taken by this decree. Moreover the decree of the court declares that the case had been regularly matured and set for hearing at rules. The court must have so found upon evidence before it, and we cannot say that that judicial ascertainment is false. And moreover, still, that decree does not bar the right of dower, the only right in Amy Francisco, unless she is barred by the statute of limitations. So this point as to Amy Francisco is unsubstantial and not cause for annulling the decrees.

And as to those infants, Viola and Maggie Francisco, a guardian ad litem was assigned for them, and he filed an answer for them, as shown by the record, and that answer is filed as an exhibit in this case, and identified as a true answer, and the decree of sale recites that the case was heard upon the answer filed by the guardian ad litem. Now it is not necessary to serve process upon infants. And here the infants appeared in the only way in which they could appear, and, even if in the case of adults it would be error to hear the case without an order at rules, setting the case for hearing, it would not be so in the case of infants, because they can only appear by guardian ad litem, and the court protects their interests. Judge Robinson's opinion, in McDermitt v. Newman, 64 W. Va. 195, 61 S. E. 300, supports this view.

[4] It is objected that the case was not on the hearing docket. That will not invalidate the decrees. A hearing docket is merely a convenience for the court in the disposition of its business, and to fix the order of cases as between themselves, and is no part of the record of the case.

As to the objection that the widow's dower was not assigned. She did not ask it, although served with process, and it is proven that she knew of and talked about the suit, and had a witness summoned in the suit. She did not ask her dower. Moreover all appeal by her for this cause had been barred when this suit was brought. She cannot say the decree is void, even if it was erroneous in this respect. But she did not bring this suit. She is a defendant therein, and filed no answer or claim, and how can Viola Darnell avail herself of any error committed prejudicial to her mother? She cannot say the case is void as to her on any such account.

Another objection is that the land is not sufficiently described in the commissioner's deed. We think it is from the whole record; but this is a suit to set aside the decree as void, and we cannot see that the mere description of the land enters into this question.

Here is a proposition to annul decree after decree after the lapse of nearly seven years, and to deny the finding and the declarations of the decree as to the presence of process, bill, answer, and setting for hearing. It is hardly necessary to summon that line of cases, some of which have been given above, that every presumption exists in favor of judgments of courts of general jurisdiction, and that they are presumed to be correct, and such presumption prevails, unless want of authority appears on the face of the record, and the burden of showing want of service of the process rests upon the party who asserts. Hill v. Woodward, 78 Va. 765; Fergusson v. Teel, 82 Va. 690. Indeed, we cannot deny the findings and declarations of decrees in such matters, in the absence of fraud. The record speaks verity in these matters, and we decline to overthrow the proceedings in the McCoy case and destroy the rights of people under a decree for a just debt. After courts of general jurisdiction have acted, some stability and verity must be attributed to their actions. So we find that these decrees are neither void nor subject to reversible error, but they are efficient to vest in Musick and those defendants claiming under him valid title. If the decrees were subject to reversal for error, the infants could effect them; but there is no reversible error in the decrees.

[6] Having found the decrees in the McCoy case effectual to vest title in the purchasers under the judicial sale, it becomes wholly unnecessary to discuss the case of Viola Darnell and Maggie McTuree against Musick to set aside the tax sale, because the parties in it, having no title, cannot affect that tax sale, even if it were voidable. Despard v. Percy, 65 W. Va. 140, 63 S. E. 871. But if this were not so, I remark that that tax title cannot be set aside.

[7] The only ground for setting it aside is that the sale list was not returned in time, and the affidavit to it is not signed or sworn to by the sheriff. This will not overthrow the deed. Wilkinson v. Linkous, 64 W. Va. 205, 61 S. E. 152; Flemming v. Charnock, 66 W. Va. 50, 66 S. E. 8. Failure to return the list in time matters not now, having been cured by statute. Wellman v. Hoge, 66 W. Va. 234, 66 S. E. 357; Hogan v. Piggott, 60 W. Va. 543, 56 S. E. 189.

Our decree is to reverse the decree of the circuit court and dismiss both bills.

(66 W. Va. 124)

SPERRY & HUTCHINSON CO. v.
MELTON, Sheriff.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LICENSES (§ 5*)—SELLING TRADING STAMPS —POWER OF LEGISLATURE.

The Legislature has power to select and tax the business of issuing and redeeming trading stamps.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Licenses, Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

2. LICENSES (§ 7*)—REASONABLENESS—PRESUMPTIONS.

Every presumption is in favor of the reasonableness of a tax laid by the Legislature;

only strong considerations can avail to overthrow the tax.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Licenses, Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

3. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 230*)—DEALING IN TRADING STAMPS.

The license tax on the business of selling trading stamps to merchants, or of redeeming such stamps with money or goods, imposed by Code 1906, c. 32, §§ 2, 101, is not forbidden by any provision of the State Constitution or the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 687; Dec. Dig. § 230.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Kanawha County.

Bill by the Sperry & Hutchinson Company against John J. Melton, Sheriff. Decree for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Chilton, McCorkle & Chilton and John Hall Jones, for appellant. T. C. Townsend and Wm. G. Conley, for appellee.

ROBINSON, J. [1] The Legislature has deemed it proper to prescribe that a license tax of five hundred dollars shall be paid on the business of selling to merchants "trading stamps, premium stamps, or stamps or certificates of like nature or character," and on the business of redeeming such stamps or certificates in money or goods. Code 1906, c. 32, §§ 2 and 101. The plaintiff is engaged in the business of redeeming trading stamps which it issues to merchants. It complains that this license tax assessed against it, for the county of Kanawha, prevents it from making any profit on the business which it conducts in the city of Charleston. It contends, therefore, that the tax is illegal and void. The plaintiff does not present a case showing that the tax is prohibitive of the trading stamp business. The case it does present merely shows that it cannot conduct the business in Charleston at a profit after paying the tax.

Has the plaintiff thus shown the tax to be an illegal one? In considering the question it is unnecessary to inquire whether the business of the plaintiff is within the police power and subject to regulation thereunder. A great part of the plaintiff's brief is devoted to that point. The trend of the decisions is that the trading stamp business is not one subject to control under the police power of the state. A recent review of the cases may be found in State ex rel. Attorney General v. Sperry & Hutchinson Co., 110 Minn. 378, 128 N. W. 120. See, also, case notes, 1 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 47, and 12 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 521. But at the present time we need not express an opinion on this point. Though the business may not be within the police power, the state unquestionably has the right to tax it justly. The Legislature has prescribed a license tax for the carrying on of many lines of business that do not directly relate to the public health, safety or morals. Such, for example, are the license taxes on vendors of patent rights, on junk dealers, on traveling vendors of sewing machines and musical instruments, and on the owners of trading houseboats. It is entirely legitimate to tax a privilege, business or occupation. Of course there must be reasonable classification, and no unjust discrimination. The tax must be equal and uniform in relation to all persons of the same class. But where a tax is imposed in compliance with these principles, no excuse for it need be sought under the police power.

The sole basis for the argument against the legality of the tax is that the plaintiff will not be able to carry on the business of issuing and redeeming trading stamps in the single city of Charleston, if it is compelled to pay the license tax which the officers of Kanawha county are seeking to collect from it under the statute we have mentioned. If the fact appeared that the tax has been fixed at such a large sum as to be absolutely prohibitive of the trading stamp business throughout the state, the case might call for a decision other than the one we shall announce. But as to such instance we do not decide. The record of this case does not warrant the claim that the statute is one intended to prohibit the business. Plainly the statute is not in terms one of prohibitory character, and nothing makes it appear to be such in fact. How can we say that this license tax was intended to prohibit, or even to control, the business in which the plaintiff is engaged? It is not disclosed that the business throughout the state is not a proper subject for the tax. It does not appear that the tax is even oppressive to such a line of business. The fact that the plaintiff cannot succeed in the business in one city of the state if it must pay the tax for the county of that city, surely cannot avail to overthrow the legitimacy of the legislative effort to provide a revenue. Though the plaintiff may not be able to succeed in the business under the tax, for all we are told there may be many other persons engaged in it that are making enormous profits, even in the city the plaintiff mentions. Yea, for all we can see from the record, it may be that the plaintiff cannot make profits because of the greater business success that has attended these other persons in the same city. Moreover, it may be that the plaintiff entered the local field too late, after others had established a lucrative hold under the tax, or that those others have better business intelligence and management than the plaintiff. Certain it is that the failure of the plaintiff to make profits cannot alone brand the tax as unjust and invalid. "The reasonableness or unreasonableness of a license tax cannot be determined by the extent of the business of a single individual. There may be competition, or negligence on his part, or other considerations affecting the extent of the business of complainant." Railway v. City of Atlanta, 118 Ala. 362, 24 South. 450. We cannot overthrow the tax on mere assumption. We must speak by the record.

[2] Every presumption is in favor of this legislative act. The law-making body will be presumed to have proceeded in good faith, for the public good, and upon sound reasons. It is proper to assume that the Legislature had before it, at the time it fixed this tax, information as to the extent and profitableness of the trading stamp business in this state which justified its act in the premises. The act will be presumed to be reasonable, unless the contrary appears on the face of the law itself, or is established by proper evidence. Gamble v. City Council, 147 Ala. 682, 39 South. 353. Plainly, the face of the law itself does not show unreasonableness, unless facts that we know nothing about are assumed. As we have said, the record contains no showing of the unreasonableness of the tax, except as gauged by the improper standard of the plaintiff's failure to succeed under it. Here the words of Judge Cooley are applicable: "In every instance the highest consideration should be paid to the determination of the Legislature that a tax should be laid. It is not lightly to be assumed that its members have come to the examination of the subject with any other than public motives, or that they have failed to give it due investigation or reflection. The presumption on the other hand must always be that they have considered it with honesty and fair purpose, and that their action is the result of their deliberate judgment. And with all these presumptions tending to support the legislative action, it would seem but reasonable and proper that the courts should support it when not clearly satisfied that an error has been committed." 1 Cooley on Taxation (3d Ed.) 184.

The amount of the tax, judged in connection with what we may personally think about the opportunities and results in the trading stamp business, cannot properly be raised for decision. Yet on such assumption we must render decision against the validity of the tax if at all. It is unfair to impute to the Legislature a purpose to kill a business indirectly by tax. Rather shall we impute to it a purpose to raise revenue from a source that it investigated and found to be of such lucrative character as to warrant the tax applied thereon. In the words of the late Chief Justice Fuller: "The general legislative purpose is plain, and the intention to prohibit this particular business cannot properly be imputed from the amount of the tax payable by those embarked in it." Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 275, 21 Sup. Ct. 130, 45 L. Ed. 186.

The tax extends to all of a class. Every person in the particular vocation must pay it. So it has been made to conform to the rule for reasonable classification, and for equality and uniformity. There is no semblance of discrimination in favor of one person engaged in the business as against another engaged in the same business. Trading stamp merchants, if such they may be called, or trading stamp dealers and redeemers, surely stand in a novel and distinct class by themselves. They do a business that is quite different from ordinary merchants. They are plainly distinguished from storekeepers who sell for cash or credit and deal in goods after the ordinary methods. So it has been held: "A city ordinance, imposing upon persons engaged in the business of furnishing trading stamps to merchants to be distributed among their customers for use in the purchase of other merchandise, a larger tax than that imposed upon merchants carrying on an ordinary mercantile business, is not violative of the constitutional provision requiring uniformity of taxation." Gamble v. City Council, supra. If these trading stamp dealers are advertising agents as claimed by the plaintiff, they indeed stand in a distinct class as such. They do not at all operate as advertising agents usually do, and are distinguishable from the ordinary class of that line as a class by themselves. Advertising agents do not ordinarily issue orders for merchandise and keep on hand merchandise for the redemption of those orders. The very description which the plaintiff gives of its business satisfies any mind that the business is in a class by itself—that there is none other like it. The rule for reasonable classification has been fulfilled by the act fixing the tax in question. "The power of the state to distinguish, select and classify objects of taxation has a wide range of discretion. Classification must be reasonable, but there is no precise application of the rule of reasonableness, and there cannot be an exact exclusion or inclusion of persons and things." 1 Cooley on Taxation (3d Ed.) 76.

[3] The Legislature had the power to select and justly tax the trading stamp business; and the presumption that it has placed a reasonable tax thereon has not been overthrown. The tax, as far as appears in this case, does not contravene any provision of the State Constitution or the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. Let the decree be affirmed.

CES N. C. 4)

HOUSTON v. DURHAM TRACTION CO.
et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. April 19, 1911.)

ELECTRICITY (§ 19*)—INJURIES INCIDENT TO PRODUCTION—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for the death of a servant of a contractor repairing a store, caused by an electric shock from a system of electric lighting installed by defendant on the application of the contractor, evidence held, by divided court, to justify a recovery against defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Dec. Dig. § 19.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Durham County; W. J. Adams, Judge.

Action by B. R. Houston against the Durham Traction Company and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed by divided court.

Foushee & Foushee and Bryant & Brogden, for appellants. Bramham & Brawley and Guthrie & Guthrie, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. The court being evenly divided in opinion (MANNING, J., not sitting), CLARK and HOKÉ, JJ., voting to affirm and WALKER and BROWN, JJ., voting for new trial, the judgment stands affirmed.

On Rehearing.

CLARK, C. J. This is a petition to rehear this case, which was affirmed by an evenly divided court.

Plaintiff's intestate was a young man 19 years of age, working as a hand for contractors in the basement of a store which was being repaired by them for the owner in consequence of damages from fire. On the application of the contractors, the defendant traction company supplied them with three incandescent lights, swinging on cords 40 or 50 feet in length, so as to enable the workmen to move the lights from place to place as occasion required, in order to see how to perform their duties. The electric current for lighting these lights, together with the lights and cords, was furnished by the defendant. The plaintiff's intestate was killed on Monday, December 21st, and the new basement floor of cement had been put down on Thursday, December 18th, three days before his death. At the time of his death, this basement floor had not thoroughly dried out, and water was standing on it in some places, and it was damp all over. He was standing on this floor at the time of his death. There were no obstructions on the floor which could have caused him to fall. His tool box was in a corner of the room, and in going to the tool box the intestate had to pass the light under which his body was found. It was necessary for him to get some of these tools to perform his work, and he could not have seen how to get his tools without moving the light and carrying it with him. He had just resumed his work after dinner, and, handing a stepladder to his brother, who was also working in the building, plaintiff's intestate turned and walked towards his tool box. Two or three seconds after handing his brother the ladder, his brother saw deceased's body lying directly under the light, and the light was swinging to and fro, hanging directly over him. Intestate did not speak after he fell to the floor. The light, before deceased went to it, was hanging upon the wall, still burning. When his body was discovered lying under it, the light was swinging to and fro. No one had been near it, or could have caused it to swing to and fro, except the intestate.

The electric light into which the incandescent glass globe screwed was a brass socket. There was place for two screws in the socket, which held the brass cap over the exposed wires in the interior of the socket. One of these brass screws was out of the socket and missing, and the cap on the socket was raised, so that the wiring inside the brass socket was pulled up. The wires inside the brass socket were exposed just under the cap, and these wires were touching the sides of the brass cap. The current for these artificial lights, as well as the sockets and cords attached thereto, was furnished by the defendant company. It was an alternating light, and the voltage in such currents is from 104 to 110 volts. Tests made on the voltage of this light, immediately after the death of plaintiff's intestate, showed that the voltage was between 260 and 280 volts. It is much more dangerous to stand on a wet floor than to stand on a dry floor when coming in contact with an electric current.

Dr. Graham, a medical expert, in reply to hypothetical questions, gave it as his opinion that the death of plaintiff's intestate was caused "by paralysis of the heart from the electric current." A member of the police force testified that he went to the spot immediately after the death of plaintiff's intestate, that he examined the socket as soon as he got there, found one of the screws loose and the other pulled out, and that he could see the inside of the brass lining. The intestate was young and in good health.

Upon the above evidence, which must be taken as true upon a motion to nonsuit, though there was some conflict in regard to some features of it, the motion to nonsuit was properly refused. There was evidence tending to show that the death of plaintiff's intestate was caused by the defective condition of the wires, with which he might have come in contact when he took up the movable light to see how to get his tools. There was no evidence tending to show death from apoplexy or heart disease, or any other cause. The matter was properly left to the jury. "If the circumstances be such as to raise more than mere conjecture, the judge cannot pronounce upon their sufficiency to establish the fact, but must leave them to be weighed by the jury, whose exclusive province it is to decide the effect of the testimony," as was said by Judge Battle in Jordan v. Lassiter, 51 N. C. 181. To the same effect: McMillan v. Railroad, 126 N. C. 725, 86 S. E. 129; Williams v. Railroad, 140 N. C.

627, 53 S. E. 448. And indeed our authorities are uniform.

The deadly current of electricity furnished by the defendant passes through the ether, imperceptible by any of the natural senses of man. In Mitchell v. Electric Co., 129 N. C. 169, 39 S. E. 801, 55 L. R. A. 398, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, the court said, speaking of this powerful agency which passes unseen, unheard, odorless, and without any warning of its dangerous presence: "In behalf of human life and the safety of mankind generally, it behooves those who would profit by the use of this subtle and violent element of nature to exercise the greatest degree of care and constant vigilance in inspecting and maintaining the wires in perfect condition." In this case the reading of their instruments showed negligence on their part in sending an excessive voltage over their wires. If directly after the death of the deceased the socket was in the condition described by the witness, and the voltage was excessive, as shown by their own meter, this, taken in connection with the evidence of the expert above quoted and the absence of evidence tending to show any other cause of death, was sufficient to submit the case to the jury. There was evidence that when the ground was wet, as was here, the voltage received by the intestate, if it passed through him, was double the voltage of 260 volts shown by the meter, and was sufficient to cause death. The evidence was sufficient to authorize a finding that the death of the intestate was not the "mere happening of a casualty."

The second assignment of error cannot be sustained. The court charged the jury: "If you find from the evidence that the defendant was employed by Houston & Christian to install lights, to be moved in the building from place to place for the convenience of Houston & Christian and their employees while engaged in repairing the building, that these lights were put in on December 19th, and that on December 21st the intestate was in the employ of Houston & Christian, and while in the prosecution of his work, and acting in the scope of his authority, took hold of the electric appliances so as to enable him better to perform his work, and that upon doing so the current of electricity was transmitted from the appliances to his body, and he was thereby killed, this would constitute prima facie negligence on the part of the defendant, and it would be incumbent on the defendant to rebut such prima facie evidence." This is not a charge that the burden of the issue was shifted to the defendant, or that there was any presumption of law in plaintiff's favor, but is merely an instruction that if the jury should find that state of facts it was incumbent upon the defendant "to go forward with its proof," in accordance with what was said by Mr. Justice Walker in Stewart v. Carpet Co., 138

N. C. 56, 50 S. E. 562; Cox v. Railroad, 149 N. C. 117, 62 S. E. 884; Winslow v. Hardwood Co., 147 N. C. 275, 60 S. E. 1130; Dall v. Taylor, 151 N. C. 285, 66 S. E. 135, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 949; Marcom v. Railroad, 126 N. C. 200, 35 S. E. 423; Overcash v. Electric Co., 144 N. C. 572, 57 S. E. 377. In these last two cases the court said: "When a derailment is shown, a prima facie case is made out, and the burden is upon the defendant to show that the injury was occasioned by an accident." In Shearman & Redfield on Negligence, § 58, which is approved in Dall v. Taylor, supra, it is said: "The plaintiff is not bound to prove more than enough to raise a fair presumption of negligence on the part of the defendant and a resulting injury to himself. Having done this, he is entitled to recover, unless the defendant produces evidence to rebut the presumption."

The third error alleged is the failure to give the following prayer: "If you find from the evidence in this case that the wires, lights, and socket were in good condition when put in, then the defendant would not be responsible for any defect that might arise from the use or handling of the same by others." In Electric Co. v. Letson, 135 Fed. 969, 68 C. C. A. 453, the court said: "The contention of the company amounts to this: That if the wires were properly installed it cannot be held responsible for their being out of repair, unless it is proved that they got out of repair through its fault. But this loses sight of the duty of the company, not only to make the wires safe at the start, but to keep them so. They must not only be put in order, but kept in order. The obligation is a continuing one. The safety of patrons and the public permits no intermission. Constant oversight and repair are required and must be furnished. Customers who contract for a harmless current to light their houses are entitled to rely upon such inspection and repairs as will effectually guard them against a dangerous current. They cannot guard themselves. Any attempt to do so would expose them to immediate peril. They must take and use the current on trust, relying upon the protection of the company. In view of this, when a deadly current enters a customer's house and kills him, it is not too much to call upon the company to explain the existence of the defect which caused the tragedy."

In Light & Power Co. v. Arntson, 157 Fed. 540, 87 C. C. A. 1, the facts were almost identical with this. A laborer seeking to get his tools in a basement where he was doing some repair work was killed from a shock caused by an excessive current of electricity, and the verdict and judgment obtained in the United States Circuit Court was affirmed in the Circuit Court of Appeals. In Hoboken Co. v. Electric Co., 71 N. J. Law, 430, 58 Atl. 1082, the Supreme Court of New Jersey, in passing upon the contention, made also in this case, that the employes of the deceased were independent contractors, held: "An electric company, before sending its current for lighting purposes through the apparatus installed in a building by other parties, is bound, on its own responsibility, to make reasonable inspection of the apparatus to see whether it is fit for use." In Electric Co. v. Lawrence, 31 Colo. 301, 73 Pac. 39, the decision is to the same effect.

The fourth assignment of error is the refusal of the court to submit a fourth issue as to contributory negligence. It has been repeatedly held that this court will not sustain an objection to the issues, if they are such that every phase of the contention of the parties can be submitted to the jury. Humphrey v. Church, 109 N. C. 132, 13 S. E. 793, and cases there cited. Besides, if the intestate was killed by the excessive voltage caused by the negligent condition of the apparatus furnished him, which is the finding of the jury, there was no evidence tending to show contributory negligence on his part.

The fifth exception for permitting plaintiff to introduce certain rules and regulations in evidence was harmless, as the court in its charge withdrew the evidence of the rules from the consideration of the jury. Wilson v. Mfg. Co., 120 N. C. 94, 28 S. E. 629, and cases cited thereto in the annotated edition.

The sixth assignment of error for permitting the medical expert to answer the questions put to him cannot be sustained. Every fact embraced in the hypothetical question had been shown in evidence, and it was admitted that Dr. Graham was a medical expert.

The seventh exception was to the evidence as to the socket having been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. This evidence was withdrawn from the jury by the court.

After a careful review of the evidence, the charge, and the exceptions, we find no error.

Petition dismissed.

HOKE, J., concurs in result. WALKER and BROWN, JJ., dissenting.

(155 N. C. 47)

JOHNSON v. LASSITER.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. April 26, 1911.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 147*)—NONNEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

Under Revisal 1905, § 2151, defining a negotiable instrument as one payable to the order of a specified person, or to bearer, a note payable to a person named is nonnegotiable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 363; Dec. Dig. § 147.*]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 170*)—NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS—"INDORSEMENT."

The term "indorsement" in Revisal 1905, § 2151, providing that an instrument is payable to bearer when the only or last indorsement is an indorsement in blank, applies only to negotiable instruments, and a blank indorsement on a non-negotiable note does not thereby make the instrument negotiable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 368; Dec. Dig. § 170.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 4, pp. 3561-3566; vol. 8, p. 7686.]

3. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 146*)—NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS—STATUTES.

Code 1883, §§ 41, 50, relating to negotiable instruments and the liability of indorsers thereon, being omitted in Revisal 1905, are repealed by section 5453 thereof, repealing all laws not contained in the revisal, with certain exceptions and limitations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 361; Dec. Dig. § 146.*]

4. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 275*)—BONDS (§ 78*)—NONNEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS—LIABILITY OF PARTIES—AS BOND.

The rights of the parties to a nonnegotiable note under seal, not subject to Revisal 1905, defining negotiable instruments and the liability of parties thereto, are governed by the common law, and the instrument is a nonnegotiable bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 738-741; Dec. Dig. § 275;* Bonds, Cent. Dig. § 75; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

5. BILLS AND NOTES (§§ 275, 395*)—INDORSEMENT OF NONNEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS—LIABILITY.

An indorser of a past-due, nonnegotiable instrument, containing indorsements of partial payments, is liable as a guarantor of the payment thereof, and he is not entitled to notice of dishonor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 738-741, 990-1021; Dec. Dig. §§ 275, 395.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Guilford County; Lyon, Judge.

Action by T. C. Johnson against W. B. Lassiter. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

On the 25th of April, 1907, the plaintiff sold to the defendant, W. B. Lassiter, a tract of land for $2,000, and accepted in part payment two notes under seal. One of these notes was for $300 and executed December 20, 1902, payable six months from date to S. H. Carter, and the other was for $200 and executed August 17, 1903, payable on demand to said Carter. The name of S. H. Carter was written on the back of each of said notes, on August 25, 1906, and the name of the defendant was written on the back of each of said notes, on the 25th day of April, 1907, the day he bought the land from the plaintiff. The following payments were made on the first note: $25, January 8, 1905, and $100, January 18, 1906; and on the second note, $25, November 10, 1904. The defendant resisted a recovery upon the ground that no notice of dishonor was given him, and because the plaintiff had not prosecuted with diligence his claim against the makers of the notes. The judge presiding held that the defendant was not entitled to notice, and that he was bound absolutely on his indorsement. The defendant excepted and appealed.

J. A. Spence, for appellant; Sapp & Williams, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The paper writings in controversy are nonnegotiable under the negotiable instrument law, because they are not payable "to the order of a specified person or to bearer." Revisal 1905, § 2151. This is the construction placed upon this section by Mr. Mordecai in his treatise on the negotiable instrument law, and it is strengthened by reference to sections 2158, 2276, and 2334 of the Revisal.

[2] They were not made negotiable by indorsement under section 2159 of the Revisal, providing that an instrument is payable to bearer (5) "when the only or last indorsement is an indorsement in blank." The term "indorsement" is frequently used to describe the act of writing on the back of a paper, without reference to the character of the paper, but strictly it applies only to negotiable instruments, and, as said in Norton on Bills, page 106: "It has its origin in and is confined to negotiable instruments." It is in this sense it is used in Revisal, § 2159. If a broader meaning is adopted and it applies to any nonnegotiable instrument, it must apply to all, as there is no qualification in the language used.

These two sections (2151 and 2159), in the exact language contained in our statute, were construed by the Supreme Court of Kentucky, in Wettlauffer v. Baxter, 137 Ky. 362, 125 S. W. 741, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 804. The court says: "The negotiable instrument act is not a new law. It is with few exceptions merely the codification of old laws that were in force and effect by virtue of judicial pronouncement or legislative enactment, and generally uniform. * * * If there is any doubt about the meaning of any of its provisions, and that doubt can be solved by a reference to the law merchant as it was theretofore administered, this law should be looked to, and the act, if practicable, given such a construction as will make it harmonize with the general principles of commercial law in force before its enactment. * * * "The usual form of negotiable paper is a provision for payment to "order" or "bearer." These or similar words are in general necessary to its negotiability, and are often required by statute, but a note which is nonnegotiable for want of such words is still a valid note and may be declared on as such. Bills payable to bearer were formerly held to be nonnegotiable, as being without words of transfer; but they are now recognized as negotiable and transferable by delivery. Making the instrument payable 'to the order of' a person named is the same as to such person 'or order'; and in like manner to a person named, 'or bearer,' is the same in effect as 'to bearer.' * * * It will thus be seen that it was uniformly held that, in order to make a note or a bill negotiable, the words 'to order' or 'to bearer,' or equivalent words, must be used in the body of the note. It will be kept in mind, however, that the absence of these words do not affect the validity of a note, or render it nontransferable or nonassignable. Their only effect is to make the instrument negotiable, and thereby cut off defenses that the maker or either of the parties to the paper might have and make against a holder in due course, if the note was not negotiable. The negotiable instrument act does not apply to or affect the rights or liabilities of persons on paper that is not within its meaning negotiable. * * * This note, in our opinion, which was payable to Baxter alone, and did not contain the words 'to order' or 'bearer,' was not a negotiable instrument. * * * But the argument is further made that as Baxter indorsed the note in blank—that is, signed his name on the back of it without any other words—he thereby converted the note into a negotiable instrument. It is true that section 9 of the act provides that 'the instrument is payable to bearer * * * when the only or last indorsement is an indorsement in blank'; but this does not mean that the indorsement in blank converts a note nonnegotiable on its face and by its terms into a negotiable note. This construction would enable the person who last signed his name on the back of the note to change entirely the contract as entered into between the parties, and have the effect of making the maker, payee, and all prior indorsers liable upon a negotiable instrument when they intended to and only became liable upon a note that was not negotiable, and this, as can readily be seen, would be a most important and material change in the obligation assumed by them when they signed the paper. To give the act this construction would place it in the power of any indorser who chose to sign his name in blank to change by this act the entire character of the paper, as well as the rights and liabilities of the parties to it. It would make the character of the paper depend upon the manner of the indorsement, and not upon the terms expressed in the paper. Thus, if A. indorsed it in blank to B., it would be negotiable; but if B. indorsed it specially to C., it would be nonnegotiable. Manifestly it was not intended that the mere indorsement of the note by a remote or other indorser should have this effect. When a paper is started on its journey into the commercial world, it should retain to the end the character given to it in the beginning and written into its face. If it was intended to be a negotiable instrument, and was so written, it should continue to be one. If it was intended to be a nonnegotiable instrument, and was so written, it should so remain. Then every one who puts his name on it, as well as every one who discounts or purchases it, will need only to read it to know what it is and what his rights and liabilities are. In our opinion section 9 was merely intended to describe or designate the conditions under which a note negotiable on its face might become payable to bearer, and was not intended to apply to a note not on its face or by its terms negotiable."

[3] Nor are they negotiable by indorsement under sections 41 and 50 of the Code of 1883, as construed in Spence v. Tapscott, 93 N. C. 246, because both of those sections are omitted in the Revisal of 1905, which went into effect on the 1st day of August, 1905, before the writings were indorsed, and section 5453 of the Revisal provides that "all public and general statutes not contained in this Revisal are hereby repealed, with the exceptions and limitations hereinafter mentioned," and these sections are not within "the exceptions and limitations hereinafter mentioned."

[4] The rights of the parties must therefore be determined at common law, which is in force, and the writings, being under seal, are bonds at common law and nonnegotiable. Parker v. Latham, 44 N. C. 138.

Originally promises to pay, whether under seal or not, were not assignable nor negotiable; the reason given being that the contract created a strictly personal obligation between the creditor and the debtor, and that to permit assignment or negotiation would encourage litigation. As trade advanced and mercantile transactions became enlarged, it was found that this rule eliminated one of the principal elements of value, and a custom gradually prevailed among the merchants of negotiating bills of exchange and promissory notes.

A dispute, however, arose between the merchants and the law courts, as to whether a note was within the custom of the merchants, and Lord Holt held, in Clark v. Martin, 1 Salk. 129, it was not. As a result, the Statute of Anne was passed, which made notes assignable and indorsable, and soon thereafter it was held that nonnegotiable notes, although not mentioned, were embraced in the statute. Norton on Bills, 6; Birchell v. Sloarch, 2 Ld. Ray. 1545; Smith v. Kendall, 6 Term, 123. It was also held that notice of dishonor need not be given to the indorser of a nonnegotiable paper. Byles on Bills, 447.

In this country there is much difference of opinion as to the effect of the indorsement in blank of a nonnegotiable paper.

In Richards v. Warring, *40 N. Y. 582, the court, speaking of this question, says: "When a party writes his name on the back of a note not negotiable, as there is no contract of indorsement, the courts endeavor to prevent the utter failure of the contract by giving it effect in some other way, as by allowing the holder to overwrite the indorser's name with the real contract implied by law, or recover against him as a maker or guarantor of the note.

In Sweetser v. French, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 262, it was held that the indorsee was authorized to write above an indorsement in blank, "For value received, we promise to pay the money mentioned in the within note to T. Ames & Co.," and this case is affirmed in Bank v. Lincoln, 85 Mass. 192.

Billingham v. Bryan, 10 Iowa, 317, is to the same effect. The court says: "The question presented in this cause is whether the indorser of a nonnegotiable promissory note is liable to the holder, without demand upon the maker, and notice of nonpayment. We think this question has been fully settled by this court in the cases of Wilson v. Ralph & Van Shaick, 3 Iowa, 450; Long v. Smyser & Hawthorne, 3 Iowa, 266, and in Hall v. Monahan, 6 Iowa, 216, 71 Am. Dec. 404, the court in those cases following the authority as laid down in the case of Seymour v. Van Slyck, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 421, in which it is held that such an indorsement is equivalent to the making of a new note, and is a direct and positive undertaking on the part of the indorser to pay the note to the indorsee, and not a conditional one to pay, if the maker does not, upon demand, after due notice." Also Helfer v. Alden, 3 Minn. 236 (Gil. 232); Bank v. Falkenham, 94 Cal. 144, 29 Pac. 866.

In those cases the indorsements were before the notes were due. The reason is stronger for holding the indorser liable, and for dispensing with notice to him, and diligence as against the maker, when the note is past due and already dishonored at the time of the indorsement.

[8] Under such circumstances, the indorser is held to be a guarantor of payment of the paper indorsed, and not entitled to notice of dishonor, and he is not discharged from liability by failure of the indorsee to proceed promptly against the maker. Lane v. Levillian, 4 Ark. 83, 37 Am. Dec. 769; Foster v. Tolleson, 13 S. C. 33; Read v. Cutts, 7 Greenleaf (Me.) 186, 22 Am. Dec. 188. As said in Byles on Bills, the indorsee is presumed to have acted on the credit of the indorser.

In Lilly v. Baker, 88 N. C. 154, it is decided that one who indorses a nonnegotiable instrument is a guarantor, and in Jenkins v. Wilkinson, 107 N. C. 707, 12 S. E. 630, 22 Am. St. Rep. 911, that the holder can sue at once upon a guaranty of payment, and in Mudge v. Varner, 146 N. C. 149, 59 S. E. 540, that the obligation of a guarantor of payment, as distinguished from one for collection, becomes absolute at once upon default of the principal. See, also, Farrow v. Respass, 33 N. C. 170, and Cowan v. Roberts, 134 N. C.

415, 46 S. E. 979, 65 L. R. A. 729, 101 Am. St. Rep. 845.

The question of the liability of an indorser of a nonnegotiable instrument did not arise in Sutton v. Owen, 65 N. C. 123, relied on by the defendant. In that case the payee, in a note under seal, wrote on the back of it, "I guarantee the payment of the within note to Junius La Rogue or bearer," and the only question decided was that the holder could not sue in his own name prior to the statute requiring the action to be brought by the real party in interest.

In the case under consideration, payments had been made on the notes prior to the indorsement, indicating that the holder had been endeavoring to collect, and at the time of the indorsement the defendant received a present consideration for the notes, and they had been long since dishonored. Why should he be notified of facts of which he had full knowledge?

We conclude that no error was committed on the trial, and this conclusion can work no hardship on indorsers, as it is provided in section 2846 of the Revisal that a surety or an indorser on any note, bill, bond, or other written obligation, except those held in trust or as collateral, may notify, in writing, the payee or holder, requiring him to bring suit and to use all reasonable diligence to collect, and, if the payee or holder fails to bring action within 30 days, the surety or indorser giving the notice is discharged. This affords ample protection to the indorser.

No error.

(88 S. C. 533)

WILLIAMS v. HAILE GOLD MINING CO.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 1, 1911.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1207*)—PROCEEDINGS BELOW AFTER APPEAL.

A decree permanently enjoining pollution of a stream through discharges from a mining company's chlorination mill must be modified to restrict the injunction to discharge of tailings affected by the chlorinating process, where the question whether the company has acquired a prescriptive right to discharge other matter has been expressly left open by a former decision on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4696-4699; Dec. Dig. § 1207.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Kershaw County; Geo. E. Prince, Judge. "To be officially reported."

Action by Emma E. Williams against the Haile Gold Mining Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Modified.

J. Harry Foster and M. L. Smith, for appellant. E. D. Blakeney and Thos. J. Kirkland, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. The sole point made by this appeal is that the perpetual injunction

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes granted by the circuit court exceeds the plaintiff's right of injunction as determined by this court on the former appeal.

The circuit court enjoined the defendant "from emptying any chlorinated water or any harmful and poisonous discharges from said chlorination mill into the waters of the said Mine branch and said Little Lynch's creek, and 'that the plaintiff have the right to have the waters of the streams flow through her lands unpolluted, so that the cattle in her pasture will drink thereof.'"

The effect of the decision of this court on the former appeal (85 S. C. 1, 66 S. E. 117, 1057) was to limit plaintiff's right of injunction to the tailings which had been affected by the chlorinating process. In disposing of appellant's contention that the circuit decree did not clearly define the scope of the injunction which it held should be granted, this court, after quoting from the circuit decree, said: "This language of the circuit decree, in view of the fact that the record shows that the real contest in the circuit court was as to the injurious effects of the tailings from the chlorination process, must be construed as enjoining only the discharge from the chlorination mill; and the questions whether the tailings which were not subjected to the chlorinating process were or were not injurious to the plaintiff's land, and whether the defendant has acquired a prescriptive right to discharge such tailings into the stream, are left open."

On the former appeal defendant contended that, as plaintiff's lands had been completely ruined for agricultural purposes, and as she had recovered full damages for all injury done to them up to the date of the verdict, the defendant should not be enjoined from further discharging the tailings in question into the streams, because all the damage that could be done had already been done, and plaintiff had been fully compensated for it. In response to that contention the court said: "Observation and experience teach us that nature is a wonderful restorer. It is altogether probable that in the course of years the plaintiff's lands, which have been so injured as to be thought by some of the witnesses to be ruined, will be restored to fertility by the process of nature. But, be that as it may, they belong to the plaintiff, and the defendant has no right to continue its trespass thereon. The plaintiff has the right to have the waters of the stream flow through her land unpolluted, so that the cattle in her pasture will drink thereof, and the testimony tends to show that stock will not drink of the water when polluted by the tailings in question."

Now the plaintiff contends that the last sentence above quoted warrants the injunction granted by the circuit court. But it does not; for it must be remembered that the language above quoted was used in disposing of the defendant's contention above stated as to the legal rights of the parties under the facts then established by the verdict, and after it had been distinctly held that the questions as to the injurious effects of other tailings and the prescriptive right to empty them into the streams were left open. Moreover the last words of the last sentence, viz., "and the testimony tends to show that stock will not drink of the water when polluted by the tailings in question," show clearly that the court had in mind only the tailings from the chlorination mills which it had been determined defendant had no right to empty into the streams.

The order of the circuit court must be modified so as to enjoin defendant from emptying into the streams flowing through plaintiff's lands only tailings which have been affected by the chlorinating process, because, even if there are other tailings from defendant's mining operations which do pollute the waters, so that plaintiff's cattle will not drink thereof, the question whether defendant has acquired the right by prescription to discharge such tailings into the said streams has been expressly left open.

Modified.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS, J., concur.
JONES, C. J., did not sit in this case.

(86 S. C. 520)

STATE v. LUCAS.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 29, 1911.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 761*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CHARGE ON MATTERS OF FACT—CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS.

In a trial for housebreaking and larceny, an instruction that, "If the watchman was on the inside and the defendants on the outside as a part and parcel of the same scheme to loot this store," etc., did not violate Const. art. 5, § 26, approved December 4, 1895, providing that judges shall not charge juries in respect to matters of fact, but shall declare the law; the word "if" showing the court did not undertake to decide that the acts mentioned constituted a part and parcel of the scheme to loot the store.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1754-1764; Dec. Dig. § 761.*]

2. BURGLARY (§ 3*) — LARCENY — GUILTY KNOWLEDGE.

A scheme to loot a store necessarily implies guilty knowledge.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Burglary, Cent. Dig. §§ 24-27; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Georgetown County; G. W. Gage, Judge.
"To be officially reported."

Willie Lucas and another were convicted of housebreaking, and said Lucas appeals. Appeal dismissed.

J. Jenkins Hucks, for Moses Campbell. T. St. Mark Sasportas, for Willie Lucas. Solicitor Wells, for the State.

GARY, A. J. The defendant Willie Lucas and his codefendant, Moses Campbell, were convicted under an indictment charging them with housebreaking and larceny; and from the sentence imposed upon them Willie Lucas alone appealed.

[1] The first exception is as follows: "Because his honor, the circuit judge, erred in charging the jury as follows: 'If the watchman was on the inside, getting the goods, and the defendants on the outside, as a part and parcel of the same scheme to loot this store, the watchman doing one part and the men on the outside doing the other part, the law puts them in the same boat, brands them both as thieves because in that event each would have the guilty heart, the felonious purpose to steal, and each would do his part towards carrying out the unlawful enterprise'—in that such charge is in violation of section 26 of article 5 of the Constitution of South Carolina, approved December 4, A. D. 1895." The exception does not specify in what particular the charge was in violation of section 26, art. 5, of the Constitution. But, waiving such objection, the exception cannot be sustained, as the word "if" clearly shows that his honor, the presiding judge, did not undertake to decide that the acts therein mentioned constituted "a part and parcel of the scheme to loot the store," and that this question was left entirely to the jury.

[2] The second and third exceptions will be considered together, and are as follows: "Because his honor, the circuit judge, erred in charging the jury as follows: 'If the watchman was on the inside, getting the goods, and the defendants on the outside, as part and parcel of the same scheme to loot this store, the watchman doing one part, and the men on the outside, doing the other part, the law puts them in the same boat, brands them both as thieves'—in that in said statement of facts constituting the crime charged his honor failed to include a guilty knowledge, a criminal intent, as an essential element thereof; and, further, that such guilty knowledge, such felonious intent, must have been formed and existent in the mind of any defendant at the time that the defense was committed before a conviction of such defendant would be justified. Because in charging the jury as follows: 'If the watchman was on the inside, getting the goods, and the defendants on the outside, as part and parcel of the same scheme to loot this store, the watchman doing one part, and the men on the outside doing the other part, the law puts them in the same boat, brands them both as thieves, because in that event each would have the guilty heart, the felonious purpose to steal'—his honor erred, in that he charged as law, 'because, in that event, each would have the guilty heart, the felonious purpose to steal,' a conclusion of fact, not necessarily following from the statement of facts given to the jury." In order to show that these exceptions cannot be sustained, it is only necessary to state that a scheme to loot a store necessarily implies guilty knowledge.

Appeal dismissed.

JONES, C. J., and HYDRICK and WOODS, JJ., concur.

(88 S. C. 512)

BOYD et al. v. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 29, 1911.)

TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 27*)—RIGHT OF ACTION—WHAT LAW CONTROLS.

That a telegram was to be delivered to the sendee in another state would not prevent him from maintaining an action under the South Carolina mental anguish act for damages from nondelivery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Dec. Dig. § 27.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Anderson County; C. G. Dantzer, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by J. P. Boyd and others against the Western Union Telegraph Company. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiffs appeal. Reversed, and remanded for a new trial.

See, also, 70 S. E. 409.

Martin & Earle, for appellants. Bonham, Watkins & Allen, for respondent.

GARY, A. J. This is an action for damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff Mrs. J. P. Boyd through the negligence, wantonness, and recklessness of the defendant in failing to deliver a telegram. The allegations of the complaint, material to the questions involved, are as follows: "That on Saturday, February 20, 1909, about 6 p. m., one S. M. McAdams filed with the agent of the defendant company, at Anderson, S. C., a telegram message, addressed to Mrs. J. P. Boyd, Statham, Ga., announcing the death of her brother, J. B. McAdams, and summoning her to come at once, said message reading as follows: 'J. B. McAdams is dead. Come at once via Calhoun Falls to Anderson.' That said message was not delivered to plaintiff, and she had no information as to its contents, until Tuesday morning, February 23d, about 10 a. m., too late for her to come to Anderson, S. C., in time to see her dead brother on earth or to attend his funeral services and his burial."

The following statement appears in the record: "After plaintiffs had closed their case, defendant's counsel made motion for nonsuit, upon the ground that the alleged tort was committed wholly without the borders of the state of South Carolina, and that therefore plaintiffs had no cause of action, under the South Carolina mental anguish act. His honor granted defendant's motion." The plaintiffs appealed on the ground that said ruling was erroneous.

This question has undergone judicial investigation so recently that we deem it only necessary to cite the cases of Brown v. Telegraph Co., 85 S. C. 495, 87 S. E. 146, and Heath & Co. v. Telegraph Co., 87 S. C. 219, 69 S. E. 283, to show that the exceptions raising this question must be sustained.

It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the circuit court be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for a new trial.

JONES, C. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

STATE v. KELLY.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 4, 1911.)†

CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1178*)—APPEAL—ARGUMENT—NECESSITY.

Exceptions not argued by appellant will not be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3011-3013; Dec. Dig. § 1178.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Sumter County.

"To be officially reported."

W. P. Kelly was convicted of an offense, and he appeals. Appeal dismissed.

John H. Clifton, for appellant. Solicitor Stoll, for the State.

HYDRICK, J. As appellant has not argued his exceptions, they will not be considered. Nevils v. Railroad Co., 86 S. C. 570, 68 S. E. 657.

Appeal dismissed.

JONES, C. J., GARY, A. J., and WOODS, J., concur.

(86 S. C. 401)

STATE v. BETHUNE.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 20, 1911.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 981*)—APPEAL—REMAND—SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS—RESENTENCE.

Where defendant was called on to show cause why he should not be resentenced after affirmation of his conviction, and pleaded that he was then insane, and that issue was ordered to be submitted to a jury, the court was not in error for failing to explain the indictment to him, or to ascertain whether defendant understood the nature of the offense of which he had been convicted; all questions as to his mental capacity being for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2497, 2498; Dec. Dig. § 981.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1042*)—APPEAL—OBJECTIONS BELOW.

Where the question whether the issue raised by a plea of present insanity, made by defendant after affirmation of his conviction, when called on to show cause why he should not be resentenced, should be tried by the jurors then in attendance for the trial of civil and criminal causes, or by a commission in lunacy, was not raised in the trial court, it cannot be raised on appeal from the sentence after a finding by a jury that defendant was sane.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2650; Dec. Dig. § 1042.*]

3. JURY (§ 21*)—RIGHT TO JURY—PLEA OF INSANITY—SENTENCE.

In the absence of statutory regulation, the question of the sanity of a defendant, called up for sentence after affirmation of a conviction, is properly submitted to a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 143; Dec. Dig. § 21.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1042*)—APPEAL—OBJECTIONS BELOW.

An objection to the form of submission to the jury of the issue of present insanity, or to the oath administered to the jurors, when not made below cannot be raised on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 1042.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1162*)—APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR.

Error not shown to be prejudicial is not ground for reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3085; Dec. Dig. § 1162.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 48*)—DEFENSES—INSANITY.

The question of defendant's knowledge of right from wrong is necessarily involved in a plea of insanity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 53-58; Dec. Dig. § 48.*]

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Clarendon County; R. W. Memminger, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Willie Bethune was convicted of murder, and he appealed, and the judgment was affirmed. Upon petition that since conviction defendant had become insane, the Supreme Court stayed the remittitur, but thereafter the stay was revoked, with permission to the defendant to plead, when called upon to say why a new day should not be assigned for execution, that he was then insane. Thereafter he was called for sentence, and pleaded that he was insane, and the question being left to the jury they found against him, and he was resentenced. From the judgment, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The following are the exceptions:

"(1) That his honor erred in not explaining to the defendant the indictment and the nature of the offense of which defendant had been convicted, and ascertaining in the proper manner if the defendant understood the same, before compelling him to be arraigned for sentence.

"(2) That his honor erred in ordering the defendant to submit the question of his then sanity to the jury in attendance upon the regular term of court of general sessions for Clarendon county, in that the said jury had been summoned to try criminal cases and civil cases by consent, and that the question of defendant's insanity was improperly submitted to said jury over the protest of his counsel, in that such question was not one of criminal guilt, or involving a trial of the facts constituting a criminal offense, nor an action civil in its nature, and should have been referred to a commission in lunacy, to pass upon the sanity of defendant, and to have reported the conclusion of such commission to the court.

"(3) That his honor erred in overruling the motion of defendant's counsel that the question of defendant's sanity or insanity be referred to a board of physicians for determination, and in ordering that that question be submitted to the jury then in attendance upon the court of general sessions, for that is not the proper manner to determine the question of the sanity of one called upon to receive sentence, but such question should have been referred to the judge of the court of probate, an order appointing a commission of three appointed by the court of probate, and a jury of 24 summoned to try the question of the sanity or insanity of the defendant.

"(4) That his honor erred in forcing the defendant to submit the question of his sanity to a jury in said court, in that his counsel moved that the same be referred to a board of examining physicians, it was the duty of his honor to have referred the said question to the probate judge for determination in accordance with the terms of the act of the General Assembly, entitled 'An act to regulate the practice with reference to the appointment of a committee for persons non compos mentis,' approved February 26, 1910 (26 St. at Large, p. 754), in that the defendant was denied by the order of his honor the remedy provided by the terms of the said act.

"(5) That his honor erred in forcing the defendant to submit the question of his then sanity to the said jury, in that there is no provision of law of force in this state authorizing the question of a convicted defendant's sanity to be determined in the manner here employed, and that such manner is and cannot be reasonably calculated to ascertain the truth of sanity or insanity of a defendant, and that his honor should have had the defendant examined by physicians.

"(6) That his honor erred in forcing the defendant to trial upon said question in said manner, in that the proper method, other than the method provided for in the act of 1910, is upon an examination by two or more physicians under the direction of the probate court; such court having exclusive original jurisdiction of matters in lunacy, except where the defense of non compos mentis is made at trial upon the merits of the case.

"(7) That the manner pursued by his honor, over defendant's counsel's objection, deprived defendant of his life and liberty without due process of law, in that such manner is not reasonably calculated to ascertain with any degree of definiteness the true condition of the mind of a person, or to afford a ground for the establishment of such condition with the precision ordinarily required in criminal procedure.

"(8) That his honor erred in submitting to the jury the following question, 'Whether the mental condition of the defendant is such that he can understand the meaning of punishment, and whether he be now sane, and a true verdict give according to the evidence, so help you God, whether he be now insane,' in that the question ordered and permitted to be submitted was, 'Whether he be now insane.'

"(9) That his honor erred in submitting the question to the jury as follows: 'Whether the mental condition of the prisoner at the bar is such that he can understand the meaning of punishment, and whether he be now sane; whether he be now insane'—in that he should have submitted to the jury (after having forced the defendant to trial) the following: Whether the defendant, by reason of a disease of the mind, is unable to understand the nature of the indictment upon which he was tried and convicted, his plea thereto, and the verdict thereon, when explained to him by the court, and is unable to comprehend his own condition in reference to such proceeding, and by reason thereof might make known to the court or his attorneys in charge of his defense the facts within his knowledge, if any, which would show that judgment should not be pronounced against him, especially in view of the fact that his counsel had stated that the defendant was precluded from communicating to him facts relating to after-discovered evidence.

"(10) That it appears by the record that his honor did not submit the same oath to all of the jury, in that it is stated that while the jury was being impaneled that his honor stated: 'I see that the Supreme Court says the prisoner has a right to plead that he was then insane, and so I have added to the oath, according to their statement, whether he be insane. Just swear the others with that additional oath, Mr. Clerk'—thereby depriving the defendant of a verdict or finding by the whole jury under the same oath.

"(11) His honor erred in ruling that the defendant had to establish his present insanity, in that the defendant having pleaded by his counsel his then insanity, as permitted by the order of the Supreme Court, it was incumbent upon the state to establish his sanity.

"(12) That his honor erred in asking the witness Dr. Butler the following: 'When we called upon him this morning to hold up his right hand, and he held it up, and told him to put it down, and he put it down, do you think, or not, that the man could understand that if he would be sentenced to death what it meant?'—in that the presiding judge thereby stated as a matter of fact that the defendant had put up and put down his hand when told to do so, and thereby conveyed to the jury the impression that in the mind of the court that constituted an inference or fact showing sanity in defendant, calculated to prejudice the minds of the jury against the defendant by calling to their attention an act or acts of the defendant in the course of the trial.

"(13) That his honor erred in submitting to the jury the following question: 'Is the defendant herein insane and incapable of understanding the meaning of punishment?'—in that his honor added to the question authorized to be determined by the Supreme Court that court having permitted the defendant to interpose the question of his then insanity.

"(14) That his honor having submitted a question to the jury at the beginning of the trial he erred in enlarging the question in his charge to include a knowledge of right from wrong, in that the defendant was not advised of the fact that he would have to meet any issue other than if he was at that time insane.

"(15) It is submitted that his honor erred in charging the jury that the defendant must establish his insanity by the preponderance of the evidence, and that the defendant was presumed to be sane, in that it is incumbent upon the state to establish in a proceeding of this kind the sanity of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt, for that if the defendant be insane he would be unable to establish a fact by any degree of proof, and his honor erred in so ruling and forcing the defendant to open the case and offer evidence of the insanity of the defendant in advance of any evidence of his sanity.

"(16) His honor erred in applying the terms of section 2284 to the defendant's case, in that that section relates by its terms to the proof required of a person, on trial on the merits of the case, being proved to be non compos mentis.

"(17) That his honor erred in charging the jury as follows: 'If a man is simply feigning insane or not, that is all entirely for you upon the testimony. You have to take all that into consideration'—in that his honor thereby conveyed to the jury the idea that the defendant was feigning insanity, and invaded the province of the jury to determine the issue upon the fact, including the demeanor of the defendant, and such statement was in effect stating that the testimony warranted the inference that the defendant was feigning insanity.

"(18) That the verdict of the jury and the judgment thereon are unsupported by the testimony, and there is no testimony to support the same."

John H. Clifton, for appellant. Solicitor Stoll, for the State.

GARY, A. J. The following statement is set out in the record: "The defendant was tried for the murder of G. B. Mims, before Gage, judge, Clarendon county, June, 1909. Defendant was convicted, and from the judgment thereon appealed, which judgment was affirmed on appeal [86 S. C. 143, 67 S. E. 466]. Upon petition and a showing in proper form, setting forth that since conviction the defendant had become insane, the Supreme Court stayed the remittitur. Thereafter, by order of the court, the stay of the remittitur was revoked, and defendant allowed to plead, when called upon to say why a new day should not be assigned for execution, that he was then insane. On June 8th defendant was called for resentence, and by his attorney, Mr. A. A. Manning, pleaded that he was insane. The indictment was not explained to the defendant, and he was not asked if he understood the nature of the same, but was put to the bar, and the indictment read. The question as formulated by his honor, Judge Memminger, being submitted to the jury, they found against him, and thereupon he was resentenced. From the judgment thereon, defendant served notice of appeal in due time."

The exceptions will be incorporated in the report of the case. We proceed to consider them.

[1] First exception:

After his honor, the presiding judge, ruled that the issue raised by the defendant's plea that he was then insane should be determined by the jury, it was not incumbent on him to assume that it was necessary to explain the indictment, or to ascertain whether the defendant understood the nature of the offense of which he had been convicted. All questions as to the mental capacity of the defendant were for the consideration of the jury.

[2] Second exception:

When the case was called, for the purpose of resentencing the defendant, his attorney, without objection, interposed the plea of insanity. As the question presented by this exception was not raised on circuit, it cannot be considered by this court.

[3] Third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and sixteenth exceptions:

"At common law a suggestion of insanity, made after verdict and sentence, did not give rise to an absolute right, on the part of a convict, to have such issue tried before the court and a jury, but addressed itself to the discretion of the judge. So if, after a regular conviction and sentence, a suggestion of then existing insanity is made, it is not necessary, in order to constitute due process of law, under the constitutional guaranty, that the question so presented shall be tried by a jury. And a defendant who alleges his insanity at the time of his arraignment is not entitled, as a matter of legal right, to have a separate, independent, and preliminary trial of that question by a jury, specially impaneled for that purpose. If there is no apparent reason to suppose him insane, but, on the contrary, he appears to be quite capable of pleading to the indictment, there is no necessity for a preliminary trial, because every right to set up insanity, either when the offense was committed or at the time of the trial, still remains, and can be thoroughly tried by the jury which is to try the indictment." 16 Enc. of Law, 622.

"Where, when a person charged with crime is arraigned, or after he has been convicted, but before judgment and sentence, it is suggested or appears to the court that he may be insane, the question of his sanity may be inquired into and determined by the judge himself, or by aid of a jury, summoned and impaneled for the purpose; and so in the case of insanity, after judgment and sentence, and before execution thereof." 22 Cyc. 1215.

"The method of determining the preliminary question of insanity, where not the subject of statutory regulation, is largely within the discretion of the court, which may itself enter upon the inquiry, or adopt some other mode, without the aid of a jury. The usual and safest course is to have the matter settled by a jury, impaneled for the purpose." 10 Enc. of Pl. & Pr. 1220, 1221.

Section 2264 of the Code of Laws provides that: "Any judge of the circuit court is authorized to send to the State Hospital for the Insane every person charged with the commission of any criminal offense, who shall, upon the trial before him, prove to be non compos mentis; and the said judge is authorized to make all necessary orders to carry into effect this power." The act entitled "An act to regulate the practice, with reference to proceedings for the appointment of a committee, for persons non compos mentis," approved the 26th of February, 1910 (23 St. at Large, p. 754), has no application, as it is not necessary to appoint a committee for a person pleading insanity, when charged with a crime.

Whatever doubts may have been entertained as to the power of the judge to determine the issue raised by the plea of insanity in a criminal case, there never has been any question as to the right to submit such issue to a jury, in the absence of a statutory enactment to the contrary. And there is no provision in section 2264 of the Code of Laws, nor any other statutory provision in this state, militating against the right of the judge to submit such question to a jury.

[4] Eighth, ninth, and thirteenth exceptions:

In the first place, objection was not interposed to the form in which the question of insanity was submitted to the jury. But, waiving such objection, it has not been made to appear that it was prejudicial to the appellant.

[5] Tenth exception:

It does not appear that objection was made to the form of the oath administered to the jurors, nor that there was prejudicial error.

Eleventh and fifteenth exceptions:

The plea of insanity is an affirmative defense, and must be established by the party interposing it by the preponderance of evidence. State v. Stark, 1 Stro. 506; State v. Paulk, 18 S. C. 514; State v. Bundy, 24 S. C. 439, 58 Am. Rep. 263; 10 Enc. of Pl. & Pr. 1217.

Twelfth exception:

This exception cannot be sustained, for the reason that the fact was not in dispute that the defendant had put up and put down his hand when told to do so; nor has it been made to appear that the question was prejudicial to his rights.

[6] Fourteenth exception:

The question whether the defendant had knowledge of right from wrong was necessarily involved in the plea of insanity interposed by him. State v. Bundy, 24 S. C. 439, 58 Am. Rep. 263.

Seventeenth exception:

There is not a single word in the charge set out in the exception tending to show in what light the presiding judge viewed the facts.

Eighteenth exception:

It is only necessary to refer to the testimony to show that this exception cannot be sustained.

It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the circuit court be affirmed and that the case be remanded to that court, for the purpose of having another day assigned for the execution of the sentence.

JONES, C. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(38 S. C. 555)

STATE v. WELDON et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 14, 1911.)

CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 1098, 1099*)—APPEAL—EXCEPTIONS.

As a basis for exceptions charging that the proceedings resulting in a verdict of conviction were so improper or irregular that they did not constitute a fair trial, defendant should set out in the proposed case the facts relied on; and if the case as so made up be not agreed to, it should be submitted to the circuit judge for settlement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. §§ 1098, 1099.*]

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Florence County; Geo. W. Brown, Special Judge.

Alex Weldon and another were convicted of murder, and appeal. Record referred to circuit judge, to report fully on all matters alleged in certain affidavits and exceptions.

W. F. Clayton and Willcox & Willcox, for appellants. Solicitor Wells, for the State.

PER CURIAM. The defendants were convicted of the murder of E. M. Moye, and sentenced to death. The record for appeal to this court contains the following exceptions:

"His honor erred in allowing a crowd, some of whom were bent upon killing the prisoners, to take possession of the courthouse and hold the same during the trial, occupying every available space, including the bar reserved for the lawyers, to such an extent that the jurors were entirely cut off from the view of counsel, and counsel had to request his honor on several occasions to cause the sheriff to clear away the crowd, that counsel might see the witness he was examining, thus in effect overawing the jury, and as such the accused did not have that fair trial awarded them under the Constitution and laws of the state

"That defendants have not had a fair and impartial trial, and have been convicted upon the testimony of Ham, an accomplice alone, whose testimony is, from the many contradictory statements, unworthy of belief. That defendants' counsel, hearing the reports upon the streets of lynching as he went to the courthouse, at the solicitation of the special judge, and seeing the unusual crowd in the courthouse, did not dare to ask for the three days allowed by law for fear of the murder of his clients. That from this fear he was unable to get up any testimony in behalf of his clients, and went into the trial without knowledge of his defense. That since the said trial defendants' counsel has obtained the affidavit of Sallie Weldon, the wife of Alex Weldon, which is incorporated in the case, tending to show an alibi for both of the defendants. That defendants' counsel knew nothing of this evidence, nor could he have known of the same, unless he had insisted upon his three days, in which event counsel fully believes that he would have endangered the lives of his clients if he had demanded his three days, and by reason thereof defendants have not had a fair trial."

As a basis for exceptions charging that the proceedings resulting in a verdict of conviction were so improper or irregular that they should be held not to constitute a fair and legal trial, a defendant should set out in the proposed case the facts relied upon; and if the case as so made up be not agreed to, it should be submitted to the circuit judge for settlement. In this case the defendants' counsel has submitted to this court, in support of his exceptions, affidavits which have not been passed upon by the circuit judge, by motion for a new trial or otherwise. As the lives of the defendants are involved, the court will overlook all irregularities, and of its own motion refer the entire record to the circuit judge, so that he may report fully upon all the matters alleged in the affidavits and exceptions.

It is therefore ordered that the clerk of this court do transmit to Hon. Geo. W. Brown, the special judge who presided at the trial, a copy of the entire record, together with a copy of this order, to the end that he may forthwith certify to this court a statement of all the conditions surrounding the trial, and the facts connected with the trial, so far as they are germane to the exceptions above quoted, and the matters alleged in the affidavits appearing in the record.

(38 S. C. 545)

STATE v. BAXTER et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 4, 1911.)

BAIL (§ 77*)—FORFEITURE PROCEEDINGS.

Accused entered into a recognizance, appeared at the court of general sessions, where he was convicted, and gave notice of appeal, and entered into another recognizance with the same sureties to abide the judgment of the Supreme Court, where the conviction was affirmed and rule issued for the sureties to show cause why the recognizance should not be forfeited. The rule recited the terms of the first recognizance, and the order to show cause recited the same, but also recited the conviction of accused and his appeal to the Supreme Court, and identified the second recognizance as that to which it was related by stating the amount, which was different from the amount of the first recognizance. Held to fully advise accused and his sureties to show cause why judgment should not be entered on the second recognizance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bail, Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Georgetown County; Ernest Gary, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Proceedings by the State to forfeit a recognizance. From a judgment against J. A.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Baxter and another, sureties, the surety named appeals. Affirmed.

T. St. Mark Sasportas, for appellant. Walter H. Wells, Sol., for the State.

WOODS, J. One Daniel Harley entered into a recognizance in the sum of $200, with the defendant Baxter and G. E. Herriott as sureties, conditioned for his appearance at the court of general sessions for Georgetown county, to answer a charge of violating the dispensary law. Harley appeared according to his obligation, and was tried, convicted, and sentenced. Thereupon he gave notice of appeal, and entered into another recognizance, with the same sureties, in the sum of $300, conditioned that he "shall abide by the judgment or order of the Supreme Court, and any judgment or order of this court made in pursuance thereof, and shall abide the sentence of this court, rendered in this case, provided the appeal shall be dismissed or overruled, and shall appear whenever required by order of this court." Afterwards a rule was issued against Harley and his sureties, reciting: "Whereas, Daniel Harley lately entered into recognizance in the penal sum of $300, conditioned that the defendant would appear at the court of general sessions of the said county and state, to answer to a bill of indictment to be preferred against him," and requiring the parties to show cause "why the said recognizance should not be estreated and adjudged to be forfeited, and execution issued for the penalty of the same."

In addition to the rule above recited, an order was made by Judge Gary in these words: "It appearing to the court that Daniel Harley is under recognizance to appear in court of sessions on November 9, 1903, then and there to answer to a bill of indictment to be preferred against him for violation of the dispensary law, and to do and receive what shall be enjoined by this court, and not depart the court without license, in the above-stated case, and was convicted, and appealed to the Supreme Court, and the decision of this court was affirmed, and he has this day been called three times before the courthouse and failed to answer when called, on motion of Walter H. Wells, solicitor, it is ordered that Daniel Harley, and also his sureties, to wit, J. A. Baxter and G. E. Herriott, do show cause, on the first day of the next term of this court, why said recognizance should not be 'estreated and judgment entered against them for the sum of $300, the amount fixed in such recognizance as the penalty thereof.' Let a copy of this order be served upon the makers of said recognizance, or either of them." The rule and order were duly served, and the surety Baxter made a return thereto. The appeal is from an order adjudging the return insufficient, and directing judgment to be entered against Baxter and the estate of Herriott in the sum of $300.

The ground of the appeal is that the rule and the order referred to the first recognizance for the appearance of Harley for trial, and did not notify Baxter that he was required to show cause why the second recognizance, given after his conviction, should not be forfeited. The point is too technical. It is true that the rule recites the terms of the first recognizance, and there are recitals of the same kind in the order of Judge Gary; but the order also recited the conviction of Harley and his appeal, and the decision of the Supreme Court on the appeal, and both the rule and the order further identified the second recognizance as that to which they related by mention of $300, which was the amount of that recognizance, instead of $200, the amount of the first recognizance. Considering these recitals, in connection with the fact that the surety Baxter, when he signed the recognizance conditioned that Harley should abide the result of the appeal, must have known that the first recognizance had been discharged by the appearance, conviction, and sentence of Harley, it seems perfectly clear that he was not misled by other recitals of the rule and order, and that he was fully advised by them that he was required to show cause why judgment should not be entered on the second recognizance.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

JONES, C. J., GARY, A. J., and HYDRICK, J., concur.

(88 S. C. 464)

ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO. v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 25, 1911.)

1. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 243*)—PROCEEDINGS TO TAKE PROPERTY AND ASSESS COMPENSATION—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

The condemnation statutes in this state limit the inquiry thereunder to the ascertainment of the amount of compensation, and afford no means for determining the right to compensation; and hence a judgment in condemnation proceedings, assessing compensation, does not determine the right to condemn.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 627; Dec. Dig. § 243.*]

2. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 198*)—PROCEEDINGS TO ASSESS DAMAGES—APPEAL—WAIVER.

Where a railroad, defendant in condemnation proceedings to assess compensation for a right of way claimed by another railroad, disputes the plaintiff's right to condemn, its participation in its selection of a jury in those proceedings cannot be considered as a waiver of the decision of a proper tribunal on the disputed question of right, since the object of the proceeding was only to try the question of compensation, and since the defendant's consent could not confer jurisdiction to determine the question of right where it was not conferred by the statute.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 525, 528, 529; Dec. Dig. § 198.*]

3. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 198*)—PROCEEDINGS TO ASSESS COMPENSATION—APPEAL—REVIEW OF RIGHT TO TAKE—WAIVER.

Where a railroad company was notified by another railroad, on October 3d, of an intention to condemn a right of way, and, on October 29th, served a notice of a refusal of consent, following which, on November 4th, an ex parte order directed the impaneling of a jury to assess compensation, summoned to appear on November 12th, and the company, on November 5th, obtained an order to the other railroad to show cause why it should not be enjoined pendente lite from condemnation proceedings, and a temporary restraining order, and protested the jury's assessment of damages, the company did not waive its right to object as to the right of condemnation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 525, 528, 529; Dec. Dig. § 198.*]

4. JUDGMENT (§ 650*) — CONCLUSIVENESS — MATTERS NOT IN ISSUE—RIGHT TO CONDEMN PROPERTY.

Where a railroad company, after notice of an intention of another railroad to condemn a right of way across its tracks, disputes the right to condemn and applies for an injunction pendente lite, which is denied and as to which, on appeal, an order of supersedeas is refused, these orders do not dispose of the issues on the merits or adjudicate any rights against the company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Dec. Dig. § 650.*]

5. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 169*)—RIGHT TO CONDEMN—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

Where a railroad obtains an order from the Railroad Commission, authorizing it to cross the right of way of another company, provided that such crossing be protected with an interlocking switch, and that the crossing and switch be subject to the approval of the Commission, and by another order, the Commission imposes conditions as to furnishing preliminary plans, and as to the method of construction and operation, the railroad has no authority or absolute right to condemn a right of way and to construct such crossing without a compliance with the orders of the Commission.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Dec. Dig. § 169.*]

6. INJUNCTION (§ 137*)—PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION—GROUNDS FOR DENIAL—INJURY TO DEFENDANT—RIGHTS IN DOUBT.

Where a railroad company is in possession of its tracks and right of way, and another railroad has begun proceedings to condemn a crossing of its tracks, though without adjudicated right to condemn, a preliminary injunction, restraining the company in its use of its tracks and authorizing an invasion of its possession, and which disturbs the status sought to be preserved by an earlier order, is inequitable, and will be set aside and the status restored.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Dec. Dig. § 137.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Chesterfield County; R. C. Watts, Judge.

Action by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company against the Seaboard Air Line Railway. From an order continuing a temporary restraining order, the defendant appeals. Order reversed.

See, also, 71 S. E. 39, 40.

Stevenson & Matheson and Lyles & Lyles, for appellant. Geo. B. Elliott, Willcox & Willcox, and W. P. Pollock, for respondent.

JONES, O. J. This appeal is from an order of injunction pendente lite granted by Judge Watts on December 30, 1910, upon return of defendant, to a rule to show cause with temporary restraining order, dated December 22, 1910.

The rule directed defendant to show cause why it "should not be restrained and enjoined from obstructing in any manner and from maintaining its side track over and across the right of way of plaintiff on Front street, in the town of Cheraw, and why it should not be enjoined and restrained from instituting any legal steps, whereby the plaintiff would be hindered or delayed in the use of its right of way."

After stating the corporate capacity of the plaintiff, defendant, and the town of Cheraw, the complaint alleged that plaintiff was granted a right to build a spur track along Front street, by ordinances of the town of Cheraw, adopted August 1, and December 16, 1910, followed by a deed conveying said right of way; that on November 12, 1910, the defendant wantonly trespassed upon and obstructed said right of way by the construction of a railroad track across the same; that plaintiff instituted condemnation proceedings to condemn the right of way across the track and right of way of defendant, where the same crosses Front street in Cheraw, and that such proceedings were completed on November 12, 1910, and that the jury of condemnation awarded $25 damages against plaintiff for such right of way, which sum was deposited with the clerk of court at Chesterfield, and that no appeal has been taken from the finding in such proceeding; that on November 14, 1910, after the completion of the condemnation and deposit of the award, the defendant completed the construction of its side track across said right of way of plaintiff without plaintiff's consent, and thereby rendering said right of way useless and unfit for the purposes for which it was granted; that defendant has heretofore, by actions at law or equity, delayed and hindered plaintiff in the use of its right of way, and threatens to continue to hinder, delay, and defeat plaintiff in such use, both physically and by legal proceedings; that by reason of the foregoing plaintiff has been damaged $10,000, and unless defendant be restrained from continuing said interference and obstruction irreparable damage will be done to plaintiff.

On December 23, 1910, the defendant intervened by petition, alleging that it owned a right of way across Front street for a double track and was exercising its right to maintain the side track in question for the service of its customers and the public; that defendant in conjunction with the town of Cheraw had trespassed upon plaintiff's right of way and tracks at Front street, had torn up the side track, overpowered defendant's agents with an armed force, taken charge of defendant's engine, and have attempted to cut defendant's track and place in a crossing by violence; that the right of plaintiff to make such crossing is in litigation in another case (Seaboard Air Line Railway v. Atlantic Coast Line Railway, 71 S. E. 39, now pending in this court, and heard along with this case); that defendant is desirous of having such right finally adjudicated as speedily as possible; that, under the permission to make such crossing granted by the Railroad Commission, plaintiffs were required to put in an interlocking switch system, and that no provision for such interlocking switch system had been made, and that it will take a great while for the same to be established, and that plaintiffs are endeavoring to place the crossing by force and violence on the main line of defendant, without the safeguards under which they were permitted by the Railroad Commission to place same, etc.

Upon this petition Judge Watts, by his order dated December 26, 1910, required the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company and the town of Cheraw to show cause, on December 30, 1910, why they should not be restrained from interfering with the track of the Seaboard Air Line Railway and the crossing as now contemplated, and from interfering with defendant's possession of its property in any way, and in the meantime they be restrained from such interference; it being the intention of the order to maintain the status until the hearing set for December 30, 1910.

On December 30, 1910, defendant made its return, whereby it first demurred to the complaint upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient on three grounds stated, and then as to the allegations of the complaint it in substance denied that plaintiff had acquired any right of way over the right of way and tracks of defendant across Front street, and alleged that defendant had the right of way of width necessary for two railroad tracks across Front street, which was acquired by the Palmetto Railroad Company by virtue of an act of the General Assembly of 1882, and an ordinance and deed of the town of Cheraw of 1886, and that defendant had acquired the right of the Palmetto Railroad Company; that the main line of defendant was built across Front street in 1887, and the said side track was built on the 12th and 14th of November, 1910, by virtue of this authority, for the purposes of accomplishing its business, and not to hinder or defeat the right of way claimed by plaintiff; that since the dates mentioned the Palmetto Railroad Company and defendant, as successor, had been in actual and peaceable possession of this right of way, main line, and side track.

The return set forth the two orders of the Railroad Commission, of date December 22d and December 28th, passed pursuant to section 2179 of the Code of Laws 1902, and giving the preliminary approval of the Commission to a crossing by the Coast Line at this point, under very minute and substantial conditions, to wit, that the crossing was to be protected with an interlocking switch, and that all preliminary plans for the crossing and interlocking switch were to be submitted before the work was attempted.

The return then set forth that on the 24th day of December, 1910, the plaintiff, without having in any wise complied with the order of the Commission, in that it had furnished and the Commission had approved no plans for the crossing and interlocking switch, and had made no arrangements for the installation of an interlocking switch, and, in utter violation of the order of Judge Watts, of December 22d, intended to maintain the status, had entered upon the right of way of defendant at Front street and torn up and destroyed the side track, and placed obstructions between the rails of the main line, taken forcible possession of defendant's engines and cars on the main line, and illegally arrested its employés in charge thereof.

The return and affidavits then further allege that the proposed crossing was not only a serious menace to the safety of all persons and property moving over the Seaboard, but that it would be a serious and substantial hindrance to the Seaboard in the use and enjoyment of its right of way, and that, therefore, under section 2195 of the Code, it was such a right of way as could not be condemned by plaintiff.

By way of reply and return, plaintiff contended that the alleged nuisance was placed by defendant on Front street after plaintiff acquired from the Railroad Commission the right to cross said street with its track, after plaintiff had condemned the crossing, after plaintiff had received permission from the town of Cheraw to use said street, and after Judge De Vore, in the action instituted by defendant against plaintiff, had refused the injunction sought by defendant against plaintiff; that the right of plaintiff to cross the track of defendant was complete after the permission of the Railroad Commission, the condemnation proceedings, the refusal of injunction by Judge De Vore, and the refusal of the Supreme Court to supersede the order of Judge De Vore; that the right of defendant to construct a "double track" across Front street did not warrant the building of the obstructive side track; that all questions of danger and inconvenience to the defendant by the proposed crossing were wrongfully passed upon and decided; that early on the morning of the 24th day of November the defendant unlawfully carried away the crossing frog which plaintiff designed to place in the crossing, and that in consequence plaintiff made a temporary crossing on December 24th; that plaintiff never had intention to install a crossing at Front street without an interlocking plant and the supervision of the Railroad Commission; that after a hearing before the Railroad Commission on December 28th the Commission refused to reopen the question of the permission to make the crossing, and reaffirmed its permission granted on September 22, 1910, etc.

The following order was granted by Judge Watts: "On hearing pleadings, return and affidavits herein on rule to show cause why injunction should not be granted, and after argument of counsel, and it appearing that the plaintiff obtained an order from resident circuit judge and condemned the crossings referred to in the pleadings herein according to law, and obtained consent of the Railroad Commission of this state on two separate occasions. That the defendant attempted to obtain an injunction and restraining order from his honor, Judge De Vore, presiding in this circuit, which was refused, and applied for an order there, staying all proceedings until that appeal could be heard, which was refused. It appears to me that I have no authority to review these orders, and that plaintiff is entitled to put in the crossing under the terms and conditions as allowed by the Railroad Commission. It is therefore ordered, declared, and adjudged that the temporary restraining order granted herein be continued until the final hearing of this case herein, and that plaintiff enter into bond in the sum of $250, before and to be approved by the clerk of court of this county, within 10 days, with surety. The said bond to be the usual injunction bond. That the plaintiff be allowed to put in its crossing over the right of way, side tracks, and main line of the defendant's railroad in accordance with the permission and instructions of the Railroad Commission in allowing the same. That the defendant, its agents, employees, and servants, be enjoined and restrained from in any manner interfering with plaintiff doing the same. It further appearing to my satisfaction that there has been considerable agitation, irritation, bad blood, and excitement over this matter between the parties to this suit, it is ordered that D. P. Douglass, as sheriff of Chesterfield county, see that this order is executed and enforced. R. C. Watts, Judge of Fourth Circuit. December 30, 1910."

The plaintiff has appealed from this order upon exceptions, alleging error: (1) In enjoining an alleged nuisance which had not been established at law. (2) In restraining defendant in the use and possession of its property, pending the determination of plaintiff's rights therein. (3) In restraining defendant from instituting any legal steps for the protection of its rights in the premises. (4) In going beyond the scope of the rule to show cause and relief demanded in the complaint, which related to the side track, by undertaking to deal with defendant's main line. (5) In holding that he had no authority to review the proceedings and orders referred to in his order, and that because of them plaintiff had the right to put in the crossing, whereas he should have held that there has been no adjudication of any right in plaintiff to make such crossing. (6) In not enjoining plaintiff from interfering with the right of way, side track, and main line of defendant, and in not protecting defendant in the possession thereof, pending the final determination of the right claimed by plaintiff. (7) In failing and refusing to order plaintiff to replace the side track and remove the obstruction placed on defendant's right of way and main line, and restore the status as it existed on December 22, 1910, when the restraining order was issued, which tied the hands of defendant. (8) In forcibly taking the property of defendant from its possession and placing same in the possession of plaintiff, through the sheriff, in the absence of any adjudication of plaintiff's right.

After the filing of the appeal return in this court, the defendant filed a petition, asking that plaintiff be restrained from further proceedings under the order of Judge Watts, pending the appeal, and on the — day of January, 1911, a rule to show cause, with restraining order, was issued by this court. The petition, among other things, shows that, since the order of Judge Watts appealed in this case, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company applied to the Railroad Commission, at a meeting on January 2, 1911, to approve its plans for said crossing and for the interlocking switch contemplated by the order of the Commission; that the Commission took the same under consideration, and by an order, dated January 6, 1911, reached the conclusion that the grade crossing at Front street would be dangerous to the general public, and that it should not be allowed, but gave the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company the option of crossing at grade at Second street upon certain conditions, or crossing overhead at Front street; that, notwithstanding this rescission of the former orders of the Commission, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company has entered upon petitioner's right of way under the protection of the sheriff, and has proceeded to tear up petitioner's main line track at Front street.

The action of the Railroad Commission was telegraphed to the officials of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company on the morning of January 7, 1911, and was received by them, it is stated, after the placing of the crossing frog, but before the installation of the interlocking switch.

This court, by its order dated January 7, 1911, supplemental to its former restraining order and to be effective until the further order of the court, required: "That the Seaboard Air Line Railway do not interfere with the switch or crossing as now constructed across its right of way and track at Front street, in the town of Oheraw, S. C., by the Atlantic Coast Line Company. That the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Company do refrain from crossing or in any wise using the said track or switch constructed by them, and from entering at said point on the right of way of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company."

We have not undertaken to give in detail all the contents of the mass of papers and affidavits presented in this case; and we have laid no stress on angry and belligerent conduct of the parties in the assertion of their supposed rights, as the decision of this case will not be influenced or controlled by such matters.

After most careful consideration, we have reached the conclusion that the order of Judge Watts was erroneous. The fundamental error was in assuming that the right of plaintiff to make the crossing in question had been determined.

[1] Many cases in this state, following Railway Co. v. Riddlehuber, 38 S. C. 308, 17 S. E. 24, have determined that the condemnation statutes furnish no means for determining the right to compensation and that the inquiry thereunder is limited to ascertaining the amount of compensation. It follows that the judgment in condemnation could not determine the question of plaintiff's right to make the crossing.

[2] It must also follow that the participation of defendant in the selection of the jury in the condemnation proceedings could not be construed as a waiver of the decision of a proper tribunal on the disputed question of right, because the object of the proceedings was not to try the question of right, and consent, even, could not confer jurisdiction over a subject-matter not conferred by the statute.

[3] It may be that, if one denying the right of condemnation should not take timely action to invoke the proper tribunal, a court might hold that there was a waiver of the question of disputed right; but in this case it appears that plaintiff served intention to condemn on October 3, 1910, and on October 29, 1910, defendant served notice of refusal of consent; that on November 4, 1910, plaintiff secured an ex parte order from Judge Watts, directing the impaneling of a jury of condemnation, which jury was drawn on the 7th and summoned to appear on the 12th; that on Saturday, November 5th, defendant procured an order to show cause why plaintiff should not be enjoined pendente lite from proceeding with the condemnation proceedings, with a temporary restraining order, which were served on Monday, November 7th, the day on which the jury were drawn. At the hearing on November 11th, Judge De Vore refused injunction pendente lite. The jury met on November 12th, over the protest of defendant, and proceeded to make the assessment. As stated, appeal is pending from the order of Judge De Vore, refusing injunction. We cannot see anything in these proceedings from which an inference could be made that defendant had waived or abandoned its dispute as to plaintiff's right of condemnation.

[4] Nor can it be said that the order of Judge De Vore, refusing injunction pendente lite, adjudicated any right in plaintiff, as such an order does not dispose of the issue on the merits. Alston v. Limehouse, 60 S. C. 559, 39 S. E. 188; Wright v. Columbia, 77 S. C. 416, 57 S. E. 1096. Likewise the order of this court, refusing order of supersedeas in the appeal from order of Judge De Vore, could not be regarded as affecting the merits, any more than the order of Judge De Vore did.

[5] It is very clear, also, that orders of the Railroad Commission of September 22d and December 28th gave plaintiff no absolute right to make the crossing. The order of September 22d declared: "After due consideration the consent of this Commission is hereby given to the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company to cross the main line track of the Seaboard Air Line Railway on Front street, in the town of Cheraw, S. C., with its track at grade, provided that said crossing be protected with an interlocking switch; said crossing and interlocking switch to be subject to the approval of this Commission." The order of December 28th provided: "That the permission granted to the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company to cross track of the Seaboard Air Line Company on September 22, 1910, contemplated the furnishing of this Commission all preliminary plans of the interlocking switch and crossing and the proper erection of the same, subject to the approval of this Commission. That all necessary material for the completion of the interlocking switch and crossing as ordered be assembled before any work on same is begun, and that the work of erection be carried on to completion simultaneously. That no engine or train be operated over said crossing until the same has been inspected by the official engineer and accepted by this Commission."

No plans of an interlocking switch crossing were ever submitted to the Railroad Commission until January 2, 1911. Hence any attempt to put in the crossing previous to January 2, 1911, was a violation of the orders of the Commission, and, inasmuch as the Commission did not approve the plans submitted on January 2, 1911, but disapproved them, the attempt to put in the crossing thereafter was unauthorized by the Commission.

Whether the Railroad Commission had authority under the statute to revoke its former consent to the crossing upon conditions, either with or without notice to the plaintiff, is not necessarily involved, and as the Commission is not a party to these proceedings we will not undertake to adjudge that matter. It is sufficient for the purposes of this case to state that no authority from the Railroad Commission to make the crossing at the date of Judge Watts' order of injunction existed, for want of compliance with the conditions precedent upon which the alleged consent was based.

[8] There being no adjudicated right of plaintiff to the crossing and the defendant being in possession of its right of way and tracks to be affected thereby, the effect of the order appealed was to disturb defendant in its possession pending the litigation contrary to the rule that the object of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status until plaintiff's right is established. Pelzer v. Hughes, 27 S. C. 415, 3 S. E. 781. The order not only failed to preserve the status existing on December 22, 1910, when the preliminary restraining order was granted, though the court was urged by defendant in its intervening petition so to do, but authorized plaintiff to invade defendant's possession and tied defendant's hands, even against taking legal proceedings to protect its possession.

We do not deem it important or necessary to consider all the exceptions in detail, as the foregoing considerations are sufficient to justify reversal of the order under consideration. We regard it also proper to provide for the restoration of the status as it existed on December 22, 1910, when plaintiff secured the restraining order against defendant, as it was inequitable to leave plaintiff free to disturb the status after tying defendant's hands. 1 High on Inj. (4th Ed.) § 5a; 10 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 1104; Railway Co. v. Taylor, 134 Ill. 603, 25 N. E. 588.

The judgment of the circuit court is reversed, and plaintiff is hereby ordered forthwith to restore the status as it existed on December 22, 1910.

(88 S. C. 477)

SEABOARD AIR LINE RY. v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 25, 1911.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 854*)—REVIEW—MATTERS OF EVIDENCE CONSIDERED—PLEADINGS.

Where an application for an injunction is refused without stating any reason, the only question arising on appeal is whether, upon the complaint and its supporting affidavits, and upon the return and its supporting affidavits, there is a prima facie showing warranting an injunction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3403, 3404, 3408-3430; Dec. Dig. § 854.*]

2. INJUNCTION (§ 136*)—RIGHT TO TEMPORARY INJUNCTION.

A temporary injunction should be granted when it appears prima facie that such injunction is necessary to preserve the right asserted by the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 305, 306; Dec. Dig. § 136.*]

3. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 198*)—COMPENSATION—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

The condemnation statute is limited to the ascertainment of the amount of damages, and affords no method for determining the right to condemn.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 525, 528, 529; Dec. Dig. § 198.*]

4. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 169*)—PROCEEDINGS TO TAKE PROPERTY AND ASSESS DAMAGES—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

A railroad company cannot lawfully condemn a crossing of the right of way of another, unless it appears that such crossing would not be an unreasonable hindrance of the right of way already dedicated within Civ. Code 1902, § 2195, and unless the consent of the Railroad Commission to such crossing is obtained, as provided by section 2179.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 461; Dec. Dig. § 169.*]

5. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 274*)—REMEDIES OF OWNER—INJUNCTION—STAY UNTIL DETERMINATION OF RIGHT TO CONDEMN.

An injunction to stay condemnation proceedings to assess damages for a proposed crossing by one railroad of the right of way of another should be granted where it is not shown that there has been a performance of a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right, imposed by the Railroad Commission.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 753, 765, 768; Dec. Dig. § 274.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Chesterfield County; J. W. De Vore, Judge.

Appeal by the Seaboard Air Line Railway, from an order refusing an injunction pendente lite, to restrain the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company from maintaining condemnation proceedings. Order reversed, and condemnation proceedings enjoined pendente lite.

See, also, 71 S. E. 34, 40.

Stevenson & Matheson and Lyles & Lyles, for appellant. Geo. B. Elliott, Willcox & Willcox, and W. P. Pollock, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. This is an appeal from an order of Judge De Vore passed on November 11, 1910, refusing injunction pendente lite to restrain condemnation proceedings to assess damages for the proposed crossing of plaintiff's right of way by a spur track of the defendant at Front street, in the town of Cheraw, S. C.

[1] The order refused injunction without stating any reason; hence the only question properly arising is whether, upon the complaint and supporting affidavits, and upon the return and the supporting affidavits, there was a prima facie showing warranting injunction.

[2] The rule is well established that temporary injunction should be granted when it appears prima facie that such injunction is necessary to preserve the right asserted by the plaintiff. Marion County Lumber Co. v. Tilghman Lumber Co., 75 S. C. 220, 55 S. E. 387.

[3] That the condemnation statute affords no machinery for determining the right to condemn and is limited to the ascertainment of the amount of damages has been frequently declared. Georgia, etc., Ry. Co. v. Riddlehuber, 38 S. C. 308, 17 S. E. 24; Water Co. v. Nunamaker, 73 S. C. 550, 53 S. E. 996.

It would be an anomaly to have a judgment fixing the amount of compensation to be awarded in condemnation proceedings in advance of a determination whether the right to condemn exists, upon which depends the duty to pay the compensative damages. Such a judgment presupposes the ascertainment of the right upon which it is based. Hence it is essential to stay proceedings, so that there be no such judgment until the right thereto has been established.

[4] Before a railroad company can lawfully condemn a crossing of the right of way of another, it must appear that such crossing would not be an unreasonable hindrance of the right of way already dedicated within section 2195, vol. 1, Civil Code 1902, and the consent of the Railroad Commission to make such crossing must be obtained, as provided in section 2179, Civil Code 1902; vol. 1.

Subject to review in a proper case, with the proper parties before the court, the question of hindrance, which involves also the question of public safety, must first be considered by the Railroad Commission as a preliminary of granting their consent to allow the crossing. If consent is granted upon certain conditions precedent, there is no consent until the performance of such conditions.

[5] In this case it appears from the proceedings and the undisputed facts existing at the time of the condemnation proceedings that the consent of the Railroad Commission to permit the crossing was on the condition that the crossing at grade should be protected by an interlocking switch, plans of which were to be first submitted to and approved by the Commission. There was no showing that the condition had been performed; in fact, it is not disputed that plans of such switch had not been approved by the Commission. We need not refer to the fact developed at the hearing of this appeal that the Railroad Commission has not only not approved any plan of an interlocking switch, but has actually determined that there shall be no crossing at grade at the point where the right of way is sought to be condemned.

The action of plaintiff to stay condemnation proceedings was brought in due time, before judgment in condemnation was rendered, and we find nothing in the facts which warrants a conclusion that plaintiff has waived, or is estopped to assert, the claim that no right to condemn exists. The situation was such that it was error to refuse to stay the condemnation proceedings.

The order appealed from is reversed, and the condemnation proceedings enjoined pendente lite.

(33 S. C. 430)

TOWN OF CHERAW v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 25, 1911.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§§ 697, 700*)—STREETS—OBSTRUCTION—CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY.

An obstruction of a public street is a public nuisance, and the remedy is by indictment, unless the party instituting proceedings on the civil side of the court can show special or peculiar damages differing in kind from those to which all others in common with him are exposed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1495, 1503, 1508; Dec. Dig. §§ 697, 700.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 697*)—STREETS—OBSTRUCTION—ABATEMENT OR INJUNCTION.

A municipality, because of its peculiar duties and liabilities in respect to the maintenance of its streets for public use, may bring a civil action to prevent or remove a threatened or continued obstruction constituting a nuisance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1502-1505; Dec. Dig. § 697.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 697*)—STREETS—OBSTRUCTIONS—ACTION FOR INJUNCTION.

An injunction, at the suit of a municipality against a railroad for obstructing a street, should not be granted where there is a prima facie showing that a side track used and claimed by the railroad was constructed within a right of way granted by the municipality, and where the existence of any nuisance is doubtful and has not been established by law, and where there has been an injunction in a suit between the defendant and a third party claiming to derive its rights from the municipality over the same obstruction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1502-1505; Dec. Dig. § 697.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Chesterfield County; R. O. Watts, Judge.

Action by the Town of Cheraw for an injunction against the Seaboard Air Line Railway. Temporary injunction granted, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

See, also, 71 S. E. 34, 39.

Lyles & Lyles and Stevenson & Matheson, for appellant. Willcox & Willcox, Geo. B. Elliott, and W. P. Pollock, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The town of Cheraw authorized an attorney to take such proceeding as was necessary against the Seaboard Air Line Railway to compel it to allow the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company to cross its track on Front street, such proceeding to be done without cost to the town. Accordingly, on December 22, 1910, at the time of the commencement of the action by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company against the Seaboard Air Line Railway, with reference to this same crossing, in which the judgment of this court has just been rendered, the present action was commenced to enjoin defendant from obstructing said Front street by side track across the same constructed on the 12th and 14th days of November, 1910, alleging that the obstruction rendered the street unfit for the purposes of the street and for the purposes for which a right of way had been granted to the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company along said street, alleging, further, that since said time, in order more completely to obstruct said street, defendant placed a car or cars on the said side track so unlawfully constructed, and threatens to continue said obstruction.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

A rule to show cause and a temporary restraining order was granted by Judge Watts. Defendant made return on December 30, 1910, and first demurred to the complaint as not stating facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action: (1) In that it only charges an invasion of its right and an obstruction of a public highway, and the only remedy therefrom is by indictment. (2) In that it appears on the face of the complaint that the purpose of the action is to enforce an alleged right of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, and is not brought to enforce the rights of the town. (3) In that, if the town has suffered injury peculiar to it, giving it the right to bring an action for an alleged public nuisance, no injunction can be granted till the right which is in dispute is determined by law, and no such right is alleged.

The return further states that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest, but the suit is at the expense and for the benefit of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. The return also states, among other matters, that the construction and use of the side track was not unlawful, and was upon its right of way. The right of way here referred to was that granted pursuant to ordinance by the town of Cheraw October 26, 1886, to the Palmetto Railroad Company, to whose rights defendant succeeded, to build "a railroad with such embankments and cuttings as may be necessary for the construction of a double track railroad through and over the following described right of way across Front street, * * * provided that all crossings of any of said streets be so arranged as not to hinder or impede the free use of the same by the public; and if the track or tracks of said railroad do not cross any of the above-mentioned streets on a level that the same be so graded as least to interfere with the public travel over said streets."

Counsel have agreed that the record in the case of Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. v. Seaboard Air Line Railway, 71 S. E. 34, on appeal from the order of Judge Watts, dated December 30, 1910, and the record in the case of Seaboard Air Line Railway v. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co., 71 S. E. 39, on the appeal from the order of Judge

De Vore, dated November 11, 1910, shall be considered as incorporated into this case. On hearing the return, Judge Watts granted an order enjoining defendant, until final hearing of the case, from in any manner obstructing or interfering with the streets described in the pleadings, "except as to a double track provided for in the deed of plaintiff to the Palmetto Railroad in 1886."

Defendant appeals on exceptions, assigning error: (1) Because the alleged wrong, if anything, is a public nuisance, and the sole remedy is by indictment. (2) Because there was no prima facie showing of injury to plaintiff different from that suffered by the general public. (3) Because the existence of the alleged nuisance was in dispute and had not been established at law. (4) Because there was no prima facie showing of any unlawful obstruction. (5) Because it appeared that defendant had acquired the right of way across Front street wide enough for two railroad tracks, with power to make such cuts and embankments as might be necessary. (6) Because it appeared that the purpose of the action was to enforce an alleged right of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, and not any right in plaintiff, who was not the real party in interest. (7) Because the effect of the injunction was to take property in the possession of defendant and place it in the possession of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, the right to which was in dispute. (8) Because the status of the property as it existed on December 22, 1910, when the restraining order was issued, should have been restored. (9) Because having found that defendant had a right of way across Front street of a width necessary for two railroad tracks, his honor should have further held that the construction of the side track was lawful and proper, and constituted no obstruction to be enjoined by a court of equity pendente lite. (10) Because it appeared by undisputed proof that such side track had been torn up by the act of plaintiff and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, when the order of injunction was granted.

[1] The obstruction of a public street is a public nuisance, and the remedy is by indictment, unless the person instituting proceedings on the civil side of the court can show special or peculiar damages differing in kind from those to which all others in common with him are exposed. McMeekin v. Power Co., 80 S. C. 515, 61 S. E. 1020, 128 Am. St. Rep. 885.

[2] But a municipality, because of its peculiar duties and liabilities in reference to the maintenance of its streets for public use, may bring a civil action to prevent or remove a threatened or continued obstruction constituting a nuisance. State v. Water Power Co., 82 S. C. 191, 63 S. E. 884, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 435, 129 Am. St. Rep. 876.

[3] Waiving the question that the suit by plaintiff was not really in the interest of the public, but was in the interest of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company for the purpose of enabling it to effect a crossing of the defendant's right of way at Front street, we think the injunction should not have been granted, because the prima facie showing made was that the side track of the defendant was constructed within the right of way granted by the plaintiff. The existence of any nuisance was so doubtful that the court should not have disturbed the status until the legal rights of the parties had been determined. Kennerty v. Etiwan Phosphate Co., 17 S. C. 417, 43 Am. Rep. 607.

The order of the circuit court is reversed.

(39 S. C. 122)

McJIMPSEY v. SOUTHERN RY., CAROLINA DIVISION.†

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 1, 1911.)

CARRIERS (§ 320*)—CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS—INJURY TO PASSENGER—ACTION—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger, refusal of a directed verdict for defendant held proper by a divided court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 320.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Spartanburg County; J. W. De Vore, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Ed McJimpsey, by his guardian ad litem, against the Southern Railway, Carolina Division. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed by a divided court.

Sanders & De Pass, for appellant. Nicholls & Nicholls and C. P. Sims, for respondent.

JONES, O. J. The plaintiff recovered judgment for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained August 5, 1906, while a passenger on defendant's train between Biltmore, N. O., and Asheville, N. O.

At the conclusion of all the testimony, defendant moved the court to direct a verdict for defendant on the following grounds:

(1) Because no actionable negligence has been shown on the part of the defendant company.

(2) That, if any such has been shown, the evidence shows that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence such as would defeat his recovery.

(3) That this suit is brought against Southern Railway, Carolina Division, while the evidence shows that the plaintiff was injured while on a train of the Southern Railway Company.

These same grounds are now urged against the court's refusal of the motion. We notice the third ground first. Unless contained in defendant's answer hereafter noticed, there was no testimony whatever that the injury occurred upon any railroad operated, leased, or owned by the defendant. The testimony offered was all to the effect that the injury occurred on a train operated by the Southern Railway upon a railroad from Spartanburg, S. C., to Asheville, N. C. The court knows judicially that the Spartanburg & Asheville Railroad Company was incorporated in this state under the act of February 20, 1873 (15 St. at Large, p. 347), and was authorized to construct a railroad from Spartanburg to the North Carolina line in the direction of Asheville or Rutherfordton, N. O.; that this railroad company with others consolidated and merged into a new corporation known as "Southern Railway, Carolina Division," and on June 30, 1902, this last-named company executed a lease of its railroad property and franchise to the Southern Railway Company. Acts 1902 (23 Stat. p. 1152); Act 1904 (24 Stat. p. 665). If, therefore, the injury had occurred in this state, there would have been evidence tending to show liability as lessor, but the injury occurred in North Carolina, and there was no testimony offered to show that the defendant was authorized to operate any railroad in North Carolina, and no testimony to show that it owned or actually operated any railroad in that state, except the inference to be deduced from the pleadings. The complaint alleged that defendant was successor of the Spartanburg & Asheville Railroad Company, and owner of its franchise, rights of way, tracks, locomotives, and passenger cars, said tracks extending from Spartanburg, S. C., to Asheville, N. C., and that plaintiff became a passenger on the cars of defendant at Biltmore, N. O. The answer did not specifically deny these allegations, but stated: "It denies every material allegation of the complaint." It is extremely doubtful whether this constitutes a good general denial, because of the qualification, leaving it uncertain what the defendant considered "material" (1 Eng. Pl. & Pr. 782), but passing that by, as no motion to make the answer definite was made, we notice the third allegation in the answer: "Defendant further alleges that the plaintiff in getting out on the step of one of its cars and in attempting to jump from the train while in motion and in holding onto the handholds while the train was in motion assumed all the risks incident to his so doing." Here we have a statement by defendant, that the injury occurred on the cars of defendant, and whether we view this as an admission, or as warranting an inference that the allegation of the complaint in this matter was not considered material by the defendant and therefore not intended to be denied, we cannot hold that there was such a total failure of evidence on this point as to warrant direction of verdict for defendant.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes
† Rehearing denied June 16, 1911.

Was there error in not directing a verdict on the ground of total failure of evidence to show negligence of defendant? The question is to be determined by the law of North Carolina, where the alleged tort occurred. Taking the view of the evidence most favorable to plaintiff, it appears that plaintiff, a negro boy between 14 and 15 years old, boarded the defendant's train at Biltmore, N. C., as a passenger for Asheville, N. C. Before reaching Asheville, a porter passed through the train calling, "All out for Asheville!" and soon thereafter the train slowed down and stopped, and, if it did not stop, it was moving so slowly as hardly to be noticed. Thereupon the plaintiff, supposing he had reached the station, went out upon the platform, when there was a jerk of the train, which threw him off the platform and under the cars, to his great injury. The station at Asheville is a large brick building surrounded by a fence, with gates for entrance and exit of passengers. The injury occurred in the daytime, and, according to plaintiff's testimony, some 200 yards from the station. The slowing down of the train was explained by the testimony for defendant, which was not disputed. Between Biltmore and Asheville there was a construction crossing of the track where a flagman was stationed, and it was the duty of the engineer to come to a stop, or slow down and await the signal of the flagman before crossing. On this occasion the train was slowed down, and, upon the signal of the flagman, started forward. The defendant's witnesses testified that the train was moving four or five miles an hour at the time of the injury, and that it occurred about three-fourths of a mile from the station, but for the purpose of this motion we must accept the plaintiff's version that the motion of the train was not perceptible, and that the injury occurred about 200 yards from the station. There was no evidence that persons were accustomed to get off and on the train at this point, and there was no evidence that the engineer, conductor, or any employé of the company charged with the management of the train had any knowledge or notice that plaintiff was on the platform when the train moved forward with a jerk. Nor was there any evidence that any employé of defendant invited plaintiff to go upon the platform or to alight, unless, as contended for plaintiff, such invitation should be inferred from the call of the station and the slowing down and stopping of the train. The statute law of North Carolina, which was introduced in evidence by defendant, is section 2628 of the Revisal of 1905, as follows: "In case any passenger on any railroad shall be injured while on the platform of a car or on any baggage, wood or freight car, in violation of the printed regulations of the company posted up at the time in a conspicuous place inside its passenger cars then in the train, such company shall not be liable for the injury, provided said company at the time furnish room inside its passenger cars sufficient for the proper accommodation of its passengers." It was in evidence, without contradiction or dispute, that in the car occupied by plaintiff there was posted in a conspicuous place a notice, "Passengers must not stand on the platform;" and on the outside of the door of that car there was another notice, "Passengers must not stand on the platform." It was also shown that at the time of the injury there was sufficient room inside the passenger cars for the proper accommodation of the passengers. Defendant offered in evidence also the following decisions of the Supreme Court of North Carolina: Burgin v. Railway, 115 N. C. 673, 20 S. E. 473; Denny v. Railway, 132 N. C. 340, 43 S. E. 847; Morrow v. Railway, 134 N. C. 92, 46 S. E. 14; Shaw v. Railway, 143 N. C. 312, 55 S. E. 713. If the only inference of which the evidence is susceptible is that the train was in motion when plaintiff went upon the platform, then under the statute and the decision in Shaw v. Railway, supra, construing it, there should have been a nonsuit. The court in that case said: "It is a very simple and easy matter by observing outside objects or the earth itself to tell when a train is at a standstill, and it imposes no hardship upon a passenger to require him to be certain as to that before entering upon the platform. The carrier owes no duty to be upon the lookout for passengers who violate the printed rule and go on the platform when prohibited, and the engineer and those in charge of the train have the right to suppose that passengers will remain in the car until it comes to a full stop, and they have a right to act accordingly. The statute contains no exception to its general provisions, and in plain terms relieves the company from liability in the case of a passenger injured while on the platform of a moving train, when the company as in this case has complied with its terms. In Denny v. Railway, 132 N. C. 340, 43 S. E. 847, it is held that a passenger who voluntarily goes upon the platform of a moving train for the purpose of alighting at the station and is injured by reason of a jerk in the train is not entitled to recover therefor, and Mr. Justice Connor, speaking of the duty of the engineer, says: "He cannot be supposed to know or anticipate that passengers in defiance of the rules have gone upon the platform and are standing upon the step of the car while in motion." The testimony for the plaintiff, however, is that the train was at a standstill when he went upon the platform, or, if there was any motion of the train, it was not perceptible, and it was proper to submit the case to the jury upon this theory of the testimony. The Shaw Case just cited quotes approvingly from Smith v. Railroad, 88 Ala. 538, 7 South. 119, 7 L. R. A. 323, 16 Am. St. Rep. 63, as follows:

"The mere announcement of the name of a station is not an invitation to alight; but, when followed by a full stoppage of the train soon thereafter, is ordinarily notification that it has arrived at the usual place of landing passengers. Comparing all the cases we deduce that when the name of the station is called, and soon thereafter the train is brought to a standstill, a passenger may reasonably conclude that it has stopped at the station, and endeavor to get off, unless the circumstances and indications are such as to render manifest that the train has not reached the proper and usual landing place." There was some testimony that the jerk of the train occurred just as plaintiff got upon the platform on the opposite side from the station, and before there was opportunity to notice whether the station had in fact been reached. If, therefore, the plaintiff went upon the platform while the train was at a standstill, and had no time to retire therefrom if he had then discovered that he was not at the station, he was upon the platform, after the call of station and stoppage of the train, as one under an implied invitation to be there, and a jerk of the train so violent as to throw one from the platform would tend to show negligence. In such a situation the imperative rule of the statute does not apply, and the passenger is subject to the rule of the prudent person.

The testimony stated also shows that it was proper to submit to the jury the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence. There are a number of exceptions to the instructions given the jury by the court. Defendant requested the following instruction: "If the jury find from the evidence that the plaintiff was out on the platform before the train reached the station, and the train was still in motion, and that it gave a jerk, and that this jerk was incident to the moving forward of the train, and that this was the cause of his being thrown and injured, then he cannot recover." To which the court responded: "I charge you that is the law of North Carolina as I understand it, and in connection with that I charge you this: Unless he was out on the platform, if you conclude he was out there, by the invitation of the defendant company." Defendant also requested this instruction: "If plaintiff was out on the platform and was attempting to alight from the train while in motion, and was thrown by a jerk of the train which was incident to its moving forward, while it was some distance from the station, he cannot recover." To which the court responded: "I charge you that and in connection with it I charge you this: That if it was some distance from the station, and there was any announcement given by any of the employes or servants of the railroad company, acting within the scope of their agency, that would lead a person of ordinary reason and care and prudence to believe that the train had reached the station, or was moving very slowly in connection with any announcement that may have been given, such announcement and the slow moving of the train, or the speed of the train, rather, would indicate to a person of ordinary reason, prudence, and care that the train had arrived at the station, then if he came out on the platform at the invitation of the defendant company, and he was injured as a direct and proximate cause of their negligence, under those circumstances, he would be entitled to recover." There were other portions of the charge which applied the rule of the prudent person to the conduct of the plaintiff, even though the train was in motion, and had not reached the station. We do not think the charge as a whole was in accordance with the law of North Carolina, as shown in evidence. It appears that the law of that state is that the rule of the statute quoted applies to persons going upon the platform while the train is in motion, and that the rule of the prudent person does not apply in such a case. The mere call of the station and slowing down of the train implies no invitation to alight, except at the station or when the train stops. Under the theory of the defendant's testimony and the requested instruction to meet that theory, the train was not at a station, and had not stopped when plaintiff went upon the platform. The case of Shaw v. Railway, supra, expressly holds over a vigorous dissent by Chief Justice Clark and Justice Hoke that, under the statute mentioned, a railroad company is not liable for injuries to a passenger who, after the porter called out the name of the station at which she intended to alight, and while the train was still moving, went upon the car platform in violation of the printed regulations so posted, and was injured by the sudden jerking of the train, though she went upon such platform in the bona fide belief that the train had come to a full stop, and though a reasonably prudent person under the same circumstances would have so believed and acted.

My conclusion is that the judgment of the circuit court should be reversed, and the case remanded for a new trial.

HYDRICK, J., and GARY, A. J. When the charge is considered as a whole and read in the light of the testimony, we are satisfied that, even if it be conceded that the modifications of defendant's request were slightly erroneous, the error was not misleading or prejudicial, and did not affect the result. Therefore we think the judgment of the circuit court should be affirmed.

The court being equally divided, the judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

WOODS, J., concurs in the opinion of the CHIEF JUSTICE.

(38 S. C. 549)

STATE v. PENDARVIS.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 4, 1911.)

1. JURY (§ 113*)—CHALLENGES—CHALLENGE OF STATE—TIME.

The rule that the state's right of challenge should be exercised before a juror is accepted by accused is not statutory, being entirely a matter of practice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 499; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1166½*)—APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR—TIME OF CHALLENGES.

A conviction should not be set aside for a technical violation of the rule of practice requiring the state to challenge before the juror is accepted by accused, where his right of challenge or other substantial right is not thereby affected.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3114-3117; Dec. Dig. § 1166½.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1152*)—APPEAL—DISCRETION OF TRIAL COURT.

The trial court's discretion as to the time when jurors may be challenged will not be disturbed unless clearly abused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3053-3057; Dec. Dig. § 1152.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 413*)—PROSECUTION—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In a prosecution for homicide, in which the defense was self-defense, and it did not appear that wounds on accused were self-inflicted, and the evidence tended to show that his life was endangered thereby, evidence of a physician who made a physical examination of accused shortly after the killing as to what the examination showed, offered to show that accused was then suffering from cuts and wounds, was admissible, not being objectionable as a self-serving declaration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 928-935; Dec. Dig. § 413.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 721*)—APPEAL—ARGUMENT—IMPROPER REFERENCES.

The state solicitor stated in his argument in a homicide case, "I am not going to comment on the fact that the defendant did not take the stand, but I have often thought that, if I were being tried on a charge like this, that I—" when the court stated, on objection, that the solicitor had better not make such comments, whereupon the solicitor said, "I guess that hurt." Held, that the remark of the solicitor was improper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1672; Dec. Dig. § 721.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 761*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CHARGES ON FACTS.

A charge in a homicide case, in which it was claimed that accused used opprobrious language to decedent before the killing, that the rule was that the plea of self-defense is not available to one who uses language so opprobrious and insulting that a man of ordinary prudence would expect it to bring on a physical encounter, where it did, in fact, bring on a physical encounter, was not objectionable as a charge on the facts, and, withdrawing from the jury's consideration the question of what brought on the difficulty.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1754-1764; Dec. Dig. § 761.*]

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Dorchester County; B. H. Moss, Special-Judge.

"To be officially reported."

John W. Pendarvis was convicted of manslaughter, and he appeals. Reversed and remanded for new trial.

The exceptions are as follows:

"(1) The record discloses the following: During the impaneling of the jury West O. Hutto was examined upon his voir dire as follows: 'His Honor: Are you related by blood or marriage to John Pendarvis or C. O. Wimberly? Juror: Not that I know of. His Honor: Have you formed or expressed any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant? Juror: No, sir. His Honor: Are you conscious of any bias that would prevent you from rendering a true verdict in this case after hearing the testimony? Juror: No, sir.' When the above juror was called to the book to be sworn, the state did not ask that he be put on his voir dire. The state not making the customary request, as had been done with the other jurors, he was accepted by the defense. Upon his acceptance by the defense the state then asked that he be put on his voir dire, and he was so sworn, after being accepted by the defense. After the voir dire proceedings were had the state objected. 'Mr. Wolfe: Your honor, we accepted this juror before he was placed on his voir dire, and we think that we are entitled to have him sworn. His Honor: I think that is right. As I remember, the solicitor did not ask that the juror be placed on his voir dire, and when he was formally presented you accepted him. Mr. Hildebrand: I was not noticing, your honor. I was leaving this matter to my friend here, and we did not know that the juror had been presented. His Honor: I think that Mr. Wolfe accepted him when he was presented, and before you asked that he be put on his voir dire. Mr. Hildebrand: He is not a juror before he is sworn your honor, and we have the right to object to him. We will rest our case on that. (The juror is objected to by the state under the ruling of the court.) Mr. Wolfe: Will your honor note the exception to your ruling.' It is respectfully submitted that the court erred in allowing the juror West O. Hutto to be examined upon his voir dire and finally peremptorily challenged by the state under these circumstances, after he had been duly presented and accepted as a juror by the defendant.

"(2) The court erred in excluding the proffered testimony of the witness for the defense, Dr. Carlisle Johnson, such testimony, being intended to show the physical condition of the defendant directly after the fatal encounter, and to show that the defendant was at the time of such physical examination by Dr. Carlisle Johnson suffering from several cuts or incised wounds in his body inflicted by Wimberly; and it is respectfully submitted that the exclusion of this testimony was especially prejudicial to the defendant in view of the fact that the state by its testimony contended that Wimberly was not armed with a knife and did not cut the defendant, but that defendant had cut his coat and collar after the rencounter himself; whereas, testimony of Dr. Johnson would have established the fact that the defendant had been cut and wounded in and upon his body, and it would have then been for the jury to say in the light of all of the testimony whether the cuts upon the garments and the wounds upon the body of defendant were self-inflicted or had been received in the rencounter with Wimberly.

"(3) The court erred in allowing the solicitor over and against the protest of counsel for defendant, and despite the ruling of the court sustaining such objection, to continue to comment upon the failure of the defendant to take the stand and testify as is shown by the record.

"(4) The court erred in charging the jury: 'The rule is that the plea of self-defense is not available to one who uses language so opprobrious and insulting that a man of ordinary prudence would expect the same to bring on a physical encounter, and which did bring on a physical encounter,' because this was a charge on the facts, and took from the jury the consideration of the question as to what did really bring on the difficulty between the defendant and Wimberly, and clearly indicated that the opprobrious language alleged to have been used by Pendarvis did bring on the difficulty."

Wolfe & Connor, for appellant. P. T. Hildebrand, Sol., for the State.

GARY, A. J. The following statement appears in the record: "The appellant was tried before Hon. B. H. Moss, special circuit judge, at the fall term of the circuit court for Dorchester county in the year 1910 for murder. In exception 1 is fully set out the circumstances surrounding the presenting acceptance, voir dire, examination, and rejection of the juror West O. Hutto. The jury rendered a verdict of 'Guilty of manslaughter,' whereupon he was sentenced to 12 years at hard labor in the state penitentiary." Defendant appealed upon exceptions, which will be reported.

First exception:

[1-3] The case of State v. Harding, 70 S. C. 395, 50 S. E. 11, shows that this exception cannot be sustained. In that case the rule is thus stated: "The rule that the solicitor should exercise the state's right of challenge before the juror is accepted by the defendant has no statutory sanction, but is based entirely on the practice of the court. State v. Haines, 36 S. C. 504, 15 S. E. 555. The defendant's right of challenge is a right of rejection, not of selection. State v. Kel- ley, 46 S. C. 55, 24 S. E. 60. It is therefore manifest that a verdict should not be set aside for a mere technical violation of the rule, which has not impaired the defendant's right of challenge, or any other substantial right." It is further said that "the discretion of the circuit judge in adjusting such matters will not be disturbed, unless abuse of discretion clearly appears."

Second exception:

[4] The record shows that this question arose as follows: "Q. Did you make an examination of John Pendarvis, the defendant, soon after this trouble? A. Yes, sir. Q. Do you remember when it was? A. I do not remember the date. It was on Saturday evening. Q. It was the same of the difficulty? A. Yes, sir. Q. When was it? A. About night. Q. In jail? A. Yes, sir. Q. Tell us what you found when you examined him? Mr. Hildebrand: That question is not competent, and we object that would be a self-serving declaration. The doctor cannot tell what condition he found this man in so long a time after this thing happened. His Honor: I think the objection should be sustained. You could have some one to corroborate. You could put up the defendant, and let the doctor corroborate him." It did not appear that the wounds were inflicted by the defendant. The testimony tended to show that the life of the defendant was endangered by the wounds; and it should have been left to the jury to find whether they were self-inflicted. This exception is sustained.

Third exception:

[5] The question presented by this exception arose as follows: "During the argument of the solicitor the following language was used: 'I am not going to comment on the fact that the defendant did not take the stand, but I have often thought that, if I were being tried on a charge like this, that I—' Mr. Wolfe: We object, your honor. His Honor: I think you are right, Mr. Wolfe. You had better not comment on that, Mr. Solicitor. Mr. Hildebrand: I guess that hurt. Mr. Wolfe: No, sir; it did not hurt. I ask the stenographer to note the remark—'It hurts!'" While the remark made by the solicitor was not proper, it is not reasonable to suppose that it may have influenced the verdict.

Fourth exception:

[6] This exception cannot be sustained, for the reason that his honor, the presiding judge, merely announced a proposition of law, and there are no words showing that he undertook to say how the difficulty occurred.

It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the circuit court be reversed, and that the case be remanded to that court for a new trial.

JONES, C. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(88 S. C. 428)

DICKS v. NIMMONS.NIMMONS v. DICKS et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. April 21, 1911.)

AGRICULTURE (§ 15*)—LIENS FOR ADVANCEMENTS—ENFORCEMENT.

Civ. Code 1902, § 3063, provides that, when any person has secured a lien on crops for advances, a magistrate may issue a warrant to seize said crops, etc. Section 3064 provides for motion to vacate the attachment. Section 3067 provides that the tenant may recover possession by giving bond. Held, that section 3067 gives the tenant only the right to possession by giving bond, and excludes any remedy by claim and delivery, in which action the affidavit must state that the property was not seized under execution or attachment against the property of the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Barnwell County; S. Sease, Geo. E. Prince, and J. S. Wilson, Judges.

"To be officially reported."

Actions by R. W. Dicks against William Nimmons, and William Nimmons against R. W. Dicks and F. H. Creech, as Sheriff. From an order holding that the Sheriff violated his duty in turning over crops to Nimmons, and reference to a master to ascertain their value, and from a judgment against the Sheriff for the value of the crops, the Sheriff appeals. Affirmed.

B. T. Rice, for appellant. Bates & Simms, for petitioner. Davis & Best, for respondents.

JONES, C. J. On October 14, 1907, R. W. Dicks began a special proceeding first entitled above to foreclose an agricultural lien for advances upon the crops of William Nimmons, which was in all respects regular, directed to F. H. Creech, the appellant, as sheriff of Barnwell county, under which proceeding the sheriff seized the crops of Nimmons. After seizure Nimmons, in the case second entitled above, brought an action of claim and delivery against the sheriff and R. W. Dicks, for the possession of said crops, in which action the sheriff took a bond from Nimmons and turned over the crops to him. Afterwards, upon a rule to show cause issued against the sheriff, Judge Prince, after hearing, made an order holding that the sheriff violated his duty in turning the crops over to Nimmons and was liable for the value of the same, and referred to the master to ascertain the said value. Upon the coming in of this master's report, Judge Sease rendered judgment against the sheriff for $240.33, the net value of the crops. The sheriff appeals from both orders.

The controlling question is whether the sheriff breached his duty in turning over to Nimmons in the claim and delivery action the crops seized in the proceedings to enforce the agricultural lien. We agree with Judge Prince that the sheriff acted without authority.

According to the facts stated in the record, the bond said to have been taken by the sheriff was not given pursuant to section 3067, vol. 1, Civ. Code, which alone gives the lienor the right to give bond to recover the immediate possession of the crops seized. This remedy excludes any remedy by the action of claim and delivery in behalf of the lienor. The affidavit in claim and delivery must state that the property was not seized under execution or attachment against the property of plaintiff, and it is manifest that a lienor whose property is seized and in the hands of the sheriff under a warrant of attachment could not proceed by that remedy. Whether a third party claiming the property could proceed by an action to recover possession is a different question. Railway Company v. Sarratt, 58 S. C. 104, 36 S. E. 504. The statute (section 3063) provides how the lienor shall proceed in case he disputes the amount claimed. Section 3064 provides for motion to vacate the attachment, and section 3067 provides how immediate possession may be obtained by giving bond.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(88 S. C. 541)

SMITH v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 2, 1911.)

CARRIERS (§ 261*)—PASSENGERS—WRONGFUL TAKING OF MILEAGE BOOKS—LIABILITY.

Where a railway company had no right to forfeit a passenger's mileage book, taken up and retained by a conductor, the passenger could recover the value of the book, with interest from the date of the taking.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 1034; Dec. Dig. § 261.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Edgefield County; R. C. Watts, Judge.

Action by H. A. Smith against the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Thurmond & Nicholson, for appellant. B. L. Abney and N. G. Evans, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. The facts out of which this case arose are fully stated in the opinion in the case of Bessie D. Smith v. Same Defendant, 70 S. E. 1037, recently filed. This plaintiff seeks to recover damages for alleged abusive language of defendant's conductor to him on the occasion in question, and for taking up and refusing to return to him his mileage book. At the close of plaintiff's testimony, defendant moved for a nonsuit on two grounds: (1) Because there was no evidence upon which punitive damages could be awarded. (2) Because the evidence showed that plaintiff had violated the terms of his contract by using the coupons from his mileage book to purchase a ticket for his wife, and therefore, by the terms of the contract, the mileage book was subject to forfeiture. The motion was granted.

A careful examination of the evidence discloses nothing in the language or conduct of the conductor toward this plaintiff which would warrant a verdict for punitive damages. There was, therefore, no error in granting the nonsuit on that cause of action. But the principles upon which the case of Bessie D. Smith was decided are conclusive of the proposition that, under the circumstances, the defendant did not have the right to forfeit plaintiff's mileage book. Therefore plaintiff should have been allowed to recover the value of his mileage book, with interest thereon from the date it was taken from him, and for that purpose the judgment is reversed, and the case remanded. Reversed.

JONES, C. J., GARY, A. J., and WOODS, J., concur.

(88 S. C. 572)

MAYBANK & CO. v. ROGERS.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 5, 1911.)

1. GAMING (§ 48*)—CONTRACT IN FUTURES—PLEADING.

Under Civ. Code 1902, § 2310, making void contracts to sell cotton in the future unless the parties bona fide intend actual delivery in kind at the future time specified, a complaint, for breach of contract to deliver alleging such intent is sufficient to show a cause of action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 96-99; Dec. Dig. § 48.*]

2. SALES (§ 418*) — BREACH BY SELLER — RIGHTS OF BUYER.

Ordinarily, when a seller fails to deliver, the buyer can recover the difference between the contract price and the market value at the time and place of delivery without buying articles to replace those contracted for.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1174-1201; Dec. Dig. § 418.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Florence County; Ernest Gary, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Maybank & Co. against F. M. Rogers. From an order overruling a demurrer to the complaint, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

J. W. Ragsdale and R. E. Whiting, for appellant. Willcox & Willcox and Henry E. Davis, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The appeal herein is from an order overruling a demurrer to the complaint upon two causes of action for the recovery of damages aggregating $17,187.50 for alleged breach of contracts for the sale and delivery of cotton.

The complaint on the first cause of action alleged substantially: (1) That plaintiff is a domestic corporation engaged in the business of buying and selling cotton for profit. (2) That defendant agreed in writing on June 23, 1909, to sell to plaintiff 500 bales of cotton to be delivered at Florence, S. C., between September 15 and December 30, 1909, at the price of 10½ cents per pound for Maybank 5's with deductions and additions for other grades according to Maybank & Co.'s differences in effect on the day of delivery. (3) That delivery of said cotton was to be made during the time specified at seller's option. (4) That at the time of making said agreement of sale it was the bona fide intention of both parties that the cotton so agreed to be sold should be actually delivered in kind by the defendant, and that plaintiff was, during the period of delivery, to be ready and willing to receive the cotton in kind. (5) That plaintiff was ready and willing during said time to accept the cotton and pay for the same; but defendant failed to deliver said cotton or any portion thereof. (6) That on December 31, 1909, cotton of the grade and at the point of delivery agreed upon was worth on open account 15½ cents per pound. (7) That a commercial bale of cotton as contemplated by the parties contains 500 pounds, and that the failure of defendant to deliver said cotton damaged plaintiff $11,562.50, the difference between the value of 250,000 pounds of cotton at the contract price of 10½ cents per pound and the value of said cotton at 15½ cents per pound, the market price at the end of the period of delivery.

The second cause of action was upon a similar contract made July 17, 1909, to sell 500 bales of cotton to be delivered at Florence, S. C., between September 15 and December 1, 1909, at the price of 11½ cents per pound; the damages claimed for breach being $5,625, the difference between the value of the cotton at contract price and the value of the cotton at the market price at 18½ cents per pound on December 2, 1909. In other respects the allegations upon each cause of action are the same.

The demurrer was upon the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action: (1) Because it appears that the parties did not intend an actual delivery of the cotton, and that the transactions were mere wagers as to the rise and fall of the price of cotton. (2) Because it appears that plaintiff seeks to recover profits by reason of the rise in the price of cotton and demands payment of the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time fixed for executing the contract, and there is no allegation that plaintiff was compelled to purchase, or that it did purchase cotton to replace that contracted for by said agreements, or that plaintiff suffered any loss by the failure of defendant to deliver said cotton, other than that occasioned by the loss of speculative profits. (3) Because the complaint does not show that there was any difference between the contract price and the market price at the time fixed for executing said contracts, the limit of delivery being December 30, 1909, on the first contract, whereas the allegation was as to market price on December 31, 1909; and on the second contract the limit of delivery was December 1, 1909, whereas the allegation was as to market price on December 2, 1909.

[1] The demurrer was overruled by Judge Ernest Gary. Appellant by his exceptions renews the grounds of demurrer except as to the third ground, which is abandoned. We hold that the demurrer was properly overruled.

Section 2310 of the Civil Code of 1902, vol. 1, provides that: "Every contract, bargain or agreement, whether verbal or in writing, * * * for the sale or transfer at any future time of any cotton, * * * shall be void * * * unless it is the bona fide intention of both the parties to the said contract, bargain or agreement, at the time of making same, that the said cotton * * * so agreed to be sold and transferred shall be actually delivered in kind by the party contracting to sell and deliver the same, and shall actually be received in kind by the party contracting to receive the same at the period in the future mentioned and specified in the said contract, bargain or agreement for the transfer and delivery of the same." The cases construing this section hold that a complaint, which alleges that it was the bona fide intention of both parties at the time of making said contract that the cotton should be actually delivered and received in kind at the future period mentioned, states a cause of action. Gist v. Tel. Co., 45 S. C. 364, 23 S. E. 143, 55 Am. St. Rep. 763; Riordan v. Doty, 50 S. C. 537, 27 S. E. 939; Riordan v. Doty, 56 S. C. 118, 34 S. E. 68; Barr v. Satcher, 72 S. C. 35, 51 S. E. 530.

Such is the allegation of the complaint in this case. The allegation of intention is an allegation of fact which stands admitted by the demurrer. The averment of bona fide intention is not inconsistent with other facts stated in the complaint, or with any presumption arising from such facts. It is true that the statute (section 2311) places the burden of proof on the plaintiff to establish the bona fide intention of the parties at the time of making the contract; but it is not necessary to state in the complaint the evidentiary matter by which such intention may be established.

[2] We find nothing in the second ground of demurrer which needs to be considered, since it appears that the allegations as to the contract are sufficient against a general demurrer. The ordinary rule is that, when the vendor fails to deliver goods sold, the vendee is entitled to recover the difference between the contract price and the market value of the goods at the time and place of delivery. Ellison & Co. v. Johnson & Co., 74 S. C. 202, 54 S. E. 202, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1151; Leesville Mfg. Co. v. Iron Works, 75 S. C. 349, 55 S. E. 768; Brooke v. Milling Co., 78 S. C. 200, 58 S. E. 806, 125 Am. St. Rep. 790.

This rule does not contemplate that the vendee, to avail himself of it, shall buy upon the market articles to replace those contracted for. Proof of the contract price and the market price at the time and place of delivery establishes a basis for certain, not speculative, profits, if the market price be higher than the contract price.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(88 S. C. 553)

CORY v. CITY OF COLUMBIA.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 4, 1911.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1010*)—REVIEW—FINDINGS OF FACT.

There being some evidence tending to support the circuit court's conclusions of fact, they are not reviewable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3979-3982; Dec. Dig. § 1010.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 763*)—STREETS—REPAIRS—EXTENT OF DUTY.

The rule governing the duty of a city in the repair of its streets is ordinary care.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1612; Dec. Dig. § 763.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 803*)—DEFECTIVE SIDEWALKS—DUTY OF PEDESTRIAN.

Even if a city must so guard gratings in a sidewalk, reasonably necessary for adjoining buildings, that one wearing a small-heel shoe, or using a cane or crutch, may not be endangered by a fall, from the heel, cane, or crutch going into one of the small openings, a corresponding duty must devolve on such pedestrians to exercise due care to avoid such danger.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1673; Dec. Dig. § 803.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Richland County; R. W. Memminger, Judge.

Action by E. E. Cory against the City of Columbia. Judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

A. M. Lumpkin and O. T. Cunningham, for appellant. Christie Benet, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. Plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant municipality in a magistrate's court for $100, as damages alleged to have been sustained through the negligence of defendant in permitting to remain in a defective and unprotected condition a certain hole about three inches in diameter, a broken-out disk in one of the cellar lights on the sidewalk on Washington street near the rear of the Carolina National Bank Building, whereby plaintiff, a cripple with one leg and compelled to use a crutch, while passing along the sidewalk going towards Main street on the night of April 28, 1909, was violently thrown to the ground and injured, by his crutch going through said hole, without fault on his part.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

The circuit court, Judge Memminger, reversed the judgment of the magistrate and rendered judgment for the defendant based upon the following conclusions: "After hearing the pleadings, testimony, report of magistrate, and exceptions and arguments of counsel, I am of opinion that the defect alleged is not of such a dangerous character as to charge the defendant with liability for the action. The hole is not dangerous, nor liable to cause accident or injury to an ordinary pedestrian, nor to any one save a person walking with a crutch, and there being an adequate safe way on the pavement, free of such defects, where even a person with a crutch could walk with safety, it was incumbent on a person with such infirmity to use due care and caution in avoiding such places as, while not dangerous to an ordinary pedestrian, might cause him to fall, especially as it appeared that the defendant was familiar with the locality and had been drinking at the time of his injury."

[1] There is some evidence tending to support the conclusions of fact by the circuit court, and hence under the well-established rule these conclusions must be accepted as final, and are not reviewable.

[2] The rule governing the duty of the city in the repair of its streets is ordinary care. Berry v. Greenville, 84 S. C. 122, 65 S. E. 1030.

There was no allegation nor proof that the city authorities had notice of the alleged defect, and there is nothing in the facts found by the circuit court to show that the sidewalk was not reasonably safe for ordinary use.

[3] Even if it should be held that a city must so guard the cellar lights or gratings reasonably necessary for the buildings fronting on the street that one wearing a small heel shoe, or using a walking cane or crutch, should not be endangered by a possible fall arising from the heel or cane or crutch going into one of the small openings, then a corresponding duty must devolve upon such pedestrians to exercise due care to avoid such danger.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

(38 S. C. 543)

CITY OF ANDERSON v. GIST.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 4, 1911.)

DISORDERLY HOUSE (§ 17*)—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

Evidence in a prosecution for keeping a bawdyhouse or house of ill fame held sufficient to sustain a conviction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Disorderly House, Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Anderson County; G. W. Gage, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Mamie Gist was convicted of the offense of keeping a bawdyhouse or house of ill fame, and she appeals. Affirmed.

A. H. Dagnall, for appellant. P. A. Bonham, Sol., and Hood & Sullivan, for respondent.

WOODS, J. The defendant was convicted before the mayor of the city of Anderson of the offense of keeping a bawdyhouse or a house of ill fame. The appeal to the circuit court was on the ground that there was no evidence of guilt, and the same question is made on the appeal to this court.

[1] Analysis and argument are not necessary to show that the following evidence appearing in the record tended strongly to establish the guilt of the accused:

W. F. Edwards, sworn, says: "I know the defendant. She lives on East Market street near Jefferson avenue. I have noticed her house for some time on Saturday night for six or seven weeks. White men continually go there. Saw seven men knock at her door one night, but she did not admit them. One night a white man was in there. I don't know his name. Don't think anybody else lives in same house. One night I saw four women there. I have seen white men go there four or five different Saturday nights. Defendant keeps the house. She lives there. She rents from Monroe Hanks. The place has a bad reputation. This is in the city of Anderson. I am policeman of the city of Anderson. There are three rooms in the house. She has been arrested twice to my own knowledge."

E. B. Geer, sworn, says: "I am an extra policeman. I went with Mr. Edwards the night the women came out of the house. Two men and three women were in a buggy. Saturday night last we heard men in the house. Bell and I found men on the inside of Mamie Gist's house. I don't know general reputation of house. Many buggy tracks around house. She told me when I arrested her that she did not see why the city was any harder on her than other women; that other women had just as many men as she did."

W. N. Scott, sworn, says: "I went to her house on Thanksgiving day, and found two other women in the house. The reputation of the house is very bad. It was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Thanksgiving day that I saw the women. I saw no men there that day. I know defendant lives there."

A. R. Jaynes, J. W. Samons, and A. J. Freeman, policemen, sworn, say that the general reputation of Mamie Gist's house is bad.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the circuit court be affirmed.

JONES, C. J., and GARY, A. J., and HYDRICK, J., concur.

(88 S. C. 525)

REYNOLDS v. PRICE.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 1, 1911.)

1. MORTGAGES (§ 300*)—DISCHARGE—TENDER.

One designing to make a tender of a mortgage debt with the purpose of insisting, in case of refusal, that the mortgage lien is discharged, must act in a straightforward way, and distinctly make known his true purpose, and allow reasonable opportunity for intelligent action by the holder of the mortgage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 876-888; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

2. MORTGAGES (§ 300*)—DISCHARGE—TENDER.

To have the effect of stopping the running of interest or of discharging the lien of a mortgage, a tender of payment must be kept good, and, if made the basis of a plea of tender or for affirmative relief, the money must be brought into court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 876-888; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

3. MORTGAGES (§ 300*)—DISCHARGE—TENDER.

If a mortgagee refuses a tender, not arbitrarily or for a wrongful purpose, but in good faith, under the honest belief, based on reasonable grounds, that more is due him than has been tendered, such refusal will not discharge his lien.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 876-888; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

4. MORTGAGES (§ 306*)—EXTENSION OF TIME—CONSIDERATION.

An agreement without consideration for the extension of time of payment of a mortgage is not enforceable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 890-896; Dec. Dig. § 306.*]

5. MORTGAGES (§ 300*)—PAYMENT—TENDER—GOOD FAITH.

Though it is contrary to public policy to allow an attorney to charge fees for his professional services in his own case, a charge of $10 by a mortgagee, who, as his own attorney, had prepared summons and complaint in foreclosure, was not so unreasonable as to necessarily show that his demand of such sum as a condition precedent to satisfying the mortgage was not made in good faith.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 890-896; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Sumter County; Geo. W. Gage, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Mark Reynolds against Margaret O. Price. From the judgment, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

R. O. Purdy and R. W. Shand, for appellant. L. D. Jennings and Geo. D. Levy, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. This action was brought to foreclose a mortgage given by defendant to plaintiff to secure her bond, dated December 19, 1905, for $600, payable one year thereafter, for the balance of the purchase money of the lot mortgaged. The mortgage secured the payment of all reasonable attorney's fees, costs, and charges, in case it should be placed in the hands of an attorney for collection or foreclosure, or was collected by legal proceedings, and all other debts due and owing to the mortgagee by the mortgagor. The defendant pleaded tender. The circuit court held that the tender was sufficient to cover the amount actually due, and, under the authority of Salinas v. Ellis, 26 S. O. 337, 2 S. E. 121, held the lien of the mortgage discharged. Plaintiff had judgment for the amount found due by the master at the date of tender, but was denied the right to judgment of foreclosure.

To a correct understanding of the case, a brief statement of the circumstances under which the tender was made and refused is necessary. A custom prevails at the Sumter bar to charge what is called a renewal fee of $2 for extending the time of payment of a loan for any definite period beyond the date of maturity. The circuit decree says that it was stated at the bar that such charge is always made and always paid. This loan was so renewed at maturity in 1906, and again in 1907; the defendant having agreed to pay the renewal fees. In the early fall of 1908, plaintiff notified defendant, who resided in Columbia, that he would require payment of the loan at maturity. He received no response until December 28th, when defendant's husband—who acted as her agent throughout the transaction—wrote him, asking a few days' indulgence. Thereafter he wrote plaintiff several letters, excusing the delay in paying the debt, and asking further indulgence. In the meantime several persons had seen plaintiff, at defendant's request, with the view of taking up the debt. Finally, on February 3, 1909, Mr. Geo. D. Levy, a member of the Sumter bar, called upon plaintiff, who is also a member of that bar, and told him that he represented the defendant, and wanted to take up her mortgage debt. At that time it was Mr. Levy's intention to pay plaintiff the amount due him, and take an assignment of the bond and mortgage to himself, until new papers could be executed to him by defendant. He informed plaintiff of his intention, and plaintiff told him it would be agreeable to him. Whereupon, at his request, plaintiff gave him a statement of the amount due, which contained an item of $4 for two renewal fees, and one of $10 for attorney's fee.

At that time plaintiff had already prepared the summons and complaint in foreclosure, which he had signed in his own name, as attorney for plaintiff, and so informed Mr. Levy. Looking at the statement, Mr. Levy called plaintiff's attention to the item of $10, and told him he thought it unusual to make that charge. Plaintiff replied: "Well, that is my charge. If you want the papers, you will have to pay it." On the next day Mr. Levy took the amount due, according to plaintiff's statement, less one renewal fee of $2 and the attorney's fee of $10, and went first to the office of Mr. Harby, another attorney, where they counted the money, and taking Mr. Harby, as a witness to the tender, they went to plaintiff's office, and Mr. Levy told plaintiff that he had come "prepared to take up the mortgage," but that he was instructed by his client to refuse to pay the $2 renewal fee and $10 attorney's fee. Plaintiff replied: "Well, sir; you can't get it." Mr. Levy then said: "I desire to comply with the law and stop interest on this money, and I herewith tender you the amount of your statement, less $12." The tender was refused. It appears from the testimony that Mr. Levy had no authority from the defendant to make the tender, and that she had not instructed him to refuse to pay the renewal fee, or the attorney's fee, although she subsequently ratified his acts. About a week after refusing the tender, and after the summons and complaint had been served, plaintiff went to Mr. Levy's office, and offered to accept it. Mr. Levy then told him that he thought the lien of his mortgage was discharged, but that he would consent for him to have judgment for the debt. Plaintiff testified that he did not refuse the tender arbitrarily or with the view to oppress the defendant, but in good faith, under the honest belief that he had a legal right to collect the fees claimed. As evidence of his good faith and of his desire to save the defendant needless expense, he said that he knew that he could have secured a much larger fee by placing the bond and mortgage in the hands of a brother attorney for collection, when the fee collectible would have been probably not less than $85—10 per cent. of the amount due—but he had the summons and complaint prepared in his own office and signed his own name thereto, as plaintiff's attorney, to save her the greater expense.

The abandonment of the intention originally announced to the plaintiff of asking him to assign the bond and mortgage, and the subsequent tender, made with the statement that it was made to comply with the law and stop interest on the money, but really made with the different intention, afterwards avowed and now claimed for it, of thereby discharging the lien of plaintiff's mortgage, is a piece of finesse which does not commend itself to the favorable consideration of a court of conscience.

[1] The law is that "one designing to make a tender with the purpose of insisting, in a case of refusal, that the mortgage lien is discharged, is bound to act in a straightforward way, and distinctly and fairly make known his true purpose without mystery or ambiguity, and allow reasonable opportunity for intelligent action by the holder of the mortgage. * * * But, if a mortgagee acting in good faith refuses a tender through mistake as to his legal rights, the lien of the mortgage is not discharged." Jones on Mortgages, § 893, p. 955; 27 Cyc. 1406, 1407; 20 A. & E. Enc. L. (2d Ed.) 1062. In Potts v. Plaisted, 30 Mich. 149, the court said: "In view of the serious consequences to the holder of a mortgage, upon the refusal of a tender—consequences which may often amount to the absolute loss of the entire debt—and in view of the strong temptation which must exist to contrive merely colorable or sham tenders, not intended in good faith, we think the evidence should be so full, clear, and satisfactory as to leave no reasonable doubt that the tender was so made, that the holder must have understood it at the time, to be a present, absolute, and unconditional tender, intended to be in full payment and extinguishment of the mortgage, and not dependent upon his first executing a receipt or discharge, or any other contingency." Being under the impression that the purpose of the negotiations with him was to get from him an assignment of the bond and mortgage, and knowing that defendant had no legal right to demand an assignment, plaintiff might have concluded that he was strictly within his legal rights in refusing the tender, even if it should have the effect of stopping interest—the avowed purpose for which it was made—and he might have been satisfied to take his chances as to that consequence, when he might have pursued a different course, if he had been fairly and unequivocally informed of the real purpose of the tender.

[2] The case of Salinas v. Ellis established the rule in this state that refusal of a tender of the mortgage debt discharges the lien of the mortgage, without regard to any equities arising out of the circumstances under which the tender may be made or refused; and, also, that the tender need not be kept good. While the common-law doctrine of mortgages does not prevail in this state, the rule in question grew out of the rigor of that doctrine, and was originally designed to prevent the great injustice and hardship which resulted from it. A rule intended to prevent hardship and injustice should not be applied by a court of equity so that it will work what it was intended to prevent. Consequently, in those jurisdictions where the rule prevails, it has been so limited and modified in its application as to prevent its becoming the means of injustice. Among other limitations, it is universally held that the mortgagee is entitled to reasonable time and opportunity to ascertain if the tender is sufficient and to decide whether he will accept it. He is not required to act without time for consideration. Having had such time and opportunity, if he arbitrarily and without adequate excuse refuses the tender, he may well be said to be the author of his own injury, if he thereby loses his lien. But, where there is an honest difference between mortgagor and mortgagee as to the amount due, the law does not require the mortgagee to act at his peril—at the peril, on the one hand, of giving up part of what he believes, in good faith, to be due him, or, on the other, of losing his lien. Such an application of the rule would be most inequitable and unjust. Questions frequently arise between mortgagee and mortgagor as to the amount of the debt, growing out of the date and application of payments, the method of calculating interest, and many other matters, which will readily suggest themselves, which require judicial determination. They may be, and frequently are, so complex and difficult that they are answered differently by the courts in different jurisdictions, and by able and learned judges in the same jurisdiction. The law is not so unreasonable as to require a mortgagee to decide such questions for himself and at his peril, but gives him the right to have them adjudicated without losing his lien for the amount justly due him.

[3] Therefore, if a mortgagee refuses a tender, not arbitrarily or for a wrongful purpose, but in good faith, under the honest belief, based upon reasonable grounds, that more is due him than has been tendered, refusal of the tender will not operate to discharge his lien. The result of the decisions in the different states is stated in a note to Parker v. Beasley, 116 N. C. 1, 21 S. E. 955, 33 L. R. A. 231, as follows: "In all the states the tender must be absolute and unconditional, and the mortgagee must be given a reasonable time to compute the amount due in order to discharge the lien, and if he refuses the tender in good faith, even though the tender is sufficient, the lien will not be discharged." To the effect that a tender, though in fact sufficient, if refused in good faith, under the honest but mistaken belief that it is insufficient, will not discharge the lien of the mortgage, see Renard v. Clink, 91 Mich. 1, 51 N. W. 692, 30 Am. St. Rep. 458; Union Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Union Mills Plaster Co. (O. C.) 37 Fed. 286, 3 L. R. A. 90; Hartley v. Tatham, 2 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 333; Id., *40 N. Y. 222; Moore v. Norman, 51 Minn. 83, 53 N. W. 809, 18 L. R. A. 359, 38 Am. St. Rep. 526; 27 Cyc. 1408, 1409; 1 Jones on Mortgages (6th Ed.) § 893, p. 955. In Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Mills Plaster Co., supra, the court said: "A tender of the whole sum which was in fact due, having been made, is the mortgage security as to the sum so tendered lost by the refusal to accept? It is the rule undoubtedly that a tender discharges the security. Moynahan v. Moore, 9 Mich. 9, 77 Am. Dec. 468; Caruthers v. Humphrey, 12 Mich. 270; Potts v. Plaisted, 30 Mich. 149. But to produce such serious and heavy consequence the refusal must have been unqualified, and unaccompanied by any bona fide claim of right, which was supposed by the party to justify his refusal. The claim of right may have been one that could not be supported as matter of law; still if it was believed in, and was not wantonly put forward as a cover to a wrong purpose, it is sufficient to prevent the forfeiture of the security."

The question, therefore, is not whether the plaintiff's claim to the renewal and attorney's fee can be sustained in law, but, rather, whether it was made in good faith. The testimony shows that it was. The contention of respondent that the charge of a renewal fee would make the contract usurious, because it already provided for the highest rate of interest allowed by the statute, would be sound, if the renewal fee was charged as interest. But suppose it was made in good faith, as a reasonable charge, for the service of making the necessary and proper entries on the bond and mortgage, and in plaintiff's books, and as a consideration for the extension. Is the mortgagee bound to interrupt or suspend his business to perform these services for the mortgagor without consideration?

[4] Again, it is well settled that an agreement for the extension of time, without consideration, cannot be enforced. The mortgagor may and probably would want the agreement to be of such nature that the mortgagee could not arbitrarily violate it and bring suit before the extension agreed upon had expired; but, to make it such, there must be some consideration for it. These suggestions are thrown out, not for the purpose of intimating any opinion as to the validity of plaintiff's claim for the renewal fees, because that is not put in issue by the appeal, and because, as has been shown, it is not necessary that the mortgagee sustain his contention in the subsequent litigation. All he need show is that it was made in good faith, and that it was not so unreasonable as to induce a contrary conclusion.

[5] It is contrary to public policy to allow an attorney to charge fees for his professional services in his own case; but it cannot be said, under the circumstances of this case, that the plaintiff's charge of a small fee for his services in preparing the summons and complaint, and his contention that he was entitled to collect it, was so unreasonable as necessarily to induce the belief that the claim was not made in good faith. In Barry v. Guild, 126 Ill. 439, 18 N. E. 759, 2 L. R. A. 334, it was held that the plaintiff, a mortgagee, who signed the bill pro se, was entitled to recover a solicitor's fee provided for in the mortgage, in the absence of allegation or proof that in the litigation he was not represented by other counsel. By reference to a number of cases cited in the notes in 27 Cyc. 1785, it will be seen that the claim by an attorney, representing his own interests, to a fee was sustained in the circuit courts; and while it was disallowed on appeal, on the principle above stated, the fact that it was sustained by the circuit courts shows that it cannot be said that it is so unreasonable that it could not have been made in good faith.

We think, also, the weight of authority and reason favors the rule that to have the effect of stopping the running of interest, or of discharging the lien of the mortgage, the tender must be kept good; and, if made the basis of a plea of tender or for affirmative relief, the money must be brought into court. 27 Cyc. 1409; 1 Jones on Mortg. § 893.

To the extent that the views herein announced are inconsistent with the case of Sallnas v. Ellis, that case is overruled.

The judgment of the circuit court is reversed.

JONES, C. J., and GARY, A. J., concur.

WOODS, J. (concurring in the result). While I concur in holding that there has never been any legal tender of the mortgage debt, and that the plaintiff is entitled to a judgment of foreclosure, I am unable to resist the conclusion that the legal propositions laid down in the majority opinion are opposed to the former decisions of this court and contrary to the statute law of the state. The importance of the question seems to require a statement of my reasons for this conclusion.

In this action to foreclose a mortgage executed by the defendant to the plaintiff on real estate in the city of Sumter, the defense set up was discharge of the lien of the mortgage by tender of the amount due thereon. Upon the report of the testimony taken by the master, the circuit court held that the defendant, by her attorney, Mr. Geo. D. Levy, had tendered to the plaintiff the full amount of principal and interest due under the bond, that the plaintiff had refused to accept the sum offered, and had thereby lost the lien of his mortgage.

The facts, as established by the testimony, are these: When the principal sum, together with one year's interest, became due on December 18, 1908, the defendant was evidently unable to pay the debt, and negotiations were begun with the plaintiff, Mr. Reynolds, a member of the Sumter bar, to secure an extension of time for payment. In January, 1909, one W. T. Andrews, in behalf of the defendant, went to Mr. Levy, also an attorney of Sumter, and asked him to assist in negotiating a loan on the property covered by the mortgage. The agreement between Andrews and Mr. Levy, as testified to by the latter, was that Levy should advance the money to pay the debt and take an assignment of the bond and mortgage from Mr. Reynolds as security until a new bond and mortgage could be executed. Accordingly, Mr. Levy, with this end in view, approached the plaintiff on February 3, 1909, and told him that he represented the mortgagor, Margaret O. Price, and wished to take up the mortgage debt. Mr. Reynolds replied that it would be agreeable to him, and on the same day furnished Levy with a statement of the amount claimed, consisting of the principal and interest to date, a "renewal fee" of $2, and an attorney's fee of $10, a total of $688. Upon Mr. Levy's calling the plaintiff's attention to the $12 charge for fees, he replied: "Well, that is my charge. If you want the paper, you will have to pay it." On the next day Mr. Levy, taking with him $656 in currency, and accompanied by Mr. Horace Harby, another attorney, went to Mr. Reynolds' office and offered him this sum, stating that he had come "to take up the mortgage," but had been instructed by his client to refuse to pay the $2 renewal fee and the $10 collection fee. Mr. Reynolds' answer was: "Well, sir; you can't get it." Mr. Levy then said: "Mr. Reynolds, I desire to comply with the law and stop interest on this money, and I herewith tender you the amount of your statement, less the $12, in currency." Mr. Reynolds replied: "I won't take it." It appears from Mr. Levy's own statement that W. H. Price, the husband and agent of the mortgagor, Margaret O. Price, who resided in Columbia, did not come to Sumter or communicate with Levy until February 5th, the day after this occurrence, and that Levy had never been advised by either the defendant or her agent, by letter or otherwise, to refuse to pay the disputed amount of $12. It is admitted by plaintiff's attorneys that he had no legal right to claim the additional amount.

The question is whether there was a legal tender discharging the lien of the mortgage. The law of this state, as established by the decisions of this court, we think is perfectly fair to debtor and creditor and makes it impossible for either to obtain any advantage over the other.

Section 2375 of the Civil Code provides: "Any person who shall have received full payment or satisfaction, or to whom a legal tender shall have been made, of his debts, damages, costs and charges, secured by mortgage of real estate, shall, at the request of the mortgagor, or of his legal representatives, or of any other person being a creditor of said debtor, or a purchaser under him, or having an interest in any estate bound by such mortgage, and on tender of the fees of office for entering such satisfaction, within three months after such request made, enter satisfaction in the proper office, on such mortgage, which shall forever thereafter discharge and satisfy the same."

The first contention of plaintiff's counsel, sustained in the majority opinion, is that even under this statute a tender of the amount really due will not defeat the lien, if there is a bona fide dispute on reasonable grounds as to the amount due. It is true that some decisions in other jurisdictions hold this to be the common-law rule. Crain v. McGoon, 86 Ill. 431, 29 Am. Rep. 37; Renard v. Clink, 91 Mich. 1, 51 N. W. 692, 30 Am. St. Rep. 459; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Mills Plaster Co. (C. C.) 37 Fed. 286, 3 L. R. A. 90. Even if the statute be left out of view, the doctrine seems to me clearly unsound. There can be no dispute that the definition of "tender" is the unconditional offer of a debtor to his creditor of the amount of his debt. This does not mean that the offer must be of an amount beyond reasonable dispute, or of the amount claimed by the creditor, but of the real amount as fixed by the law. It would be a great hardship on the debtor to require that, in order to have any benefit of the law of tender, he must not only prove that he tendered the amount actually due, but must go further and prove that the creditor had no reasonable ground to claim any more. Indeed, the purpose of the entire law of tender is to enable the debtor to relieve himself of interest and costs and to relieve his property of incumbrance by offering to his creditor all that he has any right to claim.

As said by Chancellor Harper in Wistar, Siter & Price v. Robinson, 2 Bail. 274, there is generally a dispute as to the amount when the question of tender is involved. In Baker v. Gasque, 3 Strob. 25, it was held that it is enough for the debtor to offer to perform his contract and tender to the creditor everything that he is entitled to. The case negatives the idea that it is necessary to a good tender that the debtor should offer not only the sum actually due, but all that the creditor bona fide with show of reason, but unjustly, claims to be due.

The other position that the defense of tender in discharge of the lien of a mortgage is unavailing, unless it be pleaded and proved that the tender was kept good, seems to me also unsound. In sustaining this position the court has overruled several cases heretofore decided. At common law there can be no doubt that tender has no greater effect on a debt than to stop interest, unless the tender be kept good by bringing the money into court; while the tender alone of the amount due on a mortgage discharges the lien, although the tender be not kept good. Coke on Littleton, 207a, § 335. Black v. Rose, 14 S. C. 278; Lynch v. Hancock, 14 S. C. 66; Salinas v. Ellis, 26 S. C. 337, 2 S. E. 121; Kortright v. Cady, 21 N. Y. 343, 78 Am. Dec. 145; Security Bank v. Waterman Lodge, 85 Neb. 255, 122 N. W. 992;

Murray v. O'Brien, 56 Wash. 361, 105 Pac. 840, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 998. Numerous authorities to the same effect are collated in the note to Parker v. Beasley (N. C.) 33 L. R. A. 231, and Moynahan v. Moore (Mich.) 77 Am. Dec. 489. It is true that in the case of Walker v. Walker, 17 S. C. 329, the court, by Judge Fraser, without drawing any distinction between the effect of tender on the debt and the lien, lays down the general rule that tender to avail the debtor must not only be made, but must be kept good. This remark, however, is merely a dictum; for the court held that much more was due on the equitable mortgage involved than had been tendered, and that was conclusive that the defense of tender had failed. But, even if on the general proposition the case could be regarded as authority, it cannot be doubted that it was overruled by the later case of Salinas v. Ellis, supra.

But, if there were any doubt as to the law announced by the courts in the cases cited on the two questions we have discussed, it seems to me to be dispelled by the words of the statute above quoted. The tender which entitles the debtor to satisfaction of his mortgage within three months by the terms of the statute is not tender of the amount bona fide claimed, but tender of the real debt, damages, costs, and charges secured by the mortgage. Further, to produce such right of satisfaction, the only requirement with respect to tender is that it shall be made. There is no requirement in the statute that it shall be kept good. It will hardly be denied that tender is one thing, and keeping a tender good is another. When the statute provides that a tender of the amount due shall discharge a mortgage, the courts cannot interpolate the provision that the mortgage shall not be discharged by the tender if there be a bona fide dispute of the amount due, or if the tender be not kept good.

In view of these considerations, it seems to me that the conclusion of the court in the case of Salinas v. Ellis, supra, was thoroughly sound. It is true that, in the course of the discussion, Mr. Justice McGowan does intimate that, even if the tender had been made on condition that the mortgage involved in the dispute should be immediately canceled, nevertheless the mortgage would have been discharged. This proposition is not opposed to other decisions of this court, nor to the provisions of the statute if limited to the cases where there is no dispute as to the amount due on the mortgage. In that case there was no dispute as to the mortgage debt; but the creditor refused to accept the tender and to cancel the mortgage unless the debtor at the same time paid a debt entirely separate from the mortgage debt. So, also, in Spears v. Fields, 72 S. C. 395, 52 S. E. 44, where it was held that the debtor had a right to demand the cancellation of debt. In Sparks v. Green, 85 S. C. 109, 67 S. E. 230, there was no dispute as to the mortgage and note, there was no dispute as to the amount due on one of the papers, and the court held that, if the tender of the amount claimed on that paper had been conditioned on the surrender of that paper only, the demand would not have affected the validity of the tender. This distinction is recognized in Wistar, Siter & Price v. Robinson, 2 Ball. 274.

The case of Salinas v. Ellis has been supposed to lay down a rule very harsh to the creditor, in placing him in a position where he runs the risk of losing his entire debt if he should refuse to accept as full satisfaction that which he believes to be less than his debt. That no such hardship is placed on the creditor, and that the rule laid down in the case is just and fair, is made manifest when the case is viewed in connection with the nature of the act which constitutes tender. The rule, established by unbroken authority, is that an offer to a creditor of the amount due him is not a good legal tender unless it be unconditional. And this rule makes perfectly safe the rights of both creditor and debtor. If the debtor accompanies his offer to pay with the condition that the mortgagee should presently give up his contest by canceling or surrendering his mortgage or by giving a receipt in full, in case of a difference or a dispute as to the amount, it is no tender. The utmost that the debtor can exact in such case is a receipt on account, or a written acknowledgment that so much money has been paid on a certain debt. The creditor, on the other hand, who accepts a legal tender made by the debtor—that is, money offered without condition—incurs no risk whatever with respect to his debt in accepting it. If it be the full amount, then the debtor is free of his debt, and the creditor can recover nothing more; and, if he sues, the costs fall on him. If it be not the full amount, the creditor holds his claim for the remainder, and may sue and recover it, together with his interest and costs.

This rule, established beyond all controversy in this state, has the great advantage of being simple as well as just. The creditor loses no right by accepting any sum unconditionally offered him, and the debtor, in case of a difference or dispute, effects nothing in his own favor if he couples his offer to pay with any condition beyond a request for a receipt showing the amount paid. In Wistar v. Robinson, Chancellor Harper thus states the rule: "It is argued that a party, who offers to pay all that is really due, is entitled to a receipt in full, and, if the creditor refuses to give it, it ought to be at his own risk. I do not think this the fair or reasonable view of the subject. If there be ground of doubt as to the amount really due, the creditor has the right to try the question. It is imposing a hardship on him to say that he must either accept what is offered and give up his claim for more; or refuse the money and lose the use of it, interest and costs, if he should prove to be wrong. If he receives the money, he litigates at his own risk, with respect to costs, and I do not see that he ought to be subjected to greater risk than this. No harm is done to the debtor in such case. If he tenders all that is really due, a receipt on account will discharge. If his right be the clearest possible, he suffers not the slightest hardship or prejudice. A contrary rule would enable debtors to coerce in some degree their creditors to abandon doubtful claims." The rule is reaffirmed in Doty v. Crawford, 39 S. C. 1, 17 S. E. 377, and recognized in Jones on Mortgages, § 900. It is also laid down, in the leading case of Kortright v. Cady, 21 N. Y. 843, 78 Am. Dec. 145, in Moore v. Norman, 52 Minn. 83, 53 N. W. 809, 18 L. R. A. 359, 38 Am. St. Rep. 526, and the numerous authorities cited in those cases and the note to Moynahan v. Moore, 77 Am. Dec. 476.

The only modification in this state of this rule is that provided by the statute above quoted in allowing a mortgagor who has made tender or payment of the amount due to require the mortgagee to enter satisfaction of his mortgage within three months after such request has been made; that period, no doubt, being considered a reasonable time for the mortgagee to investigate fully and determine whether the entire debt has been paid or tendered. Imposing the condition on the debtor, therefore, that to discharge the lien of a mortgage he must tender not only the amount really due, but any additional amount which the creditor may bona fide and with show of reason demand, and that he must in addition keep this tender good, is not only without judicial authority in this state, but is contrary to the express provision of the statute.

Applying to the evidence adduced in this case the principles of tender which I have set out as those which I understand to be established in this state, the conclusion seems irresistible that no tender was made to the mortgagee. Confessedly, Mr. Levy approached Mr. Reynolds for the purpose of paying his own money on the mortgage and taking an assignment of it. In the second interview, when he offered to Mr. Reynolds the real sum due on the mortgage, Levy's proposition, according to his own statement, was "to take up the mortgage." Construing this language in the light of the intention declared in the first interview to have the mortgage assigned to himself, and in the light of the fact that it was his own money that he was offering to the mortgagee, and that he had not a particle of security from the mortgagor, there cannot be the least doubt that the money offered was intended as the consideration of an assignment of the mortgage to be held by Levy as his security, and not as a payment discharging.

the mortgage and leaving Levy with no security. The offer of the money was therefore an offer of the full amount due on the mortgage as the consideration of an assignment, and not a tender of payment on behalf of the mortgagor. Levy had no other lien and no equity which entitled him to demand of Reynolds an assignment of the mortgage, and certainly his offer of money for the purchase of the mortgage was entirely unavailing as evidence of a tender.

On this ground I concur in reversing the judgment of the circuit court.

(88 S. C. 565)

SINGLETARY v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY. RECEIVERS.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 5, 1911.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 320*)—INJURY TO PASSENGERS—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries received in alighting, whether the absence of a stool under the car step and of proper station lights existed and operated concurrently to produce the injury held, under the evidence, a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 320.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 320*)—PASSENGERS—INJURIES—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION.

In a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries in alighting, whether there was a stool on the platform at the place of alighting, and the conductor was there, held a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 320.*]

3. NEGLIGENCE (§ 117*) — CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—PLEADING—NECESSITY.

Contributory negligence should be pleaded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 195-197; Dec. Dig. § 117.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 347*)—PASSENGERS—INJURIES—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries in alighting, evidence held not to show contributory negligence as a matter of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

5. CARRIERS (§ 320*)—PASSENGERS—INJURIES—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION—NEGLIGENCE.

In a railroad passenger's action for injuries in alighting from the train, by failure to have a footstool on the platform and to properly light the premises, the question of defendant's negligence held for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 320.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1064*)—HARMLESS ERROR—SUBMISSION OF CASE.

Even if, under Code Civ. Proc. 1902, § 283, permitting the court to instruct that if the jury render a general verdict they shall find upon particular questions of fact, the special findings of fact should precede the general verdict based thereon, it is not prejudicial error to instruct the jury to find a general verdict, and then to make their special finding, especially where the general verdict and special findings are consistent, even though the special finding was requested with the view of determining the ultimate liability between defendant and another, who might be liable to it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 1064.*]

7. CARRIERS (§ 321*)—PASSENGERS—INJURIES—INSTRUCTIONS—APPLICABILITY TO ISSUES.

Where the only negligence alleged, in a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries in alighting, was the absence of a footstool on the platform and of proper station lights, instructions as to the duty of the conductor to render other assistance to alighting passengers than the placing of the footstool and having proper lights were inapplicable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 1336; Dec. Dig. § 321.*]

8. TRIAL (§ 194*)—PASSENGERS—INJURIES—INSTRUCTIONS—CHARGES ON FACT.

In a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries in alighting, by failure to have a footstool at the steps and proper station lights, the court charged that a railroad company must render reasonable assistance to a female passenger, if feeble or incumbered in alighting, and that when a passenger reasonably needed assistance in alighting the carrier should furnish it, and that if it was obvious that the passenger from any cause, such as sickness or having baggage, needs assistance in alighting the carrier should furnish it, and exercise such additional degree of care as the circumstances require. Held, that the instructions were not erroneous as charging on the facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 466; Dec. Dig. § 194.*]

9. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1068*)—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTIONS.

Where, in a railroad passenger's action for personal injuries in alighting, claimed to have been caused by the absence of a footstool and poor station lights, the special findings show conclusively that the verdict for plaintiff was based upon the negligence alleged in the complaint, an instruction requiring the conductor to render other assistance than the placing of a footstool, etc., could not have prejudiced defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4225-4228; Dec. Dig. § 1068.*]

10. TRIAL (§ 295*)—INSTRUCTIONS — CONSTRUCTION AS A WHOLE.

The correctness of instructions should not be determined from an isolated sentence therein, but they should be considered as a whole.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 703-717; Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

11. TRIAL (§ 199*)—INSTRUCTIONS—QUESTION OF LAW.

An instruction, in a passenger's action for injuries in alighting, claimed to have been caused by the absence of a footstool, that, if it was necessary and proper that the company furnish a stool for the purpose of alighting, it was negligent for failing to do so, did not submit a question of law to the jury, but correctly states the rule of law to be applied by it to the facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 467-470; Dec. Dig. § 199.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Orangeburg County; T. S. Sease, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Alice Singletary against the receivers of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Moss & Lide and Lyles & Lyles, for appellants. Wolfe & Berry and Raysor & Summers, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The complaint alleged that on July 3, 1908, while a passenger on defendant's train from Fairfax, in Barnwell county, to Denmark, in Bamberg county, S. C., she sustained personal injuries, while attempting to alight from the train at her destination, as the result of defendant's negligence in failing to light the station grounds and in failing to provide the stool or bench usually placed for the use of passengers in alighting from the train.

Plaintiff testified: "It was very dark, and I went down the steps to alight from the train spacing my step to reach that stool to alight from the train, and the stool was not there, and I came near precipitating myself and my baggage. The conductor caught me by the arm, and said—I suppose it was the conductor—and said, 'You came near having a bad fall,' and I said, 'Yes, I did; I expected to find the stool there, and it was not there,' and then I started to limp off."

The plaintiff testified as to the extent of her injury, as to spraining her knee and having her leg swollen and somewhat stiff, and as to her pain and suffering therefrom. This occurred at night, about 3:45 a. m., and plaintiff stated that it was cloudy and very dark, and that there was no light, except from the operating room, which intensified the darkness at the landing place, that while the coaches were lighted the blinds were down and no light was cast from the coaches. The plaintiff testified most positively, also, as to the absence of the stool. There was testimony as to the height of the platform step from the ground, and the conductor testified that he always used the stool to help passengers on and off that train. The conductor, however, testified that he did not remember anything about the alleged occurrence.

At request of counsel for defendant, the court directed the jury to make special findings upon the following questions submitted to them: "(1) Is this injury of which plaintiff complains in her complaint the direct and proximate result of a fall from the train at Denmark, on July 3, 1908? (2) If so, was such fall due to any negligence for which the defendants are liable? (3) If so, was such negligence the failure to place a bench or stool? (4) Was such negligence the failure to have adequate and suitable station lights? (5) Or was the injury due to both the failure to provide the bench and to furnish suitable lights? The jury answered, 'Yes,' to the first, second, and fifth questions, and found a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $2,000."

[1] It is manifest from the foregoing statement that the court committed no error in refusing to charge defendant's eighth request to the effect that the undisputed evidence shows that the absence of the bench was not the proximate cause of the injury, and could not be taken into consideration by the jury. It is true the plaintiff testified that she could have alighted safely, if there had been good lights, as she would then have discovered the absence of the bench and governed her steps accordingly; but she also testified in substance that she alighted in the belief that the bench was placed as usual. It was properly left to the jury to say whether the absence of the bench and of proper lights both existed and operated concurrently to produce the injury.

For the same reason there was no error in refusing to charge defendant's tenth request to the effect that the jury should find for the defendant on the ground that there was no evidence that any negligence of defendant caused plaintiff's injury.

[2] Likewise it was not error to refuse the motion for new trial, based upon the claim that the undisputed evidence shows that the stool or bench was placed, and the conductor stationed, at the place where passengers were invited to alight. It is suggested in argument that plaintiff alighted at a place, other than the usual and proper place; but that is a mere conjecture against the positive testimony of the plaintiff.

[3,4] The contention that the motion for new trial should have been granted, because the evidence clearly shows that plaintiff's failure to exercise ordinary care in looking where she was stepping when alighting is without merit. There was no plea of contributory negligence, and if there had been there was nothing in the evidence to show contributory negligence so conclusively as to warrant a court in so finding as matter of law.

[5] Nor is there ground for contention that defendant was conclusively shown to be free from negligence, and that plaintiff's sole negligence caused her injury. This is not the case of one stepping into a dangerous place or in a dangerous way, when the exercise of ordinary care would have shown a safe place or a safe way, but the case of a passenger alighting in the night at the spot where she was invited by the carrier to alight, with every reason to expect all due safe ground for a safe landing. The foregoing remarks require that the first, second, and eighth exceptions be overruled.

[6] In submitting to the jury the question for special finding, the court instructed the jury to find their general verdict, and then the special findings of fact. The third exception complains of this as reversing the proper order. Section 283, 2 Code of Laws, authorizes the jury, in actions for recovery of money only, or specific real property, to render a general or special verdict, and provides that the court "in all cases may instruct them, if they render a general verdict, to find upon the particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing, and may direct a written finding thereon."

It may be true that logically the special findings of fact should precede the general verdict based thereon, but to reverse the order could not be a matter of any consequence or prejudice, especially when the general verdict and the special findings are perfectly consistent. It is suggested by the testimony that the Southern Railway and the Seaboard Air Line Railway are using the station at Denmark under some joint arrangement which requires the Southern Railway to light the station, and that the only object in requesting the special findings was with a view to adjust ultimate liability as between the two railroads. Whatever the reason, there was no prejudicial error in the manner of the submission.

The fourth, fifth, and sixth exceptions charge error in giving the following instructions at plaintiff's request: "(3) A railroad company is bound to render reasonable assistance to a female passenger, if feeble or incumbered with heavy baggage or other impediments, in boarding or alighting from its train. (4) When it is reasonably apparent that a passenger needs assistance in alighting from a train, then it is the duty of the carrier to furnish such assistance." "(6) I further charge you that where it is obvious that a passenger from any cause, such as sickness, infirmity, or being burdened with baggage or other impediment, needs assistance in alighting, then the railroad company is bound to afford such assistance and exercise such additional degree of care, as the circumstances may require."

[7] These instructions, if they were intended to refer to assistance, other than by placing the stool and having light, were foreign to the case made by the pleadings, as the only negligence charged in the complaint was the absence of the stool and of proper station lights, and in other portions of the charge the jury were repeatedly instructed to confine themselves to a consideration of the negligence alleged in the complaint.

[8] Appellant, however, assumes that the instructions were relevant, and claims error in that the instruction was a charge on the facts, and in that a conductor is not bound to render assistance to a passenger, unless the circumstances are such as to give the conductor knowledge of the need of assistance. The charge was clearly not in violation of the rule prohibiting charges in respect to matters of fact, and, construing the charge as a whole, it conformed to appellant's view of the law and to the rule delivered in Horn v. Railway Company, 78 S. C. 70, 58 S. E. 963. The court was particular to impress upon the jury that the whole law could not be stated in a single sentence, and that they must consider his charge as a whole.

[9] Moreover, the special finding of the jury shows conclusively that they based the verdict upon their conclusions with respect to the allegations of negligence in the complaint.

Under the seventh exception, contention is made that the charge: "If the jury conclude from the evidence, applied to the law as charged, that the railroad company is guilty of negligence, that the jury must award the plaintiff such damages as she has sustained"—was erroneous, because it did not confine the inquiry as to negligence to the two matters alleged in the complaint, and the inquiry as to injuries to such as were the proximate result of negligence as alleged.

[10] It is not fair to judge a charge by an isolated sentence. The whole charge shows most conclusively that the jury were instructed not to consider negligence of the defendant, not alleged in the complaint, and that if they found negligence as alleged to give any such damages as they concluded proximately resulted therefrom. The question of punitive damages was withdrawn from the jury.

[11] The ninth and last exception contends that a question of law was submitted by the court to the jury in the following charge: "If it is necessary and proper that the railroad should furnish a stool or step for the purpose of alighting from its trains, then the railroad must not only furnish such appliance, but must see that it is properly and safely placed, and in failing to do this would be guilty of negligence." The exception is without merit. The charge states a correct principle of law, to be applied by the jury to the facts as determined by them.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(155 N. C. 145)

McWHIRTER v. McWHIRTER et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 8, 1911.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1064*)—HARMLESS ERROR — INSTRUCTIONS — CONFLICTING INSTRUCTIONS.

In an administrator's action to sell land, which defendant claimed was held by intestate under a resulting trust, the court instructed that, the deed to intestate being absolute in form, defendant must establish the trust by clear, strong, and convincing proof, but afterwards instructed that the trust could be established by a preponderance of the evidence. Held, that error in the last instruction was reversible, as it could not be determined which of the conflicting instructions the jury followed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4219-4224; Dec. Dig. § 1064.*]

2. TRUSTS (§ 89*)—RESULTING TRUST—ESTABLISHMENT—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

A resulting trust must be established by clear, strong, and convincing evidence, where the deed upon its face conveys the whole title to the grantee absolutely.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 134-137; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

3. TRUSTS (§ 79*)—RESULTING TRUST.

Where land purchased with money of one person is conveyed to another, the grantee is trustee for the person advancing the money to the extent of the amount advanced, without any express agreement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 111, 112; Dec. Dig. § 79.*]

4. TRUSTS (§ 90*)—RESULTING TRUST—ESTABLISHMENT—JURY QUESTION.

It is for the jury to determine whether the evidence to establish a resulting trust is clear, strong, and convincing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. § 138; Dec. Dig. § 90.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Mecklenburg County; Long, Judge.

Action by John McWhirter, administrator, against T. A. McWhirter and others. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Reversed, and new trial ordered.

Maxwell & Keerans, for appellant. McCall & Smith, for appellees.

WALKER, J. This action was brought by the plaintiff, as administrator of W. C. McWhirter, for the purpose of having sold certain land, which is described in the complaint and alleged to belong to his estate, for the payment of debts. The defendant Mrs. R. J. McWhirter answered the complaint, and averred that the land did not belong to W. C. McWhirter, although he had the legal title thereto, for that he had bought the same with her money and for her benefit, and he, therefore, held it in trust for her. An issue was submitted to the jury as to the existence of the alleged trust, express or resulting, and the verdict was in favor of Mrs. McWhirter; the jury finding that W. C. McWhirter had purchased the lands with her funds and held the legal title in trust for her, having taken a deed for the land to himself, instead of to her, as he should have done. Judgment was entered upon the verdict, and the plaintiff brings the case here by appeal, to review the rulings of the court, which he deems erroneous.

[1, 2] It is necessary to discuss but a single question, as there is an error in the charge of the court which entitles the plaintiff to another trial. The court at first charged the jury correctly that as the deed to W. C. McWhirter was absolute in form, and upon its face conveyed the legal and equitable title to him, the defendant must establish the trust by clear, strong, and convincing proof. Lehew v. Hewett, 138 N. C. 6, 50 S. E. 459; Taylor v. Wahab (at this term) 70 S. E. 173; Cobb v. Edwards, 117 N. C. 253, 23 S. E. 247. If the learned judge had stopped there, the charge in this respect would have been free from error; but he afterwards told the jury, when instructing them again upon the quantum of proof required to establish the trust, that a preponderance of the evidence in favor of it is sufficient. These two instructions were conflicting, and the jury are not supposed to be capable of deciding, as between them, which is the correct one; and we must, therefore, assume that they were influenced in coming to a verdict by the erroneous one. Edwards v. Railroad, 132 N. C. 99 (Anno. Ed.) 43 S. E. 585; Cresler v. Asheville, 134 N. C. 314, 46 S. E. 738; Williams v. Haid, 118 N. C. 481, 24 S. E. 217; Tillett v. Railroad, 115 N. C. 662, 20 S. E. 490; Edwards v. Railroad, 129 N. C. 78, 39 S. E. 730; Jones v. Insurance Co., 151 N. C. 56, 65 S. E. 602. For this error a new trial is ordered.

[3] As to the trust, the law is well settled. "Where land is bought with the money of one person and is conveyed to another, the latter is trustee for the lender to the extent of the money so paid, without any express agreement to that effect." Holden v. Strickland, 116 N. C. 185, 21 S. E. 684. But in Clements v. Insurance Co. (at this term) 70 S. E. 1076, we said that there is a strong presumption in favor of the correctness of a deed or other instrument as written and executed, and this fair and reasonable presumption will prevail, unless the party who alleges that it does not express the truth overcomes the presumption, and shows the contrary by satisfactory evidence which is clear, strong, and convincing.

[4] It is for the jury to say whether the evidence is of this character. Lehew v. Hewett, supra. The rule which calls for that kind of evidence in such a case was adopted and was necessary for the safety of titles, and that contracts, deeds, and other solemn instruments should not be lightly set aside or changed. The doctrine, as we have seen, has been extended and applied to a case in which it is attempted to show a parol trust, and thus virtually to nullify the deed, or, if the entire beneficial interest is not claimed, to amend or reform it in some way.

The error of the court as to the quantum of proof is to be found in the defendant's third prayer for instructions, which was given to the jury. The judge modified the first and second prayers in this respect, and stated the correct rule, but inadvertently, we suppose, failed to amend the third prayer. However this is, the jury were left with two conflicting instructions, and may have been misled by them.

There are other errors assigned by the plaintiff; but we will not discuss them, as they may not be presented again.

New trial.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Index

(188 N. C. 63)

UNITYPE CO. v. ASHCRAFT BROS.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. April 26, 1911.)

1. SALES (§ 38*) — PUFFING — FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS.

While expressions of opinion by a seller amounting to mere commendation of his goods, though extravagant, are not generally fraudulent in law, yet assurances of value seriously made and intended to be accepted, and reasonably relied on as statements of fact inducing a contract, may be considered in determining whether the making of a contract has been induced by fraud.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 65-77, 85; Dec. Dig. § 38.*]

2. SALES (§ 53*)—FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Where false statements are made by a seller in the form of opinion or estimates to induce the purchase of goods, and there is doubt as to whether they were intended and received as mere expressions of opinion or as statements of fact to be regarded as material, the question is for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 145-151; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

3. FRAUD (§ 9*)—DECEIT—CAUSE OF ACTION—REQUISITES.

To create a right of action for deceit there must be a statement made by defendant, or for which he is answerable, which is untrue in fact, with knowledge of its falsity, or with reckless and conscious ignorance whether it is true or not, made with intent that plaintiff should act thereon, or in a manner apparently fitted to induce him to act upon it, and plaintiff must act thereon to his injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

4. FRAUD (§ 23*)—FALSE REPRESENTATIONS—OPPORTUNITY FOR ASCERTAINING THE TRUTH.

A false representation of a fact which materially affects the value of a contract, and which is peculiarly within the knowledge of the person making it, and as to which the party deceived, in the exercise of proper vigilance, has no equal opportunity of ascertaining the truth, is actionable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 20-23; Dec. Dig. § 23.*]

5. FRAUD (§ 13*)—DECEIT—KNOWLEDGE—PRESUMPTION.

Where false representations as to the condition and capacity of a typesetting machine sold to defendant were made by the inventor of the machine, it would be presumed that he was fully informed as to its qualities, and that the representations were made with knowledge of their falsity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 3-5; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

6. SALES (§ 347*)—QUALITY—FALSE REPRESENTATIONS.

Defendants being about to purchase certain typesetting machines, plaintiff sent an expert machinist and the inventor of the machine sold to defendants, and he induced defendants to purchase it by representations that the machine sold was an improvement on a former one, did not have its imperfections, was constructed so as not to break type in setting or distributing the same, and also as to the capacity and life of the machine, all of which representations were false. Held, that defendants were entitled to plead such false representations in defense to a suit on installment notes given for the price.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 962-972; Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

7. EVIDENCE (§ 434*) — PAROL EVIDENCE — WRITTEN CONTRACT — FRAUD.

Evidence of false representations urged as a defense to a suit to recover the balance of the purchase price of certain machines under a written contract of sale was not objectionable as tending to vary or contradict the contract; its effect being not to change the contract, but to nullify it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2005-2020; Dec. Dig. § 434.*]

8. CORPORATIONS (§ 423*)—ACTS OF AGENTS—FALSE REPRESENTATIONS.

Where a corporation manufactured and sold typesetting machines, and sent out its expert machinist to sell certain machines to defendant, and he to induce the sale made certain false representations on which defendant relied in purchasing the machines, the corporation was responsible therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1692-1695; Dec. Dig. § 423.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Union County; W. R. Allen, Judge.

Action by the Unitype Company against Ashcraft Bros. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

This action was brought to recover the amount of eight notes, each for $25, given in part payment of the purchase price ($1,750) promised by the defendants to be paid to plaintiff for a Simplex typesetting machine No. 2. C. H. Lombard, an expert machinist and inventor of this machine, was sent by the plaintiffs to close the contract with the defendants, who were printers and publishers of a newspaper at Monroe, N. C. He represented to them, as defendants allege and there was evidence to prove: "(1) That Simplex No. 2 was an improvement on Simplex No. 1, and did not have its imperfections, because of which No. 1 had proved to be a failure and had been taken off the market by the plaintiff. (2) That it was so constructed as not to break type in setting or distributing same. (3) That with the assistance of two men it would set from 5,000 to 6,000 ems per hour, or three times as much as hand composition, and with the same economy as hand composition. (4) That said machine was so constructed that the life of the type used in it was the same as when used in hand composition." Defendants further alleged, and introduced evidence to prove, that the representations, each and all of them, were knowingly false, and were fraudulently made, with the intent and purpose to induce the defendants to buy the machine, and that they were misled thereby, while in the exercise of due care and judgment on their part, and induced to buy the machine; that it was impossible to discover the falsity of the representations and the radical defects in the machine, save by the long use of the same, and that the machine was so defective as to cause them great loss and damage, and that plaintiff, by reason of the fraud and damage, was not entitled to recover any part of his alleged claim. Issues were submitted to the jury, which, with the answers thereto, are as follows:

"(1) Did the defendants execute the contract introduced in evidence? Answer: Yes.

"(2) Did defendants execute the notes introduced in evidence? Answer: Yes.

"(3) Did the plaintiff represent and warrant to the defendants that the machine sold to them was an improvement on machine No. 1, that it would not break the type, and that type could be used with it as economically as by hand? Answer: Yes.

"(4) If so, was such representation and warrant false? Answer: Yes.

"(5) If so, did the plaintiff know it was false? Answer: Yes.

"(6) If so, did defendants rely thereon and were they induced thereby to execute said notes and contracts? Answer: Yes.

"(7) If so, what damage, if any, have defendants sustained thereby? Answer: $1,100, with interest from date of notes."

Judgment was entered upon the verdict that the defendants go without day and recover their costs. Plaintiff, having entered exceptions to the rulings of the court, appealed to this court.

Redwine & Sikes, for appellant. Williams, Lemmond & Love and Adams & Armfield, for appellees.

WALKER, J. [1, 2] There have recently been several cases of this kind before the court, and we have held that while expressions of opinion by a seller, amounting to nothing more than mere commendation of his goods, "puffing" his wares, as it is sometimes called, or extravagant statements as to value or quality or prospects, are not, as a rule, to be regarded as fraudulent in law, yet "when assurances of value are seriously made, and are intended and accepted and reasonably relied upon as statements of fact, inducing a contract, they may be so considered in determining whether there has been a fraud perpetrated; and, though the declarations may be clothed in the form of opinions or estimates, when there is doubt as to whether they were intended and received as mere expressions of opinion or as statements of facts to be regarded as material, the question must be submitted to the jury. 14 A. & E. p. 35; 20 Cyc. p. 124; Morse et al. v. Shaw, 124 Mass. 59." Whitehurst v. Insurance Co., 149 N. C. 273, 62 S. E. 1067; Cash Register Co. v. Townsend, 137 N. C. 652, 50 S. E. 306, 70 L. R. A. 349.

[3] We also held in the Whitehurst Case, approving what is said upon the subject in Pollock on Torts (7th Ed.) 276, that to create a right of action for deceit there must be a statement made by the defendant, or for which he is answerable as principal, and with regard to that statement all the following conditions must concur: (a) It is untrue in fact. (b) The person making the statement, or the person responsible for it, either knows it to be untrue or is culpably ignorant (that is, recklessly and consciously ignorant) whether it be true or not. (c) It is made with the intent that the plaintiff shall act upon it, or in a manner apparently fitted to induce him to act upon it. (d) The plaintiff does act in reliance on the statement in the manner contemplated or manifestly probable, and thereby suffers damage.

[4] What is still more to the point, we further held that the false representation of a fact which materially affects the value of the contract and which is peculiarly within the knowledge of the person making it, and in respect to which the other party, in the exercise of proper vigilance, had not an equal opportunity of ascertaining the truth, is fraudulent. Thus false and misleading representations made by a vendor to a purchaser of matters within his own peculiar knowledge, whereby the purchaser is injured, are a fraud which is actionable. Where facts are not equally known to both sides, a statement of opinion by one who knows the facts best involves very often a statement of a material fact, for he impliedly states that he knows facts which justify his opinion. Smith on the Law of Fraud, § 3; Modlin v. Railroad, 145 N. C. 218, 58 S. E. 1075; Ramsey v. Wallace, 100 N. C. 75, 6 S. E. 638; Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148, 4 Sup. Ct. 360, 28 L. Ed. 382; Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, p. 68. The principles relating to this question are so fully and clearly stated by Justice Hoke in Whitehurst v. Insurance Company, supra, and so applicable to the facts of this case in its every phase, that no other authority would seem necessary to sustain the ruling of the court upon the question of fraud.

[5] It appears in this case that the false statements were made by the inventor of the machine, who must be supposed to have been fully informed as to its good and bad qualities, and who must, therefore, have made the representations knowing them to be false. It was so expressly held in Peebles v. Guano Co., 77 N. C. 233, 24 Am. Rep. 447. The plaintiff in this case is a corporation and the manufacturer of the machine, and therefore what is said in the Peebles Case is clearly pertinent to the facts as presented in the record: "It is said that the jury have not found that the representations were fraudulent, but only that they were false, and without fraud the action cannot be maintained. If we consider the action as for the deceit, this objection would be unanswerable, if the defendant was the seller only, and not also the manufacturer of the article. It is difficult to conceive how a manufacturer of guano can make a representation concerning the substances of which it is composed, which is false, and not also fraudulent, in the sense that it was knowingly false. If his servants employed in the manufacture on any occasion by negligence, or willfully, omitted to put in the valuable ingredients without the knowledge or connivance of the manufacturer, it would free his false representation from immorality, but he must in law be held equally liable for the acts of his servants, and he cannot be held innocent of a moral fraud, if after being informed of the omission he seeks to take advantage of it by demanding for a spurious and worthless article the price of the genuine one. We think that on the facts found by the jury the plaintiff was entitled to damages."

[6] The representation which Lombard, plaintiff's agent, made to defendants, was of such a nature as to mislead them and induce them to purchase a worthless machine instead of the improved and perfect one they had the right to think was being sold to them. It was well adapted to accomplish the purpose for which it was made, namely, to deceive the defendants as to the true quality of the machine. He lauded its merits, if it had any, but willfully concealed its demerits, and, having no knowledge or means of acquiring knowledge themselves, they were easily duped, as any intelligent and careful man would have been, and were practically at his mercy. The representation was substantially like that made in Audit Co. v. Taylor, 152 N. C. 272, 67 S. E. 582, which we held to be sufficient as the basis for a charge of deceit. The representation in our case was as to the mechanical construction of the typesetter, and it proved by actual use to be mechanically defective. It was not a mere expression of opinion or commendation, but the false statement of a hidden or concealed fact, which was material because it was the main inducement to the purchase. Machine Co. v. Feezer, 152 N. C. 516, 67 S. E. 1004; Savings Bank v. Chase, 151 N. C. 108, 65 S. E. 745.

[7] The plaintiff contends that the evidence tended to vary or contradict the written contract of sale, and relies upon Etheridge v. Palin, 72 N. C. 216, but the case does not apply here. It was attempted in Etheridge v. Palin to vary the contract by adding a warranty, but that is very different from an attack upon the contract as having no validity because induced by fraud. It does not change the contract, but nullifies it, and is competent for that purpose, as we held in Tyson v. Jones, 150 N. C. 181, 63 S. E. 734; Whitehurst v. Insurance Co., supra.

[8] The exception that there was no evidence of the agency of Lombard other than his own acts and declarations is not meritorious. He was sent out by the plaintiffs to make the contract and install the machine, and there was other competent and sufficient evidence of his agency. The declarations were made by him dum ferret opus, and his principal must be considered as bound by them, as much so as if it could have made them, and had made them itself. "Qui facit per alium facit per se." In this connection we may revert to the case of Peebles v. Guano Co., supra, where it is said: "There is no reason that occurs to us why a different rule should be applicable to cases of deceit from what applies to other torts. A corporation can only act through its agents, and must be responsible for their acts. It is of the greatest public importance that it should be so. If a manufacturing and trading corporation is not responsible for the false and fraudulent representations of its agents, those who deal with it will be practically without redress, and the corporation can commit fraud with impunity." In Manufacturing Co. v. Davis, 147 N. C. 267, 61 S. E. 54, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 193, the present Chief Justice says: "The plaintiff company is liable for the fraudulent representations of its salesman and agent, which were made to defendant to his injury. This would be so whether the agency of Guy were general or special. Huntley v. Mathias, 90 N. C. 105, 47 Am. Rep. 516; Peebles v. Patapsco Co., 77 N. C. 233, 24 Am. Rep. 447; 1 A. & E. Enc. (2d Ed.) 1143." See, also, Savings Bank v. Chase, supra.

Whether the machine was in fact defective, as alleged by the defendants, was a question for the jury, and so were the other matters involved in the issues. We think the delay of defendants in discovering the defect and the fraud, and in asserting their rights in respect of it, is sufficiently explained by the proof. There was evidence to support the verdict of the jury, and we are not privileged to review their findings. The judgment thereon was correct. McClenahan v. Cotten, 88 N. C. 338.

Upon a careful review of the whole case, no error has been discovered.

No error.

ALLEN, J., did not sit.

CLARK, C. J. (concurring). There was no error in this appeal which was by the plaintiff. This was an action begun before a justice of the peace upon eight notes for $25 each, being part of the purchase price ($1,750) for a typesetting machine. On the trial in the superior court, on appeal, the defendant's counterclaim for damages on account of false representations and breach of warranty in the sale was fully investigated, and the jury found that the defendant was entitled to recover therefor the sum of $1,100 and interest from the day of sale. By reason of several decisions of this court, the defendant could not recover judgment for the difference, $900, and interest thereon. Yet, if the jury had the right to consider the alleged counterclaim and upon the conflicting evidence and under the charge of the court to find that the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant in the sum of $1,100, it is surely illogical to hold that the court could not render judgment for the amount which the jury were authorized to find that the plaintiff owed the defendant. The judge had jurisdiction upon the trial and investigation up to and including the reception of the verdict. By what process of reasoning did his jurisdiction stop there? Besides, it will be an inconvenience and often lead to a denial of justice, if the defendant, as in this case, must practically remit all of his counterclaim above the amount which he owes the plaintiff. In this case, should the plaintiff sue upon his other notes for the balance of the purchase money, the defendant will be debarred from using the other $900 of his counterclaim against such notes.

It is true that we have decisions to that effect. But they are not bottomed on the reason of the thing, and the court should not hesitate to overrule them. The courts are very slow, and justly so, to overrule a decision, however erroneous, when it has become a rule of property. But this is merely a question of practice and procedure. It is true, also, that it has been held that this is a question of jurisdiction and therefore settled by the Constitution. But clearly this is not so. The Constitution does prescribe that the justice of the peace has jurisdiction as to contracts only when the principal sum does not exceed $200. But, when the case has been carried by appeal into the superior court, it is no longer a question of the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace, but of the jurisdiction of the superior court.

When the superior court becomes seized of jurisdiction of a case, it has it fully, with full power of amendment, in all cases. It can make no difference whether the case has been brought into the superior court by the service of summons, or by appeal from the clerk, or by an appeal from a justice of the peace. The summons is nothing but a notice to appear in the superior court. The notice of appeal from the clerk or from the justice of the peace has exactly the same effect. By either process, the superior court is vested with the same jurisdiction. If the defendant had been brought into court by a summons upon a contract for $201, the court could permit an amendment making it any other amount. The same power of amendment exists in all cases because the jurisdiction of the superior court confers the same powers upon the judge, even though the case is brought into its jurisdiction by appeal from the clerk or a justice of the peace. Preconceived opinions and former decisions being set aside, there is nothing in the Constitution which denies power to the judge to enter up judgment for any amount which the jury under his instructions has legally found to be due. The decisions to the contrary should be disregarded.

There was formerly the same inconvenience and difficulty on appeals from the clerk to the superior court. But this has now been cured by the act of 1887, now Revisal 1905, § 614, which provides, "whenever any civil action or special proceedings begun before the clerk of any superior court shall be for any ground whatever, sent to the superior court, before the judge, the judge shall have jurisdiction," and authorizes him "to hear and determine all matters in controversy in such action." The decisions hold that the judge may make any amendment whatever, and that this is so, even though the proceeding before the clerk was a nullity. In re Anderson, 132 N. C. 243, 43 S. E. 649; Railroad v. Stroud, 132 N. C. 416, 43 S. E. 913; Ewbank v. Turner, 134 N. C. 81, 46 S. E. 508. The same rule and for the same reason should obtain on appeals from a justice of the peace. The case being in the superior court that court should be seized of jurisdiction as fully as if the case had originated there, and the judge should have power to make amendments and to try the case even though the proceeding before the justice was a nullity. The decisions to the contrary can be corrected by overruling the erroneous precedents referred to. In the matter of appeals from the clerk to the judge the correction was made by statute, but it could have been made by the court itself overruling its former decisions. If it had been a matter of jurisdiction under the provisions of the Constitution, it could not have been corrected by statute.

In this connection it may not be amiss to call attention to another inadvertence into which former courts whose judges were still under the influence of the former ideas as to procedure have fallen in holding that a justice of the peace and the clerk have no jurisdiction in equity. The Constitution having abolished the distinction between law and equity, such distinction cannot survive in actions before a justice of the peace or a clerk or any other officer any more than in the superior courts. The abolition is broad and general, and applies to all courts. The ruling to the contrary was nothing more than the survival of preconceived opinions. It is true that neither a justice of the peace nor a clerk can issue an injunction or appoint a receiver. The Legislature has thought fit to restrict such powers to the judges of the superior court. That is a matter of practice resting in the discretion of the lawmaking power. But it is a very different matter to hold by judicial enactment that those officers have no jurisdiction where an equity is to be administered. The Constitution having abolished the distinction between law and equity, there is no reason why equitable rights as well as equitable defenses should not be set up in proceedings before a justice of the peace or before the clerk, though the administration of an equitable remedy by an injunction or the appointment of a receiver is not conferred upon those officers. It has been held that a justice has jurisdiction of equitable defenses. Levin v. Gladstein, 142 N. C. 494, 55 S. E. 371, 115 Am. St. Rep. 747. If so, he must have jurisdiction of equitable causes of action.

When by appeal such cases get into the superior court, the judge can and does issue an injunction and appoint receivers if found an appropriate remedy. The same rule should apply to judgments upon a counterclaim or a cause of action or defense set up by amendment in the superior court.

The case being in the superior court by virtue of the appeal, the parties should not be dismissed thence to re-enter the same court by service of summons in order to litigate identically the same matter.

(155 N. C. 432)

STATE v. HOUSTON et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 901*)—TRIAL—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—EXCEPTION—WAIVER.

An exception that the evidence is not sufficient to be submitted to the jury is waived if not taken before verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2124; Dec. Dig. § 901.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1048*)—APPEAL—EXCEPTIONS BELOW—NECESSITY.

An exception cannot be taken in the Supreme Court which was not assigned in the lower court, with an opportunity to the judge to rule upon it, except only for want of jurisdiction in the trial court, or that the complaint or indictment does not state a cause of action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2656; Dec. Dig. § 1048.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1036*)—APPEAL AND ERROR—EXCEPTIONS—WAIVER.

While, if the Attorney General thinks that the interests of justice require that a demurrer to the evidence be entered in a criminal action on appeal, the Supreme Court will permit it, the practice is not to be commended or encouraged.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2641; Dec. Dig. § 1036.*]

4. HOMICIDE (§ 268*)—MANSLAUGHTER—EVIDENCE.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence held sufficient to go to the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Dec. Dig. § 268.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1178*)—APPEAL—ERROR WAIVED ON APPEAL.

Exceptions in the record not set out in appellant's brief will be taken as abandoned by him, under Supreme Court Rule 34.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3011-3013; Dec. Dig. § 1178.*]

6. HOMICIDE (§ 840*)—APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTION.

In a prosecution for murder, it was harmless error for the court to charge the jury as to self-defense, although the defendants did not rely upon such defense, but upon the ground that they did not participate in the killing, as they simply received the benefit of an instruction to which they were not entitled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 715-720; Dec. Dig. § 340.*]

7. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 655*)—CONDUCT OF CASE—EXPRESSIONS OF THE COURT.

In a prosecution for murder, the court stated to the jury that: "It is not at all likely that you can decide the case satisfactorily at this hour of the night. I am weary, and I know you are also. The court therefore recommends that you go to your hotel and rest for the balance of the night. In the morning we can get breakfast at 7. You can, in the morning, when fresh, deliberate on your verdict, before or after breakfast as you choose. Some men can think better on an empty stomach. But you can do as you choose about that, and, if you prefer to deliberate to-night, you can do so. The court will not return to-night. It will adjourn until 9 a. m. to-morrow." Held, that such remarks could not have prejudiced the defendants in any way.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 655.*]

8. HOMICIDE (§ 288*)—INSTRUCTIONS.

The court instructed the jury, in a prosecution for murder, that in passing on the question whether H. slew deceased with a pistol, and whether he did so maliciously, the jury will consider all the evidence relied upon by the state bearing upon the language, acts, and conduct of the deceased and his brother, and the language, acts, and conduct of H. on the night of the homicide leading up to the same, and then instructed the jury to also consider the evidence tending to show the nature of the altercation, and the evidence tending to show the circumstances of the use of the pistol by H., and the evidence relied on by H. and his codefendants, tending to show that he did not engage in the affray and did not shoot the deceased, and did not in any way aid and abet any one else in doing so. Held, that there was no error, as the court was simply telling the jury that they should consider all the evidence in the case, both on the part of the state and on the part of the defendants.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 593; Dec. Dig. § 288.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Mecklenburg County; Long, Judge.

Charlie Houston and others were convicted of manslaughter, and they appeal. No error.

Stewart & McRae and F. M. Redd, for appellants. T. W. Bickett, Atty. Gen., and Geo. L. Jones, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

CLARK, C. J. [1] The defendants Houston, Byers, and Boyd were convicted of manslaughter. In this court they entered a demurrer to the evidence. It is settled by uniform decisions that an exception that the evidence is not sufficient to be submitted to the jury is waived if not taken before verdict. State v. Hart, 116 N. C. 976, 20 S. E. 1014; State v. Kiger, 115 N. C. 746, 20 S. E. 456; State v. Varner, 115 N. C. 744, 20 S. E. 518; State v. Braddy, 104 N. C. 737, 10 S. E. 261; State v. Harris, 120 N. C. 577, 26 S. E. 774, and cases there cited; State v. Wilson, 121 N. C. 650, 28 S. E. 416; State v. Huggins, 126 N. C. 1055, 35 S. E. 606; State v. Williams, 129 N. C. 582, 40 S. E. 84, and numerous cases cited; Clark's Code (3d Ed.) p. 773. The reason is that the object of the law is to try cases on their merits, and, if there is reasonable ground for such motion, it should be made before the case is submitted to the jury in order that the court, if it sees fit, may in its discretion permit the opposite party to introduce further testimony.

[2] Still less can any exception be taken in this court which was not assigned in the lower court with opportunity to the judge to rule upon it, save only: (1) Want of jurisdiction in the court that tried the cause. (2) That the complaint or indictment does not state a cause of action. McKinnon v. Morrison, 104 N. C. 354, 10 S. E. 513; Taylor v. Plummer, 105 N. C. 56, 11 S. E. 266; State v. Craige, 89 N. C. 475, 45 Am. Rep. 698; State v. Hardee, 83 N. C. 619, and numerous other cases cited; Clark's Code (3d Ed.) p. 777.

[3] However, it has been held that, if in this court the Attorney General thinks that the interests of justice require that the demurrer be entered, we will permit it (State v. Wilcox, 118 N. C. 1131, 23 S. E. 928), as we would doubtless do in a civil case if the opposite party should waive the objection. But certainly such practice is not to be commended or encouraged. If there is not sufficient evidence to go to the jury, or other ground of exception, the point should be called to the attention of the judge on the trial below and in apt time, that he may have opportunity to correct the error, if any.

[4] Taking the exception as duly entered, it cannot be sustained. There was evidence that the deceased was killed at a fish fry; that there was drinking and gambling going on and a big crowd present; that a fuss arose because the brother of deceased had stepped on the toes of the prisoner Houston. He apologized to Houston, but was told by his brother to apologize again, and, upon approaching Houston apparently for that purpose, the latter suddenly drew his pistol and fired. The witness added that: "In less than two seconds the other prisoners, Boyd and Byers, joined in. There were 12 or 15 shots in less than two seconds. Immediately after firing ceased, the deceased fell. After the firing the prisoners scattered. All the prisoners had pistols." Another witness testified, "The pistols fired like a cane brake set afire." There was a good deal of other evidence, and there was some conflict in the evidence. But the testimony that Houston fired, and that the other two prisoners "joined in," and that "there were 15-20 shots fired," of itself is sufficient to show that there was evidence proper to go to the jury.

[5] There were 17 exceptions taken on the trial and also assigned as errors on appeal; but in the brief of the prisoners there are only four set out, to wit, exceptions 1, 2, 11, and 17. "Exceptions in the record not set out in appellant's brief will be taken as abandoned by him." Rule 34 of this court (140 N. C. 666, 66 S. E. ix).

[6] The first and second exceptions are that the judge charged the jury as to the principles of law applicable to self-defense. The prisoners contend that this was prejudicial because they did not rely upon self-defense, but upon the ground that they did not participate in the killing. We do not see upon the face of the evidence that any prejudice could have accrued to the prisoners from such charge. If there was no evidence of self-defense, the prisoners simply received the benefit of an instruction to which they were not entitled.

[7] Exception 11 is that the court charged the jury: "It is not at all likely that you can decide the case satisfactorily at this hour of the night. I am weary, and I know you are also. The court therefore recommends that you go to your hotel and rest for the balance of the night. In the morning we can get breakfast at 7. You can, in the morning, when fresh, deliberate on your verdict, before or after breakfast, as you choose. Some men can think better on an empty stomach. But you can do as you choose about that, and, if you prefer to deliberate to-night, you can do so. The court will not return to-night. It will adjourn until 9 a. m. to-morrow." The remarks of the judge are almost identical with those of the judge in State v. Davis, 134 N. C. 633, 46 S. E. 722, in which the court said: "The recommendation of the court to the jury, doubtless given at a late hour and after a long fatiguing session, not to consider the case till next morning, is without merit. It is not shown that it prejudiced the prisoner in any way, nor can we see that it was likely to do so."

[8] The seventeenth, and the last, exception in the prisoner's brief, is that the court instructed the jury: "In passing upon the question whether Houston slew deceased with a pistol, and whether he did so maliciously, the jury will consider all the evidence relied upon by the state bearing upon the language, acts, and conduct of the deceased and his brother, and the language, acts and conduct of Houston on the night of the homicide and leading up to the same." But this instruction, if any fault could be found with it taken alone, must be construed together with the following language immediately following it in the same paragraph, which told the jury to also consider "the evidence tending to show the nature of the altercation, if any, in the yard, and the evidence tending to show the circumstances of the use of the pistol by Houston, if he did use it, also all the evidence relied on by Houston and his codefendants, tending to show that he did not engage in the affray, did not shoot the deceased, and did not in any wise aid and abet any one else in doing so." The court was simply telling the jury that they should consider all the evidence in the case, both that on the part of the state, and that on the part of the defendants, in arriving at their verdict as to whether or not the defendants were guilty.

No error.

(155 N. C. 167)

ROBERTSON & CREED v. MARSHALL.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. ARBITRATION AND AWARD (§ 57*)—SCOPE OF AWARD—LIMITATION BY SUBMISSION.

An award must not extend beyond the scope of the submission, in the absence of waiver by voluntary introduction of testimony or otherwise.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arbitration and Award, Cent. Dig. §§ 280-288; Dec. Dig. § 57.*]

2. ARBITRATION AND AWARD (§ 7*)—AGREEMENTS TO SUBMIT—CONSTRUCTION.

Arbitration being favored, agreements to submit should be given as liberal and comprehensive a construction as the apparent intention of the parties will permit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arbitration and Award, Cent. Dig. § 28; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

3. ARBITRATION AND AWARD (§ 20*)—AGREEMENT TO SUBMIT—SCOPE.

An agreement to submit to arbitration all differences arising from contractual and trade dealings between the parties and all matters incident thereto was sufficient to include an award involved in a trade for a sawmill.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arbitration and Award, Cent. Dig. §§ 87-96; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

4. ARBITRATION AND AWARD (§ 61*)—VALIDITY OF AWARD.

It is essential to a valid award that its performance be possible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arbitration and Award, Cent. Dig. § 310; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

5. ARBITRATION AND AWARD (§ 61*)—VALIDITY OF AWARD.

An award directing a return of notes is not invalid as being impossible of performance because they have been hypothecated, since the pledgor can redeem them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arbitration and Award, Cent. Dig. § 310; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 173*)—PRESENTATION OF GROUNDS—PARTIALITY OF ARBITRATOR.

An award under arbitration will not be disturbed on appeal in an action on a bond securing performance on the ground of partiality of one of the arbitrators, where that question was not presented in the trial court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1079-1120; Dec. Dig. § 173.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Surry County; E. B. Jones, Judge.

Action by Robertson & Creed against S. E. Marshall. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

It appeared: That defendant, S. E. Marshall had sold plaintiff two sawmills, referred to as the big and the little mills, the first at the price of $2,000, and the latter at $1,000; the sale being partly on credit, and the mills, which were then placed on or near the lands of defendant, were to be paid for in lumber sawed by plaintiff at said mills and from certain described lands of defendant. That defendant entered into a contemporaneous agreement to supply the mill with logs up to and including 1907. That, some differences having arisen between the parties, in the effort to adjust the same, defendant agreed to and did take back the little mill, the purchase price being credited, and the parties proceeded in recognition of the contract obligations under conditions produced by the change. Further differences having arisen, among others, the plaintiff complaining that defendant had failed to supply the logs as stipulated, the parties, having entered into a bond of $2,000 to secure performance, agreed to submit all matters in dispute between them to arbitration, and this was done under the following written agreement: "That, whereas, certain matters of difference or disagreement have arisen between the parties to this agreement on account of their contractual and trade relations and their dealings with each other, entered into and had in Surry county, North Carolina, and Patrick county, Virginia, relating to the lumber business and all else incident thereto, and whereas, the parties hereto have agreed, and by these presents they do contract and agree to submit all such matters of disagreement or difference to arbitrators, and have agreed so to do: Now, therefore, the said J. A. Creed and O. L. Robertson, of the first part, and S. E. Marshall of the other part, in consideration of the premises and the sum of one dollar by each party to the other paid, do agree, the party of the one part to the party of the other part, as follows: That all matters of difference and disagreement, growing out of the aforesaid contractual and trade relations and dealings entered into and had by the parties hereto, and all matters incident thereto, shall be submitted to the settlement of three men, in the persons of F. E. Marshall, O. F. Taylor and W. L. Reece, which three persons shall take such evidence and testimony bearing upon all matters of difference between the parties, as above specified, as they may deem proper; and upon such testimony and evidence they shall make their findings and award, which finding and award, when made, shall be final, and shall conclude all parties to this agreement. It is further agreed that the finding and award of a majority of the three arbitrators shall be the award of the body and shall be final." The arbitrators met, pursuant to notice, heard the evidence, and made a full award, deciding, among other things, that the trade about the big mill be also canceled, and that four of the plaintiff's notes outstanding therefor for $750 each be surrendered or no longer considered binding between the parties, stated the account between them on that basis, and awarded plaintiff $350, balance due as the result of all dealings between them. The defendant answered and admitted the agreement to arbitrate and the award, setting aside the mill trade and the balance found to be due, but denied liability on the ground chiefly that the question of the trade for the big mill and the notes given therefor were not matters in dispute, and therefore not embraced within the terms of the submission. Issues were submitted and responded to by the jury:

"(1) Did the agreement to arbitrate embrace the consideration of the sale of the big mill? Answer: Yes.

"(2) Did the arbitrators, in the absence of S. E. Marshall, admit and consider evidence offered by Robertson & Creed? Answer: No.

"(3) In what amount, if anything, are defendants indebted to plaintiffs? Answer: $2,000."

Defendant resisted recovery further, on the ground that it appeared in evidence on the hearing: That two of the notes had, with other collateral, been hypothecated with a bank as security for a loan of $500 and were not then in possession and control of defendant. There was judgment on the verdict for $2,000 to be discharged on payment of $350. Second. That the four notes of plaintiff, outstanding for the mill trade, be surrendered, subject to any right the bank of Mt. Airy may have therein. Defendant excepted and appealed.

W. F. Carter, for appellant. Watson, Buxton & Watson and E. L. Haymore, for appellee.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] As a legal proposition, defendant is correct in contending that an award may not extend beyond the meaning and scope of the submission unless waived by the voluntary introduction of testimony or some other recognized method of enlarging the range of inquiry. Such action on the part of the arbitrators is void, certainly as to the excess, and, if not on matter independent and severable, its effect may be to render the entire award invalid. Stewart v. Cass, 16 Vt. 663, 42 Am. Dec. 534; Cox v. Jagger, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 638, 14 Am. Dec. 522; 3 Cyc. p. 537. The facts in evidence, however, do not bring defendant's cause within the principle.

[2] It is said to be the general rule that courts favor arbitrations and will always put as liberal and comprehensive construction upon agreements to submit as the apparent intention of the parties will allow. 2 A. & E. p. 605. And the authorities here and elsewhere are in support of the statement. Bryan v. Jeffreys, 104 N. C. 242, 10 S. E. 167; Bryant v. Fisher, 85 N. C. 70;

Crawford v. Orr, 84 N. C. 246; Masters v. Gardner, 50 N. C. 298; 6 Lawson's Rights & Remedies, § 3317.

[3] The terms of this submission: "That whereas certain matters of difference or disagreements have arisen between the parties to this agreement on account of their contractual and trade relations and their dealings with each other, entered into and had in Surry county, N. C., and Patrick county, Va., relating to the lumber business and all else incident thereto: * * * Therefore it is agreed that all matters of difference and disagreements growing out of these contractual and trade relations and dealings entered into and had between the parties and all matters incident thereto," shall be submitted, etc.—are very broad and comprehensive, and, if they do not of themselves include this trade about the big mill, as we are inclined to hold, they are without doubt sufficiently definite and certain to constitute a valid submission and to permit of parol evidence to fit them to the subject-matter. Osborne v. Calvert, 88 N. C. 171; Shackelford v. Purket, 9 Ky. 435, 12 Am. Dec. 422; Morse on Arbitration, p. 61. The verdict on the first issue puts this matter beyond question, and there is ample evidence to support the verdict. While defendant testified that there was no dispute between them about the trade for the big mill, the account filed by him before the arbitrators contained the four notes as items of charge in his favor. C. L. Robertson, speaking to this matter, testified: "Sam Marshall came and asked us if we had agreed to take into consideration the mill notes, and everything else. We told him yes, and he said he would then go into the agreement to arbitrate, and we all signed the paper. I was, at the arbitration, sworn, and so were all the others. I told them the agreement with the big mill and notes were to go into arbitration. Marshall was present. The disagreement grew out of our sawing contract. There was but one contract in writing. He discussed the purchase of the mill, then put it into writing." And J. A. Creed said: "When we agreed to arbitrate, we were to bring in the mill notes, and everything, and he agreed to it, and I took it for granted that it covered the whole thing. We put up evidence that the big mill, lumber and all, was to be considered." On the testimony and findings, therefore, we are of opinion, and so hold, that the award was within the scope of the submission, that it was adequate, sufficiently definite and final, and no reason appears for disturbing the result.

[4] Defendant further insists that no recovery should be had because it appeared upon the hearing that two of the notes, directed to be returned, had, with other collateral, been hypothecated with the bank of Mt. Airy and were not therefore in the ownership, possession, or control of the defendants or either of them. Undoubtedly it is one of the requisites of a valid award that its performance be possible; but, in reference to the question presented, this principle is only held to exclude awards impossible of performance in the nature of things, as "a direction to execute a conveyance on or before a day that had already passed," or to do or obtain something which the party had no legal right to procure or enforce," as to "give some third person as surety" on whom the party had no claim. 8 Waite's Actions & Defenses, pp. 527-540.

[5] But in this case, as shown, the notes, with other collateral, were only hypothecated to the bank to secure an indebtedness of $500. The defendant, S. E. Marshall, had the legal right to redeem the notes, and the award, in this instance, is no more impossible than an order to pay a sum of money or do any other lawful act within the power of the defendant. The judgment, as a matter of form, protects the rights of the bank in the two notes; but this, while eminently proper, would seem to be unnecessary, as the bank, not being a party, could assert whatever rights it had, notwithstanding the judgment.

[6] The position that the award should be set aside because one of the witnesses testified to facts which tended to show partiality in one of the arbitrators is without merit. There was evidence in full denial of the statement, and, in the absence of any pleading or application of any kind in the court below, assailing the award on that ground, the question may not be considered here. Bryant v. Fisher, supra.

There is no error, and the judgment below is affirmed.

No error.

(155 N. C. 124)

ALEXANDER v. NORTH CAROLINA SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 81*)—SUBSCRIPTION TO STOCK—CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTION.

A subscription to stock of a corporation may be made on condition that there shall be no liability until the corporation has received actual subscriptions to its capital stock to a specified amount.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 266-284; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

2. WORDS AND PHRASES—"WAIVER."

A "waiver" is an intentional relinquishment of a known right, which may be manifested by word of mouth, or by such acts and conduct as would naturally give rise to an inference that a waiver is intended; and there is no waiver unless the intention to waive is understood by the party to be benefited, or where one party has misled the other, or unless the act relied on ought in equity to estop the party from denying it.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 8, pp. 7375-7381, 7381, 7382.]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1170*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR.

Where a case is tried in substantial accordance with law, technical errors, not prejudicial, do not entitle the losing party to a reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4540-4545; Dec. Dig. § 1170.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Mecklenburg County; Long, Judge.

Action by S. B. Alexander, Jr., against the North Carolina Savings Bank & Trust Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. No error.

T. J. Gold and Stewart & MacRae, for appellant. Thos. W. Alexander, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. This action was brought to recover the amount of a promissory note, $250, which had been given by the plaintiff to the defendant in part payment of the purchase price of stock in the defendant company, and which was afterwards paid to it by the plaintiff, and also to have surrendered for cancellation a note for a like amount given by the plaintiff to the defendant for the balance of the purchase money. Plaintiff had contracted to buy the stock and to pay for it $500; but, as he alleged, upon the express condition that liability on the notes should not accrue until the defendant had received actual subscriptions to its capital stock in the amount of $250,000, and that, if that amount was not subscribed, the notes should be void and of no effect. This condition or stipulation plaintiff alleged was contained in a collateral and contemporaneous written instrument which had been lost, and the parties respectively offered proof as to its contents; the plaintiff's evidence tending to show that there was such a stipulation in the writing, and the defendant's the contrary, and that the reference was not to subscribed, but to authorized, capital stock.

The court submitted issues to the jury, which, with the answers thereto, are as follows:

(1) Was the defendant, the North Carolina Bank & Trust Company, chartered by special act of the Legislature, and, if so, when? Answer: Yes, by articles of association filed with the Secretary of State and certified by him June 9, 1906, as per page 1, Book of Company, filed in evidence; and by Act of Assembly ratified 15th of March, 1907 (Priv. Laws 1907, c. 307); also see section 5 as amended and ratified, Special Session, Acts of General Assembly, January 27, 1908 (Priv. Acts 1908, Sp. Sess., c. 3)—all of which is answered as set out in evidence.

(2) Did the plaintiff subscribe for 10 shares of the capital stock of the par value of $100 each, in the defendant company, and, if so, at what time? Answer: Yes, July, 1906.

(3) Did the plaintiff pay into defendant company $250 upon his subscription to the defendant and in response to the first call? Answer: Yes, on the 5th day of August, 1906.

(4) Did the plaintiff execute note for $250 September 10, 1907, for second installment on subscription? Answer: Yes.

(5) Did the plaintiff subscribe for stock in the defendant company upon the condition and assurance that the subscribed capital stock would be $250,000 and that his subscription thereto was not to be binding upon him unless and until the $250,000 was actually subscribed to the stock of the company? Answer: Yes.

(6) If so, did the plaintiff waive the alleged condition that the subscription to the capital stock should amount to at least $250,000? Answer: No.

(7) Did the defendant company fail to secure the amount of $250,000 of bona fide subscriptions to the capital stock, and did the defendant reduce its capital stock from $250,000, as alleged in the complaint? Answer: Yes.

(8) Did the defendant release bona fide, solvent subscribers to its capital stock without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff, and after the plaintiff had made his subscription to the stock under the conditions set forth in this complaint? Answer: Yes.

(9) Has there been a fundamental change in the charter of incorporation of the defendant company since the date of plaintiff's subscription, without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff? Answer: Yes.

(10) In what amount, if any, is the defendant indebted to the plaintiff? Answer: $250, with interest from August 5, 1906.

The defendant contended that, if there was any such condition annexed to the subscription of the plaintiff, it had been waived by him, in that, after he had learned that the defendant had not secured $250,000 of subscriptions to its stock, he appointed one Williamson, as his proxy, to represent him at a corporate meeting, and that he was so represented. At the meeting the stockholders of the company released certain subscribers, including the plaintiff, so that its stock was greatly reduced. At no time did the subscribed stock equal the stipulated amount, or as much as half of it. The defendant contended that, while he gave the proxy to Williamson, he had been induced, at the time, by correspondence with the defendant, to believe that $250,000 had been subscribed; that the defendant's letter heads so indicated; and that, relying upon this as the truth, he acted as he did. He also contended that there was no sufficient evidence to show that Williamson ever accepted the proxy and attended the meeting. The proxy was found among the papers of the defendant. His honor, Judge Long, submitted the case to the jury upon the issues and conflicting evidence, under a charge exceptionally full, clear, and just. The material issues involved largely matters of fact and were peculiarly fit for the consideration and decision of the jury; there being but few, and they simple propositions of law.

[1] The jury found as facts that the plaintiff's subscription to the stock was conditional, and that there had been no waiver. There was nothing unlawful in the condition. The parties had the right so to contract if they so desired. This is frankly conceded in the defendant's brief. Printing Co. v. McAden, 131 N. C. 183, 42 S. E. 575; Penniman v. Alexander, 111 N. C. 428, 18 S. E. 408; Kelly v. Oliver, 113 N. C. 443, 18 S. E. 698.

[2] Upon the subject of waiver, the law seems to be well settled. "A waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right. Waiver is voluntary and implies an election to dispense with something of value, or forego some advantage which the party waiving it might, at his option, have demanded or insisted upon. A waiver of an agreement or of a condition may either be by word of mouth, or it may arise out of such acts and conduct of the party as would naturally and properly give rise to an inference that he intends to waive the agreement or condition. A waiver takes place where a man dispenses with the performance of something which he has a right to exact. A man may do that not only by saying that he dispenses with it, that he excuses the performance, or he may do it as effectually by conduct which naturally and justly leads the other party to believe that he dispenses with it. There can be no waiver unless so intended by one party and so understood by the other, or one party has so acted as to mislead the other." Herman on Estoppel, § 825. "There can be no waiver unless the person against whom the waiver is claimed had full knowledge of his rights and of facts which will enable him to take effectual action for the enforcement of such rights. No one can acquiesce in a wrong while ignorant that it has been committed, and that the effect of his action will be to confirm it. To constitute a waiver on the part of one party to a contract, of the performance of the contract on the part of the other party, it must be shown that the party alleged to have waived his rights had knowledge of what the other party had done contrary to the terms of the contract and what part thereof he had failed to perform; and, if the contract is affirmed in ignorance of facts by which it is invalidated, there is no waiver of the right to rescind. * * * The burden of proving knowledge is on one who relies upon a waiver, and such knowledge must be plainly made to appear. Certainly a presumption of waiver cannot be rested on a presumption that the right alleged to have been waived was known. The validity of a waiver requires that it shall have been made intentionally and voluntarily. Indeed, voluntary choice is of the essence of waiver, and the view that waiver is a legal result operating upon a certain state of facts, independent of intent, has been declared to be without foundation. It has been held that a waiver never occurs unless intended, or where the act relied on ought in equity to estop the party from denying it." 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law (2d Ed.) p. 1093. The conduct of a party may sometimes be such as to require the courts to treat it as a waiver, ratification, or estoppel, without regard to actual knowledge of the facts; but we have no such case here.

[3] We conclude that the case has been tried in, at least, substantial accordance with the law, and, if any technical error there be, it was not prejudicial, and is not, therefore, such as entitles the defendant to a reversal of the judgment which was entered for the plaintiff upon the verdict. Hulse v. Brantley, 110 N. C. 134, 14 S. E. 510.

No error.

CLARK, C. J., not sitting.

(155 N. C. 148)

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA PEANUT CO. v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. R.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

CARRIERS (§ 105*)—PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 143*)—NEGLIGENT DELAY IN TRANSPORTATION OF FREIGHT—SPECIAL DAMAGES—LIABILITY.

Where a carrier contracted with an agent of an undisclosed principal for the transportation of machinery, without being informed of any special circumstance requiring prompt delivery, but was subsequently notified thereof, and negligently delayed the transportation, it was liable for special damages so arising after it had a reasonable opportunity to avoid further delay after such notice, and the undisclosed principal suing for the negligent delay could prove the special circumstances of which the carrier received notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 452½; Dec. Dig. § 105;* Principal and Agent, Dec. Dig. § 143.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Martin County; Peebles, Judge.

Action by the Virginia-Carolina Peanut Company against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. From a judgment awarding nominal damages, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded.

The action was to recover damages for negligent delay on the part of defendant company in conveying a lot of machinery shipped over defendant's road. On the trial it appeared: That plaintiff was a corporation, doing a general business in manufacturing and cleaning of peanuts, at Williamston, N. C., and that in the latter part of August, 1907, Ell Gurganus, acting for said company, but without having informed the company of this fact, so far as the evidence shows, ordered from the Appomattox Iron Works at Petersburg, Va., a car load of machinery for equipment of plaintiff's mill at Williamston, N. C., and had same shipped over defendant's road, taking a bill of lading therefor in his own name. That the machinery, consisting of peanut shellers, drums, shakers, and shafting, etc., and described, in detail, in the testimony, was mostly of a heavy order, weighing something like 8,000 pounds, and was shipped in an open car. That the distance between the two points by rail was about 140 miles, the time about two or three days, and there was negligent delay in the carriage, the machinery having been shipped August 29th, and not arriving at Williamston until September 16th. It appeared, further, that the Appomattox Iron Works were manufacturers of machinery for this purpose at Petersburg, Va. That the defendant road extends through eastern North Carolina and Virginia, and large quantities of peanuts are annually shipped from this place, Williamston, over defendant's road; that from the time the machinery should have arrived plaintiff had a house rented in which to place it for the purpose of manufacturing and a lot of hands, two of them experts, awaiting to install and operate the same, and these hands were drawing wages and necessarily kept idle for the time of the delay, and that the capital invested in the machinery was about $2,000. On the question of notice, plaintiff offered the following evidence by the witness Gurganus: "On the 1st day of September, 1907, I went to the agent of the Coast Line at Williamston, and notified him of the car load of peanut machinery being shipped from Petersburg, Va., and told him that the company had men hired to install this machinery, and told him that the men were on the ground ready for work, and that the peanut company would hold the Coast Line for damage for all delay. I continued to go to the agent each day till the 19th, when machinery came and repeated the same thing." On objection by defendant, this evidence was excluded and plaintiff excepted. Plaintiff then offered the following evidence by J. G. Staton, president of plaintiff company: "On the 1st of September, 1907, I went to the agent of the defendant company at Williamston, N. C., and notified him that this car load of machinery had been shipped, told him that plaintiff company had men hired to install this machinery, and that company would hold defendant liable for any further delay. I told him that the men were on the ground ready for work, and that the plant was idle. I went to see agent every day from the first to the 15th of September about it, and repeated the same thing to him. I helped agent wire for machinery on the 15th of September, and we located it in Wilmington, N. C." This was likewise excluded, and plaintiff excepted. The court charged the jury that "in no event could they, on the evidence, allow any more than nominal damages." Plaintiff excepted. Verdict awarding nominal damages. Judgment, and plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Martin & Critcher and Winston & Matthews, for appellant. F. S. Spruill and Harry W. Stubbs, for appellee.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). In Harper v. Express Co., 148 N. C. 87-90, 62 S. E. 145, 146, 128 Am. St. Rep. 588, the court in speaking to the question of damages recoverable by reason of wrongful delay in shipment of goods said: "Where the goods shipped have a market value, and there is nothing to indicate the specific purpose for which they were ordered, these damages are usually the difference in the market value of the goods at the time for delivery and that when they were in fact delivered. We have so held in the case of Davidson Development Co. v. Railroad, 147 N. C. 503, 61 S. E. 381; and Lee v. Railroad, 136 N. C. 533, 48 S. E. 809, is to the same effect. When, however, the goods are ordered for a special purpose or for present use in a given way, and these facts are known to the carrier, he is responsible for the damages fairly attributable to the delay and in reference to the purpose or the use indicated. And it is not necessary always that those facts should be mentioned in the negotiations, or in express terms made a part of the contract, but when they are known to the carrier under such circumstances, or they are of such a character that the parties may be fairly supposed to have them in contemplation in making the contract, such special facts become relevant in determining the question of damages"—citing Moore on Carriers, p. 425, and Hutchinson on Carriers, § 1367. The modification of the general rule suggested in this excerpt is not infrequently called for in shipments of machinery, and under several decisions of our court on this subject it may be that the facts now in evidence require that the question of substantial compensatory damages arising by reason of notice or knowledge of special circumstances had at the time of shipment should be submitted to the jury. Lumber Co. v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 23, 65 S. E. 460; Sharpe v. Railroad, 130 N. C. 613, 41 S. E. 799; Rocky Mount Mills v. Railroad, 119 N. C. 693, 25 S. E. 854, 56 Am. St. Rep. 682. Without final determination of this matter, however, we are of opinion that there was error in excluding the testimony offered by plaintiff to show definite notice of special circumstances given after shipment made. True, the bill of lading was issued to the witness Gurganus, but it is also true that he had no personal interest in the goods or their shipment, but was acting at the time for the plaintiff company, "which had purchased the machinery, paid for it, received it upon arrival at Williamston, and there paid the freight charges thereon, and installed same in its plant." From these facts we see no reason why the plaintiff company, as undisclosed principal, did not acquire and hold the general business rights and interests arising from the contract and under the general principles obtaining in case of such a relationship. Nicholson v. Dover, 145 N. C. 20, 58 S. E. 444, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 167; Barham & Owens v. Bell, 112 N. C. 131, 16 S. E. 903; Clark & Skyles on Agency, p. 1155; Tiffany on Agency, pp. 304, 305. In case of Barham v. Bell, supra, it was held: "Where a contract, not under seal, is made with an agent in his own name for an undisclosed principal, either the agent or principal may sue upon it; the defendant, in the latter case, being entitled to be placed in the same position at the time of the disclosure of the real principal as if the agent had been the real contracting party." And in more general terms in Clark & Skyles, supra, it is said: "It is held, therefore, that where a person enters into a simple contract other than a negotiable instrument in his own name, but, in fact, as agent for an undisclosed principal, the principal may come in and sue the third party on the contract, and this is true, not only where the agent disclosed the existence, but not the name of the principal, but also where he does not even disclose the existence of the principal." A principle undoubtedly correct, where, as in this case, neither the personality of the agent nor the claims of the third party against him personally require consideration. This then being the position of the parties, if the nominal consignee and the president of the plaintiff company gave the notice embodied in the proposed evidence, and there was negligent delay on the part of the defendant after being afforded full and reasonable opportunity to correct the wrong, such negligence would constitute a tort, giving the plaintiff right to recover damages on facts as they then appeared. This is one principal difference in the elements of damages obtaining in breach of contract and consequential damages arising from a tort. In the one case damages are recovered as a rule on relevant facts in the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time the contract is made, and in the other, on the facts existent or as they reasonably appeared to the parties at the time of the tort committed. The obligation of diligence imposed by the law on common carriers is continuous during the entire course of the carriage, and a negligent failure to perform such duty, causing special damage to a passenger or shipper of freight, is a tort arising whenever the same occurs. We must not be understood as holding that this consequential damage to arise by reason of special circumstances would commence at the very instant the notice was given to some local agent of the company. The notice, as indicated, must be such as to afford fair and reasonable opportunity to avoid further delay under conditions as they existed when the notice was received, and damages arising thereafter might then be properly estimated under the circumstances which the notice discloses. There is suggestion from authoritative sources that in these continuous contracts of carriage notice of special circumstances given during the course of performance would be relevant as affecting the question of the amount of damages, even when the action could only be considered as one for a breach of contract. This was made by Bramwell Baron in the case of Gee v. Railway (Exch.) 6 H. & N. 211, and referred to in Wood's Mayne on Damages, p. 35. This suggestion was applied by a Texas court in the case of Railway v. Gilbert, and was at first affirmed on appeal, but was afterwards rejected; the Court of Civil Appeals holding on a rehearing that notice given, after contract, of shipment made, should not be allowed to affect the question. Railway v. Gilbert, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 366, 22 S. W. 760, 23 S. W. 820. In a subsequent case, however, and on a different state of facts, the Supreme Court of Texas seems to have modified this ruling. Bourland v. Railroad, 99 Tex. 407, 90 S. W. 483, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1111, 122 Am. St. Rep. 647. The digest of this case as it appears in 122 Am. St. Rep. 647, is in part as follows: "The rule that damages of a special or exceptional kind for delay in the shipment of goods cannot be recovered in the absence of notice to the carrier at the time of making the contract of carriage of the particular conditions under which the damages are likely to arise as the result of the delay is not unbending nor applicable to every case." The question is not free from difficulty, nor is it necessary to determine it on the present appeal, for numerous and well-considered decisions in this jurisdiction are to the effect that for breach of duty in reference to a contract of carriage on the part of common carrier doing business under a corporate franchise one having a right by contract to enforce performance may recover damages for a tort, and have the relief administered and his rights determined as in that class of actions. Williams v. Railroad, 144 N. C. 498-505, 57 S. E. 216, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 191; Purcell v. Railroad, 108 N. C. 414, 12 S. E. 954, 956, 12 L. R. A. 113; Bowers v. Railroad, 107 N. C. 721, 12 S. E. 452. In Purcell's Case and on this question it was held: "(1) It is the duty of a common carrier to provide sufficient means of transportation for all freight and passengers which its business naturally brings to it, and an unusual occasion by which a greater demand upon it is temporarily made will not relieve it of the obligation if, by the use of reasonable foresight, it could have been provided for. (2) A person who has sustained injuries by reason of the failure of a railroad company to provide proper means of transportation or operate its trains as required by the statute (the Code, § 1963) may bring an action on contract or in tort, independent of the statute."

And in Bowers' Case, supra, the ruling was as follows: "(1) A complaint alleging that the defendant, a common carrier, failed to safely carry certain articles of freight according to contract, and 'so negligently and carelessly conducted in regard to the same that it was greatly damaged,' states facts sufficient to constitute a tort." And in Williams' Case, supra, Associate Justice Walker, for the court, said: "It is established, therefore, by the authorities, that when the carrier has wrongfully set the passenger down short of or beyond his destination, or has failed to stop for him, and has thereby imposed upon him the necessity of reaching his destination by other means, the carrier must respond in damages for the wrong, whether the action be brought for the breach of the contract or for the tort, and the rule applies in this case if the plaintiffs presented themselves at the proper place and gave the required signal at such time as enabled the engineer to stop the train for them at the station"—citing 3 Hutchinson on Carriers (3d Ed.) § 1429. There is nothing in the record which confines the plaintiff to recovery for a breach of contract. On the contrary, the entire facts are set out by the pleader, including specific statement of the special damages claimed. And in various sections of the complaint the delay is alleged to have been caused by the carelessness and negligence of the defendant company and its agents. In such case the plaintiff, if the facts justify it, may recover on the theory of tort or contract. Speaking to this question, in Williams' Case, supra, it is further said: "All forms of action are abolished, and we have now but one form for the enforcement of private rights and the redress of private wrongs which is denominated a civil action, and the court gives relief according to the facts alleged and established." In the case of Hansley v. Railroad, 117 N. C. 570, 23 S. E. 443, 32 L. R. A. 543, 53 Am. St. Rep. 600, a case much relied upon by the defendant, the court chiefly considered and passed upon the right of a passenger, on a breach of contract of carriage by a common carrier, to punitive or exemplary damages, and the question involved in this appeal was not directly presented. While the reasoning of the principal opinion in Hansley's Case is favorable to defendant's position, the decision of the court, reaffirming, as it did, Purcell's Case, supra, which was an action in tort for like cause, is in support of our present ruling. The plaintiff then had a right to sue in tort, and, if his cause of action is established, recover damages under circumstances existent at the time the same was committed, and the evidence offered, tending as it did to show conditions affecting the measure of his recovery, should have been received. There is nothing here said which is intended to militate against the ruling of this court in Helms v. Telegraph Company, 143 N. C. 386, 55 S. E. 831, 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 249, 118 Am. St. Rep. 811, and other cases to the same effect, "that a party who is not mentioned in a telegraph message or whose interest therein is not communicated to the company cannot recover substantial damages for mental anguish." In Helms' Case the contract had been finally broken, and the same was no longer in the course of performance, and, the question at issue being the amount of damages for "mental anguish," the personality of the party and his relationship to the subject of the message was of the substance, and must be made to appear. But the principle does not necessarily obtain when redress is sought for breach of a business contract, in which, as stated, the personality of the nominal parties in no way affects the matter. In such case, as heretofore said, the rights of the parties may be shown and dealt with under the ordinary doctrine that an undisclosed principal may avail himself of rights acquired by the contract of his agent.

For the error in rejecting the evidence offered, the plaintiff is entitled to a new trial, and it is so ordered.

New trial.

BROWN, J. (concurring in result). The damages recoverable in an action for a breach of contract are such as naturally flow from the breach and such special and consequential damages as are reasonably presumed to have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was entered into. Williams v. Telegraph Co., 136 N. C. 82, 48 S. E. 559; Johnson v. Railroad, 140 N. C. 574, 53 S. E. 362. And the same rule is applied in actions for the negligent omission in the performance of a public duty growing out of contract. Lee v. Railroad, 136 N. C. 533, 48 S. E. 809, delay in transportation of freight; Williams v. Telegraph Co., 136 N. C. 82, 48 S. E. 559, negligence in transmitting and delivering message; Hansley v. Railroad, 115 N. C. 602, 20 S. E. 528, 32 L. R. A. 543, 44 Am. St. Rep. 474, delay in carrying passenger. But a different rule is applicable when the cause of action is based upon a pure tort resulting in a wrongful invasion of plaintiff's rights of person or property. Then he may recover all such damages, either direct or consequential, as flow naturally and proximately from the trespass. Johnson v. Railroad, supra; Gwaltney v. Timber Co., 115 N. C. 579, 20 S. E. 465; Hatchell v. Kimbrough, 49 N. C. 163. In an action based upon such a tort, reasonable foresight is essential to original liability, but it has no place in determining to what consequences the liability shall attach. Drum v. Miller, 135 N. C. 204, 47 S. E. 421, 65 L. R. A. 890, 102 Am. St. Rep. 528. In Lewark v. Railroad, 137 N. C. 383, 49 S. E. 882, an action for damages resulting from delay in transportation, this court states the rule to be: "When one violates his contract, he is liable for such damages as are caused by the breach, or such damages, as being incidental to the breach as the natural consequence thereof, may have been in contemplation of the parties when the contract was made." In Development Company v. Railroad, 147 N. C. 508, 61 S. E. 381, Mr. Justice Hoke says: "Consequential damages are only recoverable when they are the natural and probable consequences of the carrier's default. And ordinarily such damages are only considered natural and probable when they may be reasonably supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made." This was said in an action for negligent delay in transportation of freight, which was treated by the learned judge as a breach of contract, or tort growing out of contract, as was done in Lee's Case, in Lewark's Case, and numerous other cases decided by this court.

The error in the opinion of the court in the present case I think is in assuming that notice by the plaintiff of the particular damages and subsequent delay created a liability independent of the contract entered into by Gurganus and the defendant. The plaintiff's right to sue is determined upon principles of the law of agency in the creation of a contract, and yet it is suggested by the court that the damages should be assessed upon the basis of a pure tort resulting from the breach of an independent duty owed plaintiff. Plaintiff's rights having grown out of the contract, the amount of damages recoverable should be determined by the rule laid down by this court in actions based upon tort growing out of contract. Applying that rule, plaintiff could only recover such damages as were in the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was entered into. All the cases since Hadley v. Baxendale fix the time the contract was made as the time when notice of special damages should be given. Lee v. Railroad, and cases cited, supra. In Hansley v. Railroad, 115 N. C. 602, 20 S. E. 528, 32 L. R. A. 543, 44 Am. St. Rep. 474, which by express terms overrules Purcell v. Railroad, 108 N. C. 414, 12 S. E. 954, 956, 12 L. R. A. 113, quoted in the court's opinion in this case, it is held that: "The amount recoverable for a breach of contract of carriage is limited to the damage supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties and actually caused by such breach, and the measure of damage is ordinarily not materially different whether the defendant fails to comply with the contract through inability or willfully disregards it." And this is said by the court in that case to be the rule whether the passenger sues for a breach of contract or in tort for the disregard of the duty of the carrier to the public. The result reached in Purcell v. Railroad was subsequently approved in Hansley v. Railroad, 117 N. C. 565, 23 S. E. 443, 32 L. R. A. 543, 53 Am. St. Rep. 600, on petition to rehear. "But the judgment in that case," says the court, "should be put upon the ground that the defendant treated Purcell with indignity and contempt in rushing by the station at faster speed, when there was room for the passengers, or at least when there was evidence tending to show this." The former decision in the Hansley Case that for negligent failure to transport a passenger to his destination the passenger's right of action is ex contractu, and not in tort, is affirmed. In Kennon v. Telegraph Co., 126 N. C. 232, 35 S. E. 468, the present Chief Justice says: "It is immaterial under our system of practice whether the action is in tort for the negligence in the discharge of a public duty, or for breach of contract for prompt delivery, for the recovery in either case is compensation for the injury done the plaintiff, and which was reasonably in contemplation of the parties as the natural result of the breach of the contract or default in discharging the duty undertaken."

The plaintiff's action in this case being based upon breach of contract, or tort growing out of contract, and the damages being restricted to such as were in the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made, the evidence of notice of special damages was properly excluded. Such notice cannot affect the liability of the parties after the performance of the contract has been entered upon. But, if such evidence is admitted, the same result must follow, because it would be the duty of the court to instruct the jury that the notice given was insufficient to charge the defendant with liability for special damages. Where the testimony with regard to notice is uncontradicted and is clear and distinct, the question of the sufficiency of the notice is for the court. Railroad v. Johnson & Fleming, 116 Tenn. 624, 94 S. W. 600. "It may be stated as the well-settled rule," says Hutchinson on Carriers, § 1367, "that special damages can be recovered from the carrier when the transportation has been delayed only where it is shown that the shipper informed the carrier at the time the contract was made of the special circumstances requiring expedition in shipment. And although the carrier may have been notified of such special circumstances in time to have prevented a delay, if such notice was given after the contract of transportation had been entered upon, it would not operate to modify the contract or subject the carrier to liability for special damages arising from a subsequent delay. The fact that the carrier was notified of the special circumstances demanding greater diligence is thus seen to be a crucial one, and that the carrier was so informed must be alleged and proved." "Notice to a carrier after goods have been shipped of circumstances which render special damages a probable result of a delay in their delivery does not operate to modify the original contract so as to render the carrier liable for such damages, even in the event of a subsequent unreasonable delay." Bradley v. Railroad, 94 Wis. 44, 68 N. W. 410. In Illinois Central Railroad v. Johnson & Fleming, 116 Tenn. 624, 94 S. W. 600, Chief Justice Beard of the Supreme Court of Tennessee says: "Notice to the carrier after goods have been shipped of circumstances which render special damages a probable consequence of delay does not affect the original contract so as to render the carrier liable, although the subsequent delay is unreasonable." Upon facts similar to those presented in our case, the Wisconsin court, in Bradley v. Railroad, supra, says: "It is only necessary to apply a familiar principle of law in order to answer these questions. No principle of law is more firmly established than that actual damages for a breach of contract are limited to such as may be reasonably considered to have been in contemplation by the parties at the time of such contract as the probable result of a breach of it. Such principle rules this case, unless there is some exception thereto which will fit the special circumstances found by the jury and expressed in the questions submitted. That was obviously the view the learned circuit judge took of the matter. Hence the necessity for the second question—i. e., Did notice to the appellant of the circumstances which rendered the damages found by the jury a probable result of the late delivery operate to modify the original contract between the parties so as to make the appellant liable in damages? Counsel for the respondent failed to bring to our attention any authority to sustain such exception to the general rule, and, indeed, we are satisfied that none can be found, and that the exigency of this particular case is not sufficiently serious and pressing to warrant us in disturbing the settled law regarding the subject, as counsel suggests that we should do." The case of Bourland v. Railroad, 99 Tex. 407, 90 S. W. 483, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1111, 122 Am. St. Rep. 647, is not authority for the position suggested in the opinion of the court. It is held in that case that, where notice of such circumstances as will occasion special damages is given the carrier after the contract to carry has been performed, and after the goods have accordingly arrived at their destination and are ready to be delivered, he will be liable for such special damages if he negligently fails to make delivery of the goods. In this case the Supreme Court of Texas accepts the decision in Railroad v. Belcher, 89 Tex. 428, 35 S. W. 6, as containing a correct statement of the law upon the question of liability for special damages where notice is given after the contract has been made and transportation commenced, but before the shipment reaches destination. In the Belcher Case it is held that such notice is insufficient to charge the carrier with special damages. Justice Williams, writing the opinion in Bourland v. Railroad, adverts to the suggestion made by Baron Bramwell in Gee v. Railroad, 6 H. & N. 217, referred to in the opinion of the court, and says: "The decisions have been to the contrary in cases of this character which have come to our attention, where it became necessary to pass upon the point." This dictum in the Gee Case is referred to in section 158 of Sedgwick's work on Damages, and, after quoting the language of Baron Bramwell, the author says: "The majority of the court, however, took a different view. And, however reasonable the view may be in itself, another rule is firmly established. Hadley v. Baxendale, as we have seen, held that damages for breach of contract were limited to such as were either normal or communicated at the time of the contract." Sedgwick further says (section 159): "Notice must form the basis of a contract. It appears that the notice must be more than knowledge on the defendant's part of the special circumstances. It must be of such a nature that the contract was to some extent based upon the special circumstances. This appears from the language of the courts in many cases where the subject is discussed." In Smeed v. Poord, Campbell, C. J., doubted whether notice could have any effect in changing the rule of damages, unless it formed part of the contract. In British Columbia S. M. Co. v. Nettleship, Willes, J., said: "The mere fact of knowledge cannot increase the liability. The knowledge must be brought home to the party sought to be charged under such circumstances that he must know that the person he contracts with reasonably believes that he accepts the contract with the special condition attached to it." In Booth v. Spuyten Duyvil R. M. Co., 60 N. Y. 487, Church, C. J., stated, as his opinion, that notice of the object of the contract would not of itself change the measure of damages, "unless it formed the basis of an agreement." Proof of notice, of course, cannot be received to vary the contract, which always speaks for itself. It is merely an attendant circumstance, which, like any other matter in evidence, affects the consequences of the breach and the measure of recovery. Hadley v. Baxendale lays no stress on the question whether the contract was founded upon or influenced by the notice; but the weight of recent authority seems to be in accordance with these opinions, to the effect that the notice must be such as that the contract was in some degree founded on it. The defendant sold goods to rig a vessel, and damages were claimed for loss of use of the vessel. The Supreme Court of Michigan said: "To create such extraordinary liability, there must in every case be something in the terms of the contract, read in the light of the surrounding circumstances, which show an intention on the part of the vendor to assume an enlarged engagement, a wider responsibility than is assumed by the vendor in ordinary contracts for the sale and delivery of merchandise."

In this case the defendant is notified, after entering upon the performance of the contract, that the special damages would result, and was for the first time notified that such damages would result to a company whose name nowhere appears in the contract of shipment, and whose existence was probably unknown to the defendant. If such notice is sufficient to charge the defendant with liability for special damages, then the great case of Hadley v. Baxendale has power only to vex unsuspecting parties who regard its principles as established and enforceable in our courts. The facts are not sufficient to bring this case within the decision of Lumber Company v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 23, 65 S. E. 460, and other cases in this court charging the carrier with special damages for delay upon the ground that the character and circumstances of shipment were sufficient to give notice of such damages. There was nothing about this shipment to give the defendant the slightest intimation that the plaintiff company intended to conduct a peanut-cleaning business, and had employed hands to install and operate the machinery, and had rented a house for that purpose. It was reasonable for the defendant to suppose that Gurganus was receiving the machinery for sale to another party, or that he was receiving it as agent for the shippers. In fact, the purpose for which the shipment was intended was a pure matter of conjecture to the defendant. The Lumber Company Case presented the following combination of facts which this court said was sufficient to go to the jury upon the question of notice of special damages: (1) Plaintiff's name, indicating the character of business engaged in by it; (2) the nature of the article shipped, to wit, an edger, a machine used by sawmills, weighing about 1,000 pounds, indicating an article not of general use, but for particular purpose; (3) that the machine was shipped unboxed, uncovered, and open, and thus observable by the defendant; (4) being a single machine, indicating that it was intended to be used in conjunction with other machinery; (5) the destination being a section in which lumber was manufactured. A mere enumeration of these conditions destroys that case as an authority upon which to submit to the jury the question of special damages in this case.

For wrongful delay in the transportation of goods having a market value the damages usually supposed to be in contemplation of the parties is the difference in value of the goods at the time when they should have been delivered and when they were delivered. In the absence of appreciable loss, the interest on the money invested in the goods themselves for the time of the delay would be the correct measure. Lee v. Railroad, 136 N. C. 533, 48 S. E. 809; Development Company v. Railroad, 147 N. C. 508, 61 S. E. 381. If the jury should find in this case that the plaintiff has been injured by the negligence of the defendant, the measure of damages should be fixed by the principle of these cases. Upon the evidence as now presented, the plaintiff is not entitled to special damages. However, his honor was in error in instructing the jury that the plaintiff could recover only nominal damages, for which there should be a new trial.

WALKER, J., concurs in this opinion.

ALLEN, J. (concurring). A bill of lading is "a written acknowledgment by the common carrier of the receipt of certain goods and an agreement, for a consideration, to transport and to deliver the same at a specified place to a person named or to his order." 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1415. It is then both a receipt and a contract, and there are but two stipulations in the contract: (1) To transport. (2) To deliver. If therefore the shipper must rely upon the written contract and can only sue for breach of its obligations, he is without remedy if his goods are injured, or, if he suffers loss by delay, if they are finally transported and delivered. The law, however, recognizes that railroad property is in some measure devoted to a public use, and is therefore subject to public regulation. As was said by Rodman, J., in Branch v. Railroad, 77 N. C. 349: "They are granted great privileges in consideration of the performance of certain duties to the public. They enjoy a virtual monopoly of the carriage of freights within a certain distance. There could not be a clearer case of private property devoted for a valuable consideration to a public use, and consequently subject to public regulation." "He (the common carrier) exercises a public employment, and has duties to the public to perform." York Mfg. Co. v. Central R. R., 70 U. S. 112, 18 L. Ed. 170. "Property does become clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence and affect the public at large. When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in that use, and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good, to the extent of the interest he has thus created." Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. Ed. 77. "Railroads are common carriers, and owe duties to the public." Joy v. St. Louis R. R., 138 U. S. 51, 11 Sup. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843. These duties to the public are sometimes enforced by statute, and sometimes by the principles of the common law, and they are independent of contract. "The duties of the common carrier as such do, not rest upon contract, but are imposed by law." 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1454. "The liability of a common carrier does not rest in his contract, but is a liability imposed by law. It exists independently of contract, having its foundation in the policy of the law, and it is upon this legal obligation that he is charged as carrier for the loss of property intrusted to him." Merritt v. Earle, 29 N. Y. 122, 86 Am. Dec. 292.

What, then, are the duties imposed by law on a common carrier, who has received freight for transportation? There are two: (1) To carry safely. (2) To deliver within a reasonable time. The extent of the liability as to the first duty is clearly stated by Justice Brown in Hollingsworth v. Skelding, Receiver, 142 N. C. 247, 55 S. E. 212. He quotes the following extract from the opinion of Chief Justice Faircloth in Daniel v. Railroad, 117 N. C. 602, 23 S. E. 327, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485: "Carriers of passengers are insurers as to their passengers, subject to a few reasonable exceptions. They are held to exercise the greatest practicable care, the highest degree of prudence, and the utmost human skill and foresight which has been demonstrated by experience to be practicable. They are so held upon the ground of public policy, reason, and safety to their patrons. The exceptions are the act of God and the public enemy. If these—that is, the act of God or of the public enemy—be the proximate cause of the injury and without any neglect on the part of the carrier, the carrier is not liable. He is against all perils bound to do his utmost to protect and prevent injury to his passengers." And, after holding that this is erroneous as applied to passengers, he says: "The rule laid down by the late Chief Justice applies to the transportation of freight and all classes of inanimate objects only." It should be added that there is no liability on the carrier if the injury is caused by the negligence of the shipper, or is due to the inherent qualities of the articles transported. The second duty imposed by law is to deliver within a reasonable time, and a failure to do so is negligence. Boner v. Steamboat, 46 N. C. 216. The distinction as to the degree of liability in the performance of these duties is clearly stated by Pearson, Chief Justice, in Boner v. Steamboat Co., supra. He says: "It is said that the defendants are common carriers, and in regard to them the law makes an exception, and holds them liable as insurers, except against the act of God and the king's enemies. This is so; and the question is, does their liability as insurers extend to the time of delivery, or is it confined to the safe delivery of the goods? The case before the court when Lord Holt delivered his famous opinion concerned the safe delivery of goods, and nothing was said in regard to the time of delivery; so that our question was left open. The reason for making an exception in regard to the safe delivery of goods in the case of a common carrier is that it was a matter of public policy in order to guard against fraud and conspiracy, by which, through 'con-

vin and collusion,' the carrier might 'contrive to be robbed and divide the spoils.' It is evident that the reason for holding the common carrier liable for the safe delivery of goods has no relevancy or bearing upon the question of his liability as to the time of delivery; so there is no rule of policy making an exception in regard to the time of delivery. That falls under the general rule by which, when both parties are benefited, the bailee is liable for ordinary neglect."

On account of the fact that the goods are in possession of the carrier, and the shipper cannot go with them, and cannot know what the conduct of the carrier is, proof of delay makes out a prima facie case of negligence, and it is incumbent on the carrier to excuse the delay. Parker v. Railroad, 133 N. C. 340, 45 S. E. 658, 63 L. R. A. 827. We have, then, in the case of a shipment of freight, a contract between the shipper and the carrier, by which the carrier has agreed to transport and to deliver, and the law has imposed on the carrier the duty to carry safely, and to deliver within a reasonable time; and our next inquiry is, What is the remedy for a breach of the duty imposed by the law? I think the shipper may at his election sue in contract or in tort. He may treat the obligations imposed by law as entering into and becoming a part of the contract of carriage, in which event his action would be for breach of contract, or he may sue for a breach of the public duty, which has caused him special damage, and his action would be in tort. 4 Elliott on Railroad, § 1693, says: "Where there is a breach both of contract and of duty imposed by law, as in case of loss or injury by a common carrier, the plaintiff may elect to sue either in contract or in tort." We are not without authority in our state that an action for a breach of duty imposed by law is in tort, and that in many cases on the same facts a party may sue in tort or contract. In Robinson v. Threadgill, 35 N. C. 41, and in Bond v. Hilton, 44 N. C. 308, 59 Am. Dec. 552, Nash, Chief Justice, says: "Where the law from a given statement of facts raises an obligation to do a particular act, and there is a breach of that obligation, and a consequential damage, an action on the case founded on the tort is proper." And in Williamson v. Dickens, 27 N. C. 265, although the plaintiff could have sued in contract, he was allowed to sue in tort, and thereby avoid the defense of a discharge in bankruptcy. These cases are approved in Solomon v. Bates, 118 N. C. 315, 24 S. E. 478, 54 Am. St. Rep. 725.

It appears, therefore, that the property of the common carrier is affected with a public use; that out of this grows the power to regulate the performance of its obligations; that in the exercise of this power the law has imposed the duty when it undertakes to transport freight, to carry safely and to deliver within a reasonable time; and that an action to recover damages for a breach of duty imposed by law is in tort. This duty, as it seems to me, does not arise out of contract, but is imposed because the carrier has devoted its property in part to a public use. If so, I think the rule laid down in the opinion of the court is just, and with the limitations imposed no hardship can arise from its application. It requires notice to be given to the carrier, while the goods are in its possession, of the facts out of which the special damages will arise, and gives it a reasonable time, after notice, within which to deliver, and the carrier is not liable for the special damages unless, after notice, and under the conditions then existing, it negligently fails to deliver. The expressions in different opinions opposed to this view are based upon the case of Hadley v. Baxendale, which has been quoted with approval so often that it approaches rashness to question it.

I may suggest, however, that it is stated in the opinion that "the only circumstances here communicated by the plaintiff at the time the contract was made were that the article to be carried was the broken shaft of a mill, and that the plaintiffs were the millers of that mill," while the report of the case, as contained in 5 Eng. Rul. Cases, p. 503, shows that "the plaintiffs' servant told the clerk that the mill was stopped and that the shaft must be sent immediately, and, in answer to the inquiry when the shaft would be taken, the answer was that, if it was sent up by 12 o'clock any day, it would be delivered at Greenwich the following day. On the following day the shaft was taken to the defendant's before noon and at the same time the defendant's clerk was told that a special entry, if required, should be made to hasten delivery." It was held that the notice was not sufficient to charge the defendant with special damage. I doubt if this ruling would be sustained to-day, and think the evidence indicated that there was a contract to deliver within a particular time. The decision was rendered in 1854, within 30 years after the first steam railway began to operate in England, when railroading was in its infancy, and the facilities for transportation were limited, and while the rule, adopted as to damages for breach of contract generally, ought to be adhered to, it is doubtful if it was intended to apply to the contracts of common carriers under the conditions existing to-day. It was then important for the carrier to know, at the time the goods were received, the circumstances requiring diligence, that it might prepare to meet them, while to-day the carrier is required to receive goods tendered for shipment and to be prepared to transport.

The carrier has the goods in its possession, is in the performance of a duty that is continuous until delivery, and has or ought to have the facilities for transporting, and it has the opportunity of avoiding loss by exercising reasonable diligence. It would seem that it ought to be held to this degree of responsibility.

(155 N. C. 173)

WILSON v. LIFE INS. CO. OF VIRGINIA.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 405*)—INSURANCE (§ 143*)—CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 4*)—TESTIMONY AFFECTING POLICIES—ADMISSIBILITY.

Prior parol agreements being merged in a written policy, it cannot be varied or contradicted by testimony of parol inducements and assurances, but the policy may be set aside or corrected for fraud or mutual mistake.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1818-1824; Dec. Dig. § 405; Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 143; Cancellation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 4*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 141*)—JURISDICTION—REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

There can be no reformation of an instrument in an action originating before a justice of the peace.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 660-664; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

3. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 43*)—JURISDICTION—AMOUNT INVOLVED.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction of a suit under a policy involving less than $50, whether the suit be in tort or contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Dec. Dig. § 43.*]

4. INSURANCE (§ 138*)—LIFE POLICIES—FRAUD—EVIDENCE.

Evidence held insufficient to show fraud or deceit, inducing plaintiff to accept life insurance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

Clark, C. J., dissenting in part.

Appeal from Superior Court, Durham County; Daniels, Judge.

Action by J. T. Wilson against Life Insurance Company of Virginia. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Civil action heard on appeal from justice of the peace, before his honor, F. A. Daniels, judge, and a jury, at January term, 1911, of the superior court of Durham county. Evidence was offered, and on the argument before the court and jury, the court having intimated an opinion that on the evidence, if believed, plaintiff was not entitled to recover. In deference to such intimation, plaintiff, duly excepting, submitted to a nonsuit and appealed.

Manning & Everett and Bramham & Brawley, for appellant. Bryant & Brogden, for appellee.

HOKK, J. There was no error in the ruling of the court below. It appeared that on the 21st of March, 1898, plaintiff took out a life insurance policy in defendant company, insuring his life for a period of 10 years on payment of weekly premiums, and at the end of the specified time the policy contained several options looking to a continuance of the same on certain terms, and also one numbered 4 in words as follows: "4. Surrender this policy and draw the entire cash value, that is the legal reserve computed according to the Actuaries' Table of Mortality and four per cent. interest together with the dividend." The premiums having been paid for 10 years, and plaintiff having elected to terminate the contract relation under the fourth option set out above, the claim was calculated, and the amount due under the provisions of said option, $3.62, was duly tendered plaintiff and refused. Plaintiff made the refusal on the ground that the agent of the company, during the bargain about the policy, assured plaintiff that at the end of 10 years he would get back the premium and interest thereon at 4 per cent. and on the trial testified to that effect.

[1] We have said, in Floors v. Insurance Co., 144 N. C. 232-235, 56 S. E. 915, 916: "It is also accepted doctrine that when the parties have bargained together touching a contract of insurance, and reached an agreement, and in carrying out, or in the effort to carry out, the agreement a formal written policy is delivered and accepted, the written policy, while it remains unaltered, will constitute the contract between the parties, and all prior parol agreements will be merged in the written instrument; nor will evidence be received of prior parol inducements and assurances to contradict or vary the written policy while it so stands, as embodying the contract between the parties. Like other written contracts, it may be set aside or corrected for fraud or for mutual mistake; but, until this is done, the written policy is conclusively presumed to express the contract it purports to contain," citing Beach's Laws of Insurance, §§ 495, 496; Vance on Insurance, pp. 163, 348; Insurance Company v. Mowry, 96 U. S. 547, 24 L. Ed. 674. This position being well recognized and the policy not providing for any such settlement or adjustment of plaintiff's claim as he now demands, a recovery could only be had by reformation of the policy, or on the ground of fraud or deceit.

[2] The action having originated in the courts of a justice of the peace, and that court having no equitable jurisdiction in actions for reformation of written instruments, the first ground of relief is not open to plaintiff. Berry v. Henderson, 102 N. C. 525, 9 S. E. 455; Dougherty v. Sprinkle, 88 N. C. 391; Fisher v. Webb, 84 N. C. 44. And the demand can only be maintained, if at all, on the second ground stated, for fraud or deceit.

[3] The suit being for no more than $50, there is no defect of jurisdiction in this aspect of the case, whether the action be considered as one in tort or in contract. Stroud v. Insurance Co., 148 N. C. 54, 61 S. E. 626; Duckworth v. Mull, 143 N. C. 461, 55 S. E. 850.

[4] We concur in the opinion, however, that the evidence is not sufficient to sustain an action for fraud or deceit. Nor would it justify a reformation of the policy on that ground. True, plaintiff testified that defendant's agent assured him in general terms that the investment was as good as a savings bank, and told him that under this clause 4 he would get his premiums back, with interest at 4 per cent., but these representations were not of a kind nor under circumstances that justified plaintiff in relying upon them, nor would they uphold the view that an actionable fraud had been perpetrated. The testimony showed that plaintiff was a man of fair intelligence and some business experience. He could read and write, had worked for about 12 months in a furniture store, taking written leases from purchasers. That he also worked in a grocery store five or six years, selling goods on time and entering up the items of charge in the credit department of the business, and in a hardware store for some months, where he had done the same thing. That plaintiff and defendant's agent, who solicited the insurance, had worked in a mill together, and there was nothing to show any disparity between them, either in intellect or information, and the case, we think, comes clearly under the class considered and passed upon in Cathcart v. Insurance Co., 144 N. C. 623, 57 S. E. 890, and Clements v. Insurance Co., 70 S. E. 1076, at present term.

There is no error, and the judgment of nonsuit is affirmed.

Affirmed.

CLARK, O. J., concurs in the conclusion and in the opinion, but dissents from the following dictum: "The action having originated in the court of a justice of the peace, and that court having no equitable jurisdiction in actions for reformation of written instruments, the first ground of relief is not open to plaintiff."

1. The Constitution, art. 4, § 1, provides: "The distinctions between actions at law and suits in equity, and the forms of all such actions and suits, shall be abolished; and there shall be in this state but one form of action, for the enforcement or protection of private rights or the redress of private wrongs which shall be denominated a civil action." This provision is not restricted to the superior court, but applies to all courts. Section 27 of the same article confers upon justices of the peace jurisdiction "of civil actions founded on contract, wherein the sum demanded does not exceed $200; and wherein the title to real estate shall not be in controversy," and authorizes the General Assembly to confer upon justices of the peace "jurisdiction of other civil actions, wherein the value of the property in controversy does not exceed $50." Accordingly the Legislature has conferred such additional jurisdiction in Revisal 1905, § 1420. The phrase "property in controversy" has been held to mean the value of the injury complained of, or the amount in controversy. Malloy v. Fayetteville, 122 N. C. 480, 29 S. E. 880; Watson v. Farmer, 141 N. C. 453, 54 S. E. 419; Duckworth v. Mull, 143 N. C. 464, 55 S. E. 850. There is nothing, therefore, in either the Constitution or the statute which denies a justice of the peace jurisdiction of a controversy within the amounts above specified, on the ground that an action is equitable in its nature; the only exception is "when title to real estate is in controversy." It has been held that the justice has jurisdiction of an equitable defense within the prescribed amount. Levin v. Gladstein, 142 N. C. 494, 55 S. E. 871, 115 Am. St. Rep. 747. If so, he necessarily has jurisdiction of an equitable cause of action within that limit.

2. Even if the justice of the peace did not have jurisdiction, the case having gone by appeal to the superior court, that court has full jurisdiction. This has been held in McMillan v. Reeves, 102 N. C. 559, 9 S. E. 452, wherein Smith, C. J., says: "It is not material to inquire into the question of the jurisdiction invoked in initiating the suit, since any objection on this account is obviated by the removal of the cause into the superior court, presided over by the judge, and the submission of all the parties thereto to his exercise of jurisdiction in the premises, as fully as if the action had there originated. As, then, the court, assuming to exercise jurisdiction, did possess it fully over the subject-matter of the action and the parties to it, in which all the heirs were represented by counsel, the cause was, in a strict sense, coram iudice, on the rulings in West v. Kittrell, 8 N. C. 493, and Boing v. Railroad, 87 N. C. 360, even without the aid of Laws 1887, c. 276, which sustains the jurisdiction thus acquired and authorized the court 'to proceed and hear and determine all matters in controversy in such action,' etc.

In Boing v. Railroad, 87 N. C. 363, it was held that, where the subject-matter of the action is one of which the court of the justice of the peace and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction, and the case is carried by appeal to the superior court, the latter will retain jurisdiction though the proceedings in the court of the justice of the peace are void for irregularity. This can only be sustained upon the ground that the case, having gotten into the superior court, which has jurisdiction, the notice of appeal has the same efficacy as the service of a summons in bringing the defendant into court. In West v. Kittrell, 8 N. C. 493, it was held that where a case was irregularly carried to the superior court from the county court the former will retain jurisdiction, if it was a subject-matter of which the superior court would have had jurisdiction, if the action had originally been instituted in that court.

The jurisdiction of the superior court is fixed by the Constitution, and, when it has jurisdiction of the controversy, upon the above authorities it has it fully, regardless whether the cause originated in a lower court or in the superior court. The doctrine of derivative jurisdiction (though sustained by some cases), whereby a case brought by appeal to that court is dismissed, in order that it may straightway be brought back by a summons, has no foundation in the Constitution or in reason.

No plaintiff will subject himself to the delay and expense of bringing an action before a justice of the peace when the jurisdiction is clearly in the superior court. A judgment by a justice of the peace, when he has no jurisdiction, would be a nullity. But when, by appeal, the cause gets into the superior court, nothing is to be gained by dismissing the action. The trial should proceed. If amendments, or the defense set up, bring in matters of which the justice would not have had jurisdiction, that is no reason why the superior court, having obtained jurisdiction by the notice of appeal, should not proceed with the trial.

(155 N. C. 136)

FANN v. NORTH CAROLINA R. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 8, 1911.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 475*)—PROBATE DECREES—CONCLUSIVENESS.

Decrees of probate courts within their power and under jurisdiction of the subject-matter properly acquired are generally immune from collateral attack.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 910; Dec. Dig. § 475.*]

2. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 29*)—APPOINTMENT—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

Under Revisal 1905, § 16, providing for appointment of an administrator in the county where decedent died domiciled, or in the county where, being a nonresident, he left assets, etc., where such facts appear an appointment is immune from collateral attack.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 178-182; Dec. Dig. § 29.*]

3. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 12*)—JURISDICTION—"ASSETS."

A cause of action for decedent's negligent death constitutes "assets," within Revisal 1905, § 16, providing for administration in the county where decedent left assets.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. § 24; Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 1, pp. 556-559.]

4. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 28*)—APPOINTMENT—VALIDITY—EVIDENCE.

The legality of plaintiff administrator's appointment being questioned on the ground of his nonresidence, it was proper to admit evidence that he went to another state merely to work, intending to return and retain his residence within the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 350*)—DEATH OF PEDESTRIAN AT CROSSING—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—JURY QUESTION.

Whether a pedestrian killed at a street crossing was guilty of contributory negligence held, under the evidence, a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1172-1192; Dec. Dig. § 350.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Guilford County; Daniels, Judge.

Action by R. W. Fann, administrator, against the North Carolina Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

It appeared in evidence: That on or about June 5, 1909, in the city of Greensboro, the intestate was endeavoring to cross the tracks of defendant company on Jackson street, a public crossing, and was run down and killed by a train going north at the time, being the third or fourth section of No. 36, a train hauling fruit to northern markets. There were four tracks at the crossing. The first two, in the direction from which intestate was approaching, being side tracks parallel to the main tracks, the third was the main track for trains going north, and the fourth was the main track for trains going south over defendant's road. That when intestate entered on crossing there was a long freight train of 30 or 40 cars going south which was passing over the crossing at the time, and intestate, having passed over the second side track, was standing on the main track leading north waiting for the freight going south to pass. When in that position, the third or fourth section of a fruit train going north ran over and killed intestate. There was evidence tending to show: That the freight train going south was making quite a noise at the time. That the tracks curved just below the crossing, and the approach from the south was to some extent obscured by the freight train, and that no signal was given by the fruit train which killed intestate except several signal whistles when in 25 steps of deceased and the train was running between 20 or 30 miles an hour, faster than ordinary freight trains. Plaintiff introduced two ordinances of the city of Greensboro in force at the time, as follows:

"Sec. 282. That it shall be unlawful for any railroad company to allow two engines or trains to cross any street in the city at the same time from opposite directions."

"Sec. 284. That no railroad engine or train shall run or be propelled at a greater speed than twenty miles an hour within the city."

An issue having been raised as to the legality of plaintiff's appointment on the ground that he was a nonresident, there was testimony offered on part of plaintiff to the effect: That he had gone to Durham in the panic of 1898 to get work temporarily and continued in his employment there as cotton mill hand until November, 1910. That he could not at the time obtain employment in Greensboro, and his purpose in going to Danville was to stay there temporarily and try and save some money to return to the bakery business in Greensboro. That he left his property in Greensboro with a sister who lived there, a bureau, trunk, chairs, and some clothing, and a horse and wagon he had used in the bakery business and was keeping for like work, when he was able to resume that business, and that during his stay in Danville he returned to Greensboro every month or so, remaining at one time as much as six weeks. On this point plaintiff testified: "Q. Did you go to Virginia with intent to leave North Carolina, or did you consider that your home? A. This was my home. I just went there to work. My intention was to come back. My home was here. Q. Did you go once with the intention of permanently remaining there? A. Just temporarily remaining there. Q. For what purpose? A. To save up money to start a bakery." This evidence as to the intent of plaintiff in leaving North Carolina and of his purpose to return was admitted over defendant's objection, and exception was duly noted. There was evidence on part of defendant company that the train was only going 10 or 12 miles an hour at the time, and all the usual signals were given; that the vision of engineer was obscured by reason of a curve below the crossing, and as soon as intestate was discovered on the track, additional signals were given, emergency brakes applied, and everything possible done to avoid the result. The court under a full, clear, and comprehensive charge submitted the questions raised to the jury under the following issues: "(1) Is the plaintiff the legally appointed and duly qualified administrator of M. E. Fann? A. Yes. (2) Was the intestate of the plaintiff killed by the negligence of the lessee of the defendant as alleged in the complaint? A. Yes. (3) Did the intestate of the plaintiff contribute to his death by his own negligence? A. Yes. (4) What damage is the plaintiff entitled to recover? A. $1,000." Judgment on the verdict for plaintiff. Defendant excepted and appealed, assigning for error: (1) The ruling of the court on the question of evidence. (2) That the plaintiff should have been nonsuited for the reason chiefly that on the evidence intestate was guilty of contributory negligence.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Wilson & Ferguson, for appellant. John A. Barringer and T. H. Calvert, for appellee.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). (1) In this day and time, and under our present system, it seems to be generally conceded that the decrees of probate courts, when acting within the scope of their power, should be considered and dealt with as orders and decrees of courts of general jurisdiction, and, where jurisdiction over the subject-matter of inquiry has been properly acquired, that these orders and decrees are not as a rule subject to collateral attack.

[2] The facts very generally recognized as jurisdictional are stated, in section 16 of our Revisal of 1905, to be that there must be a decedent; that he died domiciled in the county of the clerk where the application is made; or that, having his domicile out of this state, he died out of the state, leaving assets in such county, or assets have thereafter come into such county. Having his domicile out of the state, he died in the county of such clerk, leaving assets anywhere in the state, or assets have thereafter come into the state, and where, on application for letters of administration, these facts appear of record, the question of the qualifications of the court's appointee cannot be collaterally assailed. That is one of the very questions referred to him for decision. But, if a person has been selected contrary to the prevailing rules of law, the error must be corrected by proceedings instituted directly for the purpose. Hall v. Railroad, 146 N. C. 345, 59 S. E. 879; Springer v. Shavender, 118 N. C. 33, 23 S. E. 976, 54 Am. St. Rep. 708; Lyle v. Siler, 103 N. C. 261, 9 S. E. 491; Moore & Wife v. Eure, 101 N. C. 11, 7 S. E. 471, 9 Am. St. Rep. 17; London v. Railroad, 88 N. C. 535. And, generally on the subject, see Dobler v. Strober, 9 N. D. 104, 81 N. W. 37, with notes by the editor in 81 Am. St. Rep. 530-535; Croswell on Exrs. & Adms. p. 19 et seq.

[3] In the present case the deceased was killed in Greensboro, N. C., where he resided at the time and had his domicile. The cause of action is of itself assets. Vance v. Railroad, 138 N. C. 460, 50 S. E. 860. The clerk, therefore, had full jurisdiction, and the letters of administration are not open to collateral attack in the present suit.

[4] The question, however, can hardly be said to arise in this case, for, under a correct charge, the jury have determined that the plaintiff was a resident of the state at the time of the appointment, and the evidence offered by plaintiff, and objected to by defendant, was clearly competent and directly relevant to the issue. Watson v. Railroad, 152 N. C. 215, 67 S. E. 502. Approaching then the principal question presented, this court, in Cooper's Case, 140 N. C. 209-221, 52 S. E. 932, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391, endeavored to lay down certain general rules, applicable to injuries at railroad crossings as fair deductions from the cases considered, as follows: "(1) That a traveler on the highway, before crossing a railroad track, as a general rule, is required to look and listen to ascertain whether a train is approaching; and the mere omission of the trainmen to give the ordinary or statutory signals will not relieve him of this duty. (2) That, where the view is unobstructed, a traveler, who attempts to cross a railroad track under ordinary and usual conditions without first looking, when, by doing so, he could note the approach of a train in time to save himself by reasonable effort, is guilty of contributory negligence. (3) That, where the view is obstructed, a traveler may ordinarily rely upon his sense of hearing, and if he does listen, and is induced to enter on a public crossing because of the negligent failure of the company to give the ordinary signals, this will usually be attributed to the failure of the company to warn the traveler of the danger, and not imputed to him for contributory negligence. (4) There may be certain qualifying facts and conditions which so complicate the question of contributory negligence that it becomes one for the jury, even though there has been a failure to look or listen, and a traveler may, in exceptional instances, be relieved of these duties altogether, as when gates are open or signals given by watchmen, and the traveler enters on the crossing reasonably relying upon the assurance of safety."

And in another case at same term (Sherill v. Railroad, 140 N. C. 252, 52 S. E. 940), applying the general rule contained in the fourth clause, it was held, among other things: "Negligence having first been established, facts and attendant circumstances may so qualify the obligation to look and listen, as to require the question of contributory negligence to be submitted to the jury, and in some instances the obligation to look and listen may be altogether removed." And the facts relevant are very correctly embodied in the fourth headnote of the case as follows: "Where the testimony of the plaintiff tended to show that his duties by contract with the defendant railroad caused him to work almost on the track and frequently required him to be upon and across it, and that while so engaged he was run over by an engine of the defendant which had come upon him without any warning, and which warning was required both by the custom and rules of the railroad, and that he had just looked and listened both ways, and the way then appeared clear, held, that a nonsuit was erroneous, as the question of contributory negligence must be left to the jury to determine under proper instructions." And the court, in its opinion, said, quoting with approval from Rodrian's Case, 125 N. Y. 526, 26 N. E. 741: "But, where one has looked for an approaching train, it would not necessarily follow as a rule of law that he was remediless because he did not look at the precise place and time, when and where looking would have been of the most advantage."

Again, in Morrow's Case, 146 N. C. 14, 59 S. E. 158, the same principle was illustrated and applied; the court holding that: "It was not error in the court below, upon the question of contributory negligence, to refuse a motion as of nonsuit at the close of the evidence which tended to show that, after waiting at the railroad crossing on a public highway for about five minutes for defendant's freight train to pass, the plaintiff immediately proceeded to cross and was struck by a passenger train of defendant going in an opposite direction to the freight; that he did not know of the approach of the passenger train, though he had looked and listened; that the noise and smoke of the freight train, and it being a dark and cloudy evening, about 5 o'clock, with fog arising from the ground, covered with sleet, and there being no lights, prevented him from so doing."

And like ruling was made in Inman Case, 149 N. C. 123, 62 S. E. 878; the relevant facts and decision in the case being stated as follows: "(1) While a person who had voluntarily gone on a railroad track, where the view was unobstructed, and failed to look and listen, cannot recover damages for an injury which would have been avoided by his having done so, when the view is obstructed or other existing facts tend to complicate the matter, the question of contributory negligence may become one for the jury. (2) Where there is evidence tending to show that a railroad company has several tracks in a city over which the plaintiff usually went in going to and from his work, and that the view of the track was obstructed, and plaintiff, having listened for warnings he had a right to expect, but which were not given, stepped upon the track and was injured by defendant's train running at a much greater speed than allowed by the town ordinance, and which was unsafe at the place indicated, the question of contributory negligence is properly submitted to the jury. (3) When there is a town ordinance preventing the blowing of locomotive whistles within its limits, the bell should be rung continuously where there are numerous tracks and the conditions and surroundings render the running of trains continuously dangerous to pedestrians."

The same position has been reaffirmed and applied in a case at the present term (Wolfe v. Railroad, 70 S. E. 993) where a watchman at a crossing was run on and injured by an engine which gave no signal of its approach, and when the watchman crossing the track in the discharge of his duty was engaged at the time in the effort to prevent a traveler from entering on the crossing under circumstances threatening danger.

[6] An application of these authorities, and the principle upon which they rest, to the facts presented, fully support the ruling of his honor below, in submitting the question of contributory negligence to the jury. There was evidence on the part of plaintiff tending to show that at the precise time of the injury the plaintiff was standing on the main track for trains going north, while a

'ong freight train of defendant company was on the crossing moving south on the main track just ahead. A curve in the track, just below, shut off the view to some extent. The noise of the passing train naturally interfered with his hearing when he was run over and killed by the third or fourth section of a fast freight train carrying fruit to the northern markets. There was evidence, also, on part of plaintiff, to the effect that this train was running at a greater rate of speed than allowed by the city ordinance, and that no signals of its approach were given except the warning emergency blow when in 25 steps of intestate, and an ordinance of the city was also in evidence which prohibited this train from entering on the crossing at all till the freight train on the other track had crossed. In Inman's Case, supra, and in Norton's Case, 122 N. C. 910, 29 S. E. 886, the existence of a city ordinance, directly bearing on the occurrence, was allowed much weight; the principle being stated in Norton's Case as follows: "A city ordinance regulating the rate of speed of a railway train is presumably passed for the protection of the people, and, when within the scope of the city charter, has the force and effect of law, and a citizen has the right to expect that it will be respected and obeyed by the railroad corporation." Under the circumstances, as stated, or evidence tending to establish them, the court, imposing on the intestate the duty of looking and listening for the approach of trains, and being careful for his own safety, properly submitted the question of contributory negligence to the jury, and there is no error in the charge giving the defendant any just ground of complaint. We have quoted from our decisions bearing on the question more at length by reason of a suggestion in argument, at the present term, that they had been modified to some extent by later decisions of the court, notably in Mitchell's Case, 153 N. C. 116, 68 S. E. 1059, and Coleman's Case, 153 N. C. 322, 69 S. E. 251; but there is no conflict in the cases when properly understood and as applied to the facts existent in each, nor any change in the controlling principle.

Adverting again to the third rule deduced from the authorities in Cooper's Case: "That, where the view is obstructed, a traveler may ordinarily rely upon his sense of hearing, and if he does listen, and is induced to enter upon a public crossing because of the negligent failure of the company to give the ordinary signals, this will usually be attributed to the failure of the company to warn the traveler of the danger, and not imputed to him for contributory negligence"—the same was applied in Inman's Case, where a pedestrian, endeavoring to pass over a public crossing, and having his view obstructed, stopped and listened for the accustomed signals, and, hearing none, he stepped from behind the car onto the track and was run on and struck by an engine which approached without any warning and at a greater rate of speed than allowed by the ordinance. There were "two steps" for him to walk after he came into view of the track, but the case was submitted to the jury, and in Norton's Case, supra, the fact appeared that the claimant had his view obstructed, had listened for signals, and was mislead to his injury, by the failure of defendant to give same. It may be well to note that these claimants were not relieved of the duty of properly caring for their own safety as a matter of law; but it was held only that the facts and circumstances attendant on the occurrence so qualified the obligation that the question of their conduct and its effect should be submitted to the jury. In Coleman's Case the plaintiff testified, it is true, that he had both looked and listened; but he also stated that he had done this some distance back from the crossing when his view was obstructed by houses, and that he afterwards, in daylight, drove in a buggy, "with curtains buttoned down both sides and back," across an open space of 65 feet, affording full opportunity to see down the track the way the train came for three-fourths of a mile and without any effort to further look or listen. There was nothing here to qualify his obligation to care for his own safety, and recovery was denied. In Mitchell's Case a deaf and dumb negro, familiar with the schedule of the trains and a frequenter of the train yards, walking towards the crossing just at the time when a train was scheduled to arrive, stopped where a box car obstructed his view, and then, with 11 feet of clear space, walked across the track, without looking, just as a fast train approached, and was struck and permanently injured. There was no evidence that plaintiff had listened for signals, and, hearing none, was induced to venture on the track for that reason, as in Inman's Case and in Norton's Case. There was nothing shown to distract his attention. The fact that he was deaf should have quickened his obligation to look more carefully, as held in Foy v. Winston, 126 N. C. 381, 35 S. E. 609. Nothing appeared therefore to qualify the duty upon him to care for his own safety, and recovery in that case was also denied.

As heretofore stated, on the precise facts existent in each case, our decisions are in accord on the question presented, and, when properly applied, sustain the trial judge in submitting the question of contributory negligence to the jury.

There is no error, and the judgment is therefore affirmed.

No error.

(155 N. C. 123)

COSTNER et al. v. PIEDMONT COTTON MILLS CO.

Appeal of RUDISILL et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 565*)—INSOLVENCY—CLAIMS—ESTATE—RECOVERY BY TRUSTEE.

A trustee who wrongfully loaned trust funds to a corporation of which he was secretary, treasurer, and director may, on the insolvency of the corporation, recover his pro rata part in the distribution of the corporate assets as against the objection that he and the corporation were in pari delicto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 565.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 566*)—INSOLVENCY—PRIORITY OF CLAIMS—TRUST ESTATE—RECOVERY BY TRUSTEE.

A trustee who wrongfully loaned trust funds to a borrower who became insolvent was not entitled to any priority in payment over other creditors, though a part of the money was used by the insolvent in the payment of employes, but more than 60 days before the receivership, and in the purchase of coal sold by the receiver, and in the purchase of cotton spun into yarn.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 566.*]

3. SUBROGATION (§ 36*)—RIGHT TO SUBROGATION.

The right of subrogation does not exist in favor of a trust fund which has been wrongfully loaned by a trustee, and the loan is a simple debt, the right of subrogation being merely to subject the indebtedness due the trustee by reason of such loan in priority to other creditors of the trustee, and not to other creditors of the borrower.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Subrogation, Dec. Dig. § 36.*]

4. TRUSTS (§ 356*)—MANAGEMENT OF TRUST ESTATE—RIGHT TO FOLLOW TRUST FUNDS.

The right of a cestui que trust to follow a trust fund exists only against the trustee or a third person who has the fund, or against property bought therewith, and not as against other creditors of one who has borrowed the trust fund and spent it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Dec. Dig. § 356.*]

5. SUBROGATION (§ 23*)—RIGHT TO SUBROGATION.

Where a trustee who wrongfully loaned trust funds to a borrower who became insolvent paid his cestui que trust, he had no right of subrogation because of any application made by the borrower of the funds borrowed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Subrogation, Dec. Dig. § 23.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lincoln County; Long, Judge.

Proceedings by A. Costner for the allowance of a claim against the Piedmont Cotton Mills Company, an insolvent corporation. From an order allowing the claim, declared a first lien, L. N. Rudisill and another appeal. Reversed and remanded.

A. L. Quickel, for appellants. W. C. Feinster, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. The plaintiff Costner loaned a trust fund of $1,400, which he held as trustee in bankruptcy, to the defendant Cotton Mills Company, of which he was secretary and treasurer and one of the directors. The defendant company, becoming insolvent, was placed in the hands of a receiver, and this is an appeal from the order of the judge allowing the motion made by Costner to have the aforesaid sum of $1,400 declared a first lien to be paid out of the first proceeds in the hands of a receiver.

[1] The investment of the trust fund by Costner was without the order of any court, and was wrongful. We cannot, however, assent to the proposition of the appellants that the plaintiff is entitled to recover nothing on account of said debt on the ground that the parties are in pari delicto. The defendant company received and used the money, and it would be against good conscience to hold that it is not liable for the debt. It borrowed the money, and used it. It does not lie in its mouth to say now that the plaintiff had no right to lend it. Wetmore v. Porter, 92 N. Y. 76; Zimmerman v. Kinkle, 108 N. Y. 287, 15 N. E. 407.

[2] On the other hand, we know of no principle upon which the plaintiff who has made a wrongful conversion of trust funds is entitled to any priority in payment over other creditors of an insolvent debtor. This would be to reward him, and save him harmless on account of his own wrongdoing. It is true that part of the money was used by the defendant company in the payment of employes, and a part in the purchase of coal which was sold by the receiver and part in the purchase of cotton, which has been spun up into yarn. The payment of the employes was made more than 60 days prior to the receivership, and, even if there was a right to subrogation, there would be no priority as to that.

[3] But, independent of that, the right of subrogation does not exist in behalf of a trust fund which has been wrongfully loaned by a trustee. It is simply a debt, which, like any other debt, must share in the distribution in its class, and the cestuis que trustent must look to the trustee to recover any shortage in the fund, resulting from his wrongful act. Neither they nor the trustee can recoup themselves for any loss at the expense of the other creditors of the debtor.

[4] The right of a cestui que trust to follow the fund exists only against the trustee himself or a third party who has the fund in hand or against the property bought therewith. This right does not exist as against the other creditors of one who has borrowed the money and spent it. The right of subrogation is to subject the indebtedness due the trustee by reason of such loan in priority to other creditors of the trustee, but not in priority to other creditors of the debtor to the trustee.

[5] Here there can be no subrogation for the further reason that Costner has paid his cestui que trust, and he has no right of subrogation because of any application made by the borrower of the money borrowed. His rights certainly are no greater nor less than if he had loaned his own money.

The judgment must be set aside and the cause remanded, to the end that the debt may receive its pro rata part in the distribution of the assets of the insolvent corporation in the debts of its class.

Reversed.

(155 N. C. 90)

SHELL v. ROSEMAN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. FRAUD (§ 20*)—MISREPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING QUANTITY OF LAND—RIGHT TO RELY.

A purchaser's right to recover damages for misrepresentation that land contained 108 or 113 acres, whereas it actually contained 88 acres only, is not defeated because the corners afterwards embraced in his deed were shown to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 17, 18; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

2. FRAUD (§ 20*)—RELIANCE ON MISREPRESENTATIONS.

A purchaser of land must guard himself against defects in title, quantity, and incumbrances, and has no legal remedy for damages where he is guilty of negligent failure to use proper diligence; but he can recover for misrepresentations by the vendor, reasonably relied upon and constituting a material inducement to the contract, if they were false to the vendor's knowledge, and caused damage to the purchaser, and if the latter has acted with ordinary prudence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 17, 18; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

3. FRAUD (§ 58*)—MISREPRESENTATIONS—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

Evidence held to show fraudulent misrepresentations by a vendor concerning quantity of land sold, affording an action for deceit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 55-59; Dec. Dig. § 58.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 588*)—INCONSISTENT STATEMENTS OF WITNESS—EFFECT.

A witness' statement on cross-examination as to a material matter, conflicting with his testimony in chief, affects his credibility only, and does not warrant withdrawing his evidence from the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2437; Dec. Dig. § 588.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Iredell County; J. S. Adams, Judge.

Action by John W. Shell against M. I. Roseman. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

This action is to recover damages for a false and fraudulent representation in the sale of land. The plaintiff offered evidence tending to prove that the defendant agreed to sell him a tract of land, known as the Christopher place, for $1,600; that the plaintiff did not know the boundaries of this place; that the defendant agreed to have the land surveyed before the deed was made, and to notify the plaintiff, so that he might be present at the survey; that the defendant had the survey made, but gave no notice to the plaintiff, and by the survey there were found to be 108 acres in the Christopher place, and 88 acres in the deed afterwards made to the plaintiff; that after the survey the defendant showed the plaintiff certain corners and made the deed according to those corners, but did not show him the corners of the Christopher place, and did not tell him the corners shown to him did not embrace all of the place; that the defendant made the deed to the plaintiff, conveying 88 acres, a part of the Christopher place, and in the deed it is stated that it contains 113 acres, more or less, and the plaintiff swears: "I relied on his (defendant's) statement that Exhibit B (the deed made by defendant to the plaintiff) covered all of the Christopher place, and that there were 113 acres." There was evidence to the contrary, and on cross-examination the plaintiff said: "I don't remember his telling me how many acres there were in the tract. It was always spoken of as 113 acres." There was a verdict for the plaintiff, and the defendant appealed.

W. D. Turner and J. B. Armfield, for appellant.

ALLEN, J. The defendant relies on two exceptions in his brief, and all others are waived. The first is to the refusal to charge that there was no evidence of fraud, and the second to failure to give the following instruction: "If the jury shall find from the greater weight of the evidence that, before the delivery and acceptance of the deed from the defendant to plaintiff, the plaintiff and the defendant went upon and looked over the land, and that the defendant, Roseman, showed to the plaintiff, Shell, the lines and corners of the land defendant was selling to plaintiff, and if the jury shall further find from the greater weight of evidence that the deed delivered by Roseman and accepted by Shell covered the identical lands so pointed out, and the identical lines and boundaries, and that the plaintiff, at the time of the acceptance of the deed, knew what land he was getting and the lines and boundaries thereof, then you will answer the second issue, 'No.'"

The two exceptions present only one question for determination, and that is, was there evidence of fraud, fit to be submitted to the jury, because the facts embodied in the prayer, the basis of the second exception, were admitted by the plaintiff; and if, upon these facts, in connection with the other evidence, the jury must answer the second issue, "No," there was no evidence of fraud.

[1] We do not think it was necessarily fatal to the action of the plaintiff that the corners, afterwards embraced in his deed, were shown to him. If he had known the corners of the Christopher place, or had known there were only 88 acres within the lines shown him, he could not recover, because under these circumstances he would not have been misled, but there is no evidence that he knew either of these facts, and it is requiring too much to say he must have known the acreage, because he saw the land and knew the corners. Men of intelligence and experience will frequently differ widely as to the acreage of a tract of land of 70 or 100 acres, and the fact that one has relied on a statement that there are 108 or 113 acres in a tract of land containing 88 acres, which he has seen, would not be such negligence as would defeat a recovery, particularly when it is known that the party making the statement has recently surveyed the land.

[2] The rule applicable to cases like this is clearly and accurately stated in Etheridge v. Vernoy, 70 N. C. 724: "In all contracts for the sale of land, it is the duty of the purchaser to guard himself against defects of title, quantity, incumbrances, and the like; and if he fails to do so it is his own folly, for the law will not afford him a remedy for the consequences of his own negligence. 'If, however, representations are made by the bargainor, which may reasonably be relied upon by the purchaser, and they constitute a material inducement to the contract, and are false within the knowledge of the party making them, and cause loss and damage to the party relying on them, and he has acted with ordinary prudence in the matter, he is entitled to relief.' And this is approved in Woodbury v. Evans, 122 N. C. 781, 30 S. E. 2. The same principle is stated in reference to a contract for the sale of land in Foy v. Houghton, 85 N. C. 173: "If there is, on the part of the vendor, any act of actual misrepresentation, or other positive fraud, in regard to a material matter reasonably relied on, then the purchaser will be afforded relief; otherwise the maxim, caveat emptor, applies in all courts, whether of law or equity."

[3] Guided by these authorities—and many others could be cited to the same effect—we think there was evidence of fraud, and it was for the jury to determine its reliability. There was evidence that the defendant agreed to sell the plaintiff the Christopher place for $1,600, and represented that there was an acreage of 113 acres; that he agreed to have the land surveyed and to notify the plaintiff of the time of the survey that he might be present; that he had the land surveyed, but did not notify the plaintiff, who was not present at the survey; that by the survey he found that the Christopher place contained 108 acres, and that he ran a line cutting off about 20 acres of the place; that he took the plaintiff to the land and showed him the corners of the land which he embraced in his deed, containing 88 acres; that he represented these corners to be the corners of the Christopher place, and did not tell the plaintiff he had cut off the 20 acres; that after the survey he represented that there were 113 acres in the deed he made to the plaintiff, and that he so stated in the deed; that the plaintiff did not know the boundaries of the Christopher place, nor the acreage of the place conveyed to him, and relied on the representations of the defendant.

If so, there was evidence that the defendant made a representation which was material to the contract, false within his knowledge, and relied on by the plaintiff, and, we think, not unreasonably relied on, in view of the fact that the plaintiff knew that the land had been surveyed for the defendant a few days before. We attach much importance to this circumstance, as it distinguishes this case from those where there is an expression of opinion or a statement as to the supposed acreage of a tract of land, which could not be made the basis of a cause of action.

[4] We are not inadvertent to the fact that the plaintiff made a statement on cross-examination, as to a material matter, apparently in conflict with his evidence when examined in chief, but this affected his credibility only, and did not justify withdrawing his evidence from the jury. Ward v. Manf. Co., 123 N. C. 252, 31 S. E. 495. The meaning of the statement itself, as presented in the record, is not very clear, when considered in connection with the sentence which follows. If the plaintiff had stated on cross-examination that he was mistaken as to some statement made on his first examination and wished to correct it, the rule would be different.

We find no error.

No error.

(155 N. C. 96)

BONEY v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 8, 1911.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 535*)—OPINION EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

In the absence of a finding or admission that a witness is an expert, the exclusion of a question calling for expert testimony is not erroneous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 535.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 493*)—OPINION EVIDENCE—SUBJECT-MATTER.

The opinion of a witness, not present at the accident, is not admissible as to what would have been the effect on a train and its engineer, if the latter had only been running six miles an hour, as the rules required, when he ran into a train slowly moving in the same direction, trying to get out of the way; the jury being equally competent to form an opinion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2275-2282; Dec. Dig. § 493.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1032*)—EXCLUSION OF EVIDENCE—HARMLESS ERROR—BURDEN OF SHOWING PREJUDICE.

A party complaining of the exclusion of a question asked a witness, who does not show what the answer would have been, does not show that he was prejudiced.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4047-4051; Dec. Dig. § 1032.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 296*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for the death of a servant, requested instructions submitting the issue of decedent's contributory negligence are properly modified by adding the element that the acts relied on to show contributory negligence must have been the proximate cause of his death.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1193; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

5. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 265, 291*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—ISSUES.

A defendant, in an action for the negligent death of a servant, must allege and prove contributory negligence, and instructions on contributory negligence must be limited to the facts alleged and proved.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 908; Dec. Dig. §§ 265, 291.*]

6. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 289*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Where, in an action for the death of an engineer running into an open switch and colliding with a train, the evidence showed that the injury occurred in the nighttime in a railroad yard where there were numerous tracks and switches, the question whether by ordinary care decedent could have discovered the absence of any light at the switch in time to have stopped the train was for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 289.*]

7. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 235, 289*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

An engineer running a first-class train on the main line may assume that the company has performed its duty to have the track through its yard clear five minutes before his train reaches a switch, and that if there is danger that it will turn the danger signal to the main line, and whether such an engineer, who knew that there was no light at a switch and who did not stop his train, failed to exercise ordinary care was for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 710-722; Dec. Dig. §§ 235, 289.*]

8. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 247, 248*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

The negligence of a servant is not contributory negligence defeating an action for his death, unless it is the cause of the accident, or unless the master, by the exercise of ordinary care, could not have averted the injury, notwithstanding the servant's negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 795-804; Dec. Dig. §§ 247, 248.*]

9. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 296*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Where, in an action for the death of an engineer running into an open switch and colliding with another train, the evidence showed that an employé was at the switch and knew it was broken when decedent's train was 1¼ miles distant, that the employé could have turned the red light to the main line, but failed to do so, and that if he had done so the engineer could have seen it in time to have stopped the train, that the rules of the company provided that the absence of any light at a switch was notice of danger, and that the engineer did not regard the rule, there was evidence from which it might be found that the negligent failure to display the red light at the switch was the proximate cause of the accident, notwithstanding the absence of any light at the switch, and the engineer's failure to consider that fact as notice of danger, warranting the refusal of an instruction that disobedience of the rules would be contributory negligence barring recovery for the engineer's death.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

10. NEGLIGENCE (§ 122*)—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—BURDEN OF PROOF.

One relying on contributory negligence must prove facts from which the inference of contributory negligence must be drawn by men of ordinary reason.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 221-223, 229-234; Dec. Dig. § 122.*]

11. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 285*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE—RES IPSA LOQUITUR.

That an engineer ran his train into an open switch and collided with another train raised a presumption of actionable negligence of the railway company, justifying the jury in finding negligence, unless satisfied on all the evidence that there was none.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 881; Dec. Dig. § 265.*]

12. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 296*)—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—LAST CLEAR CHANCE.

Where there is evidence that, though a servant was negligent, the master had the last clear chance to avoid injuring him, the court must submit the issue of liability of the master on the theory of last clear chance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1194; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

13. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 278*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for the death of an engineer running his train into an open switch and colliding with another train, evidence held to justify a finding of actionable negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 278.*]

14. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 281*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for the death of an engineer running his train into an open switch and colliding with another train, evidence held to justify a finding that the light giving notice of safety was turned on the main line, so that the rule of the company that the absence of a light must be regarded as a stop signal did not affect the right of recovery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

Walker and Brown, JJ., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Duplin County; Whedbee, Judge.

Action by E. Boney, administrator of G. W. Boney, deceased, against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for the killing of the plaintiff's intestate by the defendant.

The plaintiff alleges that his intestate, G. W. Boney, was in the employment of the defendant as engineer, and that he was killed on the main line of the defendant near South Rocky Mount, while on duty, at 2:30 o'clock, a. m. of November 6, 1907, by running into an open switch and coming in collision with another train. The plaintiff alleges various acts of negligence on the part of the defendant. The defendant denies that it was negligent, but admits that the intestate was killed while on duty in the manner alleged.

The defendant also pleads contributory negligence as follows: For a further defense:

First. That the plaintiff's intestate was a locomotive engineer, and at the time of his death was engineer on a passenger train running from Florence, S. C., to Rocky Mount and beyond; that the printed schedule containing the time-table of the defendant's different trains, and also the rules and regulations to be observed by conductors and engineers running their several trains, are furnished when issued to all of its conductors and engineers; that the time-table and schedule which was in force and effect at the time mentioned in the complaint was numbered 10 and went into effect September 15, 1907, at one minute past 12 a. m.; that this schedule or time-table contained the following rules and regulations: "All trains passing through Rocky Mount and South Rocky Mount will approach passenger station at Rocky Mount, N. & C. main line crossover, crossover at Bassett street telegraph office, South Rocky Mount and middle yard crossover, under full control, expecting to find tracks occupied. Trains will not exceed six miles per hour passing these points." That the collision mentioned in the complaint happened at one of the points mentioned in the said rules above quoted. A copy of this schedule containing the said rules and regulations was duly given and furnished to the plaintiff's intestate at the time or before the said schedule and regulations and rules went into effect, and it was his supreme duty to inform himself of all rules and regulations and the time-table applying to his district, and in particular to carefully obey and comply with the rules and regulations above quoted. That in addition to this the following rule was issued from the transportation department: "Rocky Mount, N. C., Sept. 9, 1907. Bulletin No. 18. C. & E. and All Concerned: All trains passing Rocky Mount and South Rocky Mount will approach passenger station at Rocky Mount, N. & C. main line crossover, crossing at Bassett street telegraph office, South Rocky Mount and middle yard crossover, under full control, expecting to find track occupied. Trains will not exceed six miles per hour passing these points." W. B. Darrow, Superintendent Transportation. Richmond, Manchester, Weldon, Rocky Mount, South Rocky Mount, Pinners Point, Tarboro, Contentnea, Wilmington, Florence, Selma."

Second. Defendant further alleges that the plaintiff's intestate was guilty of negligence which directly contributed to bring about the injury complained of in the complaint, in that the plaintiff's intestate, while approaching the point where the accident occurred, was given the danger or stop signal by waving a lantern in the usual manner and acknowledged the same with his whistle, but failed to stop his train in time to avoid the accident; that if plaintiff's intestate had obeyed the instructions given in the schedule or time-table and bulletin herein above mentioned he could have stopped his train in time to have avoided the accident, but that at the time he was disobeying and violating the said rules and regulations and instructions aforesaid, and running at a very high rate of speed between 40 and 50 miles per hour.

The following facts seem to be undisputed: (1) That the intestate was running a first-class passenger train, as engineer, at the time he was killed, on the main line of defendant; that the train was going north and the track was straight for more than two miles. (2) That he was killed by running into an open switch, and colliding with another train. (3) That as he approached the switch his train was running at the rate of 30, 35, or 40 miles an hour. (4) That the rules of the defendant required him to approach this switch at six miles an hour. (5) That a switch lamp was maintained at this switch, with a white and red light, and when the white light was turned to the track it indicated safety, and that the switch was all right for the main line, and the red light indicated danger. (6) That the following rules were in force:

"Rule 13, page 15. Any object waved violently by any one on or near the track is a signal to stop." "Rule No. 934. They (engineers) must have a copy of the current time-table, to which they must conform in running their trains, and a full set of signals which they must keep in good order and ready for immediate use." "Rule 27. A signal imperfectly displayed, or the absence of a signal at a place where a signal is usually shown, must be regarded as a stop signal, and the fact reported to the superintendent." "Rule 7, page 14. Employees whose duty may require them to give signals must provide themselves with proper appliances, keep them in good order and ready for immediate use." "Rule 91a, page 31. The speed of a train would ordinarily be that of its schedule, but in cases of delay, may be so moderately increased as in the judgment of the engineer and conductor will be safe and prudent, due consideration always being given to condition of track, weather and all circumstances." "Rule 93, page 32. Within yard limits the main track may be used, protecting against third and fourth class trains. Third and fourth class and extra trains must move within yard limits prepared to stop, unless the main track is seen or known to be clear. Rule 93a, page 32. Engines working within yard limits must clear the time of first-class trains five minutes. Enginemen must know that switches are properly set before they attempt to pull in or out of siding." "B-72. Trains of the first class are superior to those of the second; trains of the second class are superior to those of the third, and so on."

(7) That the switch track led from the switch at which the intestate was killed on the main line, to what is called the "lead track," which ran about parallel with the main line. (8) That as the train on which the intestate was approached the switch (the distance from it being in dispute) another train of the defendant was on the lead track. (9) That this last train consisted of an engine and 15 cars of coal; that the cars were in front of the engine, and the engine was running backwards. (10) That it was the intention of the defendant for this train to remain on the lead track, but when it reached the switch going from the lead track to the main line, this switch was open or out of fix, and the train passed through the switch, across the switch track, through the switch to the main line and on the main line, and as the intestate was approaching it ran back on the switch track, where the collision occurred. (11) That the switch at which the intestate was killed was in the yards of the defendant at South Rocky Mount, and that there were numerous tracks and switches in said yards.

The facts in dispute relate to the condition of the switch at the main line; the condition of the lights at this switch; the conduct of the conductor, named Cole, in charge of the train that came from the lead track, after he discovered the switch at the main line was open; the distance from the switch, at that time, of the train on which the plaintiff's intestate was running, and the conduct of the plaintiff's intestate.

The plaintiff contends: (1) That the switch at the main line was broken, and that the defendant has given no satisfactory explanation why it was so. (2) That if the explanation of the defendant is accepted, that it was caused by the engine and cars running from the lead track, that this would not excuse the defendant, because the engine and cars could not have reached the switch at the main line but for the negligent act of the defendant in permitting the switch at the lead track to be open, or out of fix. (3) That a white light was turned to the main line, indicating safety, or there was no light at the switch, and the purpose of lights at the switch is not only to show its condition, but also its location. (4) That at the time the conductor, Cole, discovered the switch was broken he was at the switch, and the plaintiff's intestate was distant $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles; that he (Cole) could then have turned the red light to the main line, and if he had done so it would have been seen, and the train on which the intestate was could have been stopped. (5) That, instead of doing so, he waited until the intestate was in 25 yards of the switch before he gave any signal, and when he did so it was by waving a lantern some distance from the track, and not across it.

The defendant contends: (1) That it explained the breaking of the switch; that it was broken a few minutes before the plaintiff's intestate was killed by the train coming from the lead track, and was the result of an accident. (2) That there is no evidence that it was negligent in leaving the switch at the lead track open, but if this was a negligent act, it was remote, and not the cause of the death of the plaintiff's intestate. (3) That there is no evidence that the white light was turned to the main line, and if there was no light at the switch this was notice to the plaintiff's intestate to stop, under the rules of the defendant. (4) That at the time the defendant's conductor, Cole, discovered the switch was broken the plaintiff's intestate was one-fourth mile from the switch, and if he (Cole) had then turned the red light on the main line, it would have been too late to stop the train. (5) That the conductor, Cole, did all that a prudent man could do to avert any injury; that he waved his lantern across the track; that this was a danger signal, and if it did not cause the train to stop a red light would not have done so. (6) That the plaintiff's intestate was running in violation of the rules of the defendant, and this was the cause of his death.

The material parts of the evidence are stated, but not all of it. J. C. Mercer testified that he was police for defendant on its yards; that he went to the switch at 8 o'clock a. m. of November 6, 1907; that he examined the switch; nothing was broken, except the rod which throws the switch; that he tried to operate it, and it would not throw the switch, but would turn the lamp; that the white glass was turned to the main line.

H. T. Cole, the conductor, testified: "As soon as I discovered that switch was broken, I ran down the track of the main line to flag No. 82 (Mr. Boney's train), and he was blowing the station blow when I signaled him down by stop signal, and he answered my signal by two short blasts, which was an answer to my signal, and understood that he knew what I meant, and then I stepped aside, and he ran into the yard. Our train was then moving ahead, trying to get out of the way. Mr. Boney was a good quarter of a mile when he answered my signal. I was 25 yards from the switch down the track towards Mr. Boney's train. He could have seen me for two miles signaling him down.

It was 75 yards from where switch left main line to where train collided with our train. The wheels of my engine broke the rod which controlled the switch. * * * Boney blew the station blow and then immediately blew the two short blasts, answering my signal. I got away far enough to keep myself from harm. I did not have time to get a red light and signal with, after I saw Boney's train was coming. I did not display any red light. I knew train was coming when I told engineer. It was an accident that we were out on the main line. We were trying to go on the lead, but got out on the main line. The switch which let us on the crossover from the lead to the main line had been left open or was out of fix, so that instead of going on the lead we went on the switch which goes into the main line, then went on the main line. That is, the engine went on the main line, and the switch at this point had the rod broken (that is, the switch at the main line). The only thing I know was when I got there the rod was broken, and I know of no other way it could have been broken, except by my engine. I mean by that the engine I was using. I did not see the engine break it; but the engine had just got on the switch point at the main line just far enough to break the rod."

William Andrews testified: "I am fireman for defendant and have been for six years. Was on engine at the time of the accident. I was coming back deadhead to Rocky Mount from Fayetteville, to which point I had fired another train. I had run extra on this run for two years. Just as we got 1¼ miles of South Rocky Mount Station, Mr. Boney blew one long blast. That was station blow, and when he got within one mile of station, some one waved a white lantern, but not across the main line. He waved it across his body. I knew what that meant. The signal was to stop. Mr. Boney shut off the steam. The man who gave the signal was 25 yards from the main line to one side. I do not know who he was signaling to. The yard engine blew Mr. Boney, and he then blew two short blasts, and then he applied emergency brakes and stood up and reversed the engine. The switch is at the middle crossover. Mr. Boney was 25 yards from the switch when he answered the signal by two blasts, and was in the switch or entering the switch when he put on emergency brakes. Mr. Boney was running 35 to 40 miles an hour when he turned off steam. * * * Mr. Boney was 1¼ miles from switch when he blew the signal station blow, and then he shut off the steam. I was looking over Mr. Boney's shoulder. It was usual for them to have lights at switch, but I did not see any. If there had been a red light at the switch, Mr. Boney could have seen it in time to stop at the rate his engine was going. I do not know whether the man was signaling with a lantern, was signaling a train on the switch in the yard to stop, or signaling the train we were on." Two or more witnesses testified that they saw no light at the switch.

The issues and the responses thereto are as follows: "First. Was the plaintiff's intestate killed by the negligence of the defendant as alleged in the complaint? Answer: Yes. Second. Did plaintiff's intestate by his own negligence contribute to his own death? Answer: No. Third. What damage is plaintiff entitled to recover of the defendant? Answer: $10,000." The defendant appealed.

Davis & Davis and Stevens, Beasley & Weeks, for appellant. Herbert McClammy, J. O. Carr, and George Rountree, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). The first and second exceptions are to the refusal to allow a witness for the defendant, J. M. Donlan, an engineer, to answer the following questions: First. If the jury shall find from the evidence that Mr. Boney's train had been running at six miles per hour at the time it collided with the train, and the other train with which it collided was running slowly in the same direction, what would have been the effect on the train and engine on which Mr. Boney was riding? Second. If the jury shall find from the evidence that the engine and train which were being driven by Mr. Boney had been running at the speed of six miles per hour, or less, at the time it struck the train of Conductor Cole, what would have been the effect of such collision, and how greatly would it have damaged the train and imperiled the lives of those on board?

[1] We do not think the ruling was erroneous. If the questions were asked of the witness as an expert, there is no finding or admission that the witness was an expert. As was said by Justice Manning, in Lumber Co. v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 220, 65 S. E. 920, 922: "We cannot assume that his honor, in this view, found the witness to be an expert, and then excluded the question and answer. In order that the witness might testify when objection is made, there must be either a finding by the court, or an admission or waiver by the adverse party that the witness was so qualified."

[2] The questions were also not permissible to elicit the opinion of the witness, as he was not present at the time of the occurrence, and the jurors were as competent to form an opinion upon the facts as he. Taylor v. Security Co., 145 N. C. 385, 59 S. E. 139, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 583; Wilkinson v. Dunbar, 149 N. C. 20, 62 S. E. 748.

[3] Again it does not appear that the defendant has been prejudiced by the refusal to permit the questions to be answered, as it is not shown in the record what would have been the answer of the witness, or what the defendant expected to prove by him.

[4] The fourth, fifth, and sixth prayers for instruction, requested by the defendant, were as follows:

"Fourth. If the jury shall find that Boney was running his train at a greater rate of speed than six miles per hour at the time he passed the switch, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

"Fifth. If the jury shall find that Boney did not obey the rule set forth in the timetable that he must approach the middle yard crossover and the switch where the accident occurred with his train under full control and expecting to find the track occupied, but in disregard of this rule approached the said switch and crossover without having his train under full control, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury must answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

"Sixth. Even though the jury shall find that the defendant was guilty of negligence, yet if they shall also find that Boney did not obey the rule set forth in the timetable as to the rate of speed and manner in which he should approach the middle yard crossing and switch where the accident occurred, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury must answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

His honor gave these instructions, except he added to each the element of proximate cause, which we think he ought to have done. The question of proximate cause will be considered in discussing other exceptions appearing in the record. The defendant relied principally on its motion to nonsuit, and the exceptions to the refusal to give the following instructions:

"Seventh. That if the jury shall find from the evidence that at the time No. 82, the train being run by Boney, deceased, was approaching the switch into which he ran and the switch had no lights, either red or white, and Mr. Boney knew there were no lights, either red or white, as a signal at the switch at the time, and he failed to slacken his speed and stop his engine, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

"Ninth. That it was the duty of Mr. Boney, engineer, to know the situation and location of the switches leading into the main line of the South Rocky Mount yards, and to observe whether the said switches were lighted and the signals indicated by it, and if the jury shall find from the evidence that the switch lamp at the place of accident was not lighted, either with red or white lights, then it became the duty of Mr. Boney, deceased, to stop his engine and ascertain the cause, and to ascertain if it was safe to pass over the track at that point, and if he failed to do so he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

There are several reasons for refusing to give these instructions.

[5] 1. The answer does not allege that the plaintiff's intestate was guilty of contributory negligence, in that he failed to perform the duties imposed upon him in the instructions, and a defendant must allege and prove contributory negligence. Stewart v. Railroad, 137 N. C. 690, 50 S. E. 312. A liberal construction of the answer discloses that it alleges two acts of contributory negligence, and no other: (1) That the intestate was disobeying a rule by running in excess of six miles an hour. (2) That he failed to stop when the lantern was waved.

[6] 2. The instructions imposed the duty, without qualification, to know the exact location of the switch, in the absence of a light, and to note that the light was not there. The injury occurred in the night on a yard of the defendant where there were numerous tracks and switches, and it was for the jury to say, under these circumstances, whether he could, by the exercise of ordinary care, have discovered the absence of a light in time to stop the train.

[7] 3. They omit the rule of the prudent man. If the intestate knew there was no light at the switch, he also knew that he was running a first-class train on the main line, and that it was the duty of the defendant to have the track clear five minutes before his train reached the switch, and if there was danger to turn the red light to the main line. He had the right to assume that these duties would be performed, and under the circumstances the question was raised as to whether he acted as a man of ordinary prudence, which it was for the jury to decide. The instructions require the court to decide, as matter of law, that the facts embodied in them constitute contributory negligence.

[8] 4. They omit the element of proximate cause. If the intestate knew there was no light at the switch and was running in excess of six miles an hour, he was negligent, but it is not every act of negligence, on the part of a plaintiff, that is contributory negligence in its legal sense. It is not contributory, unless it is the real cause of the injury; nor is it so if the defendant, by the exercise of ordinary care, can avert the injury, notwithstanding the negligence of the plaintiff.

[9] There was evidence that an employé of the defendant was at the switch and knew it was broken when the plaintiff's intestate was distant $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles; that this employé could have turned the red light to the main line, and failed to do so; that if he had done so it could have been seen in time for the intestate to stop his train at the rate he was going. If so, there was evidence that the failure to turn the red light to the main line was the proximate cause of the death of the intestate, and that, notwithstanding the negligence of the plaintiff in falling to stop, if he knew there was no light at the switch, that the defendant, by the exercise of ordinary care, could have averted the injury. It may be said that under the rules of the defendant the absence of a light at the switch is notice of danger, and that if the intestate did not regard this the display of a red light would not have caused him to stop. There is force in this view, but there may be a difference of opinion as to the conclusion. We think it would not be unreasonable to accept the other view, and conclude that if the intestate knew there was no light at the switch he also knew it was the duty of the defendant to keep the track clear five minutes before his train reached the switch, and to display the red light, if there was danger; and knowing these facts he might proceed, in the absence of a light, when he would not do so in the face of a red light, giving positive notice of danger. The absence of a light would ordinarily indicate nothing except a failure to light the lamp; while a red light is a signal of danger.

[10] "The law does not presume contributory negligence. It must be alleged and proven, and the defendant must show such facts, either omissions of such cautions or the doing of such acts, from which only one inference, to wit, the plaintiff's negligence, can be drawn by men of ordinary reason and intelligence." Farris v. Railroad, 161 N. C. 489, 66 S. E. 457, 459.

[11] We also conclude that the motion to nonsuit ought to have been denied. The open switch and the collision raise a presumption of negligence (Stewart v. Railroad, 137 N. C. 689, 50 S. E. 312, and cases there cited), and where such a presumption is raised, or a prima facie case is established, the jury is justified in finding negligence, unless "satisfied upon all the evidence in the case that in fact there is no negligence," as was said by Justice Walker, at this term, in Kornegay v. Railroad, 70 S. E. 731. There is also other evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant; two switches open or broken; the failure to maintain lights at the switch; the failure to keep the track clear; and the failure to notify the plaintiff's intestate of danger, as he approached the switch. There is also evidence of negligence on the part of the intestate.

[12] Under these circumstances, the fact upon which the decision of the case turned was proximate cause, and if there was a phase of the evidence that would justify the jury in finding that, although the plaintiff was negligent, the defendant had the last opportunity, the last clear chance to avoid the injury, it was the duty of the judge to submit the question to them. Edge v. Railroad, 153 N. C. 215, 69 S. E. 74, and cases there cited. We have seen that the evidence presented this question.

[13] The jury could find from the evidence that an employé of the defendant was at the switch, and knew it was broken, and appreciated the danger to the approaching train when it was distant $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles; that he could have turned the red light to the main line in an instant, and that this would have been a warning of danger; that he failed to do so; that if he had done so the plaintiff's intestate could have seen the red light in time to stop the train before it reached the switch; that, instead of doing so, he gave no signal until the train was in 25 yards of the switch, and then, by waving a lantern some distance from the track, and not across it; and, if so, the jury could find that the negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of the death of the intestate.

[14] The jury could also reasonably find from the evidence that rule 27, saying that "the absence of a signal at a place where a signal is usually displayed must be regarded as a stop signal," did not affect the right to recover, because there was evidence that there was a light at the switch, and that the white light, a notice of safety, was turned to the main line. The plaintiff's intestate was killed about 2 o'clock a. m. J. C. Mercer, a witness for the defendant, testified that he went to the switch at 8 o'clock a. m., and that the white glass was turned to the main line. Between 2 o'clock and 6 o'clock the switch, lamps, and yards were in the possession and under the control of the agents of the defendant, and no witness was produced to show any change in conditions, or that the lamp was touched after 2 o'clock, after the time Mercer saw the white glass turned to the main line.

The case was submitted to the jury with great care and the contentions of the defendant were fairly presented. The presiding judge, among other things, charged the jury:

"If the jury shall find that witness Cole waved his lantern across the track of the approaching train of which Boney was engineer, and Boney saw the signal, or with the exercise of ordinary care could have seen it, it was his duty to have stopped the engine, and, if he could have done so in time to avoid his injury, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

"If the jury shall find that Boney was running his train at a greater rate of speed than six miles per hour at the time he passed the switch, and shall further find that this was the proximate cause of the injury, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

"If the jury shall find that Boney did not obey the rules set forth in the time-table, that he must approach the middle yard cross-over and the switch where the accident occurred with his train under full control and expecting to find the track occupied, but in disregard of this rule approached the said switch and crossover without having his train under full control (and this was the proximate cause of the injury), then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury must answer the second issue, 'Yes.'

"Even though the jury shall find that the defendant was guilty of negligence, yet if they shall find that Boney did not obey the rules set forth in the time-table as to the rate of speed and manner in which he should approach the middle yard crossing and switch where the accident occurred (and this was the proximate cause of the injury), then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury must answer the second issue, 'Yes.'"

We have examined each exception and find no error.

No error.

WALKER, J. (dissenting). Without discussing other rulings of the court which I think were erroneous and entitle the defendant, at least, to a new trial, I will notice a few which go to the very root of the case, and, in my opinion, are palpably wrong and work great injustice to the defendant.

A railroad company would be grossly derelict in its duty, both to the public and its employees, if it failed to adopt such rules and regulations for the running and operation of its trains as make for safety, and it follows that the servant, for whose guidance in the discharge of his important and hazardous duties these rules are made, must obey them, and if he fails to do so, and is himself injured by reason of his disobedience, he is to be regarded in law as the author of his own injury, and if thereby he injures others the railroad company is liable to them, under the rule respondent superior, and he is liable to the company for all damages caused by his negligence. Holland v. Railroad, 143 N. C. 435, 55 S. E. 835; Haynes v. Railroad, 143 N. C. 154, 55 S. E. 516, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 972. The intestate's death was caused, not by the negligence of the defendant, but by his own glaring disobedience of express orders and regulations, which, if observed, would have carried him on his train safely to his destination. He was not only disobedient, but his conduct was reckless, and, in consequence of it, he rode to his death. I think this appears from the plaintiff's evidence and the undisputed facts. The tragedy is regrettable, but the law must be administered with cold neutrality. With slight change, we may well repeat what we said in Holland v. Railroad, supra: "The intestate was the one to whose keeping had been committed the safety of his comrades in the company's service (of the passengers on the train) and of his employer's property, and he was more responsible for it than any one else. He failed in the performance of his duty at the very moment when his obedience to orders and his vigilance were most required to prevent the resulting catastrophe. His negligence was ever present and the efficient and, indeed, the dominant cause of his injury and death, reaching to the effect, and therefore proximate to it. To subject the defendant to a recovery in such a case does not seem to be equitable, and would certainly contravene established principles of law. Plaintiff's death was caused, not by the defendant's negligence, but by his own disobedience of instructions." If a servant disregards the express directions of his master, and pursues his own way in performing his duties, the resultant injury to himself, if any, the law imputes to his own willful or negligent act, as the proximate cause, if not the only cause thereof. Whitson v. Wrenn, 134 N. C. 86, 46 S. E. 17; Hicks v. Manufacturing Co., 138 N. C. 319, 50 S. E. 708; Stewart v. Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562; Biles v. Railroad, 139 N. C. 532, 52 S. E. 129. The intestate simply did something which he was told not to do. He substituted his own will for that of his employer, and his case falls within the maxim, "volenti non fit injuria." Patterson v. Lumber Co., 145 N. C. 42, 58 S. E. 437. These principles are directly applicable to this case.

1. I think the motion to nonsuit should have been granted, and for the following reasons: I will assume in the beginning that the red light was not displayed at the switch, and there is no evidence that the white or safety light was, so that the case must be considered as if there was no light. But that of itself is made a signal of danger, as much so as if the red light had been shown, and the duty of the intestate, by the very terms of the rule, was to stop his train. This was the mandate of the rule, as much so as if there had been a red light there to warn him of danger. The order was not even to slow down or bring his train under control, but to stop at once, and herein is to be found the error in the opinion of the court as to proximate cause. If he had obeyed the rule and stopped, seeing that there was no light at the switch, the accident would have been a physical impossibility, for two trains, one at rest and the other moving away from it, could never collide. This is so very evident that I presume the court should take judicial notice of it. It is as much an axiom in physics, as that a man cannot be in two widely separated places at one and the same time, and as judges we have no right to close our eyes to the existence of such a fact and refuse to take notice of it, without proof and a finding of the jury. We have the right to use our common sense, experience, and observation as to certain matters, and this is one of them. It is said that there is no evidence that Boney did see that there was no light at the switch. That is not the question. It was his duty to see—to keep a constant lookout—especially at this place, and if he failed to do so it is the same in law as if he had looked and seen. Arrowood v. Railroad, 126 N. C.

629, 36 S. E. 151; Whitesides v. Railroad, 128 N. C. 229, 38 S. E. 878. We have so held in cases without number, when charging a railroad company with responsibility for the negligence of its engineer, and the decision must apply here, unless we recede from the position taken in those cases. In Pickett v. Railroad, 117 N. C. 616, 23 S. E. 264, 30 L. R. A. 257, 53 Am. St. Rep. 611, it is said: "If (the engineer) had looked and stopped the train, the collision would have been prevented, notwithstanding the previous want of care (or negligence) on the part of the boy who was killed." And again, after citing and referring to numerous cases of this court, theretofore decided, on the same point, the court says: "It was repeatedly declared in those cases that it was negligence on the part of the engineer of a railway company to fail to exercise reasonable care in keeping a lookout, not only for stock and obstructions, but for apparently helpless or infirm human beings on the track, and that the failure to do so, supervening after the negligence of another (the alleged negligence of Cole), where persons or animals were exposed to danger, would be deemed the proximate cause of any resulting injury." If he did not actually see, he would, in law, be taken to have seen, when he can see by looking, for he is not permitted to say, under such circumstances, that he did not look, and therefore did not see. By the rules of the company and of the law, it was made his duty to keep a watchful lookout, and if he had looked he would have discovered, long before he reached the switch, that there were no lights burning there. If there was one, he would, by all the testimony, have seen it, and not seeing it he was under a peremptory order to stop. He had no discretion in the matter. His duty was simply and solely one of obedience, and had he obeyed the accident would not have occurred.

What becomes of the doctrine of proximate cause? He knew where the switch was, for he gave the station blow two miles away, as he approached it, and the switch was between his train and the station. We have seen that he was negligent, if he could have known there was no light at the switch, and did not know. But General Burnett, witness for the plaintiff, who was in the cab with him, testified that the track was straight for at least two miles, and that he looked long before they reached the switch and saw no light there. Lights, red or white, were displayed at the switch before that time, and in all this he agrees with the other witnesses. He looked when Boney blew for the station, being then a half a mile from the switch, and saw no lights. There is no evidence to the contrary of this. No witness testified that he saw a white light, and the absence of such a light was a signal of danger and required Boney to stop his train. Speaking of a situation similar to this, the court (Connor, J.), in Haynes v. Railroad, 143 N. C. at page 164, 55 S. E. at page 519 (9 L. R. A. [N. S.] 972), said: "Assuming that the light was out, or as expressed by some of the witnesses, that the switch showed 'a dead light,' the rule imposed upon the plaintiff's testator the duty of treating it as a danger signal, and directed him how to act. The evidence was plenary that he knew of the rule, and, if in force, was under obligation to obey it." But he was forbidden to run his train there at a greater speed than six miles an hour, and if he had been running at that rate of speed he could surely have discovered, as he approached the switch, that there was no light there and have easily stopped his train before entering the switch at the crossover, but at that very time his speed, according to all the proof, was at least 35 miles an hour. His death, in any view of the evidence, as there is really no disputed fact upon this branch of the case, was due to his own negligence in these respects: (1) He did not heed the danger signal at the switch, if he saw it. (2) If he did not see it, he was negligent in not looking for it, and in law the same result follows. (3) He was running his train at a reckless rate of speed, in open violation of the rule fixing the rate at six miles an hour, and a further rule requiring "trains to approach junctions prepared to stop," and "all trains passing Rocky Mount to approach the passenger station, main yard crossover and middle yard crossover under full control, expecting to find the track occupied"; that is, impassable. If he had obeyed any one of these rules, the accident would not have occurred, but instead of doing so, he ran his train almost to its speed limit and nearly seven times as fast as he was authorized to do.

Is proximate cause, in a case like this, a question of fact or of law? One of these rules required that he should approach the switch with his engine under full control, as if expecting to encounter danger ahead, and another that he should be prepared to stop, unless both switches and signals are right and the track is clear. These rules were adopted to prevent just such a catastrophe as this one, and, too, for the engineer's safety, and yet this company is held liable to him for his own willful and daring violation of them. He took his life in his own hands, but the road must pay for it. It is impossible to consider the evidence, as the law regards it, without seeing at once that the intestate brought disaster upon himself. Suppose a man had been lying drunk and helpless on the track at the switch and was run over and killed, would we hesitate to say, under our decisions and the admitted facts of this case, that the negligence of the engineer was, in law, the proximate cause of his death? How can one rule be applied to the engineer, when representing the railroad, and another man is killed, and a different one when, under identically the same circumstances, he is killed; his negligence being the same in both cases? There is but one answer to this question. The same rule applies alike to the two cases, unless our former decisions are founded upon the wrong principle and should be overruled. We must exonerate the defendant in this case or reverse a long line of decisions by this court.

I have so far discussed the case upon the motion for nonsuit and the admitted facts, or upon the plaintiff's own evidence, favorably construed for her, and when thus considered there is still another view of the case which conclusively makes against the plaintiff and defeats her right to recover. H. T. Cole, the engineer of the other train, ran down the track about 25 yards and with his lantern signaled Boney to stop. Boney knew it was a stop signal, because plaintiff's witness, Gen. Burnett, testified that when 200 or 300 yards from the switch he answered it with two short blasts of the whistle, shut off steam, and applied the emergency brakes. Do we need a jury to tell us that, if he had been running at the proper speed—six miles an hour—he could have stopped his train within 150 yards, yes, within 50 yards? We know it. The evidence is that he could have stopped it, with the appliances at hand, within 50 feet, and this was not denied on the argument. But the speed of the train was so excessive that he was unable to stop, and that was the only cause of the intestate's death. By the rule he was ordered to have his train well in hand, so that he could stop in any emergency, if switches or lights were wrong or the track was blocked. We know that he could have done so, had he been so minded; but Burnett, plaintiff's witness, testified that Boney told him several weeks before the accident occurred that he had orders to run slow at that place, but that he increased the speed of his train from time to time until it reached the speed of 35 or 40 miles an hour, at which it was running on the fateful night, and, too, by the switch with a danger signal displayed. After he had received and acknowledged the lamp signal, he had, by Burnett's testimony, 200 yards within which to stop his train before reaching the switch, and 75 yards beyond the switch where the collision occurred. In all the cases heard by this court since I have sat in it—and there are many of them—there has never been presented such an example of reckless indifference on the part of an engineer to his own safety and that of his passengers and fellow servants. He deliberately violated the rule of the company, after telling Burnett that it had been issued to him, and persistently continued to do so, and did it, too, almost with the very words of the rule on his lips when talking to Burnett and while passing that very place, and yet this defendant must pay a heavy penalty for his flagrant disobedience, and, too, pay it to him or his representatives. This cannot be law because it is not just, and such a ruling is utterly at variance with well-considered decisions of this court, holding railroad companies liable to third persons for similar acts of negligence by engineers, but of not so grave, serious, and pronounced a character. We have heretofore charged the company, because such negligence we then considered to be the proximate cause of the injury, as in Arrowood's Case and Pickett's Case, and the long train of cases following them; and by this decision we discharge the engineer and, in effect, pay him for his own wrong. If in any one of the cases just mentioned the road had sued the engineer, after being held responsible for his negligence and mulcted in damages, could it have been entitled to recover? I think so. We have so intimidated, and even held, in several of the cases. If so, how can the engineer in this case recover?

2. But if the nonsuit should not have been granted, the court erred in refusing to give the instructions requested. I will lay special stress and emphasis on one only—the seventh: "If the jury shall find from the evidence that at the time No. 82, the train being run by Boney, deceased, was approaching the switch into which he ran and the switch had no lights, either red or white, and Mr. Boney knew there were no lights, either red or white, as a signal at the switch at the time, and he failed to slacken his speed and stop his engine, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the jury will answer the second issue, 'Yes.'" It is said in the opinion of the court that this instruction should not have been given, first, because there is no averment in the answer upon which it can be based, and, second, because it is predicated on the fact that the intestate knew there was no light, of which there was no evidence. We will consider these reasons in inverse order.

As to the intestate's knowledge that there was no light at the switch, it must be remembered that the instruction asks the jury to find the fact of knowledge, and does not assume that Boney had such knowledge. The only question, therefore, is, Was there any evidence of knowledge? We have shown, I think, that it makes no difference, in law, whether he had actual knowledge or not, if, by the exercise of the care exacted of him, he could have had it. But Burnett, plaintiff's own witness, testified that he looked and did not see any light. Could the jury infer from this fact, and the further fact that it was Boney's duty to keep a lookout, that he did so, and if Burnett saw no light that he saw none? But there is other evidence, far more than a scintilla, that Boney was looking, and what is it? He saw the signal lantern of Cole swaying to and fro, and he would not have seen it if he had not been looking. Another fact, he blew for the station as he saw its lights, and was therefore looking ahead. Boney was familiar with the line; he knew he was within the yard limits, because there were several tracks and indications all around him showing that fact, and those on the engine showed by their testimony that they knew where the switch was with reference to the position of the approaching train. There are other facts and circumstances which tend to prove knowledge by Boney in regard to the light at the switch. A man knows as well when he does not see a thing, as when he does see it. Am I wrong in making this common-sense statement? If the light was not in sight, it was his duty to stop, and his failure to do so was not only gross negligence, but the decisive and proximate cause of his death, for if he had obeyed the rule and stopped there would have been no collision. He had the last clear chance. No light being as much of a danger signal as a red light, it was his plain duty to so regard it. It was for his employer to make this rule and for him to obey it. It turns out that it was a wise rule, and an observance of it would have saved Boney's life. We have held that, under such circumstances, the employer is not liable to the servant because the latter has seen fit to disregard orders and act upon his own judgment, and it would not be right to hold the master responsible for the consequences. Patterson v. Lumber Co., 145 N. C. 42, 58 S. E. 437; Whitson v. Wrenn, 134 N. C. 86, 46 S. E. 17.

It will not do to say that his failure to stop the train was not the proximate cause; in the first place, because it was as a matter of law, and, in the second, because if there was any duty resting upon Cole to turn the red light, when no light was itself a danger signal—and I think there clearly was not—Cole did give him a signal equally as good, and which he received in full time to stop his train, if he had been running at a proper speed. He answered this signal, and could easily have brought his train to a full stop after doing so but for his willful disregard of orders as to speed. The company, by its rules, had prescribed a safe course for Boney to pursue, and it would have proved to be a most effective one. It was not required to provide more than one. If Boney had kept his engine under control, as if expecting to find the road blocked and the junction and switches in a dangerous condition—and this was what he had been ordered, in plain language, to do—he did not require any signal from Cole, as this duty was enjoined upon him without regard to the signal lights at the switch. Not only did he have this peremptory order, but Burnett testified that a light at the switch could have been seen two miles away on this straight track, and not seeing a light, as there was none there, his duty was to stop and ascertain the cause of this unusual situation. The opinion of the court is based upon the erroneous hypothesis that Boney was entitled to have two signals of danger. Edwards v. Railroad, 132 N. C. 99, 43 S. E. 585. The company had the right to make the absence of a light a danger signal, and yet it is argued that, even if Boney saw there was no light at the switch, he was entitled to have the red light turned to the track by Cole. The force of this reasoning is conceded in the opinion, and the answer to it is that Boney knew that, by the rules, the track must be kept clear five minutes before his train reached the switch. But that order was made in the interest of greater safety and was to be executed by other employes, and Boney had no right to rely on its observance, for he was commanded to proceed with his train under control, as if it had been violated and proper precautions had not been taken at the switch, and the track ahead was blocked, so that he could not proceed on his way. By all the evidence, he ran in flagrant disobedience of orders, and at the rate of 35 miles an hour, into the switch and crossover, and right by a danger signal. This is his case in a nutshell. The fallacy of the entire argument of the court is that the premises are not justified by the admitted facts, and the reasoning practically ignores the legal effect of the provisions of the rule that the speed must not be in excess of six miles an hour, that no light shall be as much a danger signal as a red light, and that the engine must be kept under control, so that the engineer can guard against danger in any possible emergency.

The instructions given by the court and copied in the opinion were erroneous, because the first one required the jury to find that Boney could have stopped his train, then running at a high rate of speed after seeing the signal of Cole, whereas they should have been told that if he was unable to stop it by reason of the excessive speed, and could have stopped it if he had been running at the prescribed rate, his own act in disobeying the rule as to speed was the proximate cause of the injury, for the court has so held in Norton v. Railroad, 122 N. C. 911, 29 S. E. 886, and numerous other cases. The other instructions were faulty, in that they required the jury to find whether Boney's disregard of the rules was the proximate cause of his death, whereas the court should have told the jury that, as he was warned of the danger by the absence of a light, his failure to stop was the proximate cause of his death, as much so as if a red light had been displayed, and besides, that, his failure to observe the rule requiring him to have his engine under control, as if the track were blocked, and so that he could stop it if the track was not clear, was itself the direct cause of his death, for we have held in Norton's Case, and in many others, that if the engineer deprives himself of the ability to stop his train by the disobedience of rules, or because the train is being run at an excessive speed, it makes the company liable for any resulting injury to others, as the engineer's negligent act is "continuing" in its nature up to the very moment of the injury, and is therefore its proximate cause. If he had not been negligent in this way, he would have had the last clear chance to avoid the injury, and for this reason the company, his employer, when defendant, has been charged with liability. Edwards v. Railroad, 129 N. C. 78, 39 S. E. 730. With greater reason does the law deny to him or his representatives the right of recovery, when his own negligent act caused the injury.

My conclusion is that the plaintiff should, for the reasons stated, have been nonsuited, or that, at least, there should be a new trial, so that the case may again be tried according to correct principles; otherwise the defendant will be made to suffer vicariously for the fault of its engineer by compensating his representatives, contrary to the maxim of our law, "Nemo puniatur pro alieno delicto." Wingate's Maxims, 336.

But a difference is supposed to exist between a positive and a negative signal of danger. I think this is based upon a misapprehension of the rule, and that there can be no such distinction. The question is not, what Boney thought the signal should be, but what it is. The "red light" and "no light" are made by the rule positive notice of danger. The mere fact that "no light" involves the negation of a fact does not change the character of the signal from a positive to a negative one, for the rule is plain, positive, and peremptory in its mandate that, whether there is a red light or no light, or even "a light imperfectly displayed," the engineer must stop, and in case there is no light ascertain the cause and report to the superintendent. So that a red light, no light, or an imperfect light are all equally "positive" stop signals, and so declared to be in express and unmistakable terms. But if, under such a rule, an engineer could have any margin of discretion in the matter, that avenue to success is closed to the plaintiff by another mandatory order contained in rule 106: "In all cases of doubt or uncertainty, the safe course must be taken and no risks run." So that if Boney had any room for doubt or uncertainty, he should have stopped his train. There are two other similar rules: No. 105: "Both conductors and enginemen are responsible for the safety of their trains and, under conditions not provided for by the rules, must take every precaution for their protection." No. 707: "The company does not wish, nor expect, its employees to incur any risks whatever from which, by exercise of their own judgment and by personal care, they can protect themselves, but enjoins them to take time in all cases to do their duty in safety, whether they may, at the time, be acting under orders of their superiors or otherwise."

It is suggested that the defendant has not sufficiently pleaded the negligence of Boney in order to rely on it. This seems to me a very strained construction of the answer; one that is contrary to the express direction of the statute: "In the construction of a pleading for the purpose of determining its effect, its allegations shall be liberally construed with a view to substantial justice between the parties." Pell's Revisal, § 495, and notes. The common-law rule is modified, and every reasonable intendment is now made in favor of the pleader. Wright v. Insurance Co., 138 N. C. 488, 51 S. E. 55. We strictly enforced this provision in favor of the plaintiff, when charging negligence, against the objection of the defendant, in Knott v. Railroad, 142 N. C. 238, 55 S. E. 150, and the case is an authority here. The answer, perhaps, should have been more full and explicit, but I think it quite sufficient, under the statute, to present the defense. It distinctly avers that Boney had a copy of the rules, regulations, and schedule, knew, or should have known, their contents, and that it was his duty to observe and obey them; while he failed to do so and was violating the rule when he was killed. It is true defendant pleads specially the failure to heed Cole's signal with the lamp, but the answer embraces within its general scope an averment of negligence in disobeying the rules, and this is all set up as a separate defense; the purpose of the defendant to plead such contributory negligence, if necessary to do so in this case, being apparent. This answer is certainly as comprehensive in its allegations as was the complaint in the Knott Case. No such point is hinted at in the plaintiff's brief, nor was it mentioned in the oral argument. Why? Because plaintiff's counsel were well apprised by the answer of the true defense. Their brief shows it, for it deals with all the questions now raised by the defendant, and as if properly pleaded. There was no objection to any of the evidence as being irrelevant, because addressed to the defenses that there was a stop signal at the switch and that Boney did not, under the admitted circumstances, handle his train as required by the rules.

But whether his negligence in this respect is pleaded or not, all the questions are presented by the denial of the answer. If the breaking of the switch was not an unavoidable accident, Boney, under a known rule, was warned of the situation by a danger signal which he was as much bound to obey, as we have seen, as if the red light had been in plain view. The defendant had safeguarded the place and neutralized its negligence, if any, by displaying a danger signal, which Boney was required to obey by stopping his train. If there had been a red light there, and Boney had disregarded it and been killed, would not his death be imputed to his own wrongful act as the proximate and sole cause thereof? I have shown that "no light" or an "imperfect light" was, by the very terms of the rule, as much a danger signal as a red light, and the same result must flow from his failure to so regard it. If the fireman had been killed at the same place, instead of Boney, would this court listen to a plea, in an action against the defendant for causing his death, that Boney had failed to obey its rules, or that he was not sufficiently acquainted with the road and surroundings to know that he was approaching the switch and middle yard crossover, where he was killed? I think not, for the reason that Boney's negligence, in such a case, would be held, in law, as the decisive and proximate cause of the fireman's death, and the sole cause, however well the defendant had safeguarded the switch. There is no difference, in law, between the two cases.

It is further suggested that the witness J. C. Mercer testified that when he was there the white glass was turned to the track. This was not evidence that there was a white light burning at night. It tended to prove the contrary, and, at most, was merely conjectural. Byrd v. Express Co., 139 N. C. 273 (Anno. Ed.), 51 S. E. 851. It was no more evidence of a white light than the fact that the red glass was turned to the track would be of a red light. It is not the glass that gives the signal, but the light that is in it. Mercer did not say that there was a light in the glass, and if he had so stated, the plaintiff's own witness, Gen. Burnett, testified that he saw no light there, and that a light could have been seen, if one had been at the switch. Edwards v. Railroad, 29 N. C. 78, 39 S. E. 730. So in this conflict of testimony, if there is any as between Burnett and Mercer, the defendant was entitled to the finding of the jury as to whether there was a light or not, and if there was none, then to the other finding whether Boney knew it (or could have known it if he had looked, which is the same thing), for this was the form of the prayer. The defendant did not assume, in the requested instruction, that there was no light at the switch, nor that Boney knew there was none, or could have known it, but asked that both inquiries be submitted to the jury for their finding of the truth in regard to it. Was it not plainly entitled to the instruction, even if the "white glass was turned to the track," and this is evidence that there was a light? It was not by any means conclusive, and is not so treated in the court's opinion.

My conclusion is that the plaintiff's intestate caused his own death by reckless conduct on his part. He did what his employer told him not to do, and however unfortunate the result the defendant is not responsible for it, if we follow our former unanimous rulings. Whitson v. Wrenn, and other cases, supra. They are all supported by many cases in this court and by numerous decisions in other jurisdictions.

BROWN, J., concurs in this dissenting opinion.

(89 W. Va. 133)

FIELDER & TURLEY v. ADAMS EXP. CO.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 361*)—CERTIFICATE OF ERROR—DISMISSAL.

That a certificate of error appended to a petition for a writ of error antedates the allowance of a bill of exception in the transcript is immaterial, and constitutes no ground for dismissal of the writ.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 361.*]

2. EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF (§ 38*)—POWERS OF INTERMEDIATE COURT.

The judge of the intermediate court of Kanawha county has authority to settle and sign a bill of exception and make it a part of the record within 30 days after the adjournment of the term at which the judgment was rendered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Exceptions, Bill of, Cent. Dig. § 48; Dec. Dig. § 38.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1175*)—ERROR TO INTERMEDIATE COURT—REVIEW—ENTRY OF FINAL JUDGMENT.

On a writ of error from the circuit court of Kanawha county to a judgment of the intermediate court of that county, the former court, on reversing the judgment of the latter, should render final judgment in the case, if it is fully made up and susceptible of such disposition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4573-4587; Dec. Dig. § 1175.*]

4. STATUTES (§ 196*)—CONSTRUCTION.

In seeking the legislative intent, words in a statute may be referred to their proper connections, and each given proper force in its place.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 274; Dec. Dig. § 196.*]

5. CARRIERS (§ 158*)—INJURY TO FREIGHT—LIMITING LIABILITY.

The interstate commerce act, passed by Congress and approved June 29, 1906 (Acts June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1149]), does not inhibit an interstate carrier from limiting the amount of its liability for loss, damage, or injury to property entrusted to it for shipment by an agreement with the shipper as to the value thereof, entered into in good faith, or procured by misrepresentation on the part of the shipper as to the value thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 158.*]

6. CARRIERS (§ 124*)—LOSS OF FREIGHT—AMOUNT OF RECOVERY.

If in such case two or more articles be shipped under an aggregate valuation thereof agreed upon or procured as aforesaid, and part of them be delivered and the balance lost, the shipper can recover only a portion of the agreed value, determinable by the ratio of the aggregate value of the property to the amount stipulated in the agreement as such value.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 599-607; Dec. Dig. § 124.*]

Error from Circuit Court, Kanawha County.

Action by Fielder & Turley against the Adams Express, Company. Judgment for plaintiff before a justice was affirmed by the intermediate court, but reversed on error by the circuit court, and plaintiffs bring error. Reversed, and judgment entered.

Payne & Payne and J. F. Bouchelle, for plaintiff in error. Simms, Enslow, Fitzpatrick & Baker, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. Fielder & Turley brought this action against the Adams Express Company, in a justice's court, to recover the value of certain goods shipped to them over said company's line from New York and lost. In that court they recovered a judgment for $111.30. The defendant took an appeal to the intermediate court of Kanawha county. There a jury was dispensed with, and the case submitted to the court on a statement of facts agreed to, and a judgment was rendered for $114.55, with damages according to law. To this judgment the circuit court of Kanawha county awarded a writ of error, on which it was reversed and the case remanded to the intermediate court for further proceedings and final determination. Complaining of this, Fielder & Turley procured a writ of error from this court to the judgment of the circuit court, on which lack of a sufficient bill of exceptions, want of a certificate of error as required by section 8 of chapter 135 of the Code of 1906, failure to apply for the writ in proper time or manner, lack of a writ of error from the circuit court or order therefor, the remand of the case to the intermediate court, and reversal by that court are assigned as grounds of error. These assignments were made on an incomplete transcript. A supplemental record shows the issuance of a writ of error and supersedeas by the circuit court and acceptance of service thereof, as well as an order awarding the same. This sufficiently disposes of some of the arguments found in the brief.

[2] The bill of exceptions, embodying the agreement as to the facts, was signed and certified in the vacation of the intermediate court, and an order entered in vacation purporting to make the same a part of the record. Alleged want of authority in the judge of the intermediate court to allow the bill of exception after the adjournment of the term, under the provisions contained in section 9 of chapter 131 of the Code, is one argument against the validity of the bill of exception. This contention is answered in the negative by express terms of section 4 of chapter 25 of the Acts of 1907, which created said court and defined its powers. It gives the judge of that court the same powers in vacation as are now or may hereafter be conferred upon the judge of the circuit court of Kanawha county in respect to all cases, matters, and proceedings within the jurisdiction of said intermediate court.

[1] On the petition for a writ of error presented to the circuit court, there is a certificate of an attorney stating that in his opinion there was error in the judgment of the intermediate court. This certificate was dated May 21, 1909. The bill of exception was signed by the judge on May 29, 1909. As the petition was certified before the bill of exception was signed or made a part of the record, it is contended that the certificate is void, and the petition therefore insufficient. We see no force in this contention. The date is wholly immaterial. The petition could be prepared and dated in anticipation of what it was known the record would be, when made up.

[3] The circuit court erred in refusing to retain and finally decide the case, and in remanding it to the intermediate court. As it was fully made up and could not be in any respect changed, since the facts had been agreed, there was no reason for remanding it, and we think final judgment should have been rendered. Though section 21 of chapter 25 of the Acts of 1907 says "the circuit court may retain the case for trial or remand the same back to the said intermediate court to be further proceeded in and finally determined," these general terms must be so construed as to make them operate reasonably and justly. It must be assumed the Legislature did not intend a useless and detrimental proceeding. After an appellate court has ascertained what judgment should have been rendered in a case fully made up, a remand for judgment involves both delay and risk of additional error as well as double work. Hence it is an idle, useless, and injurious proceeding, which the Legislature cannot be deemed to have intended, if the clause quoted can perform some other substantial purpose or function. While some effect must be allowed to all words in a statute, or other writing, if possible (State v. Harden, 62 W. Va. 313, 58 S. E. 715, 60 S. E. 394), it is not always necessary nor proper to allow them effect to the full extent of the letter thereof (Coal & Coke Ry. Co. v. Conley, 67 S. E. 634). It is improper to do so, if such construction leads to an absurd or unjust result. Hasson v. Chester, 67 S. E. 731; B. & L. Ass'n v. Sohn, 54 W. Va. 101, 46 S. E. 222. Words may be referred to their proper connections, giving each in its place its proper force, in seeking the legislative intent. B. & L. Ass'n v. Sohn, cited. Reversals take place in two well-known general classes of cases, one in which new jury trials must take place, or additional evidence be heard, or further orders made to carry the judgment or decree into effect, and one in which none of these things are necessary. In the former class the cases are remanded, under general appellate law, and, in the latter, finally disposed of in the appellate court. The classification and usual mode of disposition were, we must assume, known to the Legislature, and it has dealt with both in very general terms. Power to remand in both involves idle, useless, and practically absurd action or procedure. Hence we may well say, "reddendo singula singulis," under the rule declared in B. & L. Ass'n v. Sohn, the power to remand is applicable to the former class and the power of retention to the latter. Whether the act confers power to retain all cases we do not say, that question not being involved, but we are clearly of the opinion that the circuit court must act finally in complete cases, requiring nothing other than the rendition and entry of judgment.

[5] We come now to the vital questions in the case, the validity and application of a clause in the bill of lading, purporting to limit the liability of the express company to $50. This clause says the company shall not be liable in any event for more than $50, the amount stated therein as the value of the property shipped. It is one of the regular forms furnished by the company to its patrons in which such valuation is printed, together with the notice that there shall be no greater liability unless a greater value is stated in the bill. It bears a stamp saying, "Value asked and not given." It was the practice of the company to leave a book of these bills with the shippers, and send its agent to receive the packages and put this stamp upon the bills, unless a greater value was declared. At least such was the fact in this case. Under the general law, unless changed by the interstate commerce act, a limitation of liability to the extent of the value declared and agreed upon is valid. Zouch v. Railway Co., 36 W. Va. 524, 15 S. E. 185, 17 L. R. A. 116; Hart v. Railway Co., 112 U. S. 331, 5 Sup. Ct. 151, 28 L. Ed. 717. Upon this question, there is some conflict of authority in the various jurisdictions of this country, but we see no occasion to depart from the rule heretofore declared in this state and sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, nor any necessity for discussion of the decisions enunciating or purporting to declare a different doctrine.

Sections 2 and 20 of the railroad rate act were passed by Congress and approved June 29, 1906. The first of these sections inhibits the receipt by an interstate carrier, directly or indirectly, from any person or persons of a greater or less compensation for any service rendered than is charged or received from any other person or persons for doing the same or a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. The other makes such carrier liable for any loss, damage, or injury to property received by it for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another, caused by it or any common carrier to which such property may be delivered or over whose line or lines it may pass, and provides that no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt such common carrier from the liability thereby imposed. They have been construed and enforced as prohibiting such limitation of liability. Ward v. Railway Co., 158 Mo. 228, 58 S. W. 28. See, also, Hutchinson's Com. Car. (3d Ed.) § 548. In reaching this conclusion the Missouri court merely gave its own interpretation of the statute. In our opinion this construction goes beyond the necessary import of the terms used. They do not deal with the extent of liability or limitation thereof. Section 2 forbids discrimination. It does not prescribe a rule, requiring a rate based upon any particular standard, such as weight, volume, or value, and inhibit departure therefrom. All other things being equal, it inhibits discrimination as between persons. We do not see how it can be said to inhibit a variation in rate or liability on account of difference in value. That portion of section 20 to which we have referred deals with the question of liability, not the measure or extent thereof. At least that is its primary or main purpose. It does not deal expressly with the limitation of liability. It says the common carrier shall be liable for the loss, damage, or injury to the property, but does not fix any measure or standard of compensation. Of course, it destroys the effect of all receipts, contracts, rules, and regulations purporting to wholly exempt interstate common carriers. Its exact terms are that the carrier shall be liable for loss, damage, or injury, and no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt it. When this act was passed, the right of common carriers to limit their liability in the manner in which this one has done so had been declared by the federal Supreme Court and many others. Congress is deemed to have had knowledge of this, and, having such knowledge, it placed no express provision in the act abolishing the right or inhibiting the practice. The purpose of this clause of the statute was to make the initial carrier liable for loss, damage, or injury to goods entrusted to it for interstate transportation, whether occasioned by negligence or not, on its own line or elsewhere, notwithstanding any contract, receipt, rule, or regulation purporting or attempting to relieve from liability therefor. It does not deal with the extent of liability.

The limitation clause in one of its aspects is necessary to the protection of common carriers. In an action for loss, damage, or injury, when no agreement has been made respecting the value of property, the carrier is at a great disadvantage in respect to the evidence of value. The shipper occupies a superior ground. Carriers have just and reasonable ground for requiring a specification of value, setting a limit beyond which no damages can be claimed, as a measure of protection against exorbitant and unjust demands. On the other hand, a shipper seeking or obtaining a valuation below the actual value of the property for the purpose of obtaining a low rate is guilty of an act of misrepresentation. Hence there is no hardship nor injustice in holding him bound by his representation or agreement as to the value. This contract of limitation therefore rests upon good solid reason and just considerations. The abolition thereof would have introduced a very great change in the methods of transportation for purposes extending far beyond any indicated by the express terms of the act. It does not fall clearly within the inhibition of discrimination. At any rate, the express prohibition thereof is not adopted as a means of preventing discrimination, nor does it fall clearly within the purpose, respecting exemption from liability. Therefore we think the act does not abrogate the rule permitting limitation of liability. While the Interstate Commerce Commission disclaims power to determine this question, it being a judicial one, it expresses the opinion that the act has not altered the rule. In re Released Rates, 13 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 550.

This right to limit liability by agreement as to value is subject, however, in the opinion of many courts, to a very important qualification. The shipper is bound by his agreement on the principle of estoppel. One who avails himself of an estoppel must have been misled by the opposite party. Hence, if the carrier agreed upon a valuation, known to be merely arbitrary and far below the actual value of the property, it cannot claim the status of a person misled to his injury. Accordingly it has been held in many cases that a collusive or corrupt contract between the shipper and carrier fixing the amount below the actual value of the property is void, and does not limit the liability of the latter. On the other hand, if the agreement has been made in good faith in accordance with what the parties deemed to be the actual value of the property, it is binding, or, if the shipper, without the knowledge of the carrier, has declared a false low valuation, he is bound by it on the principle of estoppel. See the opinion of Commissioner Lane, 13 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 550, attempting to reconcile the apparently conflicting decisions, upon these principles.

The record in this case presents no evidence of a false value collusively agreed upon. The body of the express receipt was filled out by an employé of the shipper, and the two packages placed where the carrier's agent was expected to find them. He did find them there, together with the receipt book in which the receipt therefor had been filled out and the value specified therein left unaltered. He placed his stamp upon the receipt, showing the date, the number of packages, and that the value had been asked and not given. Having done this, he took the packages, and in a few minutes afterwards the manager of the stock and shipping departments found the receipt there, saw that the goods had gone, and filed the receipt away. This amounted to a representation on the part of the shipper that the property was not of greater value than $50, and precludes the idea of collusion or a corrupt agreement as to the value of the property. We think, therefore, the contract was valid and binding.

[6] One of the packages, having an actual value of $120, was delivered to the consignee, while the other, having an actual value of $105.50, was lost. Under these circumstances, it remains to say whether the consignee may recover the entire $50 or only a portion thereof, determinable by the ratio of the entire value of the goods to the whole amount of indemnity. By the great weight of authority the indemnity is to be apportioned. U. S. Express Co. v. Joyce (Ind.) 72 N. E. 885; Railway Co. v. Lesser, 46 Ark. 236; Goodman v. Railway Co., 71 Mo. App. 460; London Assurance Co. v. Companhia De Moagens Do Barreiro, 167 U. S. 149, 17 Sup. Ct. 785, 42 L. Ed. 113. Hastily examined, the following decisions might be considered as inconsistent with this conclusion: Brown v. Steamship Co., 147 Mass. 58, 16 N. E. 717; Starnes v. Louisville Co., 91 Tenn. 516, 19 S. W. 675; Nelson v. Railway Co., 28 Mont. 297, 72 Pac. 642; but they are not. In all these cases the valuations stipulated were by the package for merchandise, or head for live stock, which makes a very material difference, the agreement being separable and each piece of property or head of stock protected by a legally separate contract. Under this principle, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover at the date of the judgment of the intermediate court $23.44 and $1.40 interest, making a total of $24.84, for which amount judgment will be rendered as of the date of the judgment rendered by the intermediate court and with interest from that date.

It remains only to dispose of the question of costs. As the appellant in the intermediate court had not tendered the amount due, it was not entitled to costs in that court. Gas Co. v. Holt, 66 W. Va. 516, 66 S. E. 717. Having successfully resisted the efforts of the plaintiff in error in this court to reinstate the judgment reversed by the circuit court, the defendant in error substantially prevails here, and is entitled to costs in this court, if the amount in controversy brought the case within its jurisdiction. This amount was the judgment of the intermediate court, $114.55.

Therefore costs in this court will be adjudged to the defendant in error here.

(69 W. Va. 176)

HALL v. HALL.(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)(Syllabus by the Court.)1. DIVORCE (§ 53)—RIGHT TO RELIEF—INEQUITABLE CONDUCT OF PLAINTIFF.

The rule of courts of equity, denying relief to a party because of his own inequitable conduct in and about the subject-matter of his cause of action, applies in suits for divorce.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 188, 189; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

2. DIVORCE (§ 55*)—LIMITED DIVORCE—DESERTION—CONDUCT PRECLUDING RELIEF.

Under this rule, conduct of a plaintiff, in a suit for a limited divorce on the ground of desertion, not sufficient to justify the desertion, may nevertheless be sufficient to preclude relief.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. § 197; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

3. DIVORCE (§ 37*)—DESERTION—RIGHT OF HUSBAND TO DETERMINE DOMICILE.

Though a husband has the legal right to determine the place of abode of the family, and the wife must submit to his decision, this power must be exercised in a reasonable and just manner. It cannot be exercised arbitrarily, nor used as a means of procuring dissolution of the marital relation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. § 129; Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)4. DIVORCE (§ 37)—"DESERTION."

Mere absence of one spouse from the other, though voluntary, does not constitute "desertion"; but cohabitation must cease, and there must be intent in the mind of the offending party to desert or abandon the other.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 107-132; Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2020-2024; vol. 8, p. 7635.]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Monongalia County.

Bill by William H. Hall against Millie Hall. Decree of dismissal, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

L. V. Keck and Cox & Baker, for appellant. Lazzelle & Stewart, for appellee.

POFFENBARGER, J. His bill for a divorce from bed and board having been dismissed and relief denied him, the plaintiff obtained this appeal.

On its face, the bill is sufficient as one for a limited divorce on the ground of abandonment and desertion. It charges that on the 9th day of September, 1908, the defendant, without any just cause and in the absence of the plaintiff, deserted and abandoned him, without his knowledge or consent, and took up her residence with her father, where she has since remained. It sets up all jurisdictional facts. These are admitted by the answer; but the charge of desertion is emphatically denied and resisted. Admitting her absence from the plaintiff's place of abode and the date of her leaving, the defendant charges misconduct on the part of the plaintiff as reason or excuse for her absence, and relies upon these facts as a bar to the relief asked.

Married on the 18th day of March, 1908, a female child was born to the parties, July 18, 1908. On their marriage, they took up their residence in a small house owned by the plaintiff's father and in which his widowed aunt had resided for some years. There seems to have been no serious trouble between the plaintiff and defendant; but the latter complains of the conduct of the aunt, with whom she had a quarrel on the day on which she left. She charges other previous difficulties with her and neglect and unkindness on the part of the husband. On or about the day of her leaving, she told her husband she could not get along with the aunt and requested him to obtain another place of residence. To this he replied that he could not rent two or three houses. Then a conversation occurred between him and the mother-in-law on the same subject. The latter charged him with having mistreated her daughter, in that he had failed to go out with her or give her money and told him the wife intended to leave and take the child. To this he replied that, if the mother-in-law intended to run the business, she might do so, but he proposed to run his own business. He says that, before leaving the house, he declared his willingness to take care of the wife as long as she should stay with him. In her testimony, the wife says she was unable to live with her aunt, and that when the latter ordered her out she does not see why she had not the right to go. The husband has never asked her to return, nor made any effort to induce her to do so. Nor has he visited her or communicated with her, except as he casually met her on one or two occasions. After she left, he seems not to have made any inquiry about her or to have cared whether she returned or not.

[4] Mere absence of one spouse from the other, though voluntary, does not constitute desertion. Not only must cohabitation cease, but there must be intent in the mind of the offending party to desert or abandon the other, and these two ingredients must combine and coexist. Alkire v. Alkire, 33 W. Va. 517, 11 S. E. 11; Martin v. Martin, 33 W. Va. 695, 11 S. E. 12. Though the statute allows a divorce a mensa et thoro for abandonment or desertion, in general terms, and does not in express words require willfulness, it must be assumed that the legislators, in drafting and enacting it, intended such abandonment and desertion as is generally recognized and treated as sufficient ground for a limited divorce. So this court has construed the statute.

Nothing else considered, we might say the declared intention of the defendant to leave, her actual departure and failure to return, make a case for divorce under this view of the statute. Both her declarations and acts are indicative of intent. There was a cessation of cohabitation, coupled with declarations of intent. The inference or conclusion to which these facts tend is opposed, however, by her willingness, avowed in her answer and protested in her testimony, to renew cohabitation, provided the plaintiff will separate himself from the company of his aunt. At the time, she requested him to obtain another house, and still says she is willing to cohabit with him, if he will do so. Insufficiency of these protestations is charged on the ground that they are conditional. Though conditional, they, taken in connection with other facts and circumstances, may be sufficient to preclude the relief asked for by the plaintiff and sustain the decree appealed from. Whether they are or not depends upon the consideration and application of principles now to be stated.

[3] Alleged fatality of this condition is founded upon the supposed absolute right of the husband to determine the place of domicile. This right is stated by Schouler, in his work on Husband and Wife, at section 59, as follows: "And the husband, as dignior persona, has the right to fix it (the domicile) where he pleases. The wife's domicile merges in that of her husband." But, in the same section, he qualifies the proposition as follows: "In the genuine sense the domicile of the husband becomes that of the wife, and wherever he goes she is bound to go likewise; not, however, unless his intent be bona fide and without fraud upon her person or property rights." At section 61 he says: "A husband would not be permitted to remove his wife to some remote and undesirable place for the sake of punishing or tormenting her, or so as to compel her to stay alone where he did not mean to reside himself; for this would not fix the matrimonial domicile with honest intent." This principle was applied in Powell v. Powell, 29 Vt. 148, in a case very similar in one respect to this. The wife had refused to live with her husband in a particular locality in close proximity to his relatives. He applied for a divorce on the ground of desertion which the trial court refused. In affirming this decree, the Supreme Court, through Redfield, C. J., said: "Now, while we recognize fully the right of the husband to direct the affairs of his own house, and to determine the place of the abode of the family, and that it is in general the duty of the wife to submit to such determinations, it is still not an entirely arbitrary power which the husband exercises in these matters. He must exercise reason and discretion in regard to them. * * * Any man who has proper tenderness and affection for his wife would certainly not require her to reside near his relatives, if her peace of mind were thereby seriously disturbed." Other cases declaring and applying the same doctrine are Gleason v. Gleason, 4 Wis. 64;

Bishop v. Bishop, 30 Pa. 412; and Boyce v. Boyce, 23 N. J. Eq. 337.

[1] The conduct of the husband in fixing the place and conditions of the matrimonial residence may subject him to the application of another principle of almost universal observance. In seeking a divorce, he cannot obtain the benefit of his own wrong. Courts are ordained for the enforcement and vindication of the law and legal rights. They never aid anybody in efforts to violate law nor give him the benefit or fruit of his own violation thereof. No court of law or equity will enforce or give any right upon an illegal contract. Following the same principle, a court will not allow the use of its powers and process to obtain a benefit founded directly upon a breach of law by the applicant therefor. Courts of equity go still further and refuse relief, even in cases of equitable right, if the applicant has been guilty of fraud or misconduct in or about the matter in respect to which he seeks relief. Peters v. Case, 62 W. Va. 33, 57 S. E. 733, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 408; Hogg's Eq. Prin. § 324, p. 450. To obtain relief in a court of equity, the plaintiff must come with clean hands, and this maxim applies in divorce cases as well as in others of equitable cognizance. This is the principle underlying the defenses of connivance, collusion, and recrimination, everywhere recognized and permitted. Bishop, Mar., Div. & Sep. §§ 201-409, inclusive; Wass v. Wass, 41 W. Va. 126, 23 S. E. 537; Pierce v. Pierce, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 299, 15 Am. Dec. 210; Myers v. Myers, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 114; Danforth v. Danforth, 105 Ill. 603. [2] Conduct sufficient to bar relief need not be such as would give the defendant cause for a divorce. Remedy and divorce are different things. Conduct sometimes denies remedy for apparent rights. Inequitable conduct on the part of the plaintiff, though it does not amount to cause for a divorce, suffices to defeat his application for relief. A different conclusion would be violative of the fundamental principle just stated. Adherence to that principle is necessary to the protection of the interest the state has in every suit for divorce. Marriage was instituted for the good of society. Once incurred, the marital relation must be continued, if continuance thereof is reasonably practicable, for the same reason: Its solemnity and importance as a factor in civilization forbid severance of the relation for slight cause. To allow both parties to dissolve the relation at will, or one of them to effect dissolution by trickery or fraud, would tend directly to defeat all the high and necessary purposes for which marriage was ordained. These are some of the obvious reasons for the application of the equitable maxim and legal principle in numerous cases of denial of relief. Bacon v. Bacon (decided at this term) 70 S. E. 762; Wass v. Wass, cited; Cooper v. Cooper, 17 Mich. 205, 97 Am. Dec. 182; Mc-

Gowen v. McGowen, 52 Tex. 357; Simpson v. Simpson, 31 Mo. 24; Ingersoll v. Ingersoll, 49 Pa. 249, 88 Am. Dec. 500; Goldbeck v. Goldbeck, 18 N. J. Eq. 42; Lynch v. Lynch, 33 Md. 328; Gray v. Gray, 15 Ala. 779; Crow v. Crow, 23 Ala. 533.

Viewing the facts disclosed by the record in the light of these principles, we are unable to say the trial court erred in refusing a decree of divorce. The plaintiff married a woman with whom he had previously had illicit intercourse. He knew her character and history when he married her. His entire conduct indicates a desire for separation and relief from the marriage relation, and likely because of her character. As to this, he made his election when he made her his life companion. He took her to a house occupied by an aged relative, where she says her relations were unpleasant. He gave her no public recognition as his wife otherwise than by living and cohabiting with her at that place. He refused to go out with her in public or to accompany her even upon visits to her own parents. When she expressed her dissatisfaction with her surroundings and treatment, he made not the slightest effort to comply with her wishes. His ultimatum was that he would support and keep her, if she would accede to his arbitrary will and determination as to the place in which, and the conditions under which, they should live together. Knowing her dissatisfaction with this and her intention, not to desert him absolutely, but to withdraw from that place, and her willingness to live with him under other conditions, he did not even request her to stay, nor ask her to return, nor in any way indicate a desire to renew cohabitation. There was no serious obstacle to his complying with the wish and desire she expressed. The house did not belong to him, and he had nothing invested in it. According to his own contention and claim, he had simply taken the place of his aunt as tenant of the house and paid rent for it. How much rent or for what period of time, he does not disclose. This conduct is not consistent with good faith and an honest effort to maintain the solemn relation he had assumed. In Martin v. Martin, Judge English well expressed a proposition, in full and complete harmony with the principles we are applying, in the following terms: "In assuming the marriage relation, it is understood that the contracting parties do so fully aware of the frailties and imperfections of human nature, and conscious of the fact that mutual forbearance must be practiced to enable them to pursue pleasantly the journey of life as companions; each party undertaking to overlook the moral wrongs and infirmities of the other. The best interests of society, decency, and morality combine in demanding that the obligations taken upon themselves, by the parties who enter into the marriage contract, should not be abandoned and disregarded upon the mere whim or caprice of either party, or upon slight cause, real or imaginary."

Seeing no error in the decree, we affirm it.

(69 W. Va. 197)

WARD v. HOTEL RANDOLPH CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. RECEIVERS. (§ 35*)—APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT—NECESSITY FOR NOTICE.

Notice must be given to parties interested of an application for appointment of a receiver, except in case of emergency, or when the application is made after process served and in term and the bill asks the appointment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Receivers, Cent. Dig. §§ 54-60; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

2. RECEIVERS (§ 5*)—APPOINTMENT—VALIDITY.

An appointment of a receiver, though the bill ask it, made without process served, and before decree on the merits, without affidavit to support the application, is erroneous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Receivers, Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. EQUITY (§ 273*)—PLEADING—AMENDMENT TO BILL—DEPARTURE.

Where the original bill praying appointment of a receiver called only for a receiver, an amended bill, doing the same, and stating matters supposed to sustain the application, and further asking a dissolution and winding up of the company, is neither inconsistent with the original bill, nor foreign nor ungernant to it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Dec. Dig. § 273.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Randolph County.

Bill by Wirt C. Ward against the Hotel Randolph Company, John Wilson, and others. From an order appointing a receiver, defendant Wilson appeals. Reversed and remanded.

D. H. Hill Arnold, for appellant. Jared L. Wamsley, for appellee.

BRANNON, J. In this case this court rendered a decree reversing the action of the circuit court in appointing a receiver. Ward v. Hotel Randolph Company, 65 W. Va. 721, 68 S. E. 613. We held that the original bill was only a bill to get a receiver, and that such a bill, for that purpose only, could not be sustained. When the case went back to the circuit court, Ward presented an amended bill asking for a receiver and a dissolution of the corporation and a winding up of its affairs. The court made an order appointing a receiver to take charge of the hotel and carry on its business. The decree went no further, decreed no relief. No process to answer the amended bill was issued before said decree was made. No notice was given to Wilson of the application for the appointment of the receiver. The amended bill was not sworn to; no affidavit to support the appointment was filed.

[1] We think it was error to appoint this receiver without notice to Wilson, a large stockholder. In Bargain House v. St. Clair, 58 W. Va. 585, 52 S. E. 660, we held: "There is no principle of the law of receivership of greater wisdom, and more firmly established, than that requiring notice of the application." Likewise in Batson v. Findley, 52 W. Va. 343, 43 S. E. 142. Such is the law everywhere, as shown in 34 Cyc. 117. An emergency case is excepted. Now, Wilson was a defendant to this cause, deeply interested in such appointment as a stockholder. The plaintiff deemed it necessary to give him notice, and did give him notice before the first appointment of a receiver. If the plaintiff regarded it necessary to give him notice then, why not necessary on the second application? If process to answer the amended bill had been served, it would be different, as the bill asks the appointment of a receiver; but there was no process or notice. The appointment was made simply on the showing of the unsustained bill.

[2] It does not meet this objection to suggest that the order was made in a pending suit, and therefore no notice was required. A receiver may, after process served, be appointed in term in a pending suit, if the bill asks it; but there was no process on the amended bill, the only pleading justifying the appointment, as we held the original bill did not in our former decision.

The former decree in this case distinctly held that good cause must be shown for the appointment. But in this case no cause was shown except the mere statement of the unverified bill. It will not do to say that the affidavit to the original bill would dispense with a verification of the amended bill, because the amended bill made statements not stated in the original bill, charged insolvency, and contained other matter in addition to that. That the corporation consented does not matter, as it could not represent Wilson's interest, and as it appears to the court that Wilson had adverse interest, and appealed from the former appointment, and thus opposed the appointment. Conflict of interest thus existed. 34 Cyc. 114, contains this text: "Regularly a motion for a receiver should be founded upon affidavits, or, as in the practice of some states, on a bill sworn to by the complainant or by some one cognizant of the facts stated." It is stated in 17 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 736, that: "A petition for a receiver should be verified by affidavit, and both the petition and the verifying affidavit must be positives, as must also other affidavits filed in support of or in opposition to the application." Alderson on Receivers, § 132, tells us that there must be such affidavit.

[3] The point is made against the amended bill that it is a departure from the original bill and cannot be entertained. We do not sustain this position. We held that the original bill called only for a receiver. The amended bill does the same, stating matters supposed to sustain the application, and it further asks a dissolution and winding up of the hotel company. We do not think that the amended bill is either inconsistent with the original bill or foreign or ungermane to it. This appeal is only from the order appointing the receiver. Answers were filed in the case, but that was after the appointment, and they have not been passed upon by the court. The order was made simply on the amended bill and the prior record.

We will reverse the order appointing a receiver and remand the case for further proceedings.

(68 W. Va. 194)

HUDKINS et al. v. BUSH.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 334*)—APPOINTMENT—PROOF.

A mere certificate by a clerk that by an order of his court a certain person had been appointed a receiver is not admissible to prove, and does not prove, such appointment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1266-1272; Dec. Dig. § 334.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 270*)—ACTIONS AGAINST—PROOF OF OPERATION OF RAILROAD BY RECEIVER.

In an action against a receiver of a railroad company to recover damages for killing cattle by a train, it must be proven that the railroad was being operated by a receiver.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 865; Dec. Dig. § 270.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Randolph County.

Action by B. Hudkins and others against B. F. Bush, receiver of the Western Maryland Railroad Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

Talbott & Hoover and W. B. Maxwell, for plaintiffs in error. Benjamin A. Richmond and E. A. Bowers, for defendant in error.

BRANNON, J. B. Hudkins and W. G. Hudkins brought an action of trespass on the case against B. F. Bush, receiver of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, to recover damages for killing some cattle on the railroad track, and the court, on motion of the defendant, excluded the plaintiffs' evidence and directed a verdict for the defendant, and on such verdict gave judgment for the defendant, and the plaintiffs sued out a writ of error.

[1] At the start we come across the question of the appointment of the receiver. The only evidence thereof is a paper called a certificate of facts, if we can say that even that is a part of the record. It is a paper by which S. B. Harrison, clerk of the Circuit Court of the United States, certifies that by an order entered of record Bush was appointed receiver of "all the lands, properties, railroads, franchises and premises embraced in and covered by a certain mortgage given by the Western Maryland Railroad Company to secure bonds." There is no copy of the order of appointment of a receiver. All the books seem to say that this is necessary. Before the statute dispensing with proof of incorporation, where a corporation was sued or suing, its existence must have been proven. Such was the common-law rule. Central Land Co. v. Calhoun, 16 W. Va. 362, pt. 7; Grays v. Turnpike Co., 4 Rand. (Va.) 578. Why should not a receiver prove his appointment? The paper we have is only the opinion of Harrison as to the effect of the order, his construction of it. The best evidence of a document is the document itself speaking for itself to the court. This paper is not even secondary evidence, and is wholly abortive to prove the appointment. Dickinson v. Railroad Co., 7 W. Va. 390; Anderson v. Nagle, 12 W. Va. 98, 112; Roe v. Town, 45 W. Va. 785, 32 S. E. 224. The general issue put in contest each and every material allegation of the declaration. If Bush was not receiver, there was no liability on him as such. His liability as such was one of the elements of the case. It is hardly worth while to advert to the old rule that, where a record attests a fact, that record must be produced. It or a copy, not of the whole record, but of the order of appointment, is the best evidence and must be produced. Beach on Receivers, § 703; 10 Encyclopedia of Evidence, 659.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[2] Then another question occurs. Some receivers have power of operation, some have not, dependent on the terms and powers given by the order of appointment. Even that certificate of facts does not answer this question. Was this receiver in the actual operation of this railroad and liable as such? It does not appear that such were his powers or liabilities.

And then again, was not the burden on the plaintiffs to show that the train which did the injury was a train in the hands of the receiver and operated by his servants? All the declarations against railroads for injuries of this kind charge that the railroad on which the misfortune occurs is the property of a given company, and that the train doing the injury is a train of that company. True, where a company is in charge of a railroad, it is presumed that trains on it belong to it; but in this case it must be shown whose train this was. If it was not a train of this receiver, he would not be liable.

If your charge that an injury was received from a horse of a certain person, you must prove that it was his horse. If you charge that a defendant committed assault and battery, you must prove that he did the act. We suppose this is fundamental and plain. "The plaintiff has the burden of proof that the defendant railroad company owned and operated the railroad from which his injuries were received, where that is made an issue by the pleading." 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1777. The plea of not guilty put this in issue in this case. In Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Stockdell, 159 Ind. 28, 62 N. E. 22, we find this: "The averments in the complaint that the appellant, the Citizens' Street Railway Company, owned and operated the railroad, and that the appellee was received by it as a passenger, were of the most material character, and the facts so alleged constituted the very foundation of the appellee's claim for damages. Each of these allegations was expressly denied and was put in issue by the answer." It was held there could be no recovery for want of this evidence. So, in this case it must be proven that this train belonged to the receiver. "A failure to prove that the defendant corporation owned or operated the road or car in question must be fatal to appellee's cause. The general denial filed by the appellant puts every material fact in issue." Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Lawn, 30 Ind. App. 515, 66 N. E. 508. Since writing to this point I happen to meet with the following text in Alderson on Receivers, § 569, p. 776: "There is no presumption that persons were appointed receivers because they have acted as such. The appointment must be alleged and proved. It has been declared that the only proof that should be made of the appointment of a receiver is a certified copy of the appointing order."

So, we think that the case fails for want of evidence above stated, and that the court did not err in its action. Essential facts were not proven to sustain the action.

This renders it unnecessary for us to pass on other features of the case, and we affirm the judgment.

(66 W. Va. 160)

FEDER v. HAGER et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PUBLIC LANDS (§ 186*)—SALE—DECREE.

A decree of sale, reciting that the land proceeded against and directed to be sold is "school land" or "waste and unappropriated land," is sufficient prima facie evidence of the state's title to meet the requirements of points 3 and 4 of the syllabus in this case on former writ of error. 64 W. Va. 452, 63 S. E. 285.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Dec. Dig. § 186.*]

2. PUBLIC LANDS (§ 186*)—SCHOOL LANDS—IDENTITY OF LAND SOLD.

The whole of the record of proceedings for the sale of school lands, together with the deed made in pursuance thereof, should be looked to for the purpose of identifying land thereby sold as land now in controversy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 599; Dec. Dig. § 186.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Boone County.

Action by Julius C. Feder, as administrator, against John W. Hager and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed, and judgment rendered.

Payne & Payne and Brown, Jackson & Knight, for plaintiff in error. F. C. Leftwich and W. R. Thompson, for defendants in error.

ROBINSON, J. An understanding of this unlawful entry and detainer case may be had by reference to the opinion on a former writ of error. 64 W. Va. 452, 63 S. E. 685. It will there be observed that the judgment was reversed and the case remanded for a new trial. Plaintiff had not fully traced his title to the state. He relied upon a deed from a commissioner of school lands, but did not sufficiently support that deed by the record of the proceedings in which it was authorized to be made. We held that "such parts of the record of the court proceedings upon which the deed is based as show forfeiture of the land or title thereto in the state are necessary as prima facie evidence that the deed carried the state's title," and that "the court proceedings introduced to support the deed are not evidence that the state had title which was thereby conveyed, if they contain no reference to such facts of title."

There has been another trial of the case—one by the court in lieu of a jury. All the evidence on the former trial was again considered, by agreement of the parties. In addition, plaintiff introduced a decree for the sale of school lands, entered in the proceedings which were the basis of the deed through which he claims. This decree directs the sale of the land as school land—waste and unappropriated land. Plaintiff also proved that the title under which defendants claim to hold was forfeited at the time of the sale pursuant to this decree. Besides, plaintiff proved that he and those under whom he holds have regularly been charged with the taxes on the land and have paid the same. On defendants' part, the evidence on the new trial was practically the same as that on the former one. The court found for defendants and entered judgment in their favor. The right to possession which plaintiff claimed by the action was thereby denied him, and he has prosecuted the writ of error now under consideration.

We are well satisfied that the judgment is erroneous. Plaintiff proved good title to the land and upon it was entitled to possession as against defendants who claim possession under an inferior title. Plaintiff traced his title to the state. He showed a complete and superior title to the land. Being the real owner he is entitled to possession as against those claiming under an inferior title. "Entry upon land by any person other than the legal owner is unlawful, if it be without the owner's consent." Defendants were not in possession by consent of plaintiff, who shows himself the legal owner, and they should have been ousted.

In this new trial, plaintiff supplied everything that we held to be wanting on the former trial. He made the prima facie case which we there prescribed. Defendants did not meet the case so made. Plaintiff introduced court proceedings to support the deed of the commissioner of school lands, which proceedings contained references to the fact that the land belonged to the state and was liable to be sold for the benefit of the school fund. The decree of sale certainly meets every requirement in this particular. It recites that the land was "school land" and that it was "waste and unappropriated."

[1] These recitals take the title to the state. In our former opinion herein we said: "If there was a single declaration in such record that the land proceeded against was forfeited, treated as forfeited or belonging to the state, it would be prima facie evidence of such fact. If a report of state lands liable to sale, by the proper officer, or decree of sale reciting such report, treated the land as belonging to the state, it would be sufficient until rebutted. Strader v. Goff, 6 W. Va. 268." The decree of sale, now introduced, recites a report of state lands liable to sale, made by the proper officer, and that decree in terms treats the land so reported and now involved in this suit as then belonging to the state. So the requirements of our former holding have been met.

[2] Defendants contend, however, that the particular tract of land now in controversy is not identified as the land mentioned in that decree. They say that plaintiff failed in proof because the decree, reciting the report of state lands liable to sale and directing sale thereof, does not name a tract that fits the land plaintiff claims. If we look only to the decree of sale, that may be true. But the report of survey, the decree confirming sale, and the deed made in pursuance of the last named decree, sufficiently identify the land now claimed by plaintiff as the Tract No. 8 named in the decree of sale which recites that it was state land when proceeded against for the benefit of the school fund.

The judgment will be reversed, and judgment that plaintiff have possession of the land as against defendants will now be entered here.

(69 W. Va. 171)

FIRST NAT. BANK OF PHILIPPI v. KITTLE et al.(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)(Syllabus by the Court.)PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 115)—DISCHARGE OF SURETIES—NEGLIGENCE OF CREDITOR.

A creditor is bound to use proper care and diligence in the management and collection of collateral securities; and a surety will be released, to the extent of the loss actually sustained by the negligence of the creditor, to the same extent, as if such loss was due to some positive act of the creditor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 244-268; Dec. Dig. § 115.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Barbour County.

Action by the First National Bank of Philippi against Mary D. Kittle and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Fred O. Blue and Arthur D. Dayton, for plaintiff in error. William T. George and John B. Dilworth, for defendants in error.

MILLER, J. In an action by plaintiff, before a justice, against V. W. and Mary D. Kittle and C. W. Brandon, defendants, on a note for two hundred dollars, plaintiff recovered a judgment against all defendants for the full amount of the note, interest and costs.

Defendants, Mary D. Kittle, wife of V. W. Kittle, and C. W. Brandon, though joint makers, were in fact sureties for V. W. Kittle, and they alone appealed, the judgment of the justice against V. W. Kittle, principal, remaining in full force, and unappealed from.

On the trial of the appeal in the circuit court, the court on defendants' motion, struck out plaintiff's evidence, and directed a verdict in their favor, and from the judgment below, of nil capiat, and for costs, the plaintiff obtained this writ of error.

The defense of the sureties before the justice, and in the circuit court on appeal, was, that the bank, at the time of note sued on, had required of V. W. Kittle, principal, additional security, and who then, September 20, 1905, assigned to the bank, to use the language of the assignment, "two hundred dollars of the amount due me by the county court of Barbour County for work done under contract with said court for court square paving, as collateral security, for the payment of said note;" and that by the negligence of the bank in failing to give notice of said assignment, and to take such steps as was necessary to preserve its own rights and the rights of defendants as sureties, the same had been lost, or surrendered, and the sureties thereby discharged.

For the bank it was replied, that Mary D. Kittle was estopped from denying her liability, on the grounds, first, that after the trial and judgment by the justice, she had, on October 1, 1906, joined with her husband, V. W. Kittle, in a deed to one Golden for a house and lot belonging to her, by which deed the grantee, in part consideration, had covenanted to pay said judgment, then a lien on said lot; second, that subsequently, in a chancery suit of George against her, said debt had been reported, and decreed as a debt and lien on said house and lot; third, that subsequently in a suit by Howell against said Golden's administrator, and others, said judgment was reported and decreed as a personal debt against said Golden, and decreed to be paid out of his estate; and that if said debt or any part of it, should be paid out of that estate, Mary D. Kittle would be relieved pro tanto therefrom.

And as applicable to both defendants, it was said, that the bank was not bound to the utmost, or even active diligence, while the sureties remained passive; and that in as much as said assignment was only collateral, and that on October 13, 1905, before said note fell due, orders were issued and paid as follows: one to V. W. Kittle, for $247.50; another for $76.84; and another to V. W. Kittle, for the use of said Charles W. Brandon, for $336.76; and that on April 10, 1906, three days after Kittle's assignment to the bank had been filed in the clerk's office of said court, said court, disregarding said assignment, had paid directly to V. W. Kittle, $112.50, for extra work on said court square, the defendants have not been prejudiced by any neglect or want of diligence on the part of plaintiff.

The fact of said collateral assignment is not denied, but fully established by the proof; and it is scarcely denied that the bank was negligent, grossly negligent, in failing to present said assignment, or give notice to the county court thereof, and demand payment. If it had done so, there is no reason to believe, and it is not shown, or pretended, that the county court would not willingly and without objection, have paid the bank the money which it did pay directly to Kittle. It is contended, however, that the county court was not bound to accept and pay a partial assignment of the amount due Kittle; but in equity, if not at law, it was. At all events, it is not shown that the county court declined to honor said assignment. The assignment was never presented, and the court given an opportunity to honor and pay, until it had actually paid out the money actually assigned to Kittle and others. We must say, therefore, on the evidence, that the bank lost this security, by its negligence.

We see nothing in the suggestion of counsel, in argument, based on Railway Co. v. Coal Co., 44 W. Va. 574, 30 S. E. 196, 41 L. R. A. 414, that the justice had no jurisdiction to try the rights of defendants as sureties, because equitable in nature. The fact that it might have been necessary for the bank or the sureties finally to enforce its or their rights by a suit in equity, furnishes no excuse for the negligence of the bank. That loss by its negligence constituted a legal defense to the action against the sureties.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

But was the bank bound to active diligence? The authorities cited and relied on by plaintiff's counsel, hold, that a creditor is not bound to active diligence in pursuing his principal debtor, unless required by the sureties to do so. But this proposition, and the authority cited for it, we think, inapplicable to the duty of a creditor, respecting collateral securities in his hands. With respect to such securities the authorities all hold the creditor bound to use proper care and diligence in the management and collection of such collateral, and that a surety is released, to the extent of the loss, actually sustained, by the negligence of the creditor, to the same extent as if lost by the positive act of the creditor. This proposition we think fully sustained by the following: 1 Brandt on Suretyship (3d Ed.) §§ 480, 481, 482, and 498; Clow v. Derby Coal Co., 98 Pa. 432; Phares v. Barbour, 49 Ill. 370; Hall v. Hoxsey, 84 Ill. 616; Bank v. Parsons, 42 W. Va. 137, 24 S. E. 554; 32 Cyc. 216, and many cases cited in notes; Davenport v. Banking Co., 115 Am. St. Rep. 100, note page 100.

If the bank had given due notice to the county court, or filed said assignment in time to preserve its and the sureties rights thereunder, the bank might not have been bound, in order to preserve its rights against defendants, to have pursued the county court by suit. It was, however, in the interest of the sureties, bound to preserve those rights by diligence. It is shown in this case to have neglected that duty.

It is very clear therefore, unless Mrs. Kittle is estopped by her acts, as claimed, from denying her liability; or she and her co-defendant Brandon have not been prejudiced by the negligence of the plaintiff in the premises, that they have both presented complete defenses to the action.

We do not find any element of estoppel in the fact that in the deed to Golden, Golden covenanted to pay the bank, the judgment recovered before the justice, then pending in the circuit court on appeal, by Mrs. Kittle and Brandon; nor in the fact that in the subsequent decrees in the two chancery cases referred to, that judgment was allowed and decreed. Those decrees were involuntary on her part. The plaintiff was in no way prejudiced by anything done or omitted by Mrs. Kittle. When she sold her property to Golden the lien of the judgment existed. Some provision had to be made to protect the purchaser. The parties chose to make such provision in the deed. The bank was no party to that agreement, did not rely thereon to its prejudice. For this reason plaintiff is not in a position to plead estoppel.

For a like reason it may be said with respect to the decrees in the chancery suits. The judgment of the bank had been recovered. It was a lien as it stood, though appealed from, certainly as to V. W. Kittle. Evidently nothing was ever realized by the bank in those suits, and we do not see anything in the record thereof, so far as presented, estopping Mrs. Kittle in this action.

But were defendants prejudiced by the negligence of the plaintiff? They were not, if as intimated in the record and in argument, either got the money, or the benefit thereof, paid out on orders of the county court to Kittle, subsequent to said assignment. That Mrs. Kittle is the wife of V. W. Kittle, without more, is not sufficient to show that she was benefited in such a way as to excuse the bank from loss due to its negligence. It is not proven, or attempted to be, that Brandon did not have a bona fide debt against Kittle for the amount of the order of the county court to his use; or that he was in any way benefited by the orders issued in favor of Kittle individually; or that either Mrs. Kittle or Brandon knew, as a fact, that the bank had not presented its assignment to the county court, and protected its own rights as creditor, and their rights as sureties.

For these considerations, we conclude that that the judgment below was right, and should be affirmed.

(99 W. Va. 158)

TUNNEY v. WHEELING STEEL & IRON CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF (§ 38*)—TIME FOR SAVING—ADJOURNED TERM OF COURT.

A bill of exceptions in relation to a judgment entered at a term which is adjourned thereafter to an adjourned term must be saved either before the adjournment to the adjourned term or within thirty days after that adjournment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Exceptions, Bill of, Cent. Dig. §§ 49-53; Dec. Dig. § 38.*]

2. EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF (§ 41*)—TIME FOR SAVING—ADJOURNED TERM OF COURT.

The thirty days allowed for the taking of a bill of exceptions, when the exceptions relate to a judgment entered at a term which is adjourned to an adjourned term, run from the date of that adjournment, and not from the end of the adjourned term.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Exceptions, Bill of, Cent. Dig. § 69; Dec. Dig. § 41.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Ohio County.

Action by Martin Tunney against the Wheeling Steel & Iron Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Hubbard & Hubbard, for plaintiff in error. T. S. Riley, for defendant in error.

ROBINSON, J. In an action for the recovery of damages for personal injury received by the plaintiff while in the employment of the defendant, based on allegations of breach of duty on the part of the latter, the plaintiff has judgment, through the verdict of a jury. The defendant complains thereof and seeks to have the same reversed.

The assignment that the court erred in overruling the demurrer to the declaration is not well taken. A careful consideration of that pleading proves it to be one stating sufficiently a good cause of action.

The other assignments, relating to the evidence and the instructions to the jury, cannot be considered. The bill of exceptions embracing these matters was not signed within the time required by law; so the evidence and instructions have not been made a part of the record.

[1] A bill of exceptions must be signed and made a part of the record during the term or within thirty days after its adjournment. From a supplemental record, brought up by certiorari according to the usual practice, it appears that there was an adjournment of the term at which the judgment was entered to an adjourned term, and that the bill of exceptions was signed and certified more than thirty days after that adjournment. When a term is adjourned to an adjourned term, a judgment theretofore entered at the term becomes final for execution or enforcement. An adjournment of that character affects a judgment just as a final adjournment does. Code 1906, c. 112, § 4. The term is finally ended as far as the judgment is concerned. Helms v. Cold Storage Co., 65 W. Va. 203, 63 S. E. 1089. [2] The thirty days for the taking of bills of exceptions in relation thereto must run from that time. The exceptions cannot be saved within thirty days after the end of the adjourned term, as has been undertaken in this case.

Prior to the enactment of the statute giving thirty days for bills of exceptions, it was necessary to take them before the adjournment of the term. They had to be made a part of the record during the term at which the judgment was entered. Under the old law, they had to be taken before an adjournment to an adjourned term. Wickes v. Railroad Co., 14 W. Va. 157. Now, the new law giving thirty days is one merely extending the former time. "Extension of time is the substance of it. It contemplates nothing else. That is its main object." Layne v. Railway Co., 66 W. Va. 611, 67 S. E. 1103. So the extension must run from the time that formerly barred the taking of exceptions. The adjournment contemplated in the statute of extension is the adjournment at which the term is ended in relation to the judgment as to which bills of exceptions are to be taken. It was not intended to give more than thirty days after the finality of the judgment.

The record calls for an affirmance; it will be entered.

(69 W. Va. 163)

SHAFFER v. SHAFFER et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PARTITION (§ 32*)—ACTION BY GUARDIAN.

A widow, entitled to dower, may maintain a suit as guardian for her infant children to have land inherited and owned by such infants and adults partitioned, and to have her dower therein assigned to her.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. § 83; Dec. Dig. § 32.*]

2. PARTITION (§ 8*)—DEED BETWEEN TENANTS IN COMMON—EFFECT.

A deed between tenants in common, cotenants or coparceners, by which in an effort at partition, they each convey or quit claim to the others, the portions allotted to them respectively, conveys no title to the grantee; it amounts simply to a severance of the unity of possession.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. § 20; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 747*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—JUDGMENT IN PARTITION.

Although section 1, chapter 79, Code 1906, confers jurisdiction on a circuit court in a partition suit, to adjudicate all questions of law affecting the legal title, that may arise therein, a decree or judgment in such suit is as conclusive as in other suits; nevertheless, if no issues affecting the title are presented for decision, or the decision of which was necessarily involved therein, such judgment and decree invests no title in the partitioners.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1286; Dec. Dig. § 747.*]

4. JUDGMENT (§ 747*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—JUDGMENT IN PARTITION.

A decree in a suit brought by a husband and wife, partitioning land, and of which the bill alleges the wife's father died seized and possessed, and which decree divides and partitions to the husband and wife jointly the part inherited by the wife, without pleadings putting in issue any conflicting rights between plaintiffs, invests no title in the husband to the wife's land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1286; Dec. Dig. § 747.*]

5. JUDGMENT (§ 747*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—PARTITION.

But such a decree will not afterwards estop the husband or his heirs from showing right and title to an interest in the land so partitioned, acquired by deed from the wife's father in his life time, such decree not being inconsistent with such deed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1286; Dec. Dig. § 747.*]

6. EVIDENCE (§ 182*)—SECONDARY EVIDENCE—PROOF OF LOSS OF ANCIENT DEED.

If an ancient deed be lost, but its existence and contents be proven by oral evidence, and it be also proven to have been recently in the possession of and produced by the grantee, and such account thereof is given, as might be reasonably expected, under all the circumstances, such oral evidence is admissible to establish such deed or grant, without otherwise proving the due execution and delivery thereof; and such deed will be treated as presumptively genuine, until such presumption is overcome by evidence to the contrary.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 601-604; Dec. Dig. § 182.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Preston County. Bill by Hannah S. Shaffer, individually and as guardian of her children, against Charles H. Shaffer and others. From the decree, certain defendants appeal. Affirmed.

F. E. Parrack and A. G. Hughes, for appellants. P. J. Crogan, for appellee.

MILLER, J. Hannah S. Shaffer, widow of Draper C. Shaffer, in her own right, and as guardian of her infant children, Dessie G., Asa J., and Alston G., aged respectively, twelve, nine and six years, sued defendants Charles H. and David C. Shaffer, and Vernie M. Pifer, and Samuel Pifer, her husband, making her said infant children also defendants to the bill, seeking partition of a tract of 120 acres of land in Preston County. She alleges that her said husband, at the time of his death, was the owner of an undivided one half interest in said tract, and that the other undivided half interest therein was then owned jointly by said adult defendants, by inheritance from their mother, Mary E. Shaffer, a former wife of said Draper C. Shaffer, and who, with her said infant children, on the death of her said husband, inherited from him, in equal moieties, his one half undivided interest in said land, and of which he so died seized and possessed, subject only to her right of dower therein, and that she and her said infant children were entitled to a partition of said land, and she to have dower assigned to her, according to their respective rights and interests therein.

After defendants had appeared at rules and filed their demurrer, plea and answer to said bill, said infants, by said Hannah S. Shaffer, as next friend, intervened by petition, setting up their rights, substantially as alleged in the bill, and praying that the same might be read in connection therewith, and the two causes heard together, and the land partitioned according to the prayer of said bill. The adult defendants appeared to said petition, and filed an amended plea and answer thereto, and also to said bill. The original and amended pleas were rejected, and the demurrer to the bill was overruled. To the answer and amended answer there was a general replication by plaintiff.

On final hearing, on bill, answers and proofs taken, the decree appealed from adjudged that the said Draper C. Shaffer, as alleged, died seized of an undivided one half interest in said land; that the same was subject to partition among his heirs, as prayed for in the bill, and that partition thereof should be made; and that the commissioners appointed should go upon the land and divide the same into two equal parts, having due regard to quality and quantity, and assign one part thereof to the heirs of Mary E. Shaffer, and the other to the heirs of Draper C. Shaffer; and directed said commissioners to also assign dower to the widow Hannah S. Shaffer in the part allotted to Draper C. Shaffer, giving her a full one third part thereof, having due regard to quality and quantity; and to further divide and partition that part equally between the heirs of the said Draper C. Shaffer, namely, Dessie G., Asa J., Alston G., Charles H. and David C. Shaffer, and Vernie M. Pifer, giving to each a one sixth part, with like regard to quality and quantity; also directing said commissioners to make due report to the court showing said partition, made by metes and bounds, together with a plat thereof. From this decree the adult defendants have appealed.

The errors relied on here are: (1), overruling the demurrer to the bill; (2), striking out defendants' pleas of estoppel; (3), decreeing that Draper C. Shaffer died seized of a one half undivided interest in said land.

[1] First, as to the demurrer. The point made on the demurrer is that Hannah S. Shaffer, as guardian, cannot sue for and on behalf of said infants, and that they should have been sued by their next friend. There is no merit in these propositions. A guardian may maintain a suit for partition of lands owned and held by infants and adults, as in this case. Zirkle v. McCue, 26 Grat. (Va.) 517; Redd v. Jones, 30 Grat. (Va.) 123; Snively v. Harkrader, 29 Grat. (Va.) 112; Suter v. Suter, 70 S. E. 705. Hull v. Hull, 26 W. Va. 1, does not assert a contrary proposition. That was a suit by a widow seeking partition of land of which her husband died seized. She did not sue as guardian for her infants, as did the plaintiff in this case, and that case is distinguished from this, and other cases cited, in this particular. It is proper to make infants defendants in person, but a guardian ad litem must be appointed in the suit to make defense. The demurrer we think was properly overruled.

The questions which the defendants sought to present by pleas in estoppel, are fully covered by their answer. They go to the merits of the case, and need not be considered separately. The question of merit involved is, do the title papers exhibited with bill and answers, and proofs taken, show title in Draper C. Shaffer to an undivided half interest in said tract of land, which descended to his heirs as alleged, entitling plaintiff and petitioners to the partition prayed for?

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep't Indexes

Two sources of title are alleged. The first is, that this tract, prior to 1869, was conveyed by Samuel Elsey, to said Draper C. and Mary E. Shaffer, by deed duly recorded, but that the record thereof had been destroyed by the burning of the court house of Preston county in 1869. It is not only alleged, but proven, that subsequently, and before suit brought, said deed was lost; second, that after the death of said Elsey, occurring about the year 1871, in a friendly suit, brought by said Draper C. and Mary E. Shaffer, against Sarah Elsey and others, a partition of the lands of said Samuel was decreed; that by said decree, pronounced therein on August 21, 1872, said tract, with another tract of eighty five and a quarter acres, were, as reported by said commissioners, partitioned jointly to the said Mary E. and Draper C. Shaffer, and that a special commissioner was thereby also appointed to execute deeds of special warranty to the parties for the lands allotted to them respectively. The fact of the execution and existence of a deed from Samuel Elsey, to Draper C. and Mary E. Shaffer, was denied by the answer and vigorously controverted on the trial.

[2] We will first dispose of the question of title by decree in partition. Did that decree invest in Draper C. Shaffer title to a half interest in said tract? The rule seems well established that a deed between tenants in common, co-tenants, or coparceners, in an effort at voluntary partition, and by which they each convey, or quit claim to the others, the portions allotted to them respectively, conveys no title to the grantee; that it amounts simply to a severance of the unity of possession. Whitsett v. Wamack, 159 Mo. 14, 59 S. W. 961, 81 Am. St. Rep. 339; Harrington v. Rawls, 131 N. C. 39, 42 S. E. 461; Brown v. Humphrey, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 23, 95 S. W. 23; Hays v. Marsh, 123 Iowa, 81, 98 N. W. 604; Carson v. Carson, 122 N. C. 645, 30 S. E. 4; Harrison v. Ray, 108 N. C. 215, 12 S. E. 993, 11 L. R. A. 722, 23 Am. St. Rep. 57; Yancey v. Radford, 86 Va. 638, 10 S. E. 972. And so in Hays v. Marsh, where land of the wife, who was not a party to the suit, was allotted to her husband who was, it was held that she was not bound by the decree, but that subsequent possession by both of the land so allotted to him with the implied consent of the co-tenants, amounted to a parol partition to her of her share in severalty. In Whitsett v. Wamack, it was decided that a deed of release and quit claim, made by two coparceners, to a third and her husband, in an effort at voluntary partition of their jointly inherited estate, conveyed no title to him. And in Yancey v. Radford, (Va.), it was held that a similar deed operated only, (1) as a partition and allotment of the wife's share of the ancestor's realty; (2) that it conveyed no estate to the husband as against the heirs of his wife.

In Carson v. Carson, the third point of the syllabus is: "A deed by heirs to land, which the wife inherited, being made to the husband alone could not be color of title, since it did not convey the wife's interest;" this because, as decided in the third point, the wife's interest, having vested by descent, was not divested by the conveyance to the husband, she not joining in the deed.

[3] But is the law different where there is a suit and a decree of partition? Our statute, section 1, chapter 79, Code 1906, says: "Tenants in common, joint tenants and coparceners, shall be compellable to make partition, and the circuit court of the county wherein the estate, or any part thereof, may be, shall have jurisdiction, in cases of partition, and in the exercise of jurisdiction, may take cognizance of all questions of law affecting the legal title, that may arise in any proceedings." This section clearly gives right to the court to settle any conflicts or questions as to title, certainly as between partitioners who may be compelled to partition, when put in issue by proper pleadings. The pleadings in the partition suit, however, presented no question of right or title as between the plaintiffs. But it is very earnestly insisted in argument that as the bill filed by them jointly alleged that the tract here involved was one of the tracts, among others, of which the wife's father died seized and possessed, plaintiff in this suit, and her wards claiming under him, are estopped by the allegations of that bill, and the decree thereon, from setting up in this suit as against the adult defendants, heirs of said Mary E. Shaffer, a different state of facts, or the fact alleged that prior to said former suit, her father had deeded the land of which partition is here sought to her and her husband jointly.

As to the effect of such a decree, Freeman on Cotenancy and Partition, Second Edition, section 531, page 705, says: "It is, perhaps, unfortunate that judges so often remark that partition confers no new title, but only divides that which the parties previously possessed, because the remark justifies the inference that a judgment in partition has little or no effect upon the title. The truth is that a judgment in partition is as conclusive as any other. It does not create or manufacture a title, nor divest the title of any one not actually or constructively a party to the suit; but it operates by way of estoppel; it prevents any of the parties from relitigating any of the issues presented for decision, and the decision of which necessarily entered into the judgment; and it divests all titles held by any of the parties at the institution of the suit." Note the language, "any of the issues presented for decision, and the decision of which necessarily entered into the judgment." The same doctrine is promulgated in Hart v. Steedman, 98 Mo. 452, 11 S. W. 993, and Lindell Real Estate Co. v. Lindell, 142 Mo.

51, 43 S. W. 368, point nine of the syllabus. Of course if the wife is not a party to the suit in which land inherited by her is partitioned, she is not bound by the decree, no matter what the pleadings may have been. Hays v. Marsh, supra.

[4] Our conclusion from these authorities is, that a proper interpretation of said decree of 1872 standing alone, would be that it invested no title in Draper C. Shaffer, to the share allotted and decreed him and his wife jointly. As against the other parties to that suit it was conclusive, to the extent at least of the allotment to Mrs. Shaffer of her share. But as between the plaintiffs to that suit, that decree decided nothing. No issues, as between them, were there presented, or necessarily involved.

[5] By bringing into hotch pot in that partition suit, land previously deeded to them jointly, and having it so partitioned, we do not think Draper C. Shaffer, or his heirs, became thereby thereafter estopped from asserting his or their rights under the prior deed. If a prior deed invested title to the land in them jointly, there is nothing in the decree inconsistent therewith. We do not think therefore that that decree is conclusive of the rights of the parties under the prior deed, if such deed as alleged has been established by proof.

The question remains then, has the making and delivery of such prior deed been established by legal and competent evidence? While said decree of partition may not be legal and competent evidence on this question, it is at least suggestive of some interest of Draper C. Shaffer. That such a deed was in existence as late as 1904 and 1907, and had been recorded in the proper county, prior to 1869, when the records of that county were in that year wholly destroyed by fire; and that in both of those years it was found in the possession of Draper C. Shaffer, and delivered by him to J. W. Hill, a justice, first, in 1904, to aid him in preparing a deed from said Pifer and wife, conveying to said Charles H. Shaffer, their one third of the one half undivided interest in said tract; and next in 1907, when said justice was then called upon to prepare for David C. Shaffer, a deed conveying to said Charles H. Shaffer, his one third of the one half undivided interest in said tract of land, are facts fully established by the evidence of Justice Hill. Both of these deeds describe the interests conveyed as the interests inherited by the grantors from their mother, said Mary E. Shaffer, deceased, as the owner of a one half undivided interest in said tract. These deeds do not estop the grantors from asserting a larger interest in said tract; but they are at least admissions or declarations by them of the interests then claimed, and evince knowledge on their part at that time, of the right or claims of plaintiffs in this suit. Notwithstanding the fact that the existence of said deed was controverted, not one of the defendants was put upon the stand to deny knowledge thereof. They are all shown to have lived on the land with Draper C. Shaffer, their father; and Charles H. Shaffer, who was living on the land, with his wife, at the time of his father's death, and who testified, was not asked a single question about his knowledge of said deed.

[6] But the contention is that the loss of the deed and its due execution have not been sufficiently proved. Counsel for the parties stipulated on the trial that "the deed alleged to have been made by Samuel Elsey to D. C. Shaffer and wife, and concerning which the witness, J. W. Hill, * * * testified, is not a matter of record in the office of the Clerk of the County Court of Preston County * * * and the same cannot be found or produced." We do not regard this stipulation as an admission of the execution and delivery of said deed; but it is an agreement that if the deed was established, it was lost and could not be produced. Was this not enough to admit oral evidence of the due execution, and contents of the deed? We think so. The evidence of the witness Hill, and the corroborating facts, prove that a deed purporting to have been made by Elsey to Draper C. and Mary E. Shaffer, in the handwriting of a notary public, known to and proven by him, and purporting to have been signed and acknowledged by the grantors, before said notary, and having indorsed upon it the certificate of recordation by the clerk of the county court of said county, in office prior to 1869, when the records of said county were so destroyed by fire, and conveying to said Shaffer and wife jointly said tract of land, was so found in the possession of said Draper C. Shaffer, one of the grantors, in the years 1904 and 1907, and after being used by said Hill in the preparation of said deeds, was in each instance returned by him to said Shaffer. This deed at the time of the trial must then have been over forty years old. If plaintiff had been in possession of said deed and been able to produce it in evidence on the trial below, because of its age and other facts and circumstances shown, it would have been rightly admitted in evidence, without proof of its execution. Caruthers v. Eldridge, 12 Grat. (Va.) 670. On like principle, in our opinion, the correct rule, applicable to a case like this one, is that, if an ancient deed be lost, but its existence and contents be proven by oral evidence; and it be also proven to have been recently in the possession of and produced by the grantee, and such account thereof is given, as might be reasonably expected, under all the circumstances, such oral evidence is admissible to establish such deed or grant, without otherwise proving the due execution and delivery thereof; and such deed will be treated as presumptively genuine, until such presumption is overcome by evidence to the contrary.

So our opinion is that the decree below was right and should be affirmed, and it will be so ordered.

(69 W. Va. 211)

SMITH v. REPPARD.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 53*)—
PRESIDENT OF BOARD OF EDUCATION—VACANCY—APPOINTMENT OF COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

Points of syllabus in Kline v. McKelvey, 57 W. Va. 29, 49 S. E. 896, reaffirmed and applied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Tyler County.

Mandamus by G. W. Smith against M. M. Reppard. Judgment for relator, and respondent brings error. Affirmed.

T. P. Jacobs and Moore & Conaway, for plaintiff in error. J. M. Underwood and B. Engle, for defendant in error.

WILLIAMS, P. M. M. Reppard was elected president of the board of education for Ellsworth district, Tyler county, at the general election in 1902, for the full term of four years, beginning on the 1st of July, 1903, but for some reason did not qualify. He was then appointed by the county superintendent of free schools to fill said office, and qualified by taking the oath required by law, and was in office, claiming the right to hold it, at the institution of this proceeding. At the general election in 1906, F. R. Hickman was elected president of said board of education, for the term of four years, beginning on the 1st of July, 1907; but Hickman failed to qualify, and on the 11th of October, 1907, G. W. Smith was appointed by the county superintendent for the unexpired term for which F. R. Hickman had been elected. Reppard refused to surrender the office to Smith, and claims that, under the law (section 2, c. 45, Code 1906), he had a right to hold the office until his successor was elected and qualified; that, although Hickman was elected, his failure to qualify did not create a vacancy, because he (Reppard) was rightfully in office; and that the county superintendent had no right to appoint as for a vacancy. On application by Smith to the circuit court of Tyler county, a peremptory writ of mandamus was awarded on the 27th of February, 1908, placing him in the office; and Reppard obtained this writ of error.

The sole question presented is, Had the county superintendent the power to appoint relator as for a vacancy? A majority of the court are of opinion that he had such power, and that his appointment of Smith conferred upon him the right to the office. They hold that the law of this case is settled in Kline v. McKelvey, 57 W. Va. 29, 49 S. E. 896, construing section 2, c. 45, Code 1906. They still adhere to that decision as a correct construction of the statute.

If the statute had not been so construed in that case, I would have been of the opinion that the county superintendent had no power to appoint, so long as there was an incumbent rightfully holding. Section 5, c. 45, authorizes the county superintendent to appoint only in case of a vacancy; and I do not see how there could be a vacancy if one was in office who had a right to it. The office of president of the board of education is created by the Legislature, not by the Constitution, and the Legislature had the power to prescribe the term of office, and the manner of election, or appointment. It did so in section 2 by saying a president of board of education shall be elected by the voters of the district, and that his "term of office shall commence on the 1st day of July next after his election, and continue for four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified according to law." There is no provision in this section for appointing his successor, and he is expressly given the right to hold the office, not only until his successor is elected, but until he is elected and qualified. I do not see how the election of Hickman as Reppard's successor, when he failed to qualify, could have created a vacancy, thereby authorizing the county superintendent to appoint; because it appears to me that the statute is designed to meet just such a contingency by providing that the incumbent who was elected and qualified, should continue to hold the office until his successor should be both elected and qualified. It therefore seems to me that Reppard was rightfully in office when Smith was appointed, and that there was then no vacancy. But the statute has since been amended, so as to authorize the appointment of a successor to a president, or a commissioner, of the board of education, who has served out the regular term for which he was elected, and the question here involved is not likely again to arise. See section 3, c. 27, Acts 1908.

The judgment of the lower court will be affirmed.

(69 W. Va. 200)

TETER et al. v. IRWIN et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 76*)—TERMINATION OF RELATION—DEATH OF CLIENT.

Death of a client ends the power of his attorney at law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. § 127; Dec. Dig. § 76.*]

2. ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL (§ 75*)—CONSENT OF HEIRS OF DECEASED DEFENDANT.

Revival of a cause against heirs of a deceased defendant by consent of such heirs dispenses with process to revive, and makes them parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Abatement and Revival, Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 90*)—CONSENT DECREE GIVEN BY ATTORNEY—VACATION—BURDEN OF PROOF.

To overthrow a decree by consent given by an attorney at law on the ground of his want of authority, the burden to prove such want is on the party asserting it, and must be clear and full.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 148, 149; Dec. Dig. § 90.*]

4. JUDICIAL SALES (§ 53*)—CONCLUSIVENESS.

One about to purchase property under a decree of a court having jurisdiction is not bound to inquire into the authority of an attorney representing a party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judicial Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 104-107; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

5. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 85*)—AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY—CONSENT TO DECREE BY CLIENT.

The relation of client and attorney at law authorizes the attorney to consent to a decree binding his client.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. § 137; Dec. Dig. § 85.*]

6. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 72*)—AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY—EVIDENCE.

Authority of an attorney to act for his client in consent by the attorney to a decree binding his client may be shown by the conduct of the client, his acquiescence therein, or other circumstances proving it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. §§ 102-104; Dec. Dig. § 72.*]

7. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 103*)—UNAUTHORIZED ACTS OF ATTORNEY—ACQUIESCENCE BY CLIENT.

If an attorney at law act without authority in consenting to a decree, and the client afterwards recognize his authority, or, with knowledge of it, acquiesce in it, and make no objection to it when he knows that other persons are acting upon faith of the attorney's authority, it is a ratification making the decree binding on the client.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. § 154; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Barbour County.

Bill by Daniel P. Teter and others against James Irwin and others. Decree of dismissal, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

J. M. N. Downes, for appellants. Blue & Dayton, for appellees Teter and Valley Coal & Coke Co.

BRANNON, J. Joseph Teter owned a large and valuable estate in lands in Barbour county. He became deeply involved in debt, so that we may regard him at his death as utterly insolvent. Two chancery suits were brought against him. One of them was brought by Samuel Woods to subject a tract of 303 acres of land known in this cause as the "R. T. Talbott farm" to a purchase-money lien. He also owned other tracts of 939 acres, 260 acres, and some coal interests. The other suit was brought by Crimm, the holder of various judgment liens, to subject Teter's land to the payment of liens. This was a creditor's lien suit. In Teter's lifetime an order of reference was made in the Crimm suit referring the case to a commissioner to ascertain liens against Teter. Before a convention of lienors was made under this order, Teter died intestate, leaving a number of sons and daughters. In February, 1899, an order was made reviving the Crimm case against the administrator and heirs of Teter. This order was made by consent of said administrator and heirs, which consent was given by Charles F. Teter, one of the heirs, acting for himself and as attorney at law for other heirs. Charles F. Teter acting for himself and his coheirs made a contract with James Irwin selling the "R. T. Talbott farm" for $12,000. This contract was reported to the court, and by a decree entered in the two causes of Woods v. Teter's Heirs and Crimm v. Teter's Heirs this contract was approved and confirmed, and a deed directed to be made to Irwin. Irwin paid the money to the court, and the land was conveyed to him by deed June 6, 1899. This decree was made June 2, 1899, upon a consent given by Charles F. Teter and Fred O. Blue as attorneys for the heirs. Charles F. Teter for himself and coheirs made a contract with N. T. Arnold selling at $9 per acre all coal and minerals, except oil and gas, in other lands of Joseph Teter aggregating about 2,000 acres. This contract was reported to the court, and by decree October 18, 1899, was approved and confirmed by the court. This decree was upon consent of the heirs given by Charles F. Teter and Fred O. Blue as attorneys at law for them. A deed was made to Arnold for such coal under decree of court dated November 18, 1899; the total price for the coal being $14,136.48. Irwin conveyed May 31, 1900, the "Talbott farm" to the Southern Transportation Company, and it made very extensive and costly coal developments and improvements upon it. Arnold conveyed the coal which he acquired to Valley Coal & Coke Company. In May, 1902, Daniel P. Teter and others of the children and heirs of Joseph Teter filed a bill in equity against Irwin, Southern Transportation Company, the Valley Coal & Coke Company, Arnold, Charles F. Teter, and others to annul the decrees made in the said causes of Woods v. Teter's Heirs and Crimm v. Teter's Heirs, reviving them against the heirs of Joseph Teter, and confirming the sales to Irwin and Arnold above stated. The ground of this suit was upon the allegation that Charles F. Teter and Fred O. Blue had no authority as attorneys to represent the heirs of Joseph

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Teter, or revive the causes, or to consent to the decrees approving and confirming the sales to Irwin and Arnold. The bill is upon the theory that those heirs were never parties to the suit, because there was no revival process served on them, and they did not appear, and that the court had no jurisdiction over them, and therefore the decrees were void. The result of this suit was a decree dismissing the bill, from which Daniel P. Teter and others appeal.

[2] Did these complaining heirs appear in the case? The suits were pending in the lifetime of Joseph Teter. Of course, his death suspended them and revival against the heirs was necessary. Though no process of revivor was served on them, yet, if they appeared by an authorized attorney, that dispensed with such process, and they became parties to the cause.

[1] The great, the decisive, question, then, is: Did Charles F. Teter have authority to appear for them? Did he and Fred O. Blue have authority to appear for them and consent to the sale to Irwin and Arnold? Charles F. Teter, one of the heirs, was a practicing lawyer, the only lawyer of the family. His evidence and claim is that he had been his father's attorney during his father's lifetime in the suits pending against him, and counsel say that that fact authorized him to continue as attorney and represent them as heirs. This proposition we cannot admit. True, we are cited to 4 Cyc. 938, a very reliable work, stating that, "where revival is merely a matter of procedure the attorney may consent to revival after the death of a party." Referring to the one authority there cited, Clark v. Parish, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 547, we find it explicitly holding that by the death of the client the power of his attorney is gone, and asserting in broad language that it is clear that it would have been unwarrantable assumption of power in the attorneys to attempt by their consent to revive the suit; but the court said that from the ambiguity of the order it could not say but that the attorneys represented the executor, and therefore held the revival good. We are also cited to Wilson v. Smith, 22 Grat. (Va.) 496, saying that in a suit for partition the counsel employed by the ancestor will be presumed to be continued as counsel, and that a decree for sale upon his consent is valid. To the same effect we are cited to Marrow v. Brinkley, 85 Va. 62, 6 S. E. 606. We cannot hold that the powers of an attorney of a client continue after the client's death. The law is very decided to the contrary. "The death of the client, or, in case of a corporation or partnership, its dissolution, operates as an immediate termination of the relation. Although the case for which he was employed may be still pending, the attorney has no authority to appear for the heirs or the personal representative unless employed by them." To the same effect, see 4 Cyc. 958.

The grave question then is: Were Charles F. Teter and Fred O. Blue retained as attorneys at law by and for the heirs? Upon this vital question we have hundreds of pages of printed evidence from many witnesses, and in irreconcilable conflict. It comes chiefly from members of the family, witnesses deeply involved in self-interest. Charles F. Teter swears that on the day after the funeral of his father, at his home, the children, except two, held a conference, in which the affairs of the estate were talked over; that it was known to all that the estate was deeply indebted, and that those suits were pending; and that it was agreed that Charles F. Teter, being the only lawyer member of the family, should act as administrator, but, while he declined to do this, he agreed to act as counsel for the estate, and for his brothers and sisters, and explained to them how the suit would ordinarily have to be revived by scire facias, but that he could appear for them all and save costs by consenting to a revival, and that this course was agreed upon, not exactly as a formal conference, but as simply a family talk as brothers and sisters would have upon such an occasion; and that, in pursuance of such understanding, he consented to the revival, and that he felt that he was empowered to act for the children in the complications of the estate springing from these circumstances. Is this version of Charles F. Teter, under the solemnity of his oath, plausible, reasonable? A reading of the voluminous record of this case considering the circumstances in which the estate stood, and as the parties stood (which we may consider), I think would answer this question to almost any mind in the affirmative. Reflect that the father was just dead, and his estate embroiled in consuming debts, with two suits pending against it involving costs and devouring interest; that the land must be sold in them was beyond question; that a revival of the suits was inevitable; that there was no disputing of the many debts against it, which would probably consume it; that by speedy action the estate might be made to pay out and leave something from the wreck, but at that time this was doubtful. What more natural than that the heirs wanted to save expenses of revival, and would want the suit to be proceeded with and the land sold? It had to come to this. There was no evasion of this result. Is it not reasonable to say that these brothers and sisters, who were then in friendship, would consent that Charles F. Teter should take these matters pending in suit in hand, and do the best he could for all under such troubling circumstances? I state these things as showing to reasonable men that it is probable that Charles F. Teter's oath in this matter is true, and it is corroborated by some other members of the family. This is rendered probable by other considerations which I state as supplemental to those just mentioned. All the members of the family lived on or close to these lands, except two in the West, and they visited Barbour county and were informed of what was going on. Is it probable that these heirs would not keep an eye on what was being done with this fine landed estate of their father? What was being done? The suits were revived in open court. Charles F. Teter, as we may plausibly say, struggling to sell the property at private sale by advantageous contract to keep the property from a sacrifice sale under the hammer, made two important contracts selling a valuable farm to Irwin for the large sum of $12,000, proven to be a large price, and selling the coal in about 1,600 acres at $9 an acre, then a fair price, and these contracts were reported to the open court and there confirmed in the public hearing. Did these other heirs know nothing of these things? How can they fairly say they did not? Will reasonable men believe that they were in ignorance of these doings so important to them? And they let nearly three years go by after these important transactions before they brought this suit. So, we say, if we had to decide on the oral evidence, that it seems plausibly established that Charles F. Teter had the authority which he assumed, and was acting in good faith for the best interest of all. But, if different men might differ on that question, then there comes the rule in appellate courts that "where a decree is based upon depositions conflicting and contradictory so that it is difficult to determine on which side they preponderate, and hard to draw proper decision therefrom, and different judges might reasonably disagree upon the facts proved, the appellate court will refuse to reverse the decree of the court below, although the testimony may be such that the appellate court might have rendered a different decree if it had acted upon the case in the first instance." Richardson v. Ralph Snyder, 40 W. Va. 15, 20 S. E. 854.

[3] Another principle must be remembered. This suit is an application to overthrow solemn decrees of a court 2½ years after they were made. The books say that, when an accredited attorney appears at the bar of the court as representing clients, there is a presumption of his authority, and, after the court has acted, the burden is upon the party denying his authority to clearly show the want of authority. Connell v. Galligher, 36 Neb. 749, 55 N. W. 229. The evidence must be clear. Winters v. Means, 25 Neb. 241, 41 N. W. 157, 13 Am. St. Rep. 489. This is held in Lumber Co. v. Lance, 50 W. Va. 636, 41 S. E. 123. This overthrow of solemn proceedings in an open court of the country is asked nearly three years later after parties have purchased on the faith of their validity and spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in coal development. Here it is apropos to quote from 1 Black on Judgments, § 325: "At any rate, the claim for a party for whom an appearance has been entered to deny the authority of attorney and ask relief is viewed with great disfavor by the courts wherever innocent third persons have acquired rights under the judgment or decree sought to be annulled. And relief will be denied where the fact of the attorney's authority is not fully negatived, but left in doubt under the testimony, and there is no allegation of a meritorious defense to the action." 1 Black, § 374, speaking of proceedings to annul a decree for the want of attorney's authority, says: "The complainant must make it appear that the judgment is inequitable in itself, by reason of some fraud or trick or collusion, or that the result would or might have been different if there had been a full and fair trial upon the merits." I would not like to say that, where a clear case of want of authority appears, the court would make it a prerequisite to relief that it should appear that no harm was done; but in this particular case I do say that a sale of this property was inevitable for a large volume of debts, and that it could not be avoided, and that it appears that the sales that were made were happy sales for the estate, very advantageous to it, and that such facts must be considered by a court of equity, in connection with other facts, as going to deny relief and as saying equity does not see its way to undo these things. As stated above, on the faith of these court proceedings persons made purchases and paid large sums of purchase money, and very large sums in improvements, and they clearly occupy the place of purchasers for valuable consideration without notice of any want of authority, and they are protected under that principle which says that against a purchaser for valuable consideration a court of equity will take no step to his harm. "A purchaser for value without notice having obtained a conveyance will not be affected by latent equity, whether by lien, incumbrance, trust, fraud, or any other claim." "From a purchaser for value without notice this court takes nothing away." This rule, everywhere held, is sustained by many authorities cited in Dunfee v. Childs, 59 W. Va. 226, 248, 53 S. E. 209. There is no evidence that these purchasers had any notice of any want of power in these attorneys to consent to these decrees. All the circumstances tend otherwise.

[4] It is well established that a purchaser under decree need not inquire as to the attorney's authority. Williams v. Johnson, 112 N. C. 424, 17 S. E. 496, 21 L. R. A. 848, 34 Am. St. Rep. 513; 2 Freeman on Judgments, §§ 509, 510; Low v. Settle, 22 W. Va. 387.

[5] It seems to be well established that, when the relation of client and attorney exists, the attorney has power to confess judgment or consent to a decree. 3 Am. & Eng. Ency. L. 368; 4 Cyc. 936.

[6] In addition to what is said above against the overthrow of the decrees, I will add another consideration seeming strong to me for the same result. As remarked above, the revival of the suits was an act in open court; so the entry of the decrees selling this large area of valuable property. Everybody in the courthouse would know of it—the sale of large landed estates. We may say that almost everybody in the county would know of it. It would be the common talk of the whole neighborhood, if not the whole county. And here were five or six of these heirs right around the land. It is wholly unreasonable, even preposterous, to say that these heirs did not know of these transactions. Our knowledge of the affairs of men denies this. Here we may fitly apply the usual doctrine of notice. We said in Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 792, 26 S. E. 265, that: "The law is that, where one has means of knowledge of a fraud or sufficient notice to put him on inquiry, it is enough to count time against him. Where he has means of knowing or ascertaining, where he is put on inquiry, where ordinary prudence for his interest suggests that he inquire, he must do so or else time runs." This doctrine shows that a party must look out for his interests. We there borrowed language from the United States Supreme Court. "The defense of want of knowledge on the part of one charged with laches is one easily made, easy to prove by his own oath, hard to disprove, and hence the tendency of the courts in recent years has been to hold the plaintiff to a rigid compliance with the law which demands, not only that he should have been ignorant of the fraud, but that he should have used reasonable diligence to have informed himself of all the facts. Especially is this the case where the party complaining is a resident of the neighborhood in which the fraud is alleged to have taken place." We borrowed the further language: "They do not pretend that the facts of the fraud were shrouded in concealment, but their plea is that they lived in a remote and secluded region, far from means of information, and never heard, etc. * * * Parties cannot thus, by their seclusion from means of information, claim exemption from the laws that control human affairs, and set up a right to open all transactions of the past. The world must move on, and those who claim an interest in persons or things must be charged with a knowledge of their status and condition, and of the vicissitudes to which they are subject." We applied these principles in Herold v. Barlow, 47 W. Va. 750, 36 S. E. 8. They made no protest against it in court nor to Charles F. Teter nor to the purchasers, so far as appears. Besides, they let about 2½ years or 3 years go by before they brought this suit. Now, if we should say that Charles F. Teter had no authority to act as counsel, then we could support his action upon the doctrine of ratification.

[?] Ratification retroacts, and is equivalent to original authority conferred upon the agent and validates his act. These heirs were silent, acquiesced, while their brother was making sales and parties were buying these lands by large outlay, and these open proceedings were taking place. We find it written in Curry v. Hale, 15 W. Va. 867, as follows: "But, if the agent exceeds his authority, the act may be ratified by the principal. It is not necessary that there should be any positive and direct confirmation. Where with a knowledge of the facts the principal acquiesces in the acts of the agent, under such circumstances as would make it his duty to repudiate such acts if he would avoid them, such acquiescence is a confirmation of the acts of the agent. It is not necessary that such knowledge shall be shown by positive evidence. It may be deduced or inferred from the circumstances and facts of the case." Syl. points 3, 4, 5. "While an unauthorized act cannot take effect as the act of the principal unless it be ratified, and hence need not be rescinded, it is evident that his failure to express dissent upon being informed of a transaction may reasonably give ground for inferring assent. If, for example, an agent should make an unauthorized sale of his principal's property, and the principal, after being informed, should remain silent, knowing that the purchaser was dealing with the property as his own, the principal's silence would speak his assent as clearly as words." Tiffany on Agency, p. 68. Ruffner v. Hewitt, 7 W. Va. 605. Under the circumstances of this case, these parties must have known of these transactions, and that Charles F. Teter and purchasers from him under those contracts were relying in good faith upon those proceedings, and we assert that it was the duty of those parties to speak out, and promptly do so. Mere silence does not always create estoppel; but when, as I think is the case in the present instance, the circumstances demand that a party speak out, he cannot remain silent. If he does not, an estoppel arises. These parties could not lie silent 2½ years or 3 years before suing. Under the circumstances this is laches also. "Acquiescence in a transaction may bar a party of the relief in a very short period. Where one has knowledge of an act, or it is done with his full approbation, he cannot undo what has been done; and, if he stands by and sees another dealing with property in a manner inconsistent with his rights, and makes no objection, he cannot afterwards have relief. Where his silence permitted or encouraged others to part with their money or property, he cannot complain that his interests are affected; his silence is acquiescence, and it estops him." Despard v. Despard, 53 W. Va. 443, pt. 4, syl., 44 S. E. 448.

There are some other matters presented to us by counsel for appellant. He suggests that in the suits of Woods and Crimm the court committed certain errors, in this: that it was error to decree the sale of the coal to Arnold without having advertised the sale; that it was error not to ascertain liens before sale; that it was error to correct the decree in the Crimm case of the Shettleworth debt; that it was error to transfer the vendor's lien from the Talbott tract to the Zebb's creek tract. We need not further explain these irrelevant matters. Now, it is obvious that, if there was error in this respect, it was the subject of an appeal, and not of a separate suit attacking collaterally for such errors. This is not an appeal. While those decrees stand unreversed, we cannot effect them for such errors. The court had jurisdiction in the cases in Joseph Teter's lifetime and against his heirs afterwards, and any mistakes in these respects were mere errors, remediable by appeal. But, being consent decrees, no appeal would lie, and, unless you can find ground for setting them aside in equity, there can be no relief for such alleged errors. Complaint is made on this line. Charles F. Teter in the pressure of debts upon his father paid for his father, $5,628. Joseph Teter and Charles F. Teter and W. S. Teter met and W. S. Teter made the calculation and drew a contract which was signed by the father reciting that in consideration of $7,000, of which $5,628 had been paid and the residue was to be paid thereafter, Joseph Teter sold a tract of land containing 65 acres, sometimes called 70 acres, to Charles F. Teter. This is proven by the evidence of W. S. Teter, one of the heirs. In the suit of Orimm a commissioner reported this contract, and that all the purchase money had been paid by Charles F. Teter, and the court entered a decree that the legal title of this land be and was vested in Charles F. Teter, and that the decree be made a link in the chain of title of said land from Joseph Teter to Charles F. Teter in lieu of a deed, and that the estate of Joseph Teter be released and discharged from the debts which had been paid by Charles F. Teter for him.

In this present suit in the final decree a deed was decreed to be made by the heirs to Charles F. Teter for said land. The bill in this present case set up that contract between Joseph Teter and Charles F. Teter and attacked it, and assigned as error the former decree in the Crimm Case. Charles F. Teter answered, relying upon that contract, and the court made a decree for the deed as stated. Now, in the first place, the decree in the Crimm Case adjudicated Charles F. Teter's right to that land. It did not direct a deed, it is true, but it adjudicated the rights of the parties upon that contract, and declared that the decree should constitute title in Charles F. Teter as a deed. I do not say that this is a deed, but it settles the rights of the parties, and operates to pass title on the principle of res judicata; but, whether so or not, the later decree for the deed was only in execution of that former decree which was never appealed from, if erroneous. While that former decree stood unreversed, Charles F. Teter had right to the land by its force. If there was error by the former decree in that respect, there was no appeal from it. That part of the former decree declaring Charles F. Teter entitled to the land under the contract with his father as above stated was not by consent, but an adjudication by the court upon the contract, and the record touching it, including the commissioner's report touching that contract, and the payment of the liens by Charles F. Teter. It does not rest upon a consent by Charles F. Teter. The appellants' counsel says there was no prayer in Teter's answer for a deed. This is a very refined objection in view of the fact that the former decree had settled the right of Charles F. Teter to the land.

It is not inappropriate when a court of equity is called upon to resurrect and rip up decrees of courts and acts on which property rights rest to divine the motive. The evidence shows that these heirs approved and were satisfied, gratified, with the sales when made; but when great coal development took place in Barbour county, and there was what may be called a "craze" for coal land, and prices rose, and this land was developed and found rich, the project of recovery of the land or profit in some way begat this suit.

We affirm the decree.

(69 W. Va. 213)

BUFORD et al. v. CHICHESTER et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 16*)—
MUTUAL MISTAKE.

Equity has jurisdiction to reform a written agreement by supplying any material matter omitted by mutual mistake of the contracting parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 68; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

2. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 1*)—DIS-CRETION OF COURT.

Such equitable remedy is not absolute, but depends upon whether the reformation sought is essential to the ends of justice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

3. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 1*)—
WHEN RELIEF DENIED.

If the omission which is sought to be supplied would give the agreement no different meaning, or legal effect, from what it had before, the omission is immaterial, and the remedy will be denied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

4. EQUITY (§ 365*) — DISMISSAL WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

A general demurrer to a bill which on its face shows no ground of equity jurisdiction, and which cannot be cured by amendment, should be sustained, and the bill should be dismissed. But, if the bill shows a cause of action which would be good in a court of law, the dismissal should be without prejudice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 769-771; Dec. Dig. § 365.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Wood County.

Action by W. M. Buford and others against W. T. Chichester and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Reversed, and appeal dismissed.

J. W. Vandervort, for appellants. William Beard, for appellees.

WILLIAMS, P. This is a suit by W. M. Buford (née W. M. Brevard) and L. E. Brevard, partners in the mail contracting business, against J. M. Hinton, subcontractor, and W. T. Chichester and J. W. Ryder, his sureties, for the purpose of reforming a written contract made by said Hinton, whereby he agreed to carry the mail on route No. 31,244 from Marietta, Ohio, to Heslop in said state, and back, six times per week, beginning August 1, 1902, and ending on June 30, 1903, for $450 per annum; and also to recover damages for an alleged breach of the contract by said Hinton. A demurrer to the bill was overruled, and defendants answered. On the 13th of December, 1907, the cause was heard upon the pleadings, exhibits, and depositions of witnesses, and the court granted the relief prayed for in respect to reforming the contract, and refused to award damages, and relegated plaintiffs to such action at law on the contract as they might lawfully be entitled to. From this decree plaintiffs have appealed. Defendants also cross-assign errors.

[1] The demurrer to the bill raises the question of jurisdiction. Does the bill present a cause for equitable relief? There is no doubt of equity jurisdiction to reform a written instrument so as to make it speak the true agreement between parties, when the mistake sought to be corrected is a mutual one, and is essential to give complete legal effect to the instrument.

[2] But this remedy is not absolute. It is discretionary with the courts, and depends upon whether the reformation is essential to the ends of justice. 34 Cyc. 907. "A court will not reform an instrument merely for the sake of reforming it, and it is a good defense to point out, whether on demurrer or answer, that the reformation would be useless and of no effect. There is no necessity for reformation where the party against whom action is brought is willing to rectify, or where the legal construction put on the instrument would be the same as before reformation." 34 Cyc. 946.

The only reformation of the written agreement which the bill seeks to have made is to have the names of the subcontractor and his sureties inserted in the blank spaces left, for that purpose, in the body of the printed form of contract. The contract is exhibited with the bill, and that portion of it containing the blank spaces reads as follows, viz.: "This article of agreement, made the 18 day of July, nineteen hundred and two, between W. M. Brevard, of Huntingdon, county of Carrol, and state of Tenn., contractor with the United States, party of the first part and ———, of Marietta, county of Washington, and state of Ohio, subcontractor, party of the second part, and ——— of ———, his sureties." This agreement was signed and sealed by J. M. Hinton, with the designation, after his signature, of "Subcontractor," and by W. T. Chichester and J. W. Ryder, with the designation of "Surety" after the signature of each, and by W. M. Brevard with the designation, after his signature, of "Contractor with the United States." Would the insertion of the names of the subcontractor and his sureties in the blanks add anything to the legal force or effect of the written contract? Would the agreement have any different meaning, or effect, after the names were inserted from what it had before? Certainly not.

[3] Then, if the insertion of the names would not change the meaning or legal effect of the writing, it necessarily follows that reformation is immaterial and unnecessary. It would be idle to reform a writing that would be susceptible of no different interpretation after it is reformed than could properly be given to it before. The manner in which the contract was signed shows that J. M. Hinton was party of the second part, and was the subcontractor, and that the other two defendants were his sureties. The agreement, taken as a whole and including the signatures, furnishes all necessary proof of what names were intended to be used in the blank spaces. After the contract was signed, no other names than the names of the defendants could have been properly filled in the blanks. The contract conveys the same meaning whether the blanks be filled or not, and the omission to insert the names in those blanks at the time the instrument was signed is an immaterial matter; and, it being altogether an immaterial matter, relief in equity is not essential to further the ends of justice. Equity jurisdiction is therefore not sustained on the ground of reforming a written agreement.

The only other relief asked is damages for an alleged breach of the contract, and for this plaintiffs have a complete remedy at law. [4] The demurrer to the bill should have been sustained; and, for the reason that it clearly appears from the nature of the case that the bill cannot be cured by amendment, it should have been dismissed, but without prejudice to plaintiffs' right to sue at law on the contract.

The decree complained of will be reversed, and this court will enter a decree dismissing the bill without prejudice to plaintiffs' right to sue at law.

(136 Ga. 236)

WATSON v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 407*)—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE—DECLARATIONS OF THIRD PERSON—PRESENCE OF ACCUSED.

Where, on his trial for murder, the defendant admitted that he bore the same name as the alleged slayer, but denied any knowledge of the homicide, and there was evidence that the defendant was the actual slayer, testimony of a witness that immediately after the homicide two persons, one of them corresponding in appearance with the defendant, came near the house of the witness, located about 350 yards from the scene of the homicide, and while there the companion of the defendant told the witness the name of the defendant and that he was the slayer, under circumstances authorizing an inference that the defendant heard him, was not open to the objection that the same was inadmissible, because it did not positively appear that the defendant heard the statement of his companion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 968; Dec. Dig. § 407.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1169*)—WRIT OF ERROR—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

The admission of immaterial evidence, which is not calculated to harm the defendant, is not cause for a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 8137; Dec. Dig. § 1169.*]

3. HOMICIDE (§ 302*)—MURDER—INSTRUCTION—JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE IN DEFENSE OF HABITATION.

The evidence did not authorize an instruction on the law of justifiable homicide in defense of habitation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 634; Dec. Dig. § 302.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 828*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTION—REQUEST.

Where, on a trial for murder, the evidence authorized an inference that the killing was in resistance of an arrest by an officer and posse without a warrant, and the court correctly charged the law of voluntary manslaughter and justifiable homicide, it is no ground for new trial that the court failed to concrete the charge with reference to a particular phase of the case; there being no written request therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2007; Dec. Dig. § 828.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 828*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

The defense of alibi only was made by the defendant's statement; and it was not error for the judge to omit a charge thereon, in the absence of a written request.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2007; Dec. Dig. § 828.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 828*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—REQUEST.

The charge covered all the main and substantial issues in the case, and it is not ground for new trial that the court failed to charge the law relative to threats made by the deceased against the defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2007; Dec. Dig. § 828.*]

7. VERDICT AUTHORIZED BY EVIDENCE.

The evidence supported the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Bulloch County; B. T. Rawlings, Judge.

Andrew Watson was convicted of murder, and he brings error. Affirmed.

Homer C. Parker, J. L. Renfro, and Francis B. Hunter, for plaintiff in error. Alfred Herrington, Sol. Gen., Hines & Jordan, H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., and R. D. Moore, for the State.

EVANS, P. J. Andrew Watson was convicted of the murder of Andrew Kennedy, and recommended to mercy. He was refused a new trial, and brings error.

The trial occurred about 12 years after the homicide. It is inferable from the testimony of the state that about daybreak an officer with a posse of seven men came to the house of Sam Jackson for the purpose of arresting Andrew Watson, who was supposed to be in the house, for an alleged burglary of the storehouse of Andrew Kennedy. Their approach caused the dogs at the house to bark, and Sam Jackson came to the door of the house, saying, "Here is dogs, and it's negro dogs." He then drew near the posse, who told him to go back into the house and build a fire. When he went back into the house, Andrew Watson said to him, "What do they want?" to which he replied, "They want a fire." Watson then said, "If a fire is what they want, I will give them a fire." Upon his making this statement, a woman's voice was heard to exclaim two or three times, "Don't shoot." Watson then came to the door, and shot four or five times with a rifle, killing Andrew Kennedy, and wounding the officer. After the shooting, Watson ran off, and at a distance of about 50 yards from the house he fired his gun again, and he was fired upon by the posse. The defendant offered witnesses whose testimony tended to show that the Andrew Watson, who was accused of burglary and also of the murder of Kennedy, and who at the time of the commission of these alleged crimes lived in that community, was a person other than the defendant on trial, and that the defendant in his statement denied that he was the Andrew Watson, the slayer of Kennedy.

[1] 1. The evidence was voluminous, and in the main was directed to establishing the identity of the man on trial as the slayer. Among the witnesses offered by the state was W. B. De Loach, who testified: That he spent the night at Morgan De Loach's house, located 350 yards away from the house where the killing occurred. That he had just arisen, and was dressing himself, when he heard four or five shots and some cries. He immediately came out of the house, and while on the steps, arranging his clothes, Sam Jackson came running up the road from his house, and, when he reached the witness, he told witness that two white men had been killed at his house. Just then another man, armed with a gun or rifle, ran up and called Sam Jackson. After a brief interchange of words, this man ran off. The witness asked Sam Jackson who the man was, and Sam Jackson replied that it was "Andrew Watson who did the shooting." The witness testified: "I wouldn't swear that Andrew Watson heard it, or didn't hear it. I don't know about that, because I couldn't tell. He could or should have heard it. It is reasonable that he could have heard it, from the distance that he was. It was possible that he didn't hear it, and possible that he could have heard it, both of them." The witness testified that he did not know Andrew Watson, but that the man on trial corresponded in appearance and size with the man who was with Sam Jackson on the occasion referred to in his testimony. The testimony of this witness as to the conversation between him and Sam Jackson was objected to, on the ground that it did not occur in the presence of Andrew Watson, and the defendant would not be bound by any statement by Sam Jackson, unless it was positively shown that it was made in the defendant's presence. There is no dispute in the evidence that Kennedy was killed by a man called Andrew Watson. The defendant admitted that his name was Andrew Watson, and most of the evidence on the trial was directed to the issue of the identity of the accused with the slayer. There was testimony of eyewitnesses to the homicide that the defendant on trial was the slayer of Kennedy, and the testimony of this witness also bore on the issue of identification. If the jury should find that the defendant was the same man who killed Kennedy, and who came up to De Loach's house almost immediately after the homicide, then it would be competent to show an unchallenged statement in his presence that he was the slayer. It was for the jury to say whether the statement of Jackson was made in the presence of the defendant, and the court properly allowed the evidence to go to the jury.

[2] 2. The sheriff of the county was allowed to testify that he had held the office of sheriff for nine years, during which time he held a warrant for the defendant, which warrant may have been in his office or in the clerk's office. The objection to the evidence was that the exhibition of the warrant would be the best evidence of it, and that the crime was alleged to have been committed three years before the sheriff's induction into office. Upon reading the testimony of the sheriff, it clearly appears that he was referring to the warrant against the accused for murder; and, even if this testimony was inadmissible, it related to an immaterial subject, not calculated to harm the defendant.

[3] 3. Complaint is made that the court's charge on the law of justifiable homicide did not embrace an instruction that one may justifiably take life to prevent persons in a riotous and tumultuous manner from entering his habitation, for the purpose of offering personal violence to any person dwelling or being therein. The evidence did not authorize such an instruction.

[4] 4. It is urged that the defendant should have a new trial, because the court failed to charge the following principle of law: "Where, in a trial for murder, the defense relied on was lawful resistance to a felonious attempt to arrest without authority, the law of justifiable homicide in self-defense was not alone applicable; but the court should have charged the jury the law relating to the right of the defendant to resist an attempt to arrest him illegally." There was no written request for such a charge. The court correctly charged the law of voluntary manslaughter and justifiable homicide; and if the accused had desired further elaboration, or a concrete application of the law to a particular phase of the case, he should have made a timely written request. Rogers v. State, 128 Ga. 67, 57 S. E. 227, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 999, 119 Am. St. Rep. 364.

[5] 5. One assignment of error is to the effect that the court omitted to charge the law applicable to the defense of alibi. In his statement the defendant claimed that he was at another place at the time of the commission of the alleged crime; but no testimony was introduced tending to show that he was at a place other than the scene of the homicide at the time of its alleged commission. This court has frequently decided that the judge may construct his charge upon the various issues made by the evidence, and that, if a defense is set up in the statement alone, it is not error for the judge to omit submitting the law appropriate to such defense, in the absence of a timely request.

[6] 6. Complaint is made of the failure of the court to charge the jury the law relating to threats made by the deceased against the defendant. What particular principle of law the counsel for the accused desired the court to give in charge is not made to appear. If the accused desired any particular instructions upon any collateral issue, he should have submitted a timely written request. Watts v. State, 120 Ga. 496, 48 S. E. 142.

[7] 7. The evidence was sufficient to authorize the verdict, and no error of law requiring a new trial is made to appear.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(186 Ga. 258)

GEORGIA COTTON CO. v. HOGG et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The judge did not err in disallowing the proposed amendment, or in dismissing the petition upon demurrer.

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. SALES (§ 411*)—CONTRACT.

In an action for breach of contract for sale of cotton, the petition setting out a letter from plaintiff to defendant H., reciting that plaintiff had contracted to buy of H. 150 bales of cotton, and a letter in response thereto from H., reciting that he confirmed such contract and would deliver the cotton as agreed, which last letter embraced an indorsement reciting that the undersigned agreed to deliver to H. the number of bales of cotton opposite their names in pursuance of the contract between plaintiff and defendant H., and signed by defendant R., whose name was followed by "15 B. C." set out a complete contract between plaintiff and defendant H. for the purchase and sale of 150 bales of cotton, but not a contract of defendant R. to deliver 15 bales to plaintiff; and, the action being to recover from H. and R. damages for breach of contract to sell 15 bales of cotton, it was properly dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1161-1164; Dec. Dig. § 411.*]

3. SALES (§ 411*)—BREACH OF CONTRACT—AMENDMENT.

A requested amendment of such petition, alleging that plaintiff was not purchasing cotton in small lots, but that defendant R. and others engaged defendant H. to make sales of small lots of cotton for them to plaintiff, sufficient in the aggregate to amount to 150 bales, and that it was in pursuance of such agreement that defendant R. sold the 15 bales to plaintiff, did not show a contract of purchase and sale from R. to plaintiff of 15 bales of cotton, but was, at most, explanatory of why there was a separate contract with H. for 150 bales, rather than one with R. for 15 bales, and an attempt to treat the entire contract as divisible, so as to hold R. liable as a principal of H. only for a fractional part, and was properly disallowed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1161-1164; Dec. Dig. § 411.*]

Error from Superior Court, Schley County; Z. A. Littlejohn, Judge.

Action by the Georgia Cotton Company against H. W. Hogg and another. Judgment of dismissal, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

The Georgia Cotton Company in its petition alleged that the defendants, H. W. Hogg and R. E. Hill, were indebted to plaintiff, a corporation, in a specified amount on account of the breach of the contract for the sale of 15 bales of cotton. Copies of certain correspondence, relied on as constituting the contract, were made a part of the petition, and were as follows:

"Americus, Ga., 12th May, 1909.

"Mr. H. W. Hogg, Ellaville, Ga.—Dear Sir: In consideration of one dollar in hand paid, and for value received, we have this day contracted to purchase of you as follows: One hundred and fifty bales of cotton, basis good middling, nothing below middling, Liverpool classification, at ten cents (10 cents) per pound, f. o. b. cars at Ellaville, Ga. Cotton to be delivered to us during the month of October, 1909, to be delivered, reweighed, and in good merchantable bales, averaging in weight five hundred (500) pounds per bale. Prevailing Savannah differences between grades existing at time of delivery to apply. Please confirm the above purchase. Yours very truly, P. P. Georgia Cotton Company, W. A. Slaton."

To this letter there was this response:

"Ellaville, Ga. 14th May, 1909.

"Messrs. Georgia Cotton Company, Americus, Ga.—Dear Sir: I beg to confirm the above contract of purchase, and will deliver said cotton as above agreed. Yours very truly, H. W. Hogg."

Indorsed on this was the following:

"May 14, 1909.

"We, the undersigned, agree to deliver to H. Willis Hogg the number of bales of cotton opposite our names, in pursuance to the terms of the contract, as set forth on the opposite page, between the Georgia Cotton Company and H. Willis Hogg, as specified in said contract on opposite page, to wit: ten cents per pound. Witness our hands and seal, this May 14, 1909. [Signed] R. E. Hill, 15 B/C."

R. E. Hill demurred. Whereupon the plaintiff offered to amend by dismissing the case as to H. W. Hogg and alleging: "That H. W. Hogg was the agent of the defendant R. E. Hill, at the time of the sale of said cotton, and acted as such agent in the making the sale to plaintiff of said 15 bales of cotton. That plaintiff was not purchasing cotton in small lots, and the defendant R. E. Hill and several others procured and engaged the services of said H. W. Hogg to make the sale of certain cotton for them to plaintiff; the said defendant R. E. Hill agreeing to sell to plaintiff through his (Hill's) agent, H. W. Hogg, said 15 bales of cotton, and the others agreeing to sell to plaintiff through said Hogg as their agent a certain number of bales each, sufficient to aggregate 150 bales, in pursuance whereof the said R. E. Hill sold to plaintiff, through said Hogg, said 15 bales of cotton, and the said others sold to plaintiff through said Hogg the balance of said lot of 150 bales." Upon objection, the court disallowed the amendment and sustained the demurrer, dismissing the case. The plaintiff excepted, assigning error upon each ruling.

E. A. Hawkins and J. H. Cheney, for plaintiff in error. Shipp & Sheppard and C. R. McCrory, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. [2] The plaintiff must recover, if at all, upon the strength of the written contract as made. The writings relied upon as constituting a contract were set forth in the petition, and consequently the sufficiency of the petition to set forth a cause of action will depend upon the substance of the writings set forth. If the plaintiff's offer to buy, dated May 12th, was an offer to buy anything from any person, it was an offer to buy from H. W. Hogg 150 bales of cotton—no more, nor any less. The acceptance of the offer of May 14th was an agreement to sell the number of bales of cotton above mentioned. Upon its face this was a complete contract between the parties mentioned. The indorsement on the paper signed by R. E. Hill was not a contract to deliver to the Georgia Cotton Company any cotton whatever, but amounted to a promise to deliver to H. Willis Hogg, not the 150 bales of cotton which he had contracted to sell to the plaintiff, but 15 bales of cotton, conformably to the specifications of the contract between Hogg and the Georgia Cotton Company. This indorsement did not amount to a contract between Hill and the Georgia Cotton Company. That company did not at any time bind itself to buy 15 bales of cotton from H. W. Hogg, nor did it bind itself to buy any number of bales from Hill. By amendment to the petition it was sought to eliminate H. W. Hogg from the case, and to charge R. E. Hill as principal in the contract, charging that it was he, and not H. W. Hogg, who had really contracted to sell 15 bales of cotton to the Georgia Cotton Company. But such allegations are not borne out by the contract. As pointed out above, the Georgia Cotton Company did not contract to buy 15 bales of cotton; its only agreement being to purchase from H. W. Hogg 150 bales. If Hogg could be regarded as a mere intermediary between Hill and the Georgia Cotton Company, in such manner as that any contract which might be made would be a contract between those two, rather than separate transactions in which Hogg should participate as a party, the stipulations embodied in the writings would be insufficient to show a meeting of the minds; the agreement of Hill to deliver 15 bales of cotton being no acceptance of the proposal of the Georgia Cotton Company to buy 150 bales of cotton. This is the necessary construction of the writings relied upon by the Georgia Cotton Company to show the contract upon which the suit was founded.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

[3] In drafting the amendment to the petition, the plaintiff was impressed with this construction of the petition, and it was therein alleged that the plaintiff was not purchasing cotton in small lots, but that Hill and others procured and engaged the service of Hogg to make the sales of small lots of cotton for them to the plaintiff, sufficient in the aggregate to amount to 150 bales, and that it was in pursuance of this agreement that Hill sold the 15 bales in question to the Georgia Cotton Company. But this mere contradictory allegation in opposition to the substance of the writings set forth will not suffice to show a contract of purchase and sale from Hill to the Georgia Cotton Company of 15 bales of cotton. At most it was explanatory of why there was a separate contract with Hogg for 150 bales, rather than one with Hill for 15 bales. It is not claimed that Hogg was the principal of Hill to make the entire contract for 150 bales which he actually made with the company; but the effort of the company now is to treat the entire contract as divisible, and divide it in such manner as to hold Hill liable as a principal of Hogg only for a fractional part. This cannot be done.

[1] The amendment was properly disallowed, and there was no error in dismissing the petition on demurrer.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 180)

WASHINGTON TRUST CO. v. PITTSBURG-BARTOW MIN. & MFG. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. March 15, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. DISCRETION—ABUSE—INTERLOCUTORY INJUNCTION.

Under the pleadings and evidence submitted on the hearing, the court did not abuse his discretion in refusing the interlocutory injunction as prayed by the plaintiff in its petition.

2. MORTGAGES (§ 338*)—FORECLOSURE—INJUNCTION.

It appearing that the mortgagee, a corporation, as trustee for another corporation and as holder of a certain mortgage, which contained a power of sale, was proceeding to exercise this power by advertising the property mortgaged in the newspaper in which it was provided in the mortgage that the advertisement should appear, and that the contingency, upon the happening of which the right to advertise and sell the property under the mortgage should accrue, had actually happened, and there being no evidence, save certain hearsay testimony without probative value, of any collusion on the part of the mortgagee or the beneficiary with the mortgagor, or of any inequitable conduct on the part of the trustee or the beneficiary, or of any hardship that would be inflicted other than that ordinarily resulting from the foreclosure of a mortgage and the exercise of a power of sale like that contained in this mortgage, the court erred in granting the injunction prayed for in the cross-petition of the defendants, which had the effect of destroying the plain legal right of the mortgagee to proceed in the exercise of the power of sale as contained in the mortgage itself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1026-1035; Dec. Dig. § 338.*]

3. MORTGAGES (§ 338*)—FORECLOSURE—POWER OF SALE—EXERCISE—INJUNCTION—FINAL RELIEF.

In so far as the order granted by the judge provided for the restraining of the mortgagee in exercising the power of sale contained in the mortgage, and provided for the payment of the indebtedness secured by the mortgage in certain installments by persons holding under the mortgagor and conducting mining operations upon the lands included in the mortgage, under agreements made with the mortgagor, the order was of the nature of a final injunction and granted relief final in its nature, although it was stated in the order that it should continue of force "until the further order of the court," and the court was without authority to grant such an order on interlocutory hearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Dec. Dig. § 338.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bartow County; A. W. Flte, Judge.

Suit by the Washington Trust Company against the Pittsburg-Bartow Mining & Manufacturing Company and others. From a judgment granting an injunction against the foreclosure of complainant's mortgage on defendants' cross-petition, complainant brings error. Reversed in part, and affirmed in part.

Thos. W. & Watt H. Milner, for plaintiff in error. Jno. T. Norris, for defendants in error.

BECK, J. Judgment reversed in part, and affirmed in part.

FISH, C. J., absent. The other Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 149)

WRIGHTSVILLE & T. R. CO. v. JOINER.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 321*)—TRIAL (§ 260*)—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS—ACTION—INSTRUCTIONS.

Upon the trial of a suit for damages against a railroad company by one for injuries sustained while a passenger on one of the trains of the company, the latter in writing duly requested the court to charge as follows: "Plaintiff must recover upon proof of the acts of negligence and carelessness set out in the declaration, and proof of any other act or acts of negligence or carelessness of the employees of the defendant will not authorize a recovery, unless the jury is satisfied from the evidence that the acts of negligence set forth in the declaration have been satisfactorily proven." Held, that the charge requested was not a correct charge, because, if given, it might have led the jury to believe that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover if the defendant was guilty of any act of negligence other than those set out in the plaintiff's declaration and the plaintiff's injuries were caused thereby, if the jury believed that the acts of negligence charged in the declaration had been proven. Even if the charge requested had been entirely accurate, the refusal to give it would not have been error requiring a new trial, in view of the instruction given by the court to the jury in other portions of his charge, to wit: "I charge you in this case that, if the plaintiff recovers, he should recover on the allegations of negligence set out in the plaintiff's petition."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 321.* Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 851-859; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 260*)—INSTRUCTIONS.

The charge referred to in the second division of the opinion was not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 705-713, 715, 716; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

3. WITNESSES (§ 379*)—CONTRADICTION—PREVIOUS STATEMENTS.

Nor was there error in the admission of testimony referred to in the third division of the opinion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1209, 1220-1222, 1247-1256; Dec. Dig. § 379.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 318*)—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS—EVIDENCE—VERDICT.

The evidence was sufficient to support the verdict, and the court committed no error in refusing a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1270, 1307-1314; Dec. Dig. § 318.*]

Error from Superior Court, Johnson County; B. T. Rawlings, Judge.

Action by W. L. Joiner against the Wrightsville & Tennille Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Daley & Daley, for plaintiff in error. J. L. Kent and Hines & Jordan, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. The defendant in error (hereinafter called the plaintiff) sued the plaintiff in error (hereinafter called the defendant) for damages. The petition as amended, and after certain portions thereof were stricken on demurrer, made, among others, substantially the following allegations: The plaintiff was injured while a passenger on the train of the defendant. "The train on which your petitioner was such passenger was a regular passenger train of the defendant, but had a freight box next to the engine, heavily loaded with meat, and at the time of said derailment was running at a great rate of speed, to wit, 30 to 40 miles an hour. Petitioner shows that defendant was negligent in not having sound cross-ties in its roadbed and under its rails at the place and time of said derailment, whereby said derailment was caused. Defendant was further negligent in having its roadbed so poorly constructed, at the place and time of said derailment, and that spikes were out of the rails, and that its roadbed was not properly surfaced up and ballasted, and in that were out of sidebars in the rails, whereby said derailment was caused. Defendant was further negligent in pulling said heavily laden freight car, so loaded with meat, in its passenger train, at such rapid rate, whereby said derailment was caused; the reason being that the running of said heavily loaded freight car at such rapid, unusual, and unnecessary rate of speed would derail said box car and thus wreck said passenger train. By reason of said derailment as above narrated, your petitioner, who was riding in the smoking car, which was the rear end and at the time was suddenly and violently thrown off and between the seats, knocked down, and rendered unconscious." The plaintiff set forth the nature and extent of his alleged injuries. The defendant filed an answer, denying that the plaintiff was injured because of any acts of negligence alleged, and that "the cause of said derailment was and is totally unknown to defendant company, not due to any of the causes alleged in the plaintiff's petition, and the same was an accident pure and simple, which it was neither possible for defendant company, its agents, servants, and employes, to foresee or prevent, was and is entirely unaccountable, and for which defendant company was in no wise liable or responsible." Upon the trial of the case, the jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and to the order of the court refusing it a new trial the defendant accepted.

[1] 1. One ground of the amendment to the motion for a new trial is as follows: "Because the court erred in refusing to charge to the jury fully the following request to charge, the same having been submitted to the court in writing before the jury retired: 'Plaintiff must recover upon proof of the acts of negligence and carelessness set out in the declaration, and proof of any other act or acts of negligence or carelessness of the employes of the defendant will not authorize a recovery, unless the jury is satisfied from the evidence that the acts of negligence set forth in the declaration have been satisfactorily proven.' Said request was a correct proposition of law applicable to the issue involved, and the charge of the court as given was not sufficient to cover the points involved." The charge requested was not entirely clear and free from objection, and, if the court had given the same, it might have misled the jury into the belief that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover if the defendant was guilty of any act of negligence other than those charged in the petition and plaintiff's injuries were caused thereby, if the jury believed that the acts of negligence charged in the petition had been proven. See, in this connection, Central R. & Bnk. Co. v. Nash, 81 Ga. 580, 585, 7 S. E. 808. The court charged the jury: "I charge you in this case that, if the plaintiff recovers, he should recover on the allegations of negligence set out in the plaintiff's petition." Even if the charge requested had been entirely accurate, the refusal to give it would not have been error requiring a new trial, in view of the charge given by the court as above quoted.

[2] 2. Another ground of the amendment to the motion for a new trial was as follows: "Because the court erred in charging the jury as follows: 'In arriving, therefore, at the amount which should be allowed the plaintiff on account of loss arising from diminished ability to labor, you should take all these matters into consideration and give them due weight.' Said charge was error, because the same tended to impress upon the jury the fact that they should find for the plaintiff for some amount; the same being a positive statement of the court, without the use of any qualifying words, tending to impress upon the jury the fact that it was an opinion of the court." There was no error in giving this charge. The court was dealing at the time with the question of the amount of recovery in the event the plaintiff was entitled to recover at all, and specially instructed the jury that his instructions regarding the amount of recovery should be disregarded by them, if they found that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

[3] 3. Another assignment of error is as follows: "Because the court erred in admitting the following evidence over the objection of the defendant's counsel: 'I saw Mr. Kessler on the occasion of this wreck at the scene of the wreck. Mr. Kessler was asked what he thought was the cause of the wreck, and he said that it was the heavily loaded box car. He said that he had asked the railroad officials not to run them with passenger trains, and he said that they went on and did it over his protest, and now they had the wreck. That is the statement that he made.' Movants objected to the introduction of this evidence on the grounds that it was an attempt to prove contradictory statements of Mr. Kessler as to the cause of the wreck, for the purpose of impeaching Mr. Kessler's testimony, and that such evidence was incompetent on the ground that it was not relevant, and a witness could not be impeached unless it was on a matter relevant. Movant further objected on the ground that any statement which Mr. Kessler might have made as to the cause of the wreck was not binding on the defendant, and therefore incompetent. Such a statement would be a mere opinion, and irrelevant to the issue involved, immaterial, and incompetent. Said objections were overruled by the court, and movant hereby assigns same as error." The witness Kessler was asked if he had made the statements referred to in the above testimony, and denied having made the same; and in another ground of the amendment to the motion for a new trial error is assigned on the ruling of the court in permitting such questions to be propounded to the witness Kessler, and in admitting his answers thereto.

The testimony as to statements made by the witness Kessler was not admitted to prove that what was therein stated was true, but for the purpose of discrediting the witness. Kessler was supervisor of the defendant company, charged with the duty of seeing that the track was safe for all trains. While the demurrer to the allegation of the petition that defendant "was negligent in having a freight car loaded with meat made up in" the train, "and placed next to the engine" was sustained, the allegation that the defendant was negligent "in pulling said heavily laden freight car, so loaded with meat, in its passenger train at such rapid rate" of speed of 30 to 40 miles per hour, was not stricken. There was evidence that the train at the time of the derailment was running at a speed of about 40 miles an hour. The freight car, which was loaded with meat, and was in front of the passenger coaches and next to the engine, was derailed, and was at the scene of the wreck when the witness Kessler appeared thereat five or ten minutes after it occurred. He evidently saw the derailed freight car. The allegation of negligence above referred to was not simply that the train was being run at too rapid rate of speed, but that it was run at such rate of speed with the "heavily laden freight car, so loaded with meat, in its passenger train." The running of the train at such speed might not have been negligent, but for the fact that the heavily loaded freight car was "in its passenger train." The witness Kessler testified to the effect that he inspected the track at the scene of the accident soon after its occurrence, and that it was all right in every way. He also testified: "I could not discover any cause for the wreck whatever. * * * As to what caused that wreck, in my opinion I couldn't see any cause for it whatever. I made a close examination, and I couldn't discover any cause at all." In view of the testimony delivered by the witness Kessler, the testimony regarding his previous statements—at least, his statement that the heavily loaded box car caused the wreck—was admissible for the purpose of discrediting his testimony delivered on the trial in behalf of the defendant, and the court committed no error in allowing the same.

4. The evidence was sufficient to warrant the verdict. The jury found a verdict for $750, and the amount of the recovery was not excessive.

Judgment affirmed.

FISH, C. J., and EVANS, P. J., disqualified.

(136 Ga. 163)

FITZGERALD v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 309*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER.

The only eyewitness to the homicide testified in behalf of the state, in substance, as follows: Gus Fitzgerald, cousin of the accused, and George Austin were quarreling, when Gus drew his knife on George, who thereupon struck Gus with his fist, when the accused ran up to them out of the dark, and shot George with a pistol, thereby killing him at once. The only defenses set up by the accused on the trial were alibi, and that the homicide was not committed in the county of Fayette, as charged in the indictment. The court, therefore, did not err in failing to instruct the jury on the subject of voluntary manslaughter. See Kendrick v. State, 113 Ga. 759, 39 S. E. 286, and cases cited; Robinson v. State, 118 Ga. 45, 44 S. E. 804.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 649-656; Dec. Dig. § 309.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 815*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

In connection with instructions on the defense of alibi, the court charged the jury: "If you have a reasonable doubt from the evidence that this is the man who committed this offense, if one was committed by some one, it would be your duty to acquit him." This charge was not justly subject to the criticism that it took from the jury the right to consider whether the accused, if he committed the offense, was justifiable, or only guilty of voluntary manslaughter. Moreover, as stated in the foregoing headline, according to the evidence of the sole eyewitness to the homicide, the person who did the killing was guilty of murder.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1922, 1986; Dec. Dig. § 815.*]

3. INSTRUCTIONS ON ALIBI.

The instructions given on the subject of alibi, to which exception was taken, were in the language stating the law on that subject in Harrison v. State, 83 Ga. 129 (3), 9 S. E. 542.

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 815*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

The following instruction to the jury: "Does your mind reach the conclusion from the evidence that the allegations are true beyond a reasonable doubt? If it does, then you are authorized to find it true." This instruction was not cause for a new trial, on the ground "that it took from the jury the right to consider the statement of the defendant, and confined them in reaching a conclusion to the evidence in the case"; the court having fully and correctly instructed the jury as to the statement made them by the accused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1922, 1986; Dec. Dig. § 815.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 772*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

According to the evidence for the state, both the accused and the deceased, George Austin, were in the county of Fayette when the former shot and killed the latter. According to the evidence for the accused, the deceased was shot and killed in the county of Clayton. Therefore it was not cause for a new trial that the court instructed the jury as follows: "If the defendant indicted a mortal wound on George Austin, where the wound was inflicted is the place where jurisdiction is."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 772.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 655*)—TRIAL—CONDUCT OF TRIAL—EXPRESSION OF OPINION BY JUDGE.

While the case was being argued before the jury, the court in the presence of the jury submitted the following query to the counsel for both sides: "Suppose that this jury should decide that the defendant is guilty of the offense charged in the indictment, but should conclude that it did not occur in this county, but that it happened in some other county, what do you say about the jury returning this kind of a verdict: 'We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty, on the ground that the crime was not committed in Fayette county.' Counsel for the accused replied that he did not think the jury could properly return such a verdict. The solicitor general stated that in his opinion they could, and that the accused could then be tried in the county where the homicide occurred, if it did not occur in the county of Fayette. The judge replied: "I didn't know much about that, but asked you gentlemen to see what you thought about it. Have either of you any authority on that point?" Counsel for both sides replied that they had no authority on the subject. The judge did not again refer to the point. What the judge said in this colloquy was not cause for a new trial, on the ground that it impressed the jury with the idea that he was of the opinion that the accused was guilty, and should be held for trial in some other county, if not in Fayette county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law Cent. Dig. §§ 1520-1535; Dec. Dig. § 655.*]

7. EVIDENCE AUTHORIZED CONVICTION.

There was evidence to authorize the verdict, and the court did not err in refusing to grant a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Fayette County; L. S. Roan, Judge.

Dock Fitzgerald was convicted of crime, and he brings error. Affirmed.

J. W. Culpepper and Daley & Chambers, for plaintiff in error. J. W. Wise, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 221)

IVEY v. CABLE CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

DIRECTING VERDICT.

The evidence demanded a verdict in favor of the defendant, and the court did not err in directing the jury to find in its favor.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; W. D. Ellis, Judge.

Action by Tina Ivey against the Cable Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Lowndes Calhoun, for plaintiff in error. J. W. & J. D. Humphries, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 164)

BARNES v. MADDOX.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 370*)—BOUNDARIES (§§ 35, 40*)—PROCEEDINGS TO ESTABLISH—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Where the dividing line between two adjoining tracts of land was in controversy, both plaintiff and defendant claiming under a common source of title, a deed, drawn from the possession of the plaintiff by notice to produce, in which the common predecessor in title conveyed the tract to her with boundaries as contended for by the defendant, was admissible in evidence without proof of execution, although the plaintiff stated that she did not claim the land under the deed, but under a previous parol gift from the maker of it and possession for 30 years. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. v. Yundelson, 135 Ga. 731, 70 S. E. 576; Brinkley v. Bell, 126 Ga. 480, 55 S. E. 187.

(a) Under such circumstances, the deed was admissible; but the grantee could introduce other evidence of her title, and the ultimate question of what constituted her title was for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 370; Boundaries, Dec. Dig. §§ 35, 40.*]

2. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The verdict was supported by the evidence, and there was no error in overruling the motion for a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Jasper County; H. G. Lewis, Judge.

Action between S. E. Barnes and D. H. Maddox. From the judgment, Barnes brings error. Affirmed.

Doyle Campbell, for plaintiff in error. W. S. Florence, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(128 Ga. 146)

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. ROBERSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ACTION (§ 28*)—NATURE AND FORM—ACTION EX CONTRACTU—SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION.

The petition in this case was a suit ex contractu for the value of the property of the plaintiff, taken and carried away by the defendant without the plaintiff's consent, without alleging that the defendant had converted the same into money; and, under the ruling in Woodruff v. Zaban, 133 Ga. 24, 65 S. E. 123, 134 Am. St. Rep. 186, the petition was subject to general demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 196-215; Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

Error from Superior Court, Wayne County; P. E. Seabrook, Judge.

Action by W. M. Roberson against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Bennet, Twitty & Reese and Littlefield & Poppell, for plaintiff in error. Jas. R. Thomas and Jos. A. Morris, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. W. M. Roberson brought suit against the Southern Railway Company; his petition, after alleging the defendant to be a corporation having a line of railroad and place of business in the county in which the suit was brought, making the following allegations: "That said defendant is indebted to your petitioner in the sum of four hundred and forty-eight dollars (\$448.00) by reason of the following facts, to wit: That on or about the twenty-fourth (24th) day of September, 1907, in the county aforesaid and in the town of Jesup, and at a point about one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) mile north of the depot in said town and on said railroad, said defendant took and carried away, without your petitioner's consent, one thousand and one hundred and twenty (1,120) hewn cross-ties, both pine and cypress, of the value of forty cents (\$.40) each. That your petitioner purchased said cross-ties and paid therefor the sum of thirty-nine cents (\$.39), with the expectation of selling same to said railroad company at and for the market price thereof, to wit, forty cents (\$.40) each; but without any notice to your petitioner the work train on said defendant's line of railway loaded said ties, by its agents, servants, and employes, and carried same away, and have since that time failed and refused to pay your petitioner the true value of said ties, which is, as aforesaid, the sum of four hundred and forty-eight dollars (\$448.00). Wherefore petitioner prays that process do issue, directed to said defendant, requiring it to be and appear at the next term of this court, then and there to answer your petitioner's complaint, and he will ever pray," etc. The railway company filed a general and a special demurrer, which the court overruled, and the company excepted. Upon the trial of the case, the court directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and to the order of the court overruling the defendant's motion for a new trial it excepted.

We do not think there was any merit in the special demurrer, but the general demurrer should have been sustained. The petition, properly construed, is a suit ex contractu. It is alleged that the defendant took and carried away the cross-ties belonging to the plaintiff, and refused to pay him the value thereof on demand. Allegations showing a tort are not inconsistent with a suit ex contractu. There is no allegation as to what disposition the company made of the ties, and no allegation that it refused to return them to the plaintiff, or that the latter ever made any demand on the company for their return. There is no allegation that the plaintiff has been damaged, and the suit is not in terms for any damages done by the defendant. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant "is indebted" to him. Properly construed, the allegations to show that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff mean that the plaintiff bought the ties, intending to sell them to the defendant at 40 cents each; but the defendant, without the plaintiff's consent, took possession of them and carried them away, and refused, upon demand, to pay the plaintiff 40 cents each for them, which was their value. The plaintiff does not allege that the company had used or in any way disposed of the ties, or that the company had refused to return them. The only demand alleged to have been made by the plaintiff was for the value of the ties. The allegations do not disclose any bailment. The suit was one ex contractu, and not ex delicto. See Spencer v. Hewett, 20 Ga. 426. It was held in the case of Southern Ry. Co. v. Born Steel Range Co., 122 Ga. 658, 50 S. E. 488, that the suit there involved was an action ex delicto; but the facts alleged were different from those alleged in the present case, especially that in the Born Case it was alleged that the railway company had failed to comply with a demand of the plaintiff for the return of the articles shipped by it, in consequence of which they "have been wholly lost to the plaintiff, to its damage," etc. The allegations of the petition show the commission of a tort by defendant. The suit in the present case being one ex contractu, and the plaintiff not alleging that the defendant had sold the ties, the general demurrer should have been sustained, under the ruling in the case of Woodruff v. Zaban, 133 Ga. 24, 65 S. E. 123, 134 Am. St. Rep. 186, and the decisions therein cited, which this court had under review and refused to overrule. The writer was one of the Justices who was then of the opinion that the request to overrule these decisions (Spencer v. Hewett, 20 Ga. 426, Barlow v. Stalworth, 27 Ga. 517, and Cragg v. Arendale, 113 Ga. 181, 38 S. E. 399), should be granted, and still adheres to the view that they are erroneous, in so far as they lay down the doctrine that an action of assumpsit will not lie where there has been a conversion of articles of personalty, unless the property tortiously taken has been converted into money by the wrongdoer. The court having erred in not sustaining the general demurrer, everything which occurred in the case thereafter was nugatory.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 181)

FEW v. SUPREME LODGE K. P.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 721*)—MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETIES—CONDITIONS.

A fraternal beneficiary society issued to one of its members a certificate of membership in the nature of a policy of life insurance, dated November 1, 1907, containing, among others, the following provisions: "The contract evidenced hereby shall not begin until 12 o'clock noon of the day of the date hereof, and then the Supreme Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias, hereinafter called the 'society' will not be liable unless the said member has actually paid the membership fee and made the first monthly payment required while said member is in good health."

Also: "Said monthly payments will be due and payable to the secretary of the section to which the member belongs, without notice in advance, on the 1st day of each and every month. Failure to make any such payment on or before the 20th day of the month for which the same is due shall ipso facto, from and after such date, forfeit this certificate, subject to the provisions contained in paragraph 7 hereof." Also: "All of the conditions and provisions of the contract between the member and society are conditions precedent to any liability of the society hereunder, and are to be deemed to be assented to and accepted without the necessity for the member's signature being affixed hereto." Held, the provisions of the certificate above quoted make the payment of the first monthly payment while the insured is "in good health" a condition precedent to any liability of the insurer on the contract. Reese v. Fidelity Mutual Life Association, 111 Ga. 482, 36 S. E. 637; Clark v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. 571, 59 S. E. 283.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1857; Dec. Dig. § 721.*]

2. INSURANCE (§ 724*)—BENEFIT CERTIFICATE—PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS—WAIVER—ESTOPPEL.

The certificate containing the further provision that "no officer or representative thereof, or of any subordinate body thereof, has any right or power, by any statement, agreement, promise, or manner of transacting business, to waive the provisions or requirements of the contract between the member and the society, or of the laws, rules, and regulations of the society," if the first monthly payment was made, not at the inception of the contract, but subsequently to the date of the certificate and while the member was not in good health, acceptance of such payment by a representative of the society, authorized to collect premiums for the latter, with knowledge at the time on the part of the representative that the insured was not then in good health, would not be a waiver by the society, or estop it from contending that it was not liable, because the insured was not in good health when the payment was made. Springfield Fire, etc., Ins. Co. v. Price, 132 Ga. 687, 64 S. E. 1074; 3 Cooley's Briefs on Insurance, 2513. Aliter, if delivery of the certificate and acceptance of the premium were contemporaneous. Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Mutual Real Estate & Building Association, 98 Ga. 262, 25 S. E. 457; Johnson v. Aetna Ins. Co., 123 Ga. 404, 51 S. E. 339, 107 Am. St. Rep. 92, followed in Athens Mutual Ins. Co. v. Evans, 132 Ga. 703-711, 64 S. E. 993.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1866-1868; Dec. Dig. § 724.*]

3. INSURANCE (§ 825*)—CERTIFICATE—DELIVERY—PAYMENT—PAYMENT OF PREMIUM—GOOD HEALTH OF INSURED—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Under the evidence submitted, it was for the jury to determine whether the insured was in good health when the first monthly payment was made on November 20, 1907; and, if not, then whether the representative of the society, to whom such payment was made, had notice of the fact, and whether the delivery of the certificate and acceptance of the first monthly payment were contemporaneous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 2009; Dec. Dig. § 825.*]

4. DIRECTION OF VERDICT.

The judge erred in directing the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Morgan County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Action by M. M. Few against the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

M. C. Few and F. C. Foster, for plaintiff in error. Garrard & Gazan and Percy Middlebrooks, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 212)

KING v. YARBRAV.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION (§ 10*)—ABUSE OF LEGAL PROCESS.

There is a malicious abuse of legal process, where a party employs civil process wrongfully and unlawfully, and for a purpose not intended by law, and for such abuse of civil process an action will lie. Such a case is made by the petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. §§ 11, 12; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

2. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION (§ 54*)—ABUSE OF CIVIL PROCESS—PLEADING—AMENDMENT.

In an action for abuse of civil process, where all the facts upon which the action is based are fully pleaded, it is proper to allow an amendment declaring that the act of the defendant in the wrongful institution and prosecution of the civil process as therein alleged was malicious and without probable cause.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. § 105; Dec. Dig. § 54.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION (§ 34*)—ABUSE AND MALICIOUS USE OF LEGAL PROCESS.

An action for malicious abuse of legal process may be maintained before the action in which such process was issued has terminated; but an action for the malicious use of legal process, where no object is contemplated to be gained by such use, other than the proper execution of the process, cannot be commenced until the action on which the process issued is finally determined in favor of defendant therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. § 70; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by T. T. Yarbray against A. R. King. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Walter A. Sims, for plaintiff in error. Heyward & Garrett and T. C. Battle, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. Yarbray sued King to recover damages, alleging that King sued him in a justice court, and caused a summons of garnishment to be served on his employer; that, before the suit was brought, plaintiff informed King, who was threatening to sue him and garnish his wages, that his wages as a locomotive engineer were not subject to process of garnishment, but that his employer (a railroad company) would suspend him until the debt upon which the garnishment issued was paid, if he was garnished, whereupon King replied that he was well aware of the rule of his employer that an employé would be suspended in case his wages were garnished until he paid the debt, but that he wanted his money, and, unless the debt was paid by a stated time, he would bring suit and garnish the plaintiff's employer. The plaintiff alleged that he could not pay the debt by the stipulated time, and that the defendant sued him, and garnished his employer, who suspended plaintiff from work, and, as he was unable to pay the debt, he lost his job and was compelled to go through bankruptcy. At the time of his suspension the plaintiff was earning $105 per month, and was discharged from his employment because of the legal proceedings of the defendant. The institution of the garnishment proceeding was alleged to be an abuse of legal process. The plaintiff was allowed to amend his petition, over the objection of the defendant, by alleging that the institution of the garnishment proceedings was done maliciously and without probable cause. The defendant demurred to the sufficiency of the petition, and his demurrer was overruled. The exceptions are to the allowance of the amendment and to the overruling of the demurrer.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

The plaintiff's claim for damages is predicated upon an alleged wrongful use of legal proceedings, and the main point of difference between the parties is their characterization of the nature of the suit. The plaintiff alleges that his suit is for malicious abuse of legal process, and the defendant contends that the allegations of fact in the petition show an attempt to recover because of a malicious use of legal process. The differentiation between an action for malicious abuse of legal process and one for malicious use of legal process, however refined and technical, is recognized by the law.

[3] An action for malicious abuse of legal process may be maintained before the action in which such process was issued has terminated; but an action for the malicious use of legal process, where no object is contemplated to be gained by such use, other than the proper effect and execution of the process, cannot be commenced until the action on which the process issued has been finally determined in favor of the defendant therein. Mullins v. Matthews, 122 Ga. 286, 50 S. E. 101. It has been said that "an action for malicious abuse of legal process will lie, where legal process has been employed for some other object than that which it was intended by law to effect; for example, where a man has been arrested, or his goods seized, in order to extort money from him, even though it be to pay a just claim other than the one in suit, or in order to compel him to give up possession of a deed, or other thing of value, not the legal object of the process. * * * In such an action it is not necessary to allege want of probable cause. The malicious use of legal process may give rise to an action, where no object is contemplated to be gained by it, other than its proper effect and execution." Porter v. Johnson, 96 Ga. 145, 23 S. E. 123; Brantley v. Rhodes-Haverty Furniture Co., 131 Ga. 276, 62 S. E. 222.

[1] The case as made by the petition is that the defendant knew that the plaintiff's wages as engineer were not subject to the process of garnishment, and that the garnishment proceeding was instituted maliciously and without probable cause, and was not intended to collect wages exempt by law from such legal process. The monthly wages of a locomotive engineer in the employment of a railroad company are not subject to the process of garnishment. Smith v. Walker, 119 Ga. 615, 46 S. E. 831. If the defendant maliciously and without probable cause employed the process of garnishment, not for the collection of the wages in the hands of the garnishee, but for an ulterior purpose, then he would be liable in an action for an abuse of legal process.

[2] The facts upon which the action rested were alleged in the original petition, and it was proper to allow an amendment, denouncing the acts of the defendant in prosecuting the garnishment suit as being malicious and without probable cause.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 241)

HOLTZENDORFF v. DILLARD.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEW TRIAL (§ 156*)—MOTION—POSTPONEMENT.

A verdict was found and judgment rendered thereon on February 9, 1909. A motion for a new trial was filed on February 11th, during the term. A rule nisi was granted, requiring the adverse party to show cause on March 13th, in vacation, why a new trial should not be granted. At the same time another order was taken, which recited that it was impossible to make out and complete a brief of the testimony before the adjournment of court, and provided that the movant might amend his motion at any time before the final hearing, and should have until the final hearing, whenever it might be, to prepare and present for approval the brief of evidence, and that, if for any reason the motion was not heard at the time and place fixed, it should be heard and determined at such time and place in vacation as counsel might agree upon, and upon their failure to so agree at such time and place as the presiding judge might fix on application of either party, and that, if for any reason the motion was not heard and determined before the beginning of the next term of court, then it should stand on the docket until heard and determined at such term or thereafter. Held, that the motion for a new trial did not become functus officio, because it was not heard on the day named in the rule nisi, and no brief of evidence was then tendered for approval, and no further order was taken continuing the hearing. When such motion was not heard during the vacation, it stood for hearing and determination in term time, subject to again be set for a hearing in vacation by special order passed during the term.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. § 316; Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

2. NEW TRIAL (§ 156*)—MOTION.

Where at a later term of court such motion was again set for a hearing by a special order, the presiding judge had jurisdiction at the time so fixed to deal with the motion and with the approval of the brief of evidence; and there was no error in refusing to dismiss the motion, because the brief of evidence had not been sooner presented, under the facts shown as to the cause of delay.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

3. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—POSTPONEMENT OF HEARING.

Nor was there any abuse of discretion in again postponing the case for a week.

4. NEW TRIAL (§ 156*)—CONTINUANCE OF HEARING—ORDER NUNC PRO TUNC.

Where by order a motion for a new trial was set for hearing on a day named in vacation, and on the day preceding such named date the judge telegraphed to counsel that the hearing was continued to another fixed date, but did not pass a written order of continuance, there was no error, on the later day so fixed, in signing the order of continuance nunc pro tunc; the continuance having in fact been made by the judge, but the order therefor not having been at the time reduced to writing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

5. NEW TRIAL (§ 156*)—CONTINUANCE OF HEARING—ORDER NUNC PRO TUNC.

On the last date so fixed for the hearing, the presiding judge had jurisdiction to approve the brief of evidence, then presented for that purpose, and to pass on the motion for a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

6. NEW TRIAL (§ 132*)—APPROVAL OF BRIEF OF EVIDENCE.

Although some months had elapsed between the trial of the case and the hearing of the motion for a new trial, and the presiding judge could not from memory certify to the accuracy of the brief of evidence, yet where the evidence and the charge of the court were taken down by the official stenographer at the time of the trial, and were transcribed, and from this the presiding judge approved them, this court will not reverse his judgment for so doing, and declining to dismiss the motion for a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

7. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

There was no error in refusing to dismiss the motion for a new trial on any of the grounds contained in the motion therefor.

8. NEW TRIAL PROPERLY GRANTED.

The verdict was not demanded by the evidence, and the presiding judge did not abuse his discretion in granting a first new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Glynn County; T. A. Parker, Judge.

Action between K. D. Holtzendorff, as administratrix, and J. B. Dillard. From the judgment, Holtzendorff brings error. Affirmed.

See, also, infra.

J. D. Sparks, for plaintiff in error. Hatton Lovejoy and Crovatt & Whitfield, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 242)

HOLTZENDORFF v. DILLARD.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 78*)—DECISIONS REVIEWABLE—FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.

At the time set for the hearing of a motion for a new trial, a motion was made to dismiss it on various grounds. The presiding judge said that if the motion were pressed he would have to sustain it. Counsel for the party moving for a new trial moved for a postponement of the hearing to a later date, which was granted over objection by adverse counsel. "The court refused to then pass upon said motion to dismiss," and by order continued the hearing to a later date. To this respondent filed a bill of exceptions, and brought the case here. Held, that this constituted no such final judgment as to authorize a direct bill of exceptions, and, the judge not having passed upon the motion to dismiss, direct exception could not be taken on the ground that he erroneously overruled it, and that, had he sustained it, the judgment would have been final. On motion, the writ of error must be dismissed. Civil Code 1910, § 6138.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

Error from Superior Court, Glynn County; C. B. Conyers, Judge.

Action between K. D. Holtzendorff, as administratrix, and J. B. Dillard. From the judgment, Holtzendorff brings error. Dismissed.

See, also, 71 S. E. 132.

J. D. Sparks, for plaintiff in error. Hatton Lovejoy and Crovatt & Whitfield, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Writ of error dismissed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 228)

MARTIN v. HALE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 494*)—TRIAL (§ 25*)—RIGHT TO OPEN AND CLOSE.

Where suit is brought by the holder of a promissory note payable to the order of the payee, an indorsed by him to the plaintiff without recourse, and the defendant in his plea admits the execution of the note and its ownership by the plaintiff, the burden is on the defendant to establish his defense, and consequently he is entitled to open and conclude.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Dec. Dig. § 494; Trial, Cent. Dig. § 47; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 296*)—INSTRUCTIONS.

It is not cause for a new trial that the court read in charge to the jury a Code section, part of which was applicable to the case and part not; it not appearing that the reading of the inapplicable part was calculated to mislead the jury or was prejudicial to the rights of the losing party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 705-713, 715, 716; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 296*)—INSTRUCTIONS.

A charge that "counsel may differ among themselves as to what the evidence is, but that will not control you; you look to all the evidence of the witnesses, and determine what the truth is, and arrive at the truth as best you can in this transaction," is not erroneous, as excluding consideration of the documentary evidence, where it appears from the context that the court's instruction concerned a difference between counsel as to the testimony of witnesses, and he further charged the jury that their verdict was to be reached after a consideration of all the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 705-713; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

4. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The charge was fair and comprehensive, and adapted to the evidence, and the evidence was sufficient to support the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Catoosa County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by A. F. Martin, Jr., against W. F. Hale. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

W. E. Mann, for plaintiff in error. Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. A. F. Martin, Jr., brought suit against W. F. Hale upon a note for the principal sum of $1,092, claiming only $500 principal to be due thereon. The note was payable to the Bank of Ringgold, and transferred without recourse by the payee to the plaintiff. The defendant admitted the execution of the note, and that the plaintiff was the owner thereof. By way of defense he alleged that the plaintiff was the cashier of the Bank of Ringgold, and came to the home of the defendant, who at the time was sick in bed, and represented to the defendant that a note given by him to the Bank of Ringgold had been lost, and that he wished the defendant to give a duplicate of the note; the plaintiff stating that he had secured a better position, and was intending to sever his connection with the bank of Ringgold, and desired the duplicate note to place of the lost note, so that he might settle his affairs with the bank. The defendant averred that he was sick at the time, and having no cause to suspect anything wrong, and believing that the plaintiff would not knowingly misrepresent the facts, and relying upon his representations, he executed a duplicate note, which is the note in suit. He averred that the plaintiff's representations were false, and were fraudulently made for the purpose of procuring the note from the defendant; that as soon as he recovered from his illness he ascertained that he had signed the note on account of the deception and fraud of the plaintiff, and at once notified the Bank of Ringgold that he had been deceived in signing the note and that he would not pay the same; that since the execution of the note the plaintiff had stated that he had been mistaken when he procured the defendant to sign the note—that it was a note for $500 which had been lost, instead of a note for $1,092, which explains why plaintiff claims only $500 principal in the suit against defendant. The defendant further averred that no $500 note given by him to the Bank of Ringgold had been lost, and that he is not indebted to the plaintiff.

On the trial it was the contention of the plaintiff that a note for $500 had been lost by him as cashier of the bank, and that the note sued on was taken as a duplicate for the same, the plaintiff erroneously believing at the time that the lost note was for the amount of the duplicate note, and that in his settlement with the bank he had paid the $500 note, which was lost, and that the bank transferred the duplicate note to him. The defendant, on the other hand, contended that the truth of the transaction was as expressed in his plea, that he had paid every note which he had given to the bank, that none had been lost, and that the bank refused to accept the duplicate note, upon his notice as to the manner in which the plaintiff procured it. The trial resulted in a verdict for the defendant.

[1] 1. In his motion for new trial, the plaintiff complained that the court allowed the defendant to assume the burden of proof, and accorded him the right to open and conclude. The defendant in his answer having admitted the execution of the note, and that the plaintiff was the owner and holder thereof, the burden was upon him to make good his defense, and he was entitled to open and conclude the argument. Montgomery v. Hunt, 93 Ga. 438, 21 S. E. 59.

[2] 2. The court read to the jury sections 4622, 4623, and 4625 of the Code of 1910, defining actual and constructive fraud, misrepresentation, and how fraud may be consummated. Complaint is made that these sections are inapplicable to the pleadings and the evidence. So much of section 4622 as defines constructive fraud may not have been strictly applicable to the issue raised by the pleadings and evidence. The defendant clearly made the issue of actual fraud by the plaintiff misrepresenting that the duplicate note was in substitution for a lost note held by the bank, and the Code sections relative to actual fraud and misrepresentation were clearly applicable. But even if the definition of constructive fraud, which is defined in the Code section to be "any act of omission or commission contrary to legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence justly reposed, which is contrary to good conscience and operates to the injury of another," be inapplicable (which is to be doubted), the reading of the entire section containing this definition could not have been prejudicial to the defendant, because the charge of the court was explicit that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, unless he practiced a fraud upon the defendant in the procurement of the note, as averred in his plea. Eagle & Phenix Mills v. Herron, 119 Ga. 389, 46 S. E. 405.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[3, 4] 3, 4. The charge complained of in the third headnote was not erroneous for the reason therein stated. The instruction of the court was fair and comprehensive, and adapted to the evidence, and the evidence was sufficient to support the verdict.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 222)

MADDISON & JOHNSON v. PIEDMONT STONE CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The court committed no error in his rulings excluding testimony, nor in his failure to charge as complained of. The evidence was sufficient to support the verdict, and the judgment is affirmed.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action between Maddison & Johnson and the Piedmont Stone Company. From the judgment, Maddison & Johnson bring error. Affirmed.

Mark Bolding, for plaintiffs in error.
Walter A. Sims, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 153)

WHITE v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

SODOMY (§ 1*)—NATURE AND ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

The Court of Appeals certified to this court the following question: "Can sodomy be committed by the mouth, or otherwise than per anum?" Under the ruling in the case of Herring v. State, 119 Ga. 709, 46 S. E. 876, the foregoing question is answered in the affirmative. After a review, upon request by counsel for plaintiff in error, of the case of Herring v. State, this court is of the opinion that the ruling made in that case should not be reversed, and the law as there stated, applicable to the instant case, must stand as the rule in this state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sodomy, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 2; Dec. Dig. § 1.*

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, p. 6539.]

Certified Question from Court of Appeals.

F. M. White was convicted of sodomy, and he brings error to the Court of Appeals. On certified question. Question answered.

Geo. W. Owens, for plaintiff. W. C. Hart-ridge, Sol. Gen., for the State.

BECK, J. Question certified answered in the affirmative. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 223)

GASS v. CUMMINGS et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 977*)—REVIEW—GROUND OF NEW TRIAL.

In view of the confused state of the record, it cannot be said that the evidence demanded the verdict; and, as the judgment complained of is the first grant of a new trial, the discretion of the judge will not be disturbed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3860-3865; Dec. Dig. § 977.*]

Error from Superior Court, Dade County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action between G. L. Gass and William Cummings and others. From an order granting a new trial, Gass brings error. Affirmed.

Foust & Payne and Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, for plaintiff in error. W. U. Jacoway, J. P. Jacoway, and R. F. Tatum, for defendants in error.

EVANS, P. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 225)

DAVIS v. MOORE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

While some of the charges complained of may have been slightly inaccurate, none of them embody harmful error against the plaintiff, requiring a new trial. The evidence was sufficient to warrant the verdict in favor of the defendant, and no error appears requiring a reversal of the judgment refusing a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Lumpkin County; H. H. Dean, Judge pro hac vice.

Action by J. M. Davis against Hughes Moore. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Johnson & Johnson, for plaintiff in error. O. J. Lilly and Howard Thompson, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 224)

BLUE RIDGE LUMBER CO. v. GREENWOOD et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ACCOUNT, ACTION ON (§ 8*)—APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 518*)—NECESSITY FOR BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The petition alleged that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiff in a named sum petition that defendant "was negligent in having a freight car loaded with meat made up in" the train, "and placed next to the engine" was sustained, the allegation that the defendant was negligent "in pulling said heavily laden freight car, so loaded with meat, in its passenger train at such rapid rate" of speed of 30 to 40 miles per hour, was not stricken. There was evidence that the train at the time of the derailment was running at a speed of about 40 miles an hour. The freight car, which was loaded with meat, and was in front of the passenger coaches and next to the engine, was derailed, and was at the scene of the wreck when the witness Kessler appeared thereat five or ten minutes after it occurred. He evidently saw the derailed freight car. The allegation of negligence above referred to was not simply that the train was being run at too rapid rate of speed, but that it was run at such rate of speed with the "heavily laden freight car, so loaded with meat, in its passenger train." The running of the train at such speed might not have been negligent, but for the fact that the heavily loaded freight car was "in its passenger train." The witness Kessler testified to the effect that he inspected the track at the scene of the accident soon after its occurrence, and that it was all right in every way. He also testified: "I could not discover any cause for the wreck whatever. * * * As to what caused that wreck, in my opinion I couldn't see any cause for it whatever. I made a close examination, and I couldn't discover any cause at all." In view of the testimony delivered by the witness Kessler, the testimony regarding his previous statements—at least, his statement that the heavily loaded box car caused the wreck—was admissible for the purpose of discrediting his testimony delivered on the trial in behalf of the defendant, and the court committed no error in allowing the same.

4. The evidence was sufficient to warrant the verdict. The jury found a verdict for $750, and the amount of the recovery was not excessive.

Judgment affirmed.

FISH, C. J., and EVANS, P. J., disqualified.

(136 Ga. 163)

FITZGERALD v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 309*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER.

The only eyewitness to the homicide testified in behalf of the state, in substance, as follows: Gus Fitzgerald, cousin of the accused, and George Austin were quarreling, when Gus drew his knife on George, who thereupon struck Gus with his fist, when the accused ran up to them out of the dark, and shot George with a pistol, thereby killing him at once. The only defenses set up by the accused on the trial were alibi, and that the homicide was not committed in the county of Fayette, as charged in the indictment. The court, therefore, did not err in failing to instruct the jury on the subject of voluntary manslaughter. See Kendrick v. State, 113 Ga. 759, 39 S. E. 286, and cases cited; Robinson v. State, 118 Ga. 45, 44 S. E. 804.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 649-656; Dec. Dig. § 309.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 815*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

In connection with instructions on the defense of alibi, the court charged the jury: "If you have a reasonable doubt from the evidence that this is the man who committed this offense, if one was committed by some one, it would be your duty to acquit him." This charge was not justly subject to the criticism that it took from the jury the right to consider whether the accused, if he committed the offense, was justifiable, or only guilty of voluntary manslaughter. Moreover, as stated in the foregoing headnote, according to the evidence of the sole eyewitness to the homicide, the person who did the killing was guilty of murder.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1922, 1936; Dec. Dig. § 815.*]

3. INSTRUCTIONS ON ALIBI.

The instructions given on the subject of alibi, to which exception was taken, were in the language stating the law on that subject in Harrison v. State, 83 Ga. 129 (3), 9 S. E. 542.

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 815*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

The following instruction to the jury: "Does your mind reach the conclusion from the evidence that the allegations are true beyond a reasonable doubt? If it does, then you are authorized to find it true." This instruction was not cause for a new trial, on the ground "that it took from the jury the right to consider the statement of the defendant, and confined them in reaching a conclusion to the evidence in the case"; the court having fully and correctly instructed the jury as to the statement made them by the accused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1922, 1936; Dec. Dig. § 815.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 772*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

According to the evidence for the state, both the accused and the deceased, George Austin, were in the county of Fayette when the former shot and killed the latter. According to the evidence for the accused, the deceased was shot and killed in the county of Clayton. Therefore it was not cause for a new trial that the court instructed the jury as follows: "If the defendant inflicted a mortal wound on George Austin, where the wound was inflicted is the place where jurisdiction is."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 772.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 655*)—TRIAL—CONDUCT OF TRIAL—EXPRESSION OF OPINION BY JUDGE.

While the case was being argued before the jury, the court in the presence of the jury submitted the following query to the counsel for both sides: "Suppose that this jury should decide that the defendant is guilty of the offense charged in the indictment," but should conclude that it did not occur in this county, but that it happened in some other county, what do you say about the jury returning this kind of a verdict: 'We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty, on the ground that the crime was not committed in Fayette county.' Counsel for the accused replied that he did not think the jury could properly return such a verdict. The solicitor general stated that in his opinion they could, and that the accused could then be tried in the county where the homicide occurred, if it did not occur in the county of Fayette. The judge replied: "I didn't know much about that, but asked you gentlemen to see what you thought about it. Have either of you any authority on that point?" Counsel for both sides replied that they had no authority on the subject. The judge did not again refer to the point. What the judge said in this colloquy was not cause for a new trial, on the ground that it impressed the jury with the idea that he was of the opinion that the accused was guilty, and should be held for trial in some other county, if not in Fayette county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1520-1535; Dec. Dig. § 655.*]

7. EVIDENCE AUTHORIZED CONVICTION.

There was evidence to authorize the verdict, and the court did not err in refusing to grant a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Fayette County; L. S. Roan, Judge.

Dock Fitzgerald was convicted of crime, and he brings error. Affirmed.

J. W. Culpepper and Daley & Chambers, for plaintiff in error. J. W. Wise, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 221)

IVEY v. CABLE CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

DIRECTING VERDICT.

The evidence demanded a verdict in favor of the defendant, and the court did not err in directing the jury to find in its favor.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; W. D. Ellis, Judge.

Action by Tina Ivey against the Cable Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Lowndes Calhoun, for plaintiff in error. J. W. & J. D. Humphries, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 164)

BARNES v. MADDOX.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 370*)—BOUNDARIES (§§ 35, 40*)—PROCEEDINGS TO ESTABLISH—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Where the dividing line between two adjoining tracts of land was in controversy, both plaintiff and defendant claiming under a common source of title, a deed, drawn from the possession of the plaintiff by notice to produce, in which the common predecessor in title conveyed the tract to her with boundaries as contended for by the defendant, was admissible in evidence without proof of execution, although the plaintiff stated that she did not claim the land under the deed, but under a previous parol gift from the maker of it and possession for 30 years. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. v. Yudson, 135 Ga. 731, 70 S. E. 576; Brinkley v. Bell, 126 Ga. 490, 55 S. E. 187.

(a) Under such circumstances, the deed was admissible; but the grantee could introduce other evidence of her title, and the ultimate question of what constituted her title was for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 370; Boundaries, Dec. Dig. §§ 35, 40.*]

2. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The verdict was supported by the evidence, and there was no error in overruling the motion for a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Jasper County; H. G. Lewis, Judge.

Action between S. E. Barnes and D. H. Maddox. From the judgment, Barnes brings error. Affirmed.

Doyle Campbell, for plaintiff in error. W. S. Florence, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(236 Ga. 146)

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. ROBERSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ACTION (§ 28*)—NATURE AND FORM—ACTION EX CONTRACTU—SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION.

The petition in this case was a suit ex contractu for the value of the property of the plaintiff, taken and carried away by the defendant without the plaintiff's consent, without alleging that the defendant had converted the same into money; and, under the ruling in Woodruff v. Zaban, 133 Ga. 24, 65 S. E. 123, 134 Am. St. Rep. 186, the petition was subject to general demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 196-215; Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

Error from Superior Court, Wayne County; P. E. Seabrook, Judge.

Action by W. M. Roberson against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Bennet, Twitty & Reese and Littlefield & Poppell, for plaintiff in error. Jas. R. Thomas and Jos. A. Morris, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. W. M. Roberson brought suit against the Southern Railway Company; his petition, after alleging the defendant to be a corporation having a line of railroad and place of business in the county in which the suit was brought, making the following allegations: "That said defendant is Action by Mrs. J. W. Pounds against J. W. Pounds and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

W. H. Terrell, for plaintiff in error. Alonzo Field, for defendants in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 222)

WILLIAMSON et al. v. YOUMANS.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TENANCY IN COMMON (§ 55*)—JOINT ACTION FOR RECOVERY OF LAND.

Where tenants in common bring a joint action for the recovery of land, if it appears upon the trial of the case that the defendant has a good title by prescription as against one of the plaintiffs, there can be no recovery in the case. De Vaughan v. McLeroy, 82 Ga. 713, 10 S. E. 211; Powell on Actions for Land, § 27.

(a) If the evidence did not show in the defendant a good title as against all of the plaintiffs, the uncontradicted evidence shows a good title by prescription by reason of adverse possession under color of title for seven years in the defendant as against one or more of the plaintiffs; and, under the ruling announced in the preceding note, the court committed no error in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tenancy in Common, Cent. Dig. § 146; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1051*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

The deed under which defendant claims title was admissible as color of title, if not admissible for any other purpose. Even if the admission of other evidence over the objection of the plaintiffs was error for any reason assigned, the admission of such evidence does not constitute error requiring a new trial, as competent evidence admitted demanded a verdict in favor of the defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4161-4170; Dec. Dig. § 1051.*]

Error from Superior Court, Emanuel County; B. T. Rawlings, Judge.

Action by Mary Williamson and others against J. S. Youmans. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

Hines & Jordan, Alfred Herrington, Lee Godfrey, and Walter F. Gray, for plaintiffs in error. Williams & Bradley, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 187)

RODDENBERRY v. PATTERSON.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 682*)—RECORD—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—SUFFICIENCY.

Where, on motion, the judge dismissed the defendant's plea to a suit on an open account, and, on evidence being given that the account was correct, directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and a judgment was entered thereon, a bill of exceptions, which excepted to such final judgment and assigned it as error, and excepted to the striking of the plea, and duly assigned error thereon, was sufficient to bring before the Supreme Court the question of the correctness of the latter ruling, and the writ of error will not be dismissed. Lyndon v. Georgia Ry. & Electric Co., 129 Ga. 353, 58 S. E. 1047.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2885-2886; Dec. Dig. § 682.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 725*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—SUFFICIENCY.

Where the bill of exceptions recited that a motion to dismiss the defendant's plea of recoupment was made on certain stated grounds, based on what appeared on the face of the plea, and that the motion was sustained, an assignment of error on such ruling in the following words was sufficient: "To this order of the court the defendant then and there excepted, and now excepts and assigns error thereon, and says that the court erred in sustaining the motion of the plaintiff and in striking the defendant's plea."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 725.*]

3. SALES (§ 348*)—RECOUPMENT.

Where suit was brought on an open account for the price of bricks alleged to have been sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, the latter could file a plea of recoupment alleging that the plaintiff contracted to deliver to him a stated number of bricks at a named price, that those delivered were only part of the number contracted for, that the plaintiff failed to deliver the balance, that the market value of such bricks at the time and place for delivery was a specified sum per thousand, being greater than the contract price, and that by reason of the breach the plaintiff was indebted to him the difference between the contract price and the market price, allowing a credit for the bricks delivered.

(a) Such a plea does not involve a rescission of the contract, or a necessity on the part of the defendant to return the bricks received.

(b) The plea filed was sufficient to withstand the motion to dismiss, and the sustaining of such motion was error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 973-986; Dec. Dig. § 348.*]

Error from Superior Court, Grady County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by L. F. Patterson against W. B. Roddenberry. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Roscoe Luke, for plaintiff in error. T. S. Hawes and Russell & Fleming, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 226)

GEORGIAN CO. v. KUHNEN.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CONTRACTS (§ 352*)—ACTION—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The action was to recover an amount alleged to be due for the publication of certain advertisements in the plaintiff's newspaper. There was evidence to show that the advertisements were published in pursuance of a contract with the defendant's agent, that the defendant acknowledged the authority of his agent to make the contract, that the sum claimed was a reasonable price, and that the defendant requested the plaintiff's forbearance in the collection of the indebtedness after it had been incurred. It was error to grant a nonsuit.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Dec. Dig. § 352.*]

Error from Superior Court, Habersham County; J. J. Kimsey, Judge.

Action by the Georgian Company against N. Kuhn. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

A. A. McCurry, for plaintiff in error. Sam Kinzey and J. B. Jones, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 166)

BLACKMON v. TAYLOR.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 349*)—REMEDIES OF PURCHASER—DEFICIENCY IN QUANTITY OF LAND—ACTION—SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION.

A deed purported to convey: "That tract or parcel of land known and described as lot No. 1 in the Ninth district of said county [Muscogee], containing 201 acres, more or less. The north half of lot No. 2 in the Ninth district, containing 102½ acres, more or less, same being all of lot No. 2 except 100 acres conveyed to Thomas Huff by the grantor herein. Said deed recorded in Book II, folio 18, in the clerk's office, Muscogee county records. Also 96½ acres off fractional lots Nos. 15 and 16, being in the Eighteenth district of said county; being in all about 400 acres, more or less." It also contained a clause of general warranty of title. A suit was subsequently instituted by the grantee against the grantor, setting forth the deed and alleging in substance that the land therein mentioned was sold to the plaintiff as a "certain tract or parcel of land," and that about the same date another tract or parcel of land, containing 301 acres, more or less, was sold to another person, and that the defendant represented that the two tracts constituted "one farm" of about 700 acres; that subsequently a division of the 700 acres was had between the respective grantees (the same not having been previously surveyed), and upon a survey of the 400 acres, more or less, so sold to petitioner, it was ascertained to contain 250 acres. It was further alleged that the plaintiff paid for the land $6.23 per acre, his actual loss being $934.50, and that the grantor warranted the title to the property under his hand and seal. Upon ascertaining the deficiency he immediately notified the grantor and demanded the sum above mentioned for his damages, which was refused. Judgment was prayed for the recovery of that amount. The petition was dismissed on general demurrer. Held, that the petition, properly construed, alleged a sale by the tract, and the action was for a recovery of damages on account of a deficiency in the quantity of the land, and under the ruling in the case of Montgomery v. Robertson, 134 Ga. 66, 67 S. E. 431, and authorities cited, there was no allegation of actual fraud perpetrated by the grantor, and no sufficient case alleged to authorize a recovery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Dec. Dig. § 349.*]

Error from Superior Court, Muscogee County; S. P. Gilbert, Judge.

Action by W. K. Blackmon against T. O. Taylor. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Carson & McOutchen, for plaintiff in error. T. T. Miller, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 337)

WITHROW v. STATE

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 452*)—EVIDENCE—OPINION EVIDENCE—FOUNDATION.

Where a witness testified that he had known the accused for several years, had had conversations with him, and at one time, as an officer, had had him under arrest, and that from his knowledge and observation of the defendant he believed him mentally capable of distinguishing right from wrong, it was not error to admit such evidence over the objection that no sufficient foundation was laid to permit the witness to express such opinion. In this connection, see Herndon v. State, 111 Ga. 178, 36 S. E. 634; Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. 647, 10 S. E. 442.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1053-1055; Dec. Dig. § 452.*]

2. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

While, in charging on the impeachment of witnesses and the corroboration of witnesses sought to be impeached, the judge did not employ the exact language of the Code upon that subject, when the entire charge in regard to the subject is considered together, there is no such error as requires a new trial. Nor was there error in declining to give the requested instructions in regard to the impeachment and corroboration of witnesses. In so far as they correctly stated the law, they were sufficiently covered by the charge.

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1169*)—TRIAL—RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE—WITHDRAWAL OF EVIDENCE.

Where, in answer to questions propounded by the Solicitor General, certain evidence was elicited from a witness, but upon objection by counsel for the accused such evidence was excluded, and the presiding judge instructed the jury that it was withdrawn from their consideration, and should have no weight with them, and should be given no consideration by them, there was no error in declining to grant a mistrial upon motion, because such evidence had been heard by the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 8141; Dec. Dig. § 1169.*]

4. HOMICIDE (§ 171*)—MURDER—TRIAL—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

Where the accused was upon trial under an indictment charging him with the murder of his wife, the jury having authority, in case of a conviction, to find him guilty without a recommendation to mercy, or to recommend him to life imprisonment (Penal Code 1910, § 63), it was competent to introduce evidence tending to show that at the time of the homicide the woman was in an advanced and apparent state of pregnancy, as bearing upon the enormity of the offense and furnishing ground for the consideration of the jury in determining whether or not a recommendation to life imprisonment would be proper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Dec. Dig. § 171.*]

5. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—SUFFICIENCY.

Some of the grounds of the motion for new trial complained of the admission of evidence, but did not sufficiently state the ground of the objection which was urged to its admission.

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 665*)—COMPETENCY—WITNESS NOT SEQUESTERED.

Where, on the trial of a criminal case, the rule for the sequestration of witnesses was invoked, the fact that a witness who had been subpoenaed by the state was not called and sent out does not render him incompetent as a matter of law to testify, and it was not sufficient cause for the grant of a new trial that the court allowed him to testify as to the bad character of a witness for the defendant; the evidence being offered for the purpose of impeaching such witness. See, in this connection, Taylor v. State, 132 Ga. 235, 63 S. E. 1118, Davis v. State, 120 Ga. 843, 48 S. E. 305, and cases cited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1559-1564; Dec. Dig. § 665.*]

7. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

None of the other grounds of the motion for new trial are of such character as to require a new trial or elaboration.

Error from Superior Court, Fannin County; N. A. Morris, Judge.

John J. Withrow, Jr., was convicted of murder, and he brings error. Affirmed.

O. R. Dupree and Gober & Griffin, for plaintiff in error. J. P. Brooke, Sol. Gen., J. Z. Foster, and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 222)

NORMAN et al. v. WYNNE, Judge.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 162*)—OFFICERS—COMPENSATION—SOLICITOR OF CITY COURT.

Where an act providing a city court provides that the fees of the solicitor of such court shall be as follows: "For every case founded on accusation finally disposed of in [the] city court, ten dollars. For every indictment or special presentment finally disposed of in said court, five dollars. For all other services not provided for by this act, the same fees as are allowed solicitors general for like services and cases in the superior courts"—the solicitor of the city court is entitled to only $10 for a joint accusation against two or more persons tried jointly.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 162.*]

Error from Superior Court, Wilkes County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Mandamus by R. C. Norman, Solicitor, and others, against William Wynne, Judge of the City Court of Washington. Judgment for defendant, and petitioners bring error. Affirmed.

W. D. Tutt, for plaintiffs in error. F. H. Colley, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Norman, as solicitor, and Binns, as clerk, of the city court of Washington, Ga., filed a petition in the superior court of Wilkes county for mandamus to compel the judge of such city court to approve for payment an insolvent cost bill, arising from the trial and disposition of cases founded on accusation. This bill was based on 11 accusations tried in the city court. Each accusation was against two defendants jointly, and the defendants in each case were tried jointly.

The act establishing the city court of Washington provides for the payment of the solicitor of such court as follows: "For every case founded on accusation finally disposed of in [the] city court, ten dollars. For every indictment or special presentment finally disposed of in said court, five dollars. For all other services not disposed of by this act, the same fees as are allowed solicitors general for like services and cases in the superior courts. For representing the state in every case carried to the Supreme Court from said city court, fifteen dollars." Acts 1905, p. 403, § 12. It was claimed by the solicitor that the clause, "For every case founded on accusation finally disposed of in [the] city court, ten dollars," entitled him to a fee of $10 for each person named and tried upon joint accusation. The judge of the city court held that this clause meant that the solicitor was entitled to only $10 for the entire trial of the joint accusation. The fees claimed by the solicitor of the city court were in cases tried prior to the passage of the act of August 3, 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 221), amending the act of August 9, 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 403), establishing the city court of Washington. There being no issue of fact, the case was heard without the intervention of a jury, and the court rendered judgment refusing a mandamus absolute, and to this judgment petitioners excepted.

One of the contentions of the plaintiffs in error is that the Legislature must have intended to allow this fee for each person prosecuted, since such is allowed the solicitors general by Penal Code 1910, § 1126, and since most other acts creating city courts allow the solicitors "the same as allowed to solicitors general." We think this does not follow. Rather is it to be noticed that, in creating this court, most of the fees are laid down as being the same as solicitors general; but in certain particulars the fees are made different. It would appear to be the legislative intent to clearly except from the general rule the fees for certain services, and the provision of $10 "for every case" is the first one mentioned in this section of the act. It was held in Re Kenan, 109 Ga. 819, 821, 35 S. E. 312, 313, that, "if two persons are indicted jointly for an offense and tried together, there is but one case." So in Officers of Court v. Wyatt, 62 Ga. 172, it was ruled that, "where four defendants are jointly indicted and jointly tried, the clerk of the court, under section 3695 of the Code [for every bill of indictment, when the defendant is arraigned, tried and found guilty, including all services, $5.00], is only entitled to $5 costs."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

We have dealt with the only question referred to in the brief for counsel for plaintiffs in error. Accordingly it results that the mandamus was properly refused.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 194)

KEEN v. TANNER.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 158*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

It was not error to exclude parol evidence, offered for the purpose of showing that in a certain suit orders had been taken dismissing the same. If such orders had actually been granted by the court, and taken, there was higher and better evidence of the fact than that which was tendered and rejected.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 481; Dec. Dig. § 158.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 183*)—BEST AND SECONDARY—JUDICIAL ACTS—LOSS OF ORIGINAL RECORD.

Where a record in a case pending in a court has been lost, and a copy thereof, including the exhibits to the petition, has been established in lieu of the lost original record, such established copy takes the place of the lost original record, and may be used for any of the purposes for which the original could be used. But this would not render exhibits to the lost petition competent evidence, in the absence of proof of a loss or destruction of the originals, as affirmative and independent proof of the contents of the writings of which the exhibits purported to be copies.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 605-637; Dec. Dig. § 183.*]

3. EJECTMENT (§ 119*)—INJUNCTION—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

The material issue in this case being as to whether the petitioner was entitled to an injunction against the enforcement of a writ of possession, based upon a verdict in an ejectment suit in favor of the defendant in this case against the petitioner, upon the ground that petitioner had not been duly served in the ejectment case, and that the judgment against him had been obtained by fraudulent practice of the plaintiff in the ejectment case, by proceeding in that case in the absence of the defendant after having agreed to dismiss the case, the court did not err in ruling out, as immaterial, testimony tending to show that certain evidence which had been submitted in the trial of the ejectment case was not competent for the purpose for which it was adduced on the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Dec. Dig. § 119.*]

4. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

Under the evidence in this case the petitioner is not entitled to the relief sought, and the court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant.

Error from Superior Court, Coffee County; T. A. Parker, Judge.

Action by J. W. Keen against B. H. Tanner. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Hendricks & Christian and Benj. T. Allen, for plaintiff in error. Quincy & McDonald and Lankford & Dickerson, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. J. W. Keen brought his equitable petition against B. H. Tanner, seeking to obtain an injunction to restrain the enforcement of a writ of possession issued from the superior court of Coffee county, based upon a verdict and judgment in favor of the defendant Tanner against petitioner in the superior court of said county. It is alleged in the petition that the plaintiff had never been served with a copy of the suit in ejectment, and that he had never had his day in court. It appears from the evidence that Tanner was the purchaser of a lot of land at sheriff's sale, which was had under a fi. fa. in favor of B. H. Tanner against D. W. Henderson. Petitioner shows that he had title to the lot of land in controversy, and that D. W. Henderson, the defendant in the fi. fa., had never had title to the property, but that he, the petitioner, had derived title through other parties, and that D. W. Henderson was an entire stranger to the title. Defendant Tanner answered the petition, showing that he had purchased at the sale referred to in the petition, and that he had brought complaint in the statutory form for this land, and had recovered a judgment in his favor for the same. He also averred in his answer that plaintiff had been duly served in the ejectment suit.

[1-3] 1-3. No elaboration is required of the principles stated in headnotes 1, 2, 3.

[4] 4. On a comparison of the record in the case of B. H. Tanner v. J. W. Keen, the same being a complaint for land, brought by the defendant in the present case against the plaintiff therein, it sufficiently appears that the judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the ejectment suit covered the land in controversy in the present case. The petitioner failed entirely to sustain his allegation that he had not been served and had not had his day in court in the ejectment suit, which resulted in a judgment for the defendant in the present case. Nor is there any evidence in the record to show that Tanner, the plaintiff in the ejectment suit, or his counsel, had practiced such fraud in procuring the judgment in the ejectment case as would render the judgment void. While petitioner by amendment made the additional allegation that counsel for plaintiff in the ejectment suit had agreed to dismiss that case, and instead of doing so had, in the absence of petitioner, taken a verdict and judgment against him, this allegation, contained in the amendment, was not supported by the evidence. Having thus failed to establish his contention that the judgment in the ejectment suit was the result of fraud practiced upon him, and that he had never been served as alleged in the petition, the petitioner was not entitled to the injunctive relief sought, and the court did not err in so holding.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 187)

CANNON v. GORHAM.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 341*)—OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS—CERTIFIED COPIES.

Where an execution for unpaid taxes was issued by the Comptroller General against a certain tract of unreturned wild land, under the act of February 28, 1874 (Acts 1874, p. 105), and a sale of the land was made thereunder, and the execution was returned to the Comptroller's office with the official entries thereon, it became an office paper, and a certified copy of such execution and entries was admissible in evidence in lieu of the original.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1289-1292; Dec. Dig. § 341.*]

2. TAXATION (§ 760*)—TAX SALES—DEEDS—RECITALS.

The inclusion in a form of sheriff's deed, in describing the tax execution, of the expression "transferred to of county," did not vitiate the sale, or render the deed inadmissible in evidence, where it appeared from the entries on the execution that no transfer of it was in fact made, and no evidence to the contrary was adduced.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1509; Dec. Dig. § 760.*]

3. CORPORATIONS (§ 432*)—EVIDENCE (§ 186*)—DEEDS—EXECUTION—AUTHORITY OF PRESIDENT—PRESUMPTION.

Where a deed, purporting to have been made by a corporation, recited that its corporate name was signed by the president and the corporate seal attached by the secretary, and the name of the corporation was signed by the president and followed by "(L. S.)," this was prima facie evidence of authority on the part of the president to execute such deed.

(a) If the deed was duly recorded and lost, a certified copy from the record was admissible in evidence, without further proof of the authority to execute it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1717-1763; Dec. Dig. § 432; Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 661-673; Dec. Dig. § 186.*]

4. TAXATION (§ 651*)—UNIMPROVED LAND—SALE—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT—PUBLICATION—NOTICE.

Under the act of February 28, 1874 (Acts 1874, p. 105), amended by the act of March 2, 1875 (Acts 1875, p. 119), the prescribed advertisement of unreturned wild or unimproved land was necessary before the issuance of execution for the tax assessed against it. An execution issued without such precedent advertisement was void, and no valid sale could be made thereunder.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1319-1323; Dec. Dig. § 651.*]

5. TAXATION (§ 651*)—SALE FOR TAXATION—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE.

If the Comptroller General failed to publish the requisite notice as to a lot of wild land for one year, and later issued an execution for a single amount, as including the taxes due on the lot for that and two other years, a sale under such execution was invalid.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1319-1323; Dec. Dig. § 651.*]

6. TAXATION (§ 660*)—SALE FOR TAXES—NOTICE—PUBLICATION.

Where a legislative act required the publication of a notice "in one newspaper at the capital" once a week for four weeks, as a condition precedent to the issuance of an execution for taxes against a tract of wild or unimproved land, this requirement was not met by the publication of such notice twice in a daily newspaper and twice in a weekly, though both were published by the same publisher, and the weekly was made up largely of news items taken from the daily; the two having different advertising accounts, being sent to different sets of subscribers, mainly in different localities, and being shown to be like two separate newspapers, except as stated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1338-1340; Dec. Dig. § 660.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

7. SEALS (§ 5*)—"L. S."

The letters "L. S.," placed after the signature of a person or corporation, are an abbreviation of "locus sigilli," meaning "the place of the seal," and are usually inserted within brackets in copies of documents to indicate the position of the seal in the original.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Seals, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, p. 3947.]

8. TAXATION (§ 651*)—SALE—EXECUTION—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE—DELAY.

Where notice to pay taxes assessed on unimproved or wild land has been duly published as required by Acts 1874, p. 105, as amended by Acts 1875, p. 119, mere delay for two or three years in issuing an execution for the tax of a specified year, for which publication was made, would not invalidate it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1319-1323; Dec. Dig. § 651.*]

Error from Superior Court, Wilcox County; U. V. Whipple, Judge.

Ejectment by W. M. Gorham against Oscar Cannon. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

M. B. Cannon, J. G. Cranford, E. K. Wilcox, and Edgar Watkins, for plaintiff in error. Hal Lawson and E. H. Williams, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Gorham brought an action of ejectment against Cannon. The plaintiff claimed by virtue of a chain of title beginning with a tax sale under an execution issued by the Comptroller General against the land in dispute as wild or unimproved land, under the act of 1874 (Acts 1874, p. 105), amended by the act of 1875 (Acts 1875, p. 119). The defendant claimed under a chain of title extending back to the original grant from the state. The case turned upon the validity of the tax sale. The presiding judge directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

[1] 1. Objection was made to the introduction in evidence of a transcript of the execution and entries thereon certified by the Comptroller General, in whose office the execution was on file after the sale. The act of 1874 provided that the Comptroller General should issue the execution, and that the sheriff should make the sale and make returns thereof. When this was done, the paper became a document or paper of file in the Comptroller General's office, and a certified copy of the execution and entries was admissible in evidence. Civil Code 1910, § 5798; 17 Cyc. 329.

[2] 2. The sheriff apparently used a form of deed, in which was a clause for use if the execution had been transferred. After describing the execution, the deed contained these words: "Which said execution has been duly transferred by said comptroller to of county." The execution, with the entries upon it, showed no transfer, nor was there any other evidence of one. This furnished no ground for excluding the deed from evidence.

[3] 3. Several points were raised as to the introduction of a certified copy of an established copy of a deed. But a certified copy of the original deed from the record was introduced, and the only material questions were whether it sufficiently appeared that the corporate seal of the company named as the grantor was attached to the deed, and that the person signing as president had authority to execute it. There was evidence that the person so signing was the president of the company. The certified copy from the record contained a statement that the corporation had caused its corporate name to be signed by its president and its corporate seal to be attached by its secretary. It was signed, "The Savannah, Americus & Montgomery (L. S.), by S. H. Hawkins, President (L. S.)," and was duly attested. The absence of the original being sufficiently accounted for, a certified copy from the proper record is admissible to show the existence, genuineness, and contents of the deed. Eady v. Shivey, 40 Ga. 684; Holtzclaw v. Edmondson, 114 Ga. 171, 39 S. E. 849. If a deed is executed in the name of a corporation by its proper officer, with the corporate seal attached, a presumption of authority on his part to execute it arises, and this is a sufficient prima facie showing to admit the deed in evidence. Solomon's Lodge v. Montmollin, 58 Ga. 547; Carr v. Georgia Loan & Trust Co., 108 Ga. 757, 33 S. E. 190; Dodge v. American Freehold, etc., Co., 109 Ga. 394, 34 S. E. 672; Almand & George v. Equitable Mortgage Co., 113 Ga. 983, 39 S. E. 421.

[7] Section 5 of the Code of 1910 declares that the word "seal" shall include impressions on the paper itself, as well as impressions on wax or wafers. With the exception of official seals, a scrawl, or other mark intended as a seal, shall be held as such." No distinction is made in this statute between the seal of a corporation and that of an individual. The letters "L. S." are an abbreviation of "locus sigilli," the place of the seal; and it has been said that they are "usually inserted within brackets in copies of documents to indicate the position of the seal in the original." Century Dictionary. A clerk, in recording a deed of a corporation on which a seal is impressed, probably would not often attempt to make an exact reproduction of the seal, with all the insignia, marks, or emblems which might be upon it. It would hardly be held that his inability to do so would destroy the right to introduce certified copies of such deeds. But, treating the copy as in this respect identical with the original, it is a matter of common knowledge that these letters, with the inclosing parentheses or brackets, are often used in this state, at least by individuals, as a seal, without more. Numerous instances of such use appear in the Reports of this court. The deed reciting that the seal was attached, these letters, with the inclosing parentheses, following the signatures, were apparently intended as a seal.

In Johnston v. Crawley, 25 Ga. 316, 71 Am. Dec. 173, it was held that if an agent of a corporation has authority to execute a mortgage, and affixes thereto anything which the law recognizes as a seal when affixed by a natural person, it will be a good execution presumptively by the corporation. The seal there held to be sufficient was the same as that now under consideration. In the opinion it was said: "If they adopt a seal different from their corporate seal for a special occasion, or if they have no corporate seal, the seal adopted is the corporate seal for the time and the occasion. If a corporate body choose to adopt a scroll as their common seal, why may it not do it? It cannot, at common law, because a scroll cannot, by that law, be a seal. But a scroll is made a seal by statute in this state, and there is no reason why it may not be adopted by a corporation here, either as a common seal, or as a seal for a special purpose." See, also Jones v. Ezell, 184 Ga. 553 (3), 68 S. E. 303; Nelson v. Spence, 129 Ga. 35, 58 S. E. 697; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Rhodes, 4 Ga. App. 25, 60 S. E. 828; American Investment Co. v. Cable Company, 4 Ga. App. 106, 60 S. E. 1037; Powell on Actions for Land, § 221. In other states the strictness for common-law rule as to corporate seals has been relaxed either by statute or by judicial construction. Angell & Ames on Corp. (11th Ed.) § 226; Brown v. Cohn, 85 Wis. 1, 54 N. W. 1101, 20 L. R. A. 182, and citations; Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Reynolds v. Glasgow Academy, 6 Dana (Ky.) 37; Phillips v. Coffee, 17 Ill. 154, 63 Am. Dec. 357.

[4] 4, 5. Under the sixth section of the act of 1874 (Acts 1874, p. 105), the provision for the publishing of an advertisement for a prescribed time and in the prescribed manner, before the issuance of an execution against a lot of wild or unimproved land, was mandatory. This is made plain by the seventh section, which declares that, "on the expiration of the time of advertisement, the Comptroller General shall issue execution against all unimproved or wild lands not returned for state and county tax." The advertising of the notice calling on the owners to come forward and give in and pay the tax was a necessary step precedent to the issuing of executions. The time for which such advertisement should be made was changed by the act of March 2, 1875 (Acts 1875, p. 119), from 30 days to once a week for 4 weeks. [5] An execution issued without such advertisement was illegal. [6] If the advertisement was duly made, mere delay for two or three years in issuing the execution for the tax for a certain year would not render it invalid. But if the Comptroller General delayed for several years, and then issued an execution for a single sum as including taxes for three years, and an advertisement had been made for two of them, but not for the third, the execution for the single sum thus sought to be summarily enforced was invalid.

[8] 6. The acts above cited required that the advertisement, calling on the owners of unimproved or wild lands to come forward and give in and pay the taxes thereon, should be published "in one newspaper at the capital of the state" once a week for 4 weeks. The evidence showed that the same company published a daily and a weekly paper, or a daily and weekly edition of a paper, which were referred to in the evidence as the Atlanta Daily Constitution and the Atlanta Weekly Constitution; that there were separate subscription lists and separate advertising accounts for the two papers, although the same persons had authority to contract for advertisements in either and to employ agents for both; that very few, if any, persons were subscribers for both papers; that the weekly paper was largely, though not entirely, made up of news matter compiled from the columns of the daily, but that in other respects the two papers were treated as distinct; and that weekly editions of daily newspapers generally circulate in rural districts. It was shown that the advertisements in regard to the land in controversy were published in the Atlanta Daily Constitution on August 31 and September 7, 1877, and in the Atlanta Weekly Constitution on September 11th and 18th.

One question was whether this was a sufficient compliance with the law. In Hull v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 21 Neb. 371, 32 N. W. 162, it was held that a similar publication of a notice of an intention to exercise the right of eminent domain in the condemnation of the real estate of a nonresident was not legal, and that proceedings dependent thereon for the purpose of jurisdiction were void. In the opinion Reese, J., stated that the statute required the condemning corporation to give four weeks' notice to the landowner "by publication four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in the county" where the real estate sought to be appraised was situated. He then said: "Did the publication referred to comply with this requirement of law? Clearly not. As well might the publication have been in four 'different and separate' newspapers as in two. The fact that the papers were published by the same publishing company could have no bearing upon the question." In Tully v. Bauer, 52 Cal. 487, it was held that, "when a statute requires that the delinquent tax list, together with the time and place of sale of the property for the delinquent tax, shall be published in a paper in the city or county, or in a supplement to such paper, such list, time, and place, if published in a supplement, must be published in one the circulation of which is coextensive with that of the paper both in and out of the city and county." Advertisements of this character precedent to assessing taxes are matters of statutory requirement, and must be made as the statute prescribes. 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law (2d Ed.) 826; Ronkendorff v. Taylor's Lessee, 4 Pet. 349, 7 L. Ed. 882; Bussey v. Leavitt, 12 Me. 378.

The decision in Bentley v. Shingler, 111 Ga. 780, 36 S. E. 935, was cited as holding that an advertisement similar to the one made in the present case was sufficient. But no question was there raised as to publishing the advertisement for a part of the time in a daily and partly in a weekly newspaper. The ruling made was that a statutory requirement, that a given advertisement shall be published in a designated paper "once a week for four weeks" before a particular thing can lawfully be done, was complied with if the advertisement was inserted in that paper 4 times in as many separate consecutive weeks, and the first insertion was made in an issue of the paper published 28 or more days before the thing in question was done.

In the brief of counsel for defendant in error it was stated broadly that, if the proceeding involved in the present case was held to be invalid, this would overrule former decisions holding similar titles valid. No decision of this court was cited in which the grounds upon which we hold this proceeding invalid were advanced and determined, and we know of none. The act of 1874, as amended by that of 1875, was attacked as unconstitutional. But the point does not appear to have been passed upon in the trial court.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 254)

COBB v. HALL et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 588)—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—BRIEF OF EVIDENCE—RECORD.

The approved brief of evidence, which was considered on the hearing of the motion for a new trial, constituted a part of the record in the case, although not filed after the hearing and judgment on the motion, within the time prescribed by the judge's order, but before the bill of exceptions was sued out.—Mitchell v. Masury, 132 Ga. 360, 64 S. E. 275.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 588.*]

2. CHATTEL MORTGAGES (§ 140*)—WIDOW'S SUPPORT—PRIORITY OF PURCHASE-MONEY MORTGAGE.

Where C. purchased four mules on credit, and, being unable to pay for them, agreed with H. that, if the latter would pay the purchase price, together with the purchase price of four other mules which C. desired to buy, the title to the eight mules should be in H., and that C. would give H. a mortgage on them all to secure the payment of their purchase money, and such agreement was fully executed, H. became the vendor of C., within the purview of the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 76), for the eight mules, and the mortgage given to him on them by C. would be such a purchase-money mortgage as contemplated by the act mentioned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Chattel Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 237, 238; Dec. Dig. § 140.*]

3. CHATTEL MORTGAGES (§ 140*)—EXECUTION—PRIORITY OF LIEN.

A mortgage on ten described mules, which contained a recital, following the description, "This mortgage and note is given for the purchase money of the above last described mules," referred to all of the mules described in the mortgage, and, so construed, sufficiently complied with the provisions of the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 76), requiring that a purchase-money mortgage on personality, in order to be superior to a year's support in such property, shall expressly state that the mortgage was executed and delivered for the purpose of securing the debt for such purchase money.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Chattel Mortgages, Dec. Dig. § 140.*]

4. CHATTEL MORTGAGES (§ 157*)—WITNESSES (§ 150*)—TRANSACTION WITH PERSON SINCE DECEASED—CLAIMANT AGAINST ESTATE.

Where a bill to marshal assets was filed by the administrator of the mortgagor, and there were conflicting claims in regard to the mortgaged property, the widow claiming under a judgment for a year's support, the mortgagee claiming under the mortgage, and a third person claiming to be the owner of two of the mules covered by the mortgage, and one question in controversy was whether in fact the mortgage was given for the purchase money of the mules, as recited, it was competent for the mortgagee to introduce evidence to show that in fact the secured debt was for the purchase money of eight of the ten mules.

(a) In such a case the mortgage creditor was a competent witness, as against the widow, to testify in regard to transactions between himself and the intestate, touching things material to the issue on trial; it appearing from recitals in the bill of exceptions that all other issues had been adjusted and settled, except those between the widow, the mortgagee, and the claimant, and these being segregated by consent, the estate not being interested in the result, and no objection to the competency of the witness being made on behalf of the administrator, but such objection being made only on behalf of the widow. Gunn v. Pettygreaw, 98 Ga. 327, 20 S. E. 328; Civ. Code 1910, § 5858.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Chattel Mortgages, Dec. Dig. § 157;* Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 653-657; Dec. Dig. § 150.*]

5. STATUTES (§ 115*)—TITLE GERMANE TO SUBJECT.

According to the decision rendered in the case of Smith v. Bohler, 72 Ga. 546, and followed in the case of Morris v. State, 117 Ga. 1, 43 S. E. 368, the act of 1903, referred to in the preceding notes, was not violative of the provisions of article 3, § 7, par. 8, of the Constitution of the state of Georgia, which provides that "no law or ordinance shall pass which . . . contains matter different from what is expressed in the title thereof."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 150, 151; Dec. Dig. § 115.*]

6. DIRECTION OF VERDICT—PURCHASE-MONEY MORTGAGE—EVIDENCE.

The uncontradicted evidence demanded a verdict that the lien of Hall, the mortgagee, on the eight mules for their purchase money, was superior to the lien of the judgment in favor of the widow for a year's support, and the court did not err in directing such a verdict.

7. TRIAL (§ 143*)—ISSUES—SUBMISSION TO JURY.

On another issue between the widow and W. T. G. Cobb, who claimed title absolutely to the first two mules mentioned in the mortgage, based on the contention that they were never the property of the intestate, but were the property of the claimant, the evidence was conflicting, and it was erroneous to direct a verdict in favor of the claimant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 342, 343; Dec. Dig. § 143.*]

Error from Superior Court, Early County; W. C. Worrill, Judge.

Action by Byron Collins, as administrator of the estate of J. E. Cobb, deceased, to marshal the assets of the estate, in which Mrs. M. C. Cobb, widow of the deceased, W. A. Hall, a mortgage creditor, and W. T. G. Cobb, a claimant to certain property alleged to belong to the deceased, intervened. A verdict was directed against Mrs. Cobb, in favor of the other claimants, and she brings error. Affirmed.

Byron Collins, as administrator of the estate of J. E. Cobb, deceased, instituted suit to marshal the assets of the estate, and to compel certain interested parties to interplead. Among those who interpleaded were Mrs. M. C. Cobb, the widow of deceased, W. A. Hall, a mortgage creditor of the deceased, and W. T. G. Cobb, a claimant to certain of the property of deceased. Before the trial the claims of all parties were adjusted, and issues relating thereto were eliminated from the case, except as to the parties above mentioned. The property in dispute between them consisted of ten mules, being the only property left in the hands of the administrator. A statutory year's support had been set apart to the widow, for $650 in money, together with certain personal property

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

She asserted the priority of the lien of this judgment on all of the ten mules in question. W. A. Hall held a mortgage in his favor, executed by the intestate, which described all of the ten mules, and immediately following the description recited: "This mortgage and note is given for the purchase money of the above the last-described mules." He asserted this mortgage, contending that it was a purchase-money mortgage, as contemplated by the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 76), as to the last eight mules described therein, and that its lien was entitled to priority over the lien of a judgment in favor of the widow for a year's support, but abandoned any claim of lien on the first two mules referred to in the mortgage. W. T. G. Cobb set up and contended that the two mules first described in the mortgage were purchased by himself from a dealer in live stock, and that they had never been the property of the intestate, and consequently were not subject either to the lien of the judgment for a year's support or to the lien of the mortgage above referred to.

All others having been eliminated, as before stated, these were the only issues dealt with on the trial. After the introduction of evidence, the judge directed a verdict against Mrs. Cobb, and in favor of each of the other parties, which, in effect, found that the mortgage of Hall was a purchase-money mortgage, as contemplated by the act of 1903, and that its lien was superior to the lien of Mrs. Cobb for a year's support as to the last eight mules described in the mortgage, and that W. T. G. Cobb, rather than the estate of J. T. Cobb, was the real owner of the two mules first mentioned in the mortgage. Mrs. Cobb filed a motion for a new trial, on general and special grounds, in the latter of which she complained that the court erred in rulings on the admissibility of evidence, and in misconstruing and misapplying the act of August 17, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 76), thereby raising the questions ruled on in the second and third headnotes, and in holding that the act was not violative of article 3, § 7, par. 8, of the Constitution of Georgia, which provides that "no law or ordinance shall pass which * * * contains matter different from what is expressed in the title thereof," and in directing a verdict in favor of the other parties.

The motion for new trial was filed during the term at which the verdict was rendered, and contained a provision which, in effect, allowed the movant until the hearing, whenever it might be, to prepare and present for approval a brief of the evidence, and authorized the judge to enter his approval at any time, either in term or vacation, and if the hearing should be in vacation, and the brief of evidence had not been filed in the clerk's office before the date of the hearing, "said brief of evidence may be filed in the clerk's office at any time within ten days after the motion is heard and determined." The hearing did not take place at the time stated in the original motion, but was postponed and had in vacation on the 21st day of January, 1910. The brief of evidence was approved at the hearing, which was held in a different county from that in which the suit was pending, but was not filed in the office of the clerk until February 3d, being more than ten days after the hearing of the motion, but before the certification of the bill of exceptions on February 4th. In the Supreme Court it was insisted by the defendants in error that there was no proper brief of evidence, because it was not filed in the clerk's office in terms of the order extending the time for such filing, and that no assignments of error should be considered which depended upon the evidence.

R. H. Sheffield and Pope & Bennet, for plaintiff in error. Glessner & Park and Patlie & Glessner, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment in favor of W. A. Hall affirmed; in favor of W. T. G. Cobb reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 247)

GRIFFETH v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The only assignment of error is that the court erred in overruling the motion of the plaintiff in error for a new trial, which motion contained only the general grounds that the verdict was contrary to law and to the evidence, and was without evidence to support it. The evidence was sufficient to authorize the verdict, and the court did not err in refusing a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Oconee County; C. H. Brand, Judge.

Frank Griffeth was convicted of crime, and he brings error. Affirmed.

W. M. Smith and Geo. C. Thomas, for plaintiff in error. Clifford Walker, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 153)

MEADOWS et al. v. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF PAULDING COUNTY et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 68*)—COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—JURISDICTION.

The policy of the Legislature, as declared in the several enactments relating to the establishment, maintenance, and control of the public schools of a county, is to devolve on the county board of education supervision of the schools and the duty of administering the school law. To that end the county board of education is constituted a special tribunal for hearing and determining any matters of local controversy in the administration of the school law, with a right of appeal to the state school commissioner and the state board of education. Where a county is laid off into school districts under the act of 1906 (Acts 1906, p. 66), and a controversy arises as to the location of the school site in a particular district, this controversy is determinable by the special tribunal fixed by law, viz., the county board of education, and a court of equity will not usurp jurisdiction, but will remand the parties to their legal remedy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

2. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 154*) —ATTENDANCE—COUNTY BOARD—DISCRETION.

Necessarily the county board of education is vested with some discretion in the administration of the school law, and, where neither district has adopted the provisions of the school law as to local taxation, they may allow pupils in one district to attend a school in an adjoining district, where it is more convenient and accessible to them, and appropriate the proportionate share of the public school fund to which such children are entitled to the support of the school which they actually attend. Their action is not illegal in this respect, and any complaint as to its propriety must be made to the county board of education.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Dec. Dig. § 154.*]

3. INJUNCTION (§ 135*)—OFFICIAL ACTION—DISCRETION.

The court did not abuse its discretion in refusing a temporary injunction in this case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. § 304; Dec. Dig. § 135.*]

Error from Superior Court, Paulding County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Suit by J. M. Meadows and others, as trustees of the Brownsville School District, against the Board of Education of Paulding County and others. From a judgment denying a temporary injunction, complainants bring error. Affirmed.

J. S. James, for plaintiffs in error. W. E. Spinks and J. J. Northcutt, for defendants in error.

EVANS, P. J. The county of Douglas was laid out into school districts, agreeably to the provisions of the act approved August 21, 1906 (Acts 1906, p. 66). The district in the extreme southeastern corner of the county was called "Brownsville District," and the district immediately north of it was known as the "Granger District." At the time the county was laid out into school districts there were two schools in operation in the territory embraced in the Brownsville district, known, respectively, as "Bethel" and "Brownsville" schools. These schoolhouses were about $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles apart. The county board of education adopted a resolution, proposing to the patrons of the Brownsville school, if they would make such repairs and additions to the schoolhouse as would favorably compare with the one at Bethel, that the school for the Brownsville district would be located at the Brownsville schoolhouse. Certain repairs were made by the patrons of the Brownsville schoolhouse. The board of education appointed a committee to examine these improvements, which committee reported to the board that the repairs were not of a character as made it equal to the accommodations offered by the schoolhouse at Bethel; whereupon the board of education passed a resolution locating the school for the Brownsville district at the Bethel schoolhouse. Certain trustees were elected for the district, and recognized by the board of education as being elected pursuant to the provisions of the McMichael act. The school was opened in the Bethel school district, and some 15 pupils from the Granger district were allowed to attend this school, and the proportionate part of the school fund to which these children were entitled was allowed to go in support of the Bethel school. Whereupon certain persons, alleging themselves to be the trustees of the Brownsville and Granger districts, and certain patrons of each district, brought their petition against the board of education, the county school commissioner, and certain other patrons of the two districts, praying that the defendants be enjoined from locating the school at Bethel, and also from using any part of the fund derivable from the public school money in support of the school maintained at Bethel. The grounds urged against the location of the school of the Brownsville district at Bethel were that the Brownsville schoolhouse was nearer the geographical center of the district, and more accessible to all of the school children in that district, and that on account of the attendance of the pupils from the Granger district upon the Bethel school, and the diversion from the Granger school of the proportionate part of the school fund to which these children were entitled, consequent upon their attendance at the Bethel school, the Granger school was so reduced in numbers that the school could not be maintained all the year without supplemental support from the patrons of the Granger school. The defendants demurred to the petition, on the ground that the plaintiffs had an ample remedy at law, and also answered that they had duly located the Bethel school, with due reference to the geographical center of the district, and with reference to the accessibility of all of the children of that district. They also set up that the pupils of the Granger district were allowed to attend this school because of its convenience to the pupils of the Granger district living within close proximity to the Bethel school. The case came on to be heard on an interlocutory injunction, and the evidence before the judge respecting the main contentions of the parties was conflicting. The court dissolved the temporary restraining order and refused an injunction, and exception is taken to this judgment.

[1] The adoption of the McMichael school law was a forward step in the movement for the development of the common schools of this state. The scheme comprehended two general features—one embracing the location and definition of the school districts, and the administration and government of the schools therein; and the other concerned the method of raising revenue by taxation for the support of the schools. Dolvin v. Lewis, 131 Ga. 29, 61 S. E. 913. It was not the intention of the act of 1906, known as the "McMichael Act," to repeal the existing laws respecting the administration of the school system, except when in direct conflict. Indeed, the act so expressly declares. Hodges v. Talbert, 135 Ga. 253, 69 S. E. 103. The legislative policy, as declared in these enactments respecting the administration of the school law, was to devolve the responsibility for the proper administration of the school law upon the county board of education, so as to give that board ample power to effectually administer the school laws within their jurisdiction. Pursuant to this policy it was enacted that: "The county board of education shall constitute a tribunal for hearing and determining any matters of local controversy in reference to the construction or administration of the school law, with power to summon witnesses and take testimony, if necessary; and when they have made a decision, said decision shall be binding upon the parties. Either of the parties shall have the right to appeal to the state school commissioner; said appeal shall be made through the county commissioner in writing," etc. Pol. Code 1910, § 1485. The tribunal thus provided for is a court of limited jurisdiction, and was designed to determine such controversies as are presented by this case. If the county board has improperly located the school site in the Brownsville district, the complaining parties are afforded a right to be heard before the board sitting as a court; and if that board, upon the testimony submitted, decides against the complainants, they are given the right of appeal to the state school commissioner and the state board of education, as provided in the act. It is a familiar rule that, where a plain and ample legal remedy is given, there is no occasion to resort to equity. If the special tribunal constituted by the Legislature for the determination of controversies arising out of the school law acts within its jurisdiction, and not oppressively or arbitrarily, its decision is binding upon the parties.

[2] There is no pretense in this case that the board of education, in the location of the school at Bethel, acted either arbitrarily or without the limits of their jurisdiction.

That being the case, especially with reference to the location of the school at Bethel, the plaintiffs must pursue the remedy pointed out in the statute. It will be borne in mind that neither the Granger nor the Brownsville district has adopted the provisions of the McMichael law with reference to the support of schools by local taxation. Therefore there can be no complaint that the money of any taxpayer is being diverted to pay for the support of the school. The specific complaint is that the board of education, by allowing the pupils in the Granger district to thus cross the line to attend the Bethel school, is giving to the Bethel school the proportionate part of the school fund to which these children from the Granger district are entitled, and as a result the attendance in the Granger district is reduced, and the amount derivable from the public school money is to that extent diminished, which requires an increased supplemental support to the common school fund to run the Granger school during the entire year, or for a greater period than would be authorized by the funds obtained solely from the public school money. There is nothing in the various provisions of the school laws which prohibits this course. Clark v. Cline, 123 Ga. 856, 51 S. E. 617. Necessarily the control and management of the public schools must be left largely to the discretion of the county board of education; and when this discretion is exercised within the limits of their jurisdiction, there is no ground for complaint.

[3] The denial of the temporary injunction was clearly within the discretion of the judge, and his judgment is affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 226)

FIRST NAT. BANK OF ETOWAH, TENN.,
v. MESSER.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 287*)—"INDORSEMENT." Indorsing a note in its literal sense means writing one's name on the back of the note; but where the payee of a note, payable to his order, writes his name on the face of the note under the name of the maker, and delivers the note to a third person, such signing operates to transfer the title of the note to the transferee, so as to give the latter a right to maintain a suit in his own name against the maker.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 653; Dec. Dig. § 287.*

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 4, pp. 3561-3566; vol. 8, p. 7686.]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 481*)—ACTIONS—DEFENSES.

The holder of a negotiable note is presumed to be such bona fide and for value, and, unless the defendant negatives one or both of these facts, he is shut off from every defense which he might have against the payee. A plea to a suit by an indorsee against the maker, averring that such indorsee took the note with the express understanding with the payee, who indorsed it in blank, that if the maker failed to pay the same at maturity the indorser would pay it, and further averring that he has paid out a certain sum on a garnishment judgment, based on a judgment against the payee, who was the indorser, set out no defense, and should have been stricken on demurrer.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Dec. Dig. § 481.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fannin County; N. A. Morris, Judge.

Action by the First National Bank of Etowah, Tenn., against J. W. Messer. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

McCroskey, Peace & Kelso and Gober & Griffin, for plaintiff in error. O. R. Dupree and T. A. Brown, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. The First National Bank of Etowah, Tenn., brought suit against J. W. Messer to recover an amount alleged to be due on a note, a copy of which was attached to the petition. From this copy the note appears to have been signed by J. W. Messer, and was payable to the order of J. H. Stafford. The payee's name appeared to have been signed on the face of the note, immediately beneath the signature of the maker. In the petition it was alleged that the payee had indorsed the note to the plaintiff. The defendant filed a plea averring that "he expressly denies that the plaintiff is the bona fide holder of said note without notice, and that it ever purchased said note bona fide and in good faith, but that the same was taken by said bank with the express understanding that, if said note was not paid by defendant, the said J. H. Stafford would take it up when due, without loss to the bank, the plaintiff." The plea then proceeded to aver that the defendant had been garnished by judgment creditors of the payee, and garnishment judgments had been rendered against the defendant, which he had paid; and he prayed that he have credit on the note for the amount paid on the garnishment judgments, offering to pay the balance due on the note into court. The plaintiff demurred to the sufficiency of the plea, which demurrer was overruled by the court, and on the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence a nonsuit was awarded. The exceptions are to the grant of the nonsuit and to the overruling of the demurrer to the plea.

[1] 1. The ordinary and usual mode of indorsing a negotiable instrument is to write the name of the indorser upon the back of the paper. But where the payee writes his name on the face of the note under the maker's signature, the effect is to transfer the title of the note to the transferee, and the payee becomes liable as an indorser. Perry v. Bray, 68 Ga. 293.

[2] 2. An averment in a pleading is to be construed according to the full allegation. Though the plea alleged that the plaintiff was not a bona fide holder, yet the same sentence containing such allegation qualifies its legal effect by assigning as a reason why the plaintiff is not a bona fide holder that the note was taken by the bank with the understanding that, if it was not paid by the maker, the indorser would pay it when due without loss to the bank. "In ordinary indorsements the contract of the indorser is to pay the money if the parties to the instrument primarily liable thereon fail to pay according to the terms thereof." Civil Code 1910, § 4279. So that the allegation in the plea is tantamount to saying that an indorsee is not a bona fide holder of a promissory note, when such indorsee acquires the note by indorsement from the payee of the note. The averment of fact is the contract of indorsement, and the statement of its effect is but the erroneous conclusion of the pleader. The plea is insufficient to charge that the plaintiff is not a bona fide holder of the note before maturity, so as to let in any defense (not excepted by Civil Code 1910, § 4286) which the maker may have against the payee, who indorsed the note to the plaintiff. "The holder of a note is presumed to be such bona fide and for value; if either fact is negated by proof, the defendants are let in to all their defenses; such presumption is negated by proof of any fraud in the procurement of the note." Civil Code 1910, § 4288. Under this rule the plea was insufficient as a defense to the note, and should have been stricken on demurrer.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 214)

LAWSON et al. v. LYON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 797½*)—ASSIGNMENTS (§ 50*)—PARTIES (§ 84*)—SUBJECTS OF SALE—EQUITABLE ASSIGNMENT OF CLAIM—SUBJECT OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF—NONJOINDER OF PARTIES.

A beneficiary certificate for $1,350 was issued by the Grand Lodge of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to a member of a local lodge. Section 68 of the rules of the lodge provided that the Grand Lodge should pay to a member, upon named conditions, the amount of the certificate he held if he should "suffer the amputation or severance of an entire hand at or above the wrist joint." Section 70 of the rules provided: "All claims for disability not coming within the provision of section 68 shall be held to be addressed to the systematic benevolence of the Brotherhood, and shall in no case be made the basis of legal liability on the part of the Brotherhood. Every such claim shall be referred to the beneficiary board, composed of the President, Assistant President, and General Secretary and Treasurer, who shall prescribe the character and decide as to the sufficiency of the proofs to be furnished by the claimant; and, if approved by said board, the claimant shall be paid an amount equal to the full amount of the certificate held by him, and such payment shall be considered a surrender and cancellation of such certificate, provided that the approval of said board shall be required as a condition precedent to the right of any such claimant to benefit thereunder, and it is agreed that this section may be pleaded in bar of any suit or action at law, or in equity, which may be commenced in any court to enforce the payment of any such claim. No appeal shall be allowed from the action of said board in any case; but the General Secretary and Treasurer shall report all disapproved claims made under this section to the board of insurance at the next annual meeting, for such disposition as such board of insurance shall deem just and proper." The hand of a member holding a certificate "was cut off below the knuckle in front of the thumb," and he applied to the Grand Lodge because of such injury for the payment. After the claim was approved by the beneficiary board, the holder of the certificate gave to one who purchased his claim to the extent of $750 an order for that amount on the Secretary and Treasurer of the Grand Lodge. Held:

(a) This order was not invalid, on the ground that the claim of the holder of the certificate was a "bare contingency or possibility" and not a subject of sale.

(b) The order passed to the holder thereof at least an equitable assignment of the claim to the extent of $750; and if the order did not divest the maker thereof of the legal title to his claim to the extent of $750, the latter could not rightfully and justly collect the money paid on that part of the claim for which he had given the order.

(c) Where the holder of the certificate is insolvent, he may be enjoined from receiving, and the financier of the local lodge may be enjoined from paying him, any money that may be sent by the Grand Lodge in settlement of the claim for which the order was given.

(d) If there was a nonjoinder of necessary parties, this would furnish no ground for reversing the grant of a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1973; Dec. Dig. § 797½; * Assignments, Cent. Dig. §§ 99-105; Dec. Dig. § 50; * Parties, Cent. Dig. §§ 134-142; Dec. Dig. § 84.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—ABANDONMENT.

Where an assignment of error is not referred to in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error, it will be deemed abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by Alexis A. Lyon against Charles Lawson and another. There was a verdict for defendants, and a new trial granted, and defendants bring error. Affirmed.

Alexis A. Lyon brought the present action against Charles Lawson and George W. Lyon. The last named was made a party because he was the financier of a local lodge through whom it was expected payment would be made to the other defendant of a claim hereinafter explained, and no relief was sought against him, except to enjoin him from delivering to his codefendant any check or other instrument in payment of the claim. As he was practically a nominal defendant, to whom but little further reference will be necessary, the plaintiff will be referred to as Lyon and the defendant as Lawson. In brief, the case made by the allegations of the petition was that Lawson held a certificate in the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and, on account of an injury received, had pending against its Grand Lodge a claim on account of total and permanent disability amounting to $1,350. At the solicitation of Lawson, Lyon purchased $750 of this claim, paying Lawson therefor the sum of $250, and receiving from the latter an assignment of the claim to that extent. The details of the transaction will more fully appear from the agreed statement of facts, the evidence, and the contents of certain written documents herein below set out. It was alleged that Lawson was endeavoring to collect that portion of the claim assigned to the plaintiff, and that, should he succeed in doing so, being insolvent, the plaintiff would be defrauded of his right to collect the $750, and would lose the $250 paid to Lawson. It was averred that the Grand Lodge was located without the jurisdiction of the court, but that any remittance sent by it to the local lodge to be delivered to Lawson in payment of the claim would be sent to its financier for delivery. The plaintiff sought an injunction against Lawson to prevent him from collecting the claim and from undertaking to assign it, and also, as above stated, against the financier of the local lodge to prevent him from delivering to Lawson any instrument in payment of the claim. By amendment, one P. F. Brinkley, who had succeeded to the office of financier, was made a party defendant in lieu of G. W. Lyon, his predecessor. The plaintiff by a second amendment asked that the title to and the right to collect that part of the fund claimed by him be decreed to be in him, and for general relief. Upon the trial of the case, the court, at the conclusion of the evidence, directed a verdict in favor of the defendant, and upon the hearing of a motion for a new trial, made by the plaintiff, granted the motion, to which order the defendants excepted.

Upon the trial the plaintiff testified that after several conversations with Lawson, in which the latter tried to induce him to purchase the claim, he agreed to buy the balance of the claim, amounting to $750 (plaintiff claiming that Lawson had previously assigned the other portion of the claim to another), and to pay Lawson $250 therefor, which he did, paying him $50 one day and taking receipt therefor, and the balance of $200 the day following, when he took from Lawson an order authorizing the payment to him of the $750. The receipt and order referred to were introduced in evidence, the receipt being as follows: "Received of A. A. Lyon fifty dollars as part payment on the balance of $750.00, seven hundred and fifty dollars, claim I have on insurance policy No. — in the B. R. T., of which H. E. King is Treasurer. The balance of two hundred dollars will be paid in three days. Should the deal now pending for the whole claim fail—the whole claim is for thirteen hundred and fifty and the price for the whole claim is six hundred and fifty—if this trade for the whole claim fails, then the above contract is to be carried out for the $750.00, seven hundred and fifty dollars, as stipulated above. This 7th Oct., 1908. [Signed] Charles Lawson." The order was as follows: "Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8th, 1908. State of Georgia, Fulton County. H. E. King, G. S. & T., Cleveland, O.: You are hereby authorized and you will please pay to Alexis A. Lyon seven hundred and fifty dollars ($750.00) out of my claim for disability which is now pending before the insurance board of the Grand Lodge, for value received, and oblige, [Signed] Charles Lawson, Member of Altoona Lodge 302. Signed in presence of O. H. Puckett, J. P." A letter from King, G. S. & T., to Lyon, dated November 12, 1908, which was introduced in evidence, read as follows: "I am in receipt of your letter of the 10th instant from Chas. Lawson, a member of our organization, for the deduction of $750 from his disability claim, which amount I understand was loaned to him by you. In such cases we have our regular form of order, and I return your order herewith and inclose our blank form. Please have Mr. Lawson sign the same, and his signature witnessed by the secretary and financier of the lodge of which he is a member, after which return to me promptly, and when the claim is ready for payment, which should be about December 12th, a draft for $750.00 in your favor will be forwarded to our lodge in your city for delivery to you." The body of the form referred to in this letter was as follows: "You are hereby authorized to deduct from the amount due me on account of my total and permanent disability under beneficiary certificate No. 200640, held by me as a member of Altoona Lodge No. 302, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the sum of $750.00, this being amount of money loaned me by Alexis A. Lyon on account of my said disability, and you are further authorized to pay the said sum of $750.00 to said Alexis A. Lyon." This document, dated November 25, 1908, was signed by Lawson, but at his instance the secretary and financier of the local lodge refused to sign it as a witness.

The following agreed statement of facts appears in the record: "(1) The beneficiary certificate issued by the Grand Lodge of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen for the defendant as a member of Altoona Lodge No. 302 provided that he should be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and benefits of membership, and to participate in the beneficiary department, Class C, of said Brotherhood, to the amount set forth in the constitution thereof, which amount in the event of his total and permanent disability should be paid to him, which amount should become due only upon the presentment of proper proofs to be made in accordance with the constitution and by-laws of the Brotherhood; that the said Lawson should 'comply with the constitution, by-laws, rules, and regulations now in force or which may thereafter be adopted by the within named Brotherhood, which, as printed and published by the Grand Lodge of the said Brotherhood are made a part hereof.' Said certificate was issued on the — day of —, 190—. (2) It is further stipulated that the printed constitution and rules of said Brotherhood, as purporting to be printed by their authority, may be admitted in evidence without proof, in so far as relevant to the case. (3) It is further agreed that on the 8th day of October, 1908, the claim of Charles Lawson for disability was pending before the beneficiary board of said Brotherhood, but had not been approved by said board, and that said board approved said claim prior to November 12, 1908." There was also introduced in evidence the following rule of the Brotherhood: "Section 70. All claims for disability not coming within the provision of section 68 shall be held to be addressed to the systematic benevolence of the Brotherhood, and shall in no case be made the basis of any legal liability on the part of the Brotherhood. Every such claim shall be referred to the beneficiary board, composed of the President, Assistant President, and General Secretary and Treasurer, who shall prescribe the character and decide as to the sufficiency of the proofs to be furnished by the claimant, and, if approved by said board, the claimant shall be paid an amount equal to the full amount of the certificate held by him, and such payment shall be considered a surrender and cancellation of such certificate, provided that the approval of said board shall be required as a condition precedent to the right of any such claimant to benefit hereunder, and it is agreed that this section may be pleaded in bar of any suit or action at law or in equity, which may be commenced in any court to enforce the payment of any such claim. No appeal shall be allowed from the action of said board in any case; but the General Secretary and Treasurer shall report all disapproved claims made under this section to the board of insurance at its next annual meeting, for such disposition as such board of insurance shall deem just and proper." Section 68 of the rules provided that the Grand Lodge would pay to a member, upon named conditions, the amount of the certificate he held, if he should "suffer the amputation or severance of an entire hand at or above the wrist joint." The defendant Lawson, who held the certificate, had his hand "cut off below the knuckle in front of the thumb." Other evidence was introduced, both by plaintiff and defendant, none of which we deem necessary to set out herein.

Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, for plaintiffs in error. A. H. Davis, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). Counsel for the plaintiffs in error in their brief make the following contentions: "The verdict was proper, and the grant of a new trial error, as a matter of law. The fatal legal defects in plaintiff's case are: (1) Lawson's claim was not assignable; (2) the order on the Grand Secretary was not an assignment, legal or equitable; (3) if an equitable assignment, it could not be asserted in a proceeding to which neither the assignee of the other portion of the claim nor the Brotherhood was a party; and (4) there was no proof of Lawson's insolvency."

[1] If Lawson had suffered "the amputation or severance of an entire hand at or above the wrist joint," the lodge would have been absolutely liable for the full amount of the certificate, had its provisions been complied with. His "hand was cut off below the knuckle in front of the thumb." The injuries received by Lawson were not such as to create on the part of the lodge, under its rules, any absolute liability on its part to pay Lawson anything on account of such injuries. The injuries he received were such as made a claim on account thereof "addressed to the systematic benevolence of the Brotherhood." This provision of the rules was probably intended to meet instances where injuries were received not exactly coming within the class for which the lodge made itself absolutely liable, but so nearly so as to cause the lodge to have a systematic method of considering a claim for such injuries, and to pay the injured party therefor in its discretion, though under such provisions the lodge would have the right to pay the full amount of the certificate to the member holding the same on account of any disability he might suffer. The injury received by Lawson was not exactly, but almost, within the class for which the lodge made itself absolutely liable to pay. Under the rules of the Grand Lodge, Lawson had the right to present his claim for such injuries to the "systematic benevolence of the Brotherhood." The language of the rule hereinbefore referred to shows that not only was it the right of Lawson to present to the lodge his claim on account of the injuries he received, but that the lodge had a system for the consideration of such claims, and had the right to pay the same. Before Lawson, on October 8, 1908, gave to Lyon an order on the secretary and treasurer of the lodge for $750, to be paid out of his claim, he had presented his claim to the lodge, and they had had the question of its payment under consideration. The claim of Lawson was approved by the beneficiary board before November 12, 1908. On November 25, 1908, after the claim was thus approved, Lawson gave to Lyon another order on the secretary and treasurer of the lodge for the $750, to be paid out of the claim.

This order given by Lawson after the claim was approved was not void under the provisions of Civil Code 1910, § 4117, that "a bare contingency or possibility cannot be the subject of sale, unless there exists a present right in the person selling, to a future benefit." After the claim was thus approved, it cannot be said that it had no potential existence, even if it could be said that prior to its approval it lacked sufficient potentiality to make it assignable. In Dickey v. Waldo, 97 Mich. 255, 261, 56 N. W. 608, 610 (23 L. R. A. 449) it was said: "In the legal sense, things are said to have a potential existence when they are the natural product or expected increase of something already belonging to the vendor." The last order on the secretary and treasurer of the Grand Lodge given by Lyon to Lawson was inclosed in a letter from that official to Lyon under date of November 12th, after which date it was presented to Lawson and signed by him. The receipt signed by Lawson and the orders given by him designate the fund out of which the $750 was to be paid. The orders did not merely direct the secretary and treasurer to pay Lyon a certain amount, but specified the fund on which they were drawn; and certainly, after the approval of the claim, the order then given amounted to an equitable assignment thereof to the extent of $750. Even if the orders given by Lawson did not divest him of the legal title to the fund to the extent of $750, he should not be permitted to claim and collect that to which Lyon had the equitable title by reason of these orders. Lawson could not rightfully and justly claim that to which he had formally passed the equitable title to Lyon, even if he did not part with the legal title thereto. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Exchange Bank, 100 Ga. 619, 622-623, 28 S. E. 393. The Grand Lodge is not a party, and is not setting up any defense. It appears that the beneficiary board has approved the claim and the Grand Lodge is ready to pay it. The question, therefore, arises between the assignor and the assignee of such approved claim.

[2] There was evidence tending to show insolvency on the part of Lawson. Error was assigned on the order overruling a demurrer to the petition; but, as no reference to this assignment was made in the briefs of counsel for the plaintiff in error, it will be considered as abandoned. Whether or not the person to whom it was claimed Lawson had transferred the balance of the claim of $1,350, or the Grand Lodge, either or both, were necessary parties to the injunction proceedings, a verdict in favor of the defendants was not demanded, because they were not made parties; it not appearing that the question of nonjoinder of parties was raised in the court below or passed upon before the rendition of the verdict. Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489 (2). The plaintiff testified that he purchased from Lawson his claim to the extent of $750 for the sum of $250, and that in pursuance of this contract of purchase he paid Lawson the $250 and took from him the orders. We have treated the case on the theory that the contentions of the plaintiff in these respects were true, as counsel for Lawson in their briefs contend that the latter has no claim which was assignable, and that the orders given by Lawson were not valid, either as a legal or as an equitable assignment. The evidence did not demand the verdict, and the first grant of a new trial by the court below will not be disturbed.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 281)

WORLEY v. STATE

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 762*)—INSTRUCTIONS—OPINION OF COURT.

Where, on the trial of an indictment for murder, only three questions were involved under the evidence, whether the accused was guilty of murder, whether he was guilty of voluntary manslaughter, or whether the homicide was justifiable, it did not constitute an expression of opinion, requiring a reversal, that the judge instructed the jury that they could render but one of three verdicts, and gave them appropriate forms to be used, as they might find upon such issues. Sanders v. State, 113 Ga. 267, 38 S. E. 841; Dotson v. State, 129 Ga. 727, 59 S. E. 774.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1731, 1750, 1754, 1758, 1759, 1769; Dec. Dig. § 762; * Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 581, 586.]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 286*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

A charge defining legal malice to be "an intent to kill a human being in a case where the law would neither justify nor in any degree excuse the intention, if the killing should take place as intended," did not require a new trial, although it would have been more apt to have used the word "mitigate" in lieu of the expression "in any degree excuse," as the word "excuse" was employed elsewhere in the charge in other senses than that of mitigation. Mann v. State, 124 Ga. 760, 53 S. E. 324 (2), 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 934.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 586-591; Dec. Dig. § 286.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 824*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

It was not cause for a new trial that the court charged section 70 of the Penal Code of 1910 on the subject of justifiable homicide, omitting the concluding lines of that section, which had no application to the case, or that he failed to define the word "felony" as therein employed, at least in the absence of an appropriate written request made in due time. Pressley v. State, 132 Ga. 64, 63 S. E. 784 (3); Pickens v. State, 132 Ga. 46, 63 S. E. 783.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1996-2004; Dec. Dig. § 824; * Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 615, 651.]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 829*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

It furnished no ground for a new trial that the court did not give in charge section 70 of the Penal Code of 1910, which declares that, "the homicide appearing to be justifiable, the person indicted shall, upon trial, be fully acquitted and discharged," where the general charge informed the jury that the defendant could not be convicted unless proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, and instructed them fully as to the defense of justifiable homicide, and that the verdict might be for murder, voluntary manslaughter, or justifiable homicide, and in another place treated the verdict of not guilty as equivalent to that last mentioned. Taylor v. State, 121 Ga. 356, 49 S. E. 303 (10).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2011; Dec. Dig. § 829.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 823*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER.

Where the judge, in defining voluntary manslaughter quoted Penal Code 1910, § 65, but did not employ the words "of which the jury in all cases shall be the judges" with reference to cooling time, which words were added to the section, as it stood in the Penal Code of 1895, by the act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 41), but charged fully upon the law of the case developed by the evidence, this will not require a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1992-1995; Dec. Dig. § 823; * Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 718, 719.]

6. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

Under the evidence, there was no error in charging as to when malice may be inferred from proof of a homicide, in accordance with the ruling in Mann v. State, 124 Ga. 760, 53 S. E. 324, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 934.

7. HOMICIDE (§ 297*)—MURDER—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

In a case where the evidence would have authorized a finding of voluntary manslaughter, under an indictment charging murder, it was error to give the following charge: "The facts and circumstances, as shown by the evidence, must have been sufficient to excite the fears of a reasonable man that * * * a serious bodily injury not amounting to a felony was about to be inflicted upon the defendant, to reduce the killing from murder to manslaughter." This mingled the law of justification with the law of voluntary manslaughter, and excluded other "equivalent circumstances" which might mitigate, under the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 611; Dec. Dig. § 297.*]

8. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 730*)—MURDER—TRIAL—ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL.

In his argument before the jury, the prosecuting attorney read to them Penal Code 1910, § 1015, and contended that it was applicable to the case. On objection, the court permitted the argument to proceed, but stated that counsel on each side must stay within the record, that each side might state its contentions, but the jury would look to the evidence for the facts and to the charge of the court for the law of the case. In his general charge he stated that the defendant entered on the trial with the presumption of innocence in his favor, that such presumption followed him throughout the entire trial, unless overcome in a lawful manner, and that it was incumbent upon the state to prove the guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt before the jury would be authorized to find him guilty. Held, that this furnished no ground for granting a new trial.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1693; Dec. Dig. § 730.*]

9. MURDER—INSTRUCTIONS.

The court charged as follows: "In order to justify the homicide, there must be something more than a mere threat or menace; there must be an appearance of danger. The means for inflicting the threatening danger, if any, must be apparently at hand at the time, and there must be some manifestation of an intention to inflict a felonious injury presently." Held, that this generally followed the opinion in Cumming v. State, 99 Ga. 662, 27 S. E. 177, except in the use of the word "menace." If authorized by the evidence, and such a charge is given, it would be better to follow the expression in the case cited; but, as a reversal is granted on another ground, it need not be determined whether this would be cause for a new trial.

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

10. WORDS AND PHRASES—"MENACE."

"Menace" is defined as the show of an intent to inflict evil; a threat; indication of probable evil or catastrophe to come; that which menaces; an impending evil.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, p. 4474.]

Error from Superior Court, Hall County; J. B. Jones, Judge.

Leonard Worley was convicted of murder, and he brings error. Reversed.

Sam Kimzey and J. J. Kimzey, for plaintiff in error. Robert McMillan, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

LUMPKIN, J. Leonard Worley was indicted for the murder of E. S. (Emory) Worley. The state introduced a single witness, who testified in brief as follows: The accused and the person killed were brothers, and the witness was their brother-in-law. The accused came to the house of the witness about 1 o'clock at night, and said that Emory had beaten him with knucks, and that he was going to shoot his brother. The witness saw where the neck of the accused was scratched a little. The witness told him not to shoot his brother, but to return home. The accused went to the house of a named person, and the witness called him back. He brought his gun with him, and set it beside the door. "He got down on his knees and could hear a racket over at my mother's, and he grabbed his gun and shot, and they shot over at the other house." The witness said: "I see them leaving my mother's." The accused said: "He was going to shoot him, if he run up on him." The moon was shining brightly. Emory Worley left the house of the father-in-law of the witness, "and came running on him (Leonard), and Leonard shot him." Both the witness and his wife endeavored to prevent Emory coming to the place where Leonard was; but he would pay no attention to them, and ran "right on him (Leonard)." This witness warned Emory twice to go back, and that if he went up there Leonard would kill him. The wife of the witness also tried to catch Emory and hold him; but he ran against her, shoved her back, and ran right on. He was within three feet of Leonard when the latter shot him. So far as the witness could see, Emory had no weapon or other thing in his hand; but a pair of metal knucks was found lying three or four inches from his hand. He had a pocket knife on him. The shot produced instant death. The accused was convicted, with a recommendation to mercy. He moved for a new trial, which was refused, and he excepted.

The evidence in this case is somewhat meager. The state introduced a single witness, who testified to what occurred at the time of the killing. It was inferable from his testimony that there had been a previous difficulty, or some previous transaction leading up to the homicide. Neither the state nor the accused introduced any evidence on that subject, though it might have cast light on the question of malice or the absence of it. The accused made no statement. The evidence of the state's witness did not show such a clear and unquestionable case of murder that certain inaccuracies or errors in the charge could be declared harmless. The charge on the subject of justifiable homicide, voluntary manslaughter, and reasonable doubt was not free from criticism.

[7] The statement quoted in the seventh headnote was not correct. By Penal Code 1910, § 70, it is declared that: "Justifiable homicide is the killing of a human being * * * in self-defense, or in defense of habitation, property, or person, against one who manifestly intends or endeavors, by violence or surprise, to commit a felony on either," etc. By section 71 it is declared that: "A bare fear of any of those offenses, to prevent which the homicide is alleged to have been committed, shall not be sufficient to justify the killing. It must appear that the circumstances were sufficient to excite the fears of a reasonable man, and that the party killing really acted under the influence of those fears, and not in a spirit of revenge." It will be seen that justifiable homicide is based on the idea of prevention of, or defense against, the commission of certain acts by the person killed. Under the section first quoted, the defense is against one who manifestly intends or endeavors to commit the acts mentioned. In the second of the two sections, circumstances sufficient to excite the fears of a reasonable man, and acting under the influence of such fears, and not in a spirit of revenge, take the place of proof of an actual endeavor on the part of the person slain to commit such acts.

Voluntary manslaughter differs from justification. It does not rest on the same basis as the defense against the actual commission of a felony or acting under reasonable fears. It is a criminal homicide; but it is mitigated by the excitement of passion justified by some actual assault, or an attempt by the person killed to commit a serious personal injury on the person killing, or other equivalent circumstances. The killing must be the result of that sudden, violent impulse of passion, supposed to be irresistible, and excluding all idea of malice. The difference between justification arising from acting under the fears of a reasonable man, and mitigation arising from uncontrollable passion, justified by circumstances, is apparent.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

We have considered whether the judge, in including the reduction of a homicide from murder to manslaughter in his charge on the subject of reasonable fears, did not rather err in favor of the accused than against him; but when the judge charged that the circumstances must be sufficient to excite the fears of a reasonable man that a serious bodily injury, not amounting to a felony, was about to be inflicted upon the accused, in order to reduce the killing from murder to manslaughter, thus excluding the consideration of other matters which might be sufficient, under the statute, to arouse uncontrollable passion and reduce the killing to manslaughter, it cannot be held that this was harmless error. In another part of his charge he again applied the doctrine of reasonable fears to the subject of voluntary manslaughter.

[8] In arguing a criminal case, counsel may read law to the jury, subject to the correction of the court in his charge, in order to apply the facts to the rules of law which they contend are applicable to the case. McMath v. State, 55 Ga. 303 (8); Cribb v. State, 118 Ga. 316, 45 S. E. 396 (10), and citations. The main reason for this is that, to be effective, where a general verdict is to be rendered, an argument must not only deal with what are the facts, but what result should follow from an application of the rules of law to such facts. In order to do this, the lawyer must be able to state to the jury what he believes to be the correct rule of law on the subject. He cannot always know in advance just what the judge will charge. That, in a criminal case, he reads what he thinks is the rule in the presence of the jury is not ordinarily objectionable. He does so subject to the correction of his positions of law by the judge in his charge. Here the judge stated that the jury should get the law from the charge, and his charge was to the effect that the accused was presumed to be innocent until proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. This court has held that no legal presumption of guilt arises under Penal Code 1910, § 1015 (Penal Code 1895, § 989), and that in a criminal case the court should not give that section in charge. Long v. State, 126 Ga. 109, 54 S. E. 906; Mills v. State, 133 Ga. 155, 65 S. E. 368 (5). The failure to introduce witnesses after swearing them might be a legitimate subject of comment by a prosecuting attorney, and authorize him to contend that the jury might draw inferences of fact therefrom prejudicial to the accused; and no legal presumption of guilt would arise from such action.

Of course, this broad right of argument may be abused, like any other right or privilege. But this court will not presume that conscientious counsel will intentionally use it as a means of misleading a jury.

[9] The presiding judge charged as set out in the ninth headnote. This charge was evidently taken from the opinion of Chief Justice Simmons in Cumming v. State, 99 Ga. 664, 27 S. E. 177. It seems to follow the statement of that opinion quite closely, except that the expression is there used that, "in order to justify a homicide, there must be something more than mere verbal threats," etc., while here the judge employed the expression that "there must be something more than a mere threat or menace," etc. [10] In Webster's Dictionary the word "menace" is defined as follows: "The show of an intention to inflict evil; a threat; indication of probable evil or catastrophe to come; that which menaces; an impending evil." The word, as thus defined, has a meaning synonymous with threats, and also one signifying something more than mere words. If the evidence authorized such a charge, it would be more apt to let it follow the expression contained in the Cumming Case, from which this charge was drawn, or to make it appear in what sense the term menace is used; but, inasmuch as the judgment is reversed on another ground, we need not determine whether this charge would furnish a cause for reversal.

[1-6] Except as herein stated, none of the rulings contained in the headnotes require further elaboration. If, during the former trial, any small inaccuracies not specially mentioned were committed, they were not such as to be likely to occur again.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 133)

MATTOX, Sheriff, v. BARRY.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES (§ 125*)—REMEDIES AGAINST OFFICERS.

In a money-rule proceeding against a sheriff to require him to pay over funds in his hands to a plaintiff in fi. fa., issued upon a judgment rendered in an attachment case, he filed an answer admitting that he had a fund derived from a sale of property under the execution, but also set up that the holders of two other fi. fas. had placed them in his hands and demanded their satisfaction out of the fund, the amount of which was insufficient to discharge the fi. fa. first mentioned, and praying only for direction as to how he should apply the fund. The holders of the two fi. fas. last mentioned in the sheriff's answer appeared by counsel and participated in the trial; and by consent of all parties the case was tried by the judge upon an agreed statement of facts and resulted in a judgment which ordered the sheriff to apply the fund to the payment of the costs of court in the attachment case and the money-rule proceeding, and deliver the balance thereof to the attorneys for the plaintiff in the attachment case. Held, that the judgment was responsive to the prayer of the sheriff, and all of the contestants over the fund, being parties to the suit, were bound by the judgment, and the sheriff had no cause for complaint that the fund was awarded to one of the contestants, rather than to the others.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sheriffs and Constables, Dec. Dig. § 125.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 336*)—RIGHT TO REVIEW.

The losing contestants for the fund in the court below having omitted to except to the judgment, they could not have their names added by amendment as plaintiffs in error in the Supreme Court to the bill of exceptions sued out by the sheriff, so as to proceed, not in the interest of the sheriff, but in the interest of themselves, to have the judgment of the lower court reversed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 336.*]

Error from Superior Court, Randolph County; W. C. Worrill, Judge.

Action by C. F. Barry against W. L. Mattox, Sheriff. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

On November 8, 1909, in the superior court of Randolph county, C. F. Barry recovered judgment in an attachment case against George L. Barry, and on the same day caused execution to issue and to be entered on the general execution docket. On November 9, 1909, the sheriff levied it upon certain property of the defendant, which was regularly sold on December 7, 1909. After the sale, on motion of the plaintiff in fi. fa., a rule nisi was issued against the sheriff, requiring him to show cause why he should not pay the funds derived from the sale of the property to the plaintiff in fi. fa. In his answer the sheriff set up that a justice court fi. fa. issued on the 23d day of March, 1893, in favor of W. R. Curry against George L. Barry, and transferred to E. R. King on the 11th day of January, 1909, had been placed in his hands and levied upon the property, and that the money in his hands was produced by a sale of the property under both executions, and also that before the sale still another justice court fi. fa. in favor of Rawls, Perry & Webb against George L. Barry was placed in his hands, with instructions that the same constituted a lien upon the proceeds of the sale of the property, the last fi. fa. having been issued on November 20, 1892. Having thus answered, the sheriff prayed the court to be instructed "how to distribute said money arising from the sale of said property, or to whom same shall be paid, whether to the plaintiffs in the said justice court executions or to the plaintiffs in this case." The rule against the sheriff was made returnable May 21, 1910. Service was acknowledged May 14, 1910, by the sheriff individually, and also by attorneys at law for E. R. King and for Rawls, Perry & Webb. On the same day an order was signed by the judge, reciting that by agreement "of all parties to this proceeding it is ordered that the questions presented therein be heard and passed upon by the judge of said court at chambers, on May 21, 1910, at Cuthbert, Ga." This order was consented to by the attorneys for C. F. Barry, the plaintiff in the attachment execution, who instituted the money rule against the sheriff, and also by the attorneys for E. R. King and attorneys for Rawls, Perry & Webb.

On the day set for the hearing the case was submitted on an agreed statement of facts, which was in conformity with all that is above stated, and showed the following additional facts: The amount realized from the sale was insufficient to discharge the attachment execution in favor of C. F. Barry. The justice court fi. fa., issued March 23, 1893, in favor of W. R. Curry, was entered on the general execution docket on March 29, 1893, but never on the execution docket of the superior court, and contained an indorsement whereby, on January 11, 1909, the plaintiff assigned it to E. R. King. It also contained an entry of levy by the sheriff, dated November 2, 1909. The other justice court fi. fa., which was issued November 24, 1892, in favor of Rawls, Perry & Webb, was entered on the general execution docket on December 9, 1892, but never on the execution docket of the superior court. The original was lost, and an alias was issued December 7, 1909. The defendant in fi. fa. left the state of Georgia in 1894 or 1895, and has not returned to this state to reside since that time. Upon this statement of facts the judge ordered that "all sums of costs accruing in said attachment case of C. F. Barry against Geo. L. Barry, as well as the costs of this rule proceeding, be first paid out of the funds admitted by the sheriff in his answer to be in his hands, and the balance paid over to 'the attorneys for the plaintiff in attachment, to be credited on his execution and judgment against Geo. L. Barry.'" The sheriff excepted to the order, on the ground that the court erred "in awarding said money to C. F. Barry, and in passing said order awarding said money to C. F. Barry, and in not awarding it to the plaintiffs in the justice court executions in the hands of the sheriff."

Glessner & Park and King & Castellow, for plaintiff in error. Smith & Miller, for defendant in error.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

ATKINSON, J. [1] 1. The assignments of error do not afford grounds for reversing the judgment at the instance of the sheriff, the only plaintiff in error who filed exceptions to the ruling of the court. The case was a money-rule proceeding against the sheriff, and by consent was tried by the judge upon the pleadings and upon an agreed statement of facts. According to his answer and only prayer, the sheriff had no interest further than to obtain a judgment protecting him in the matter of paying out the fund admitted to be in his hands, and invoked no judgment other than direction from the court on that subject. In money-rule cases, where a fund is in the hands of the sheriff and is contended for by different persons, ordinarily all persons having claims to the fund will be bound by the judgment, if they have notice of the proceedings and are afforded an opportunity to assert their claims. Foster v. Rutherford, 20 Ga. 668; Berrie v. Smith, 97 Ga. 782, 25 S. E. 757. The holders of the justice court fi. fas. put them in the hands of the sheriff, and in effect notified him to satisfy them out of the fund in controversy, thus in part bringing about the necessity for the sheriff to ask direction from the court. After the rule was issued against the sheriff, the attorneys at law for the holders of the justice court fi. fas. acknowledged service thereof, and entered into the consent for the trial by the judge and the agreement as to the facts, thereby participating in the trial of the case. Under these circumstances the holders of the justice court fi. fas., as well as the plaintiff in attachment, would be bound by any judgment rendered in the case. With all of the parties at interest, so far as the record discloses, participating in the trial, a judgment was rendered which in effect gave the sheriff full directions as to the application of the fund, and afforded him complete protection in paying it out as ordered. The judgment was responsive to his only prayer, afforded him all that he sought, and he was no party to ask that it be set aside. In this connection, see Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Griffith, 111 Ga. 558, 36 S. E. 859; Orr v. Webb, 112 Ga. 810, 38 S. E. 98.

[2] 2. After the case was brought to the Supreme Court by the bill of exceptions filed by the sheriff, the holders of the justice court fi. fas. sought to have it amended by having their names inserted as parties plaintiff in error, and to have the judgment of the trial court reversed in their interest. As indicated in the first division, if the judgment should be reversed at all, it would not be in the interest of the sheriff, as he had no interest in having it reversed. It is not apparent why they should be thus allowed to proceed. If they were dissatisfied with the judgment of the trial court, they should have filed appropriate exceptions within the time allowed by law. Several reasons exist why, after omitting to do so, they should not, after the expiration of the time for filing exceptions, be heard as to their separate interests in the Supreme Court merely by annexing themselves, under the law of amendments, to the bill of exceptions filed by the sheriff. This is not a case where they might have been added by amendment as necessary parties in order to afford relief to the sheriff, the only plaintiff in error in the original bill of exceptions. Ordinarily, in making parties plaintiff in error by amendment, the new parties proposed should have been on the same side of the controversy in the court below with the plaintiff in error. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Griffith, 111 Ga. 551, 36 S. E. 859. But such was not the case now before us. The sheriff was a party all to himself, not on the side of the holders of the justice court fi. fas., nor on that of the plaintiff in attachment, to whom the money was awarded. He did not purport to appear for either of them, nor was he allied with either. While, under certain conditions, bills of exceptions may be amended by adding parties plaintiff in error, this does not extend so far as to authorize a losing party on the trial of a controversy in the court below, who could have excepted, but did not, afterwards to have his name added by amendment to a bill of exceptions sued out by a different party, not on the same side of the controversy with him, in order that he might proceed in the Supreme Court in his own interest to have the judgment reversed.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.*

(136 Ga. 243)

SPENCER v. ROWE

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

NEW TRIAL (§ 78*)—GRANTING NEW TRIAL—DISCRETION—REVIEW.

A verdict was rendered for the plaintiff. The judgment of the trial court overruling the defendant's motion for a new trial was reversed by the Supreme Court on account of an erroneous instruction given to the jury. Rowe v. Spencer, 132 Ga. 426, 64 S. E. 468 (4). Upon a second trial a verdict was again rendered in favor of the plaintiff. The trial judge granted a new trial. This was the first exercise of his discretion in granting a new trial. As the verdict, under the evidence and the law applicable thereto, was not demanded, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial judge, and his judgment granting a new trial will be affirmed. Kuhnen v. Postal Telegraph Cable Co., 135 Ga. —, 69 S. E. 554.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

Error from Superior Court, Gwinnett County; C. H. Brand, Judge.

Action by E. A. Spencer against W. H. Rowe. From an order setting aside a verdict for plaintiff, and granting defendant a new trial, defendant brings error. Affirmed.

E. O. Dobbs and I. L. Oakes, for plaintiff in error. J. V. Pool and J. A. Perry, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 197)

SMITH v. SMITH.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The court erred in failing to instruct the jury as pointed out in the first division of the opinion, and in giving the charge set out therein.

2. DIVORCE (§ 147*)—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION—DOMICILE OF DEFENDANT.

Under the evidence in this case, the question as to whether or not, at the time the suit for divorce was instituted against the plaintiff in error, he was then a resident of Fulton county, was one for determination by the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Dec. Dig. § 147.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. DIVORCE (§ 148*)—ACTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS—RESIDENCE OF DEFENDANT.

In a divorce action, where it was an issue whether defendant at the commencement of the action was a resident of the county of the jurisdiction, and it appeared that defendant before the action had separated from plaintiff, with whom the children of the marriage remained, his place of residence should be determined as if he were a person having no family, and it was error to fail to charge Civ. Code 1910, § 2181, providing that the domicile of a person of full age, laboring under no disability, if he has no family, is the place where he generally lodges.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Dec. Dig. § 148.*]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—ABANDONMENT.

A ground of motion for nonsuit, not referred to in the brief for plaintiff in error, will be deemed abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

5. EVIDENCE (§ 208*)—ADMISSIONS—ABANDONED PLEADING.

An abandoned paragraph of an answer is admissible in evidence, to show an admission of the pleader made therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 718, 719; Dec. Dig. § 208.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by M. L. Smith against J. H. Smith. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

The plaintiff in error was sued for divorce and alimony, temporary and permanent. The petition was brought in the superior court of Fulton county, and alleged the defendant (plaintiff in error here) to be a resident of that county. At the second trial, for final divorce and permanent alimony, the court allowed a plea of the defendant, striking the paragraph in his original answer wherein he had admitted himself to be a resident of Fulton county, and setting up that at the time the original petition was filed he did not reside in that county, and therefore that the trial court had no jurisdiction of the suit. The trial resulted in a verdict in favor of the wife for divorce and permanent alimony. The defendant moved for a new trial, which was denied, and he excepted. All the special assignments of error are based on the contention of the defendant that his legal residence was not in Fulton county. The evidence on the question of the defendant's residence was in substance as follows:

The plaintiff testified: "We separated September 8, 1907. At the time of the separation we were living at West End, in the city of Atlanta, in Fulton county, Ga. Since September 8, 1907, we have been living apart and in a state of separation. * * * On November 28, 1907, I saw J. Horace Smith [the defendant] in West End, where we had lived. Some of the property was there intact. I also called up Mr. Smith in West End, and he answered the phone. I called up a residence on the opposite side of the street over the phone, and Mr. Smith answered. * * * Mr. Smith's father lived at Clarkston, in De Kalb county. I am certain of the date of the separation. At that time we were living in West End. From the time of the separation till the trial of the temporary alimony matter here, I saw Mr. Smith in passing. He stayed at his father's, and passed my door twice a day. I don't know whether I saw him every day during that time; probably some days I happened to be where I could not see him. I would see him pass my house every day. He was working in Atlanta. After the separation, he went to his father's, and stayed there at night. He was down there at the time this suit was filed, and he was there at the time of the hearing of the temporary alimony."

J. L. Smith testified: "I am the father of the defendant in this case, J. Horace Smith, and live in De Kalb county—Clarkston, Ga. I have been living there seven years. I remember the time the suit was filed for divorce and alimony by Mittle L. Smith against J. Horace Smith. At that time my son was staying at my house in Clarkston, De Kalb county, Ga. He went back and forwards every day to his work. He stayed at my house. He had a contract with me for board during that time. When this suit was filed, he had been staying at my house for about a month. Prior to that time he and his wife resided in Atlanta. They lived in West End a month or such a matter. * * * Prior to that time they lived in Decatur. Prior to that time they lived at Edgewood, and also Kirkwood, in De Kalb county. The time I have mentioned as my son's having lived in West End is the only time my son ever stayed or lived in Fulton county. All the rest of the time he lived in De Kalb county. The separation was about the 1st of September. After the separation, Mr. Smith's household furniture and goods was most of it in De Kalb county, at a friend of his house, a man named Floyd, just across the line in De Kalb county. Some of the other part of his property was stored somewhere. I don't know where. Probably some of it was where they lived in West End. * * * When my son was living at my house, his wife and family was living right there at Clarkston. She was staying with her father. She was living there at the time my son came to stay with me. My son and his wife were living at West End when they separated. After the separation his wife lived at Clarkston. I think a month is about all the time they lived at West End." The witness further testified that his son came to his house the 1st of September, and stayed two or three months. The witness was present at the hearing for temporary alimony after the 8th of October. His son "did not leave the state right straight." He worked at Rhodes-Haverty the whole month of October, and worked there in November, 1907, and until he left Atlanta.

Another witness testified that he lived in De Kalb county; that from about the 1st of September until the latter part of October he saw the defendant passing his house; that he saw him about every morning going to the train, and saw him in the afternoon coming back, until it got dark. On cross-examination he testified: "I am not positive of the particular month in 1907. It was along in September, October, or November. * * * The last time I saw him was in November, as he went past."

Another witness testified that he lived in Clarkston, and saw the defendant, while he was staying there with his father, going backward and forward to town to work. This was in September, as well as the witness could recollect. He saw him, after September, about the 1st of October. "It was in the latter part of October and November. I can't indicate the particular time in September. * * * I don't remember whether it was the first or the last."

The plaintiff, recalled, testified that she and the defendant moved to West End February 22, 1907, and were living there on the date of the separation. The suit was filed September 25, 1907.

Mark Bolding, for plaintiff in error. Alonso Field, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1, §] 1. Error is assigned on the failure of the court to charge the provisions of section 2181 of the Civil Code of 1910, and especially on the failure of the court to charge the second and last sentence thereof. The provisions of that section are as follows: "The domicile of every person of full age, and laboring under no disability, is the place where the family of such person shall permanently reside, if in this state. If he has no family, or they do not reside in this state, then the place where such person shall generally lodge shall be considered his domicile." There was evidence to the effect that the plaintiff and the defendant separated as husband and wife on the 8th day of September, 1907, while residing in Fulton county, and that after the separation the defendant continued to work in Atlanta, but boarded with his father in De Kalb county until several weeks after the suit for divorce was filed on September 25, 1907. After the defendant separated from his wife, with whom the children of the marriage remained, his place of residence would have to be determined as if he was "a person having no family." Gilmer v. Gilmer, 32 Ga. 685. We think, therefore, the last sentence in the Code section above quoted, that, "if he has no family, * * * then the place where such person shall generally lodge shall be considered his domicile," should have been given in charge to the jury. The court nowhere gave this principle in charge, and we think it was error for the court to fail to charge the jury as above stated.

Error is assigned on the following charge of the court: "The court further instructs you that, if a person shall reside indifferently at two or more places in this state, such person shall have the privilege of electing which shall be his domicile; and if such election shall be made notorious, the place of his choice shall be his domicile. If no such election be made, or, if made, is not generally known among those with whom he transacts business in this state, third persons may treat each one of such places as his domicile, and it shall be so held; and in all such cases a person who habitually resides a portion of the year in one county, and another portion in another, shall be deemed a resident of both, so far as to subject him to suits in either for contracts made or torts committed in such county. Transient persons, whose business or pleasure causes a frequent change of residence, and having no family permanently residing at one place in this state, shall be deemed and held, as to third persons, to be domiciled at such place as they at the time temporarily occupy." Complaint is made that this charge is not applicable to any phase of the case under the evidence introduced.

We think it was error to give this charge, as no portion of it was applicable. After the separation on September 8, 1907, while the husband continued to work in Atlanta, he boarded with his father in De Kalb county, and was boarding there at the time the suit was filed on September 25, 1907. There was evidence that he came to Atlanta to work during the day, and returned to his father's every night, and that that was the place where he generally lodged. The place of his residence after the separation, as above stated, is to be determined as if he was "a person having no family," and there is no evidence that he resided "indifferently at two or more places in this state." Nor is there any evidence that "he habitually resided a portion of the year in one county, and another portion in another" county. Nor is there any evidence bringing him within that class of persons described as "transient persons, whose business or pleasure causes a frequent change of residence," and have no family residing permanently in this state. See, in this connection, Knight v. Bond, 112 Ga. 828, 38 S. E. 206. The above-quoted charge was inapplicable, and constituted error requiring a new trial, inasmuch as one of the main defenses set up by the defendant to the suit was that the court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for divorce, because the defendant at the time of its institution was not a resident of Fulton county. There was no error in the other charge complained of.

[4] 2. Plaintiff in error excepted to a remark made by the court at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, when the defendant made a motion for a nonsuit. This ground of the motion is not referred to in the brief of counsel for the plaintiff in error, and will be considered as abandoned. The court committed no error in refusing to nonsuit the case, nor in refusing to direct a verdict in favor of the defendant.

[5] The question of the place of residence of a party is a mixed question of law and fact. There was evidence to show that, when the plaintiff in error and his wife separated, their residence was in Fulton county, and after the separation he continued to work in Atlanta, but boarded with his father in De Kalb county. There was also evidence tending to show that part of the household goods of the plaintiff in error had not been removed from Fulton county. The plaintiff in error did not testify upon the trial of the case. If his domicile at the time of the separation was in Fulton county, and he intended to change it from Fulton to De Kalb, this intention would have to be gathered from the facts and circumstances proved in the case. The plaintiff in error in his original answer admitted that at the time of the institution of the divorce proceedings he was a resident of Fulton county. By an amendment to his answer, allowed by the court, he struck the paragraph of his answer making this admission, and averred in lieu thereof that he was not at the time the suit was commenced a resident of Fulton county, but was at that time a resident of De Kalb county. The original answer was introduced in evidence, and the jury had a right to consider the admission made therein in determining the question as to where the plaintiff in error was domiciled when the suit was commenced. Mims v. Jones, 135 Ga. 541, 69 S. E. 824.

[2] In view of all the evidence in the case, the question as to whether or not the domicile of the plaintiff in error was in Fulton county at the time of the institution of the suit for divorce against him was one for the jury to determine.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 501)

SIBLEY et al. v. LEE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

VERDICT—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

No errors of law are complained of, and the evidence was sufficient to support the finding of the jury.

Error from Superior Court, Clinch County; T. A. Parker, Judge.

Action between William C. Sibley and others, as executors, etc., and W. J. Lee. From a judgment for the latter, the former bring error. Affirmed.

Wilson, Bennett & Lambdin, for plaintiffs in error. R. J. Dickerson and J. L. Sweat, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 264)

ANDERSON et al. v. NELSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

VERDICT—EVIDENCE—NEW TRIAL.

The verdict was authorized by the evidence, and there was no error in refusing to grant a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Dodge County; J. H. Martin, Judge.

Action between U. Anderson and others and W. J. Nelson. Judgment for the latter, and the former bring error. Affirmed.

D. M. Roberts & Son and W. M. Clements, for plaintiffs in error. J. A. Neese and W. M. Morrison, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 251)

BRIDGES v. SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO. et al

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 12, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CORPORATIONS (§ 388*) — POWERS — ESTOPPEL OF STOCKHOLDER—LACHES.

A minority stockholder, who co-operated in the consummation of the sale of the physical properties of a telephone company, and, with a knowledge that the sale had been made and the purchase price paid, stood by and saw the purchaser expend large sums in the improvement of the property without objection, and inexcusably waited an unreasonable time before making objection, will be estopped by his laches and conduct from attacking the validity of the sale as ultra vires, or as having been irregularly made. Under the facts of this case, the judge did not abuse his discretion in denying an injunction and the appointment of a receiver.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1556-1567; Dec. Dig. § 388.*]

Error from Superior Court, Decatur County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by R. L. Z. Bridges against the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company and another. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

The Bainbridge Telephone Company was incorporated by the superior court of Early county on December 23, 1904. It constructed and operated a telephone system in the city of Bainbridge and in the towns of Brinson and Climax, all located in Decatur county. The physical properties of the company were incumbered by two mortgages. On January 13, 1910, the Bainbridge Telephone Company sold and transferred by deed its physical properties to the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, which immediately took possession of the same and expended large sums of money in the improvement of the telephone system. On July 13, 1910, R. L. Z. Bridges, a minority stockholder of the Bainbridge Telephone Company, filed a petition against the Bainbridge Telephone Company and the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, alleging that the sale of the physical properties of the former company to the latter was without authority of law, and without any resolution of its stockholders, and without any notice to petitioner, and that the same was made collusively and in fraud of petitioner. The prayers were to declare the sale void, to cancel the deed, to restrain the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company from further interfering with the property of the Bainbridge Telephone Company, and that a receiver be appointed to take charge of all the property of the Bainbridge Telephone Company.

Both corporations answered. The Bainbridge Telephone Company alleged that the petitioner, prior to the sale of its physical properties to the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, had sold his stock to T. E. Gurr, and in furtherance of the sale had executed a power of attorney to transfer the same on the books of the company, and had agreed to take a certain sum of money as the purchase price, which sum was duly tendered to and refused by the petitioner; that the municipalities where the telephone company operated had assented to the transfer by ordinances, in which rates of toll were fixed, and the sale had also been approved by the Railroad Commission; that the company had been legally dissolved, and notice thereof was published in a newspaper in Bainbridge, having a general circulation in the county; that the petitioner knew of the pending sale to the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, and actively participated in consummating it; that he was instrumental in obtaining the assent of the municipality of Brinson to the sale; that the Bainbridge Company was in bad financial condition, and was being operated at a loss, and the sale was to the advantage of its stockholders; and that the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company had expended large sums of money in the improvement of the telephone system after its purchase by them, and the petitioner was aware that such improvements were being made at the time the money was being expended therefor. In its answer the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company made substantially the same allegations contained in the answer of the Bainbridge Telephone Company, averring that the petitioner was not a stockholder; that its purchase of the property was legal and authorized by law; that the petitioner was estopped from contesting the sale, because he participated in bringing about the same, and knowingly permitted, without objection, large sums of money to be expended in the improvement of the telephone system after its purchase; and that the respondent was solvent, and it purchased the property of the Bainbridge Telephone Company in good faith, and paid its full value for the same. Both corporations denied all charges of collusion or fraud in the matter of the sale of the property. On the interlocutory hearing the court refused a temporary injunction, and the petitioner excepted.

Russell, Fleming & Custer, for plaintiff in error. H. E. W. Palmer, Brutus J. Clay, and Hawes & Pottle, for defendants in error.

EVANS, P. J. (after stating the facts as above). Two reasons are advanced for denying the plaintiff the relief which he seeks. One is that he was not a stockholder, and the other that he is estopped by his conduct from attacking the sale. We will pretermitt any discussion of the evidence relied on to show a sale of his stock, because the plaintiff never parted with his stock certificate and declined to receive the purchase price.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Whether he violated his contract to sell his stock, or whether the purchaser failed to comply with the terms of sale, may be passed by, as the stock certificate, with its transfer, was never delivered to the purchaser. Nevertheless we think the evidence was sufficient to show an estoppel against the plaintiff from having the relief which he seeks. In his affidavit, submitted at the interlocutory hearing, the plaintiff deposed that the sale was not authorized by any resolution of the stockholders, nor was the corporate seal impressed upon the deed. There was no evidence to the contrary. But the deed was actually made in the corporation's name; the corporate name purporting to have been signed by its president, and attested by its secretary.

Treating the deed as being informally executed, and the sale as being without proper corporate action, we think, for the purposes of this case, the minority stockholder is estopped from attacking the validity of the purchaser's title. The Bainbridge Telephone Company admits the execution of the deed and the receipt of the money, and expressly ratifies the sale. It further appears that the purchaser paid full value for the property, and that the Bainbridge Company was unsuccessfully operating the business at the time of the sale. It also appears, that the petitioner knew of the pending negotiations for the sale of the telephone system to the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company; that he co-operated with the officials of the Bainbridge Telephone Company in bringing about the sale, agreeing with its president that it was to the best interest of the corporation to make the sale; that he was instrumental in obtaining the assent of the authorities of the town of Brinson to the sale; that he knew that the sale was consummated; and that after the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company had been put in possession of the property it expended large sums of money in improving it, without any dissent or objection on the part of petitioner. There was no evidence of any fraud or collusion between the Bainbridge Telephone Company and the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company in making the sale, or of any intention to defraud the plaintiff. Notwithstanding the plaintiff participated in bringing about the sale, and observed the purchaser making valuable improvements on the faith of its legality, it was not until after such improvements were made, and six months after the sale, that he protested against its validity or propriety.

Before a minority stockholder may proceed for acts ultra vires against the corporation, its officers, and those participating therein, he must show, not only that the act is ultra vires, and that the majority of stockholders are illegally pursuing in the name of the corporation a course in violation of the rights of shareholders, but also that he acted promptly. Civ. Code 1910, § 2224. If a minority stockholder postpones his complaint that the corporate act is ultra vires or irregular for an unreasonable time, or, after full knowledge of the facts, stands by and allows large operations to be completed, or money expended, before he brings suit, his laches and acquiescence bar him of any right to equitable relief with respect thereto. Alexander v. Searcy, 81 Ga. 536, 8 S. E. 630, 12 Am. St. Rep. 337. After a careful review of the evidence, we do not think that the judge abused his discretion in refusing the extraordinary relief sought by the plaintiff.

The plaintiff in error complains of certain rulings on evidence; but, in view of the foregoing discussion of the grounds upon which we place our decision, it becomes unnecessary to discuss them.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 246)

HUTCHINS v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NAMES (§ 16*)—IDEM SONANS.

"Crooms" and "Grooms" are idem sonans, and the court did not err in instructing the jury that they are such as a matter of law. Woody v. State, 113 Ga. 927, 39 S. E. 297.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Names, Cent. Dig. §§ 12-14; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 309*)—INSTRUCTIONS—VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER.

From the evidence for the state, none being introduced by the defendant, it appears that the defendant struck the decedent on the head with an ax, inflicting a mortal wound; and it appears that there was no provocation for the homicide, except certain insulting and opprobrious words used by the decedent to the defendant. Held, that the omission of a charge on the subject of voluntary manslaughter was not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 650; Dec. Dig. § 309.*]

Error from Superior Court, Baldwin County; J. B. Park, Judge.

Will Hutchins was convicted of homicide, and he brings error. Affirmed.

Hines & Vinson, for plaintiff in error. J. E. Pottle, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 341)

SINGLETERY v. WATSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. AFFIDAVITS (§ 5*)—AUTHORITY TO ADMINISTER OATH—CLAIMANT OF PROPERTY LEVIED ON.

Under Civil Code 1910, § 621, subd. 4, a commercial notary public is authorized to administer the oath, provided for in section 5157 of such Code, to one claiming property as not subject to an execution levied thereon.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Affidavits, Cent. Dig. §§ 18-27; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

2. AFFIDAVITS (§ 15*)—EXECUTION IN FOREIGN STATE—AUTHENTICATION.

An affidavit made out of this state before a notary public of another state, with his seal attached thereto, is receivable in the courts of this state, without further authentication. Simpson v. Wicker, 120 Ga. 418, 47 S. E. 965; Ballew v. Broach, 121 Ga. 421, 49 S. E. 297.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Affidavits, Cent. Dig. §§ 61-64; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Error from Superior Court, Grady County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action between John R. Singletary, as guardian, etc., and Y. L. Watson. From a judgment in favor of the latter, the former brings error. Reversed.

R. C. Bell and M. L. Ledford, for plaintiff in error. Theo. Titus, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 264)

BARNES v. PETERSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 1*)—DEEDS—MISTAKE—DESCRIPTION.

The proper inquiry in all applications for relief against mistake is: Does the instrument contain the true agreement of the parties? Is it what the parties intended it should be?

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS—EVIDENCE.

There being no evidence that the plaintiff was lacking in proper diligence in connection with the mistake in the execution of the deed, it was not erroneous for the court to omit an instruction respecting his negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 596-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 13*)—DEEDS—MISTAKE.

Where a landowner agrees to sell land, and a purchaser agrees to buy it, and the deed, by mistake of the draftsman, fails to correctly describe the land, equity will correct the description, so as to conform the deed to the actual agreement of the parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-60; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

Error from Superior Court, Coffee County; T. A. Parker, Judge.

Suit by B. Peterson against Elmira Barnes to reform a deed for mistakes. Judgment for complainant, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Lankford & Dickerson and Levi O'Steen, for plaintiff in error. J. W. Quincey and F. Willis Dart, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. B. Peterson brought suit against Elmira Barnes, alleging that on December 28, 1908, he purchased a certain described tract of land, containing 60 acres, more or less, known as the "Georgia Ann Levans land," and in pursuance of his purchase the defendant undertook to convey to him the land by warranty deed. The scrivener selected to draw the deed inadvertently and erroneously described the northern boundary, the effect of which was to limit the land conveyed to about one-half of the tract purchased. A few days after the execution of the deed the plaintiff discovered the mistake in the description of the land, and requested the defendant to correct the same. This the defendant refused to do. The prayer of the petition was to reform the deed, so that the land actually purchased may be properly described and for other relief. The defendant denied that any mistake was made in the execution of the deed, and alleged that the land described in her deed was the land purchased by the plaintiff. On the trial of the case, it appeared from the evidence submitted by the plaintiff that the defendant and her mother were indebted to him in a large sum; the mother's debt being secured by deed to a certain tract of land owned by her, and the defendant's indebtedness was secured by deed or mortgage on personalty and on 60 acres of land upon which the defendant resided, and known as the "Georgia Ann Levans land," the northern boundary of which was stated to be the "old red oak line." Upon the death of the defendant's mother she became entitled to her mother's land as heir at law, and entered into an agreement with the plaintiff that she would sell him the land upon which she lived, containing 60 acres, more or less, and also a mule, if the plaintiff would convey to her the land hypothecated to him by her mother and cancel the debts against her mother, herself, and her brother. The plaintiff canceled the debts and executed a deed to the defendant, conveying the land formerly owned by her mother, and the defendant executed to him a deed purporting to convey 60 acres, more or less; the call for the northern boundary being the "old red oak line." The plaintiff was under the impression at the time that the mortgage from the defendant to himself correctly described the land which he agreed to accept in satisfaction of the debts he agreed to settle; and in drafting the deed the scrivener was also under that impression, and obtained his information as to the boundaries from that mortgage. The defendant, immediately after the execution of her deed, expressed herself to several as having conveyed her entire tract of 60 acres to the plaintiff. In a few days, however, the plaintiff discovered the mistake and called upon the defendant to rectify it. She refused, and contended that the deed covered the land which she sold. The defendant on the trial testified that the land which she conveyed was the only land which she sold, that the entire tract contained about 60 acres, and that the northern boundary as stated in the deed left her 26 acres. The jury found in favor of the plaintiff, and the court refused a new trial.

[3] The petition is by a purchaser of land to reform the deed by correcting an erroneous description of the land made by the draftsman. If an owner agrees to sell land, and the purchaser agrees to buy it, and the deed, by mistake of the draftsman, fails to correctly describe the land, a court of equity will correct the erroneous description, so as to make it conform to the actual agreement of the parties. Collier v. Lanier, 1 Ga. 238; Ward v. Allen, 28 Ga. 74.

[1] In such a case the proper inquiry is: Does the instrument contain the true agreement of the parties? Is it what the parties intended it should be? And the court may so instruct the jury. Wyche v. Greene, 11 Ga. 159. There was no conflict of evidence surrounding the execution of the deed. The scrivener obtained his information as to the boundaries from the old mortgage, and the purchaser erroneously supposed the boundaries as delineated in the old mortgage included the entire tract. Nor is there any dispute that the purchaser promptly filed his petition to correct the alleged mistake. The point of pressure was whether the defendant intended to sell the whole tract to the plaintiff, or only a part; in other words, whether the land actually sold was the entire tract or only such part thereof as was described in the deed.

[2] Under such circumstances instructions to the effect that if the defendant actually agreed to sell to the plaintiff the whole tract, and the intent of the parties was that the deed should include the whole tract, but one of the boundaries was misdescribed because of a mistake of the scrivener, the plaintiff would have the right to have the deed reformed so that it would speak the contract, are not erroneous, because such instructions exclude consideration of any negligence on the part of the plaintiff at the time of the execution of the deed, which would prevent a reformation of the deed. If the plaintiff actually bought all the land, and paid for it, he would be entitled to a deed to it. This is not a case where a purchaser accepted his deed with a knowledge that it only purported to convey a part of the land. In that kind of a case there would have been no mistake. The charges complained of were authorized by the evidence, which amply supports the verdict.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

DOTSON v. STATE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1180*)—APPEAL—DECISION ON FORMER APPEAL—LAW OF CASE.

The evidence in the present record is substantially the same as that contained in the record when the case was formerly before this court (129 Ga. 727, 59 S. E. 774), and it was there adjudged that the evidence did not involve manslaughter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3002-3004; Dec. Dig. § 1180.*]

2. WITNESSES (§ 274*)—CROSS-EXAMINATION—CHARACTER.

Where the defendant puts his character in issue, it is allowable on cross-examination to ask a witness, called to establish his good character, if the witness on a certain occasion came upon the scene immediately after the defendant had made a serious attack with a weapon upon another person, who charged the defendant in his presence with an attempt to kill him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 965, 966; Dec. Dig. § 274.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 833*)—INSTRUCTIONS—GIVING REQUESTS—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS.

In giving requested instructions, the court should do so in such a manner as to impress the jury that such are emanations from the court, and are to be considered as part of the court's instructions on the law of the case. This is best accomplished by incorporating such requests at some appropriate place in the charge, without stating that the requests were made by a party to the case. While the practice is not commended, a new trial will not be granted solely because the court, near the conclusion of his charge, picked up certain written requests and read them to the jury, with the preface: "The defendant has requested the court to charge you the following, which I will read to you."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2015; Dec. Dig. § 833.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 823*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—CURING ERROR.

Where the court erroneously instructs the jury, and subsequently specifically calls their attention to such erroneous instruction, and corrects the error, the original error is cured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1992-1995; Dec. Dig. § 823.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 763, 764*)—CONFESSIONS—CORROBORATION—INSTRUCTIONS.

The charge relating to the sufficiency of evidence as corroborative of a confession was not erroneous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1731-1768; Dec. Dig. §§ 763, 764.*]

Error from Superior Court, Applying County; C. B. Conyers, Judge.

Randolph Dotson was convicted of murder, and he brings error. Affirmed.

W. W. Bennett and A. V. Sellers, for plaintiff in error. J. H. Thomas, Sol. Gen., and H. A. Hall, Atty. Gen., for the State.

EVANS, P. J. Randolph Dotson was convicted of the murder of John Willbanks, and the court refused him a new trial.

[1] 1. The failure of the court to instruct the jury on the law of voluntary manslaughter was not erroneous. The evidence on this trial was substantially the same as it was on the first trial, and on a review of the first trial it was held that the evidence on behalf of neither side involved manslaughter. 129 Ga. 727, 59 S. E. 774.

[2] 2. The defendant put his character in issue. On the cross-examination of one of the witnesses offered by the defendant to prove his good character, the court allowed the witness to testify, in response to questions propounded by the solicitor general, that the witness was the jailer of the county, having in custody the defendant and another prisoner; that on one occasion he heard considerable noise in the jail, and ran to discover the cause; when he reached the jail he saw the defendant's fellow prisoner run across the room and fall bleeding from wounds on his arm and head, and that the defendant had a knife with a broken blade; and the defendant's fellow prisoner immediately remarked in the presence of the defendant that the defendant hit him with the knife, and he thought he was going to kill him. There was no error in this ruling. Where a defendant calls a witness to establish his good character, and such witness testifies that the character of the defendant is good, he may be interrogated on cross-examination as to his having seen the defendant engage in a broil or a fight. Ozburn v. State, 87 Ga. 173 (4), 13 S. E. 247.

[3] 3. Where proper and pertinent instructions are requested, it is the duty of the court to give the same to the jury. Ga. R. Co. v. Flowers, 108 Ga. 795, 33 S. E. 874. Though the judge may substitute his own phraseology for that of the request, and such substitution will not be ground for new trial, where the instruction given is as comprehensive as that requested, yet it is the duty of the court to distinctly charge the jury on the matter requested, if the same is apposite to the case and sound in law. It is always best for the judge to incorporate a proper request at an appropriate place in his charge, without reference to the same as having come from counsel for either party in the case. The jury are not concerned about the sources from which the judge gets the material with which he builds the legal structure of his charge. The purpose of making a request is that the jury may be informed as to the law; and, if the request correctly embodies a proper principle of law, the court should submit the same in such a manner as best to inform the jury of the legal principle embraced in the request, and also that such legal principle is to be accepted for their guidance in passing on the particular point to which it applies. It is sufficient to read the requested instruction to the jury, and tell them that the court gives it in charge, or that it is the law. Feagan v. Cureton, 19 Ga. 404; Long v. State, 12 Ga. 293; Dillon v. McRea, 40 Ga. 107.

In the case at bar the court had practically completed his charge when he picked up the two requests to charge and read them to the jury, prefacing the reading with the remark: "Gentlemen, the defendant has requested the court to charge you the following, which I will read." Complaint is made of the manner in which the requests were submitted. Counsel argues, inasmuch as the court did not tell the jury distinctly that such requests contained the law pertinent to the case, that in effect the defendant was deprived of his right to have a pertinent and correct legal principle given in charge. While we do not commend the practice observed on this occasion as being the correct way of submitting a request still we do not think that the manner in which the court submitted the request sufficient ground to require a new trial. It is the duty of juries to take the law from the court under our system of procedure. Judges are forbidden to express an opinion upon the facts, and the jury always look to emanations from the bench in the final charge as the last word upon the law of the case. We do not doubt that the jury understood that the requests which the court read to them was a part of his charge, and were so considered in arriving at their verdict.

[4] 4. Complaint is made of an instruction which the court later on modified in his charge. The complaint is not as to the correctness of the charge as modified, but of the original charge before its modification. Inasmuch as the court corrected his first instruction by specific reference to its vice, a new trial will not be granted on this ground.

[5] 5. In charging on the law applicable to confession, among other things, the court said: "Proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the corpus delicti—that is, that the crime charged has been committed—may be, but is not necessarily, sufficient corroboration of a confession. The law does not fix the amount of corroboration necessary. The jury are judges whether other evidence sufficiently corroborates a confession to justify a conviction, if you find that a proper confession was made." The objection to the charge is that it is expressive of an opinion on the weight of the evidence. The charge was not erroneous. Holsenbake v. State, 43 Ga. 43 (5).

The evidence supports the verdict, and we find no error of law requiring the grant of a new trial.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 338)

LOVELESS v. BRIDGES.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 13, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)1. EVIDENCE (§ 445)—CORPORATIONS (§ 123*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—CONSIDERATION.

Bridges brought an action of trover against Loveless to recover a certain "certificate of fifteen (15) shares of the capital stock of the Alkahest Lyceum System, a corporation," of which Bridges was president and Loveless was secretary and treasurer. The plaintiff testified in part substantially as follows: He sold the 15 shares to L. O. Jones by virtue of a written contract, signed by them, reciting that the former "agrees to sell" to the latter the shares for $2,000, "to be paid as follows: Three hundred ($300) dollars cash when stock is transferred, and the balance to be paid from the monthly dividends and at any other intervals that special dividends may be declared on said stock, it being understood that all the earnings of said stock are to go to the first party until the remaining seventeen hundred ($1,700) dollars is settled. It is agreed that notes for this stock shall be interest-bearing at the rate of 6% after two years from their date. It is further agreed that the second party agrees to give first party option on buying his stock back, in case he should decide at any time to sever his connection with the company." A certificate for the shares was issued and delivered to Jones, who subsequently to the signing of the contract agreed to deliver and did deliver to Bridges the certificate to hold as security for the notes given Bridges by Jones in pursuance of the written contract. Bridges subsequently delivered the certificate and notes to Loveless, to be kept by him for Bridges. Loveless returned to Bridges the notes, but refused to return the certificate. Loveless testified, in part, that the certificate was delivered to him by Jones to keep for the latter, and, when Bridges asked him why he did not return the certificate, "I said, 'By nature of his written instrument, that belongs to Mr. Jones.' He said, 'No, it belongs to me.' I said, 'How comes that?' He said, 'It is mine until it is paid for.' I said, 'You ought to have had it transferred, then, out of Mr. Jones.' He said, 'Mr. Jones gave it to me.'" Held, an oral agreement between Jones and Bridges that the latter should hold the certificate to secure the debt due him by the former, made subsequently to the execution of the written contract, could be proved without violating the rule that parol evidence is inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary a written contract. Civil Code 1910, § 5794.

(a) Nor was such oral agreement invalid for the want of a consideration to support the same.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 445; Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 123.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 445*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—VARYING WRITTEN CONTRACT.

Bridges testified: "When I took those notes, I turned them over to Mr. Loveless. I put the stock with the notes at that time. I held the stock certificate, because Jones had absolutely nothing. I knew that at the time. * * * I certainly would not have turned the stock over to him without some collateral, and he had nothing else to give. * * * This agreement that I was to keep as collateral the stock and notes was made after the stock was issued. We were closing up the day's work. We had been working on that business most of the day. I think it early in the afternoon when we finished. Finally the contract was signed. Then we took the matter up about the notes, and we agreed that I should hold the stock with the notes. * * * Mr. Jones delivered the stock back to me when he gave me the notes. I put the stock and notes together, and turned them over to Mr. Loveless, to put in the safe. * * * I know this: The contract had been made after talking to Mr. Jones. I noticed these terms had been fixed in there, and that he had nothing, and I had to hold the stock, as the only way I could get anything out of him." Held, that this testimony was not subject to the objection that it was irrelevant and incompetent, nor on the ground that, "there being a written contract of sale for the stock in question, such testimony was an attempt to vary by parol the terms thereof, and to qualify or make additions to the same."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 445.*]

3. CORPORATIONS (§ 123*)—PLEDGE OF STOCK—EVIDENCE.

The following testimony of Bridges: "No part of the purchase money of the stock has ever been paid, except the $300 credit which I allowed"—was not inadmissible on the ground that it "was irrelevant, because the fact that the stock had not been paid for in full would not affect the title thereto, nor prevent same from passing into Jones." Bridges contended, and offered testimony to show, that the certificate was delivered by Jones to him to secure the balance of the purchase money of $1,700, and that it was delivered by Bridges to Loveless for safe-keeping. It was therefore competent for Bridges to show that the debt to secure which the certificate was pledged had not been paid.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 123.*]

4. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 76*)—ESTOPPEL OF AGENT TO DENY TITLE OF PRINCIPAL.

If there was an agreement between Jones and Bridges that the latter should hold the certificate to secure a debt due him by the former, and if Jones, for the purpose of securing such debt, delivered the certificate to Bridges, and the latter delivered it to Loveless for safe-keeping, Loveless could not defeat a recovery of the certificate by Bridges on the ground that there was no written assignment of the certificate by Jones to Bridges. Civil Code 1910, § 3584.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Dec. Dig. § 76.*]

5. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

No error requiring a new trial appears in the record, and the evidence was sufficient to authorize the verdict rendered.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by S. R. Bridges against F. M. Loveless. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Hines & Jordan, for plaintiff in error. Napier, Wright & Cox and J. M. Wood, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 240)

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RY. CO. v. GILL.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)1. EVIDENCE (§ 591)—WEIGHT AND CONCLUSIVENESS—ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD—PRESUMPTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS—CERTAINTY—STATUTES.

This being a suit against a railroad company for damages arising from personal injuries caused by the running of the locomotives, cars, and other machinery of the company, the charge on the subject of the presumption arising from the proof of the injury, and on the subject of the various defenses which were open to the company after a prima facie case had been made against it, was in substantial accord with the rulings announced in the cases of Georgia Railroad Co. v. Neely, 56 Ga. 540 (2), Central Railroad Co. v. Brinson, 64 Ga. 475 (3), and Georgia Railroad Co. v. Thomas, 68 Ga. 744.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

(a) The evidence to defeat the plaintiff's cause of action may come from the plaintiff's side, as well as that of the defendant.

(b) The charge was not subject to the criticism that it confused the rules of law contained in sections 2321, 2322, and 3830 of the Civil Code of 1895.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 591.*]

2. NEGLIGENCE (§ 141*)—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—INSTRUCTIONS.

Where the judge charged the law of contributory negligence and diminution of damages substantially as set out in section 2322 of the Civil Code of 1895, it furnished no ground for a new trial that the court failed, in connection with such charge, to also instruct the jury that if the parties were equally negligent there could be no recovery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

3. VERDICT—EVIDENCE—NEW TRIAL.

The evidence authorized the verdict, and there was no error requiring the grant of a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Taylor County; S. P. Gilbert, Judge.

Action by L. M. Gill against the Central of Georgia Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

C. E. Battle and Howell Hollis, for plaintiff in error. Robt. L. Berner and C. W. Foy, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(69 W. Va. 57)

SMITH et al. v. LINDEN OIL CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
March 14, 1911. Rehearing Denied May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 79*)—CONFLICTING CLAIMS TO ROYALTY OIL—JURISDICTION.

Equity has jurisdiction to pass on conflicting claims to royalty oil, though under the same lease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 79.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1036*)—HARMLESS ERROR—OVERRULING DEMURRER.

Though a demurrer to a bill for want of parties be erroneously overruled, yet, if they be later made parties by amended bill, the error is cured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4069-4074; Dec. Dig. § 1036.*]

3. CARRIERS (§ 70*)—CARRIAGE OF GOODS—DUTY TO YIELD POSSESSION TO PERSON HAVING TITLE.

A common carrier of goods must yield possession or recognize the right of a third party having the true title, or such party may enforce his right by suit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 70*)—CARRIAGE OF OIL—LIABILITY OF PIPE LINE COMPANY FOR ROYALTY OIL.

A lease for oil provides that the lessee shall pay the landowner a royalty of a fraction of the oil produced under the lease; such royalty oil to be delivered into the pipe line of a common carrier of oil. Such common carrier, having notice of the assignment by the landowner to another of a given fraction of such royalty oil, must account to such an assignee for his undivided fraction of such oil.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 427*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—MATTERS CONCLUDED.

In a suit by an assignee of a fraction of the one-eighth for royalty reserved in a lease of land for oil to vindicate his right among conflicting claimants to a portion of such royalty oil, no decree can be made in favor of a claimant to another fraction of such royalty oil; he not asking it. It is foreign to the suit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Dec. Dig. § 427.*]

6. CARRIERS (§ 70*)—PIPE LINE COMPANIES—DUTY OF COMPANY TO ACCOUNT FOR UNDIVIDED FRACTION OF OIL.

Where a lease for oil provides for the delivery to the lessor of a fraction of the oil in the pipe line of a common carrier of oil, there need be no actual physical separation of the lessor's share from the whole of the oil to vest title in him, but the carrier must account to him for his undivided fraction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Tyler County.

Suit by G. D. Smith and others against the Linden Oil Company, the Eureka Pipe Line Company, and others. From the decree, the Eureka Pipe Line Company appeals. Affirmed in part and reversed in part.

A. B. Fleming, Charles Powell, and Kemble White, for appellant. J. V. Blair, G. D. Smith, and I. M. Underwood, for appellees.

BRANNON, J. On 24 December, 1898, T. K. Harter and wife made a lease for development of oil and gas to W. S. Miller, trustee, of a tract of 51 acres of land, which lease Miller assigned to the Linden Oil Company. The lease bound the lessee to pay to the lessor, Harter, a royalty of one-eighth of oil produced, and "to deliver the same, free of expense, into tanks or pipe lines to the credit of the party of the first part." On 12 October, 1900, by deed recorded 13 October, 1900, Harter and wife conveyed to G. M. Smith and I. M. Underwood the undivided thirty-second of the oil that should be produced from the "two first" wells that should be drilled on the land under said lease, for a consideration of \$100, and for deferred consideration specified. This conveyance was recorded, and of it the Linden Oil Company and the Eureka Pipe Line Company had notice. When this conveyance of part of Harter's one-eighth royalty oil was made, no well had been drilled. Later the Linden Oil Company drilled wells producing much oil; two of those wells being known in this suit as Harter Well No. 1 and Harter Well No. 2. These are the wells in whose oil Smith and Underwood claim a thirty-second interest. This oil was run into the pipe line of the Eureka Pipe Line Company, a common carrier. By deed 13 October, 1900, T. K. Harter and wife conveyed to Foster Mitchell one-half the oil in said tract subject to said Miller lease, this deed declaring its intent to be to convey to Mitchell one-sixteenth of the oil; that is, half the one-eighth royalty oil reserved by lease to Harter. This conveyance was recorded 18 October, 1900. Mitchell conveyed various interests in the oil conveyed to him by Harter to D. Dally, C. Melick, and H. E. Wilson. Harter and wife conveyed to W. R. Fitch $\frac{1}{64}$ of the oil in said tract. It was discovered that, though Harter and wife leased to Miller the entire tract, Harter owned only three undivided fifths, the remaining two-fifths being owned by George V. Harter and Rebecca J. Harter; and Harter, conceding want of title to two-fifths, made an agreement with the Linden Oil Company modifying the lease from Harter to Miller, so that the royalty, instead of the usual one-eighth as therein provided, should be $\frac{3}{40}$, that is, three-fifths of one-eighth. The Linden Oil Company took a lease from George and Rebecca Harter for their two-fifths. It seems not necessary to make this statement as to the modification of the Miller lease, as Harter's $\frac{3}{40}$ of the oil is more than the $\frac{1}{32}$ of oil assigned by him to Smith and Underwood.

The conveyance by T. K. Harter of the $\frac{1}{32}$ of the oil is prior in date and prior in recordation to the conveyance of interests in the oil made by Harter to Mitchell and Fitch. The conveyances of fractions of the oil by Harter to Smith and Underwood and to Mitchell and to Fitch exceed the three-fifths of the one-eighth royalty oil going to Harter as lessor under his lease to Miller. Smith and Underwood notified the Eureka Pipe Line Company of their right to the $\frac{1}{32}$ of the oil in the two wells first to be drilled, and requested that no oil be sold from said farm until proper division orders should be made; and a second time notified the company not to sell oil until their interest or share be set apart, and required the company to render monthly statements of oil coming from those two wells.

When oil came the Linden Company gave no direction to the Pipe Line Company to account to Smith and Underwood for any share in the oil, and the Pipe Line Company would not recognize their right, but refused, alleging conflicting claim, and Smith and Underwood brought this chancery suit praying that the Linden Oil Company be compelled to turn over and deliver to them their share of the oil from those two wells, and make division orders recognizing their right to $\frac{1}{32}$ of the oil so that it might be sold, and that the Pipe Line Company render a true account of the oil run into its pipes from those wells; that a full account be had of such oil as against both companies; that the Pipe Line Company be required to show what disposition had been made of such oil, whether sold or not, and what the proceeds; that a decree be made declaring the $\frac{1}{32}$ of the oil produced from those wells, or to be produced, to be the property of Smith and Underwood; and that the companies be required to deliver to the plaintiffs their share of the oil. A decree was made declaring Smith and Underwood owners of $\frac{1}{32}$ of all oil produced from said two wells, and that it had not been accounted for, and that it had been run into the pipes of the Pipe Line Company as a common carrier of oil, that $\frac{3}{40}$ of the oil from the two wells was going to Harter, and that, out of such $\frac{3}{40}$, $\frac{1}{32}$ of all the oil should be set apart and delivered to Smith and Underwood. This decree also declared that the oil produced should be divided by the Eureka Pipe Line Company, as follows: To Smith and Underwood $\frac{2}{160}$ royalty oil; to T. K. Harter $\frac{1}{160}$ royalty oil; to George V. Harter $\frac{2}{160}$ royalty oil; and to Linden Oil Company $\frac{1}{8}$ working interest. The decree referred the case to a commissioner to report the oil from the two wells, and the daily production. The commissioner made a report, which was confirmed without exception by a later decree, holding that the total production was 15,365.68 barrels, and that $\frac{1}{8}$ of it, known as the working interest, 13,444.97 barrels, was the property of the Linden Oil Company; 480.17 barrels to Smith and Underwood; 672.25 barrels to T. K. Harter; 768.29 barrels to George V. Harter. It held that the oil of Smith and Underwood had been unlawfully detained from them, and required the Eureka Pipe Line Company to forthwith deliver to them said 480.17 barrels of oil, and place the same to their credit subject to sale by them, free of storage charges. And the decree required delivery to T. K. Harter of $\frac{1}{160}$ of the oil. The Eureka Pipe Line Company alone appeals.

The question of equity jurisdiction is raised. There can be no question here. The case is one presenting conflicting claims to royalty oil, and we have held for equity jurisdiction in such case. Peterson v. Hall, 57 W. Va. 535, 50 S. E. 603; Swearingen v. Steers, 49 W. Va. 312, 38 S. E. 510.

It seems not worthy of mention that the court overruled a demurrer to the first bill based on the absence of T. K. Harter and wife as parties, since they were made parties by an amended bill, thus curing this error, if error.

A complaint is made that the decree required the Pipe Line Company to make discovery of the oil run into its line when no officer of it was made a party capable of making discovery. This is answered by the fact that the company filed a statement of such oil, which formed the basis of the decree. The law does require that some officer be made a defendant when discovery is required, as a corporation discovers by an officer; it is a means of discovery for the plaintiff's benefit; but when the corporation does make the discovery, and it is accepted, where is the error?

It is pressed upon us strenuously that the Eureka Pipe Line Company is a common carrier; that it knows not Smith and Underwood or their rights, having no contract with them; that it contracted only with the Linden Company to receive its oil; and that Smith and Underwood must look to Harter and the Linden Company. This is a claim of nonaccountability by the Pipe Line Company to the true owner of the oil; a claim that a common carrier knows only the consignor and consignee, and cannot be called on by a third party, having true title to the goods, to recognize this right. But the authorities do not bear out this position. The carrier is bound to respond to the demand of the real owner for possession of his goods, and in so doing does not render himself liable to one who, having wrongfully obtained possession, has delivered them to the carrier for transportation. "The real owner may maintain an action against the carrier for refusal to deliver goods to which he is entitled." 6 Cyc. 471. So say Moore on Carriers, 155, and 2 Hutchinson on Carriers, § 749. The lessee in this lease stipulated to deliver the royalty oil into the pipe line to the credit of Harter. When that oil got into the pipe line it was the property of Smith and Underwood. It was by extraction made personal property, and belonged to them. It cannot be that, simply because it was in the pipes, it was beyond the reach of the true owners. Generally the true owner can get his goods. I do not see that their presence in the line took away the efficacy of the superior title, or had any peculiar virtue to absolve the carrier from accountability. The fact the premises were in the possession of the Linden Oil Company is urged as being the sole test to show that the Pipe Line Company was not bound to look further, but only to receive from it, without liability to the true owner. For this we are cited to Giffin v. South West Pipe Lines, 172 Pa. 580, 33 Atl. 578. That case will not support the possession. There the producing land was in adverse possession of one, and the Pipe Line Company received oil from him, and another claimant of the land sued the company for the value of the oil, and it was held that trover and conversion or assumpsit will not lie for a third party for oil coming from land in adverse possession. Land title cannot be so tried. The adversary title was the point denying the action.

Counsel tell us that an oil lease providing for royalty is like an agricultural lease; that the royalty is like a share of a grain crop to be paid the landlord; and that title remains in the landlord until he divides the grain and separates the landlord's part, and Harter and those under him have no title to sustain suit until the oil is separated. Now, all the oil is run into the pipe line. The lease in terms says that the royalty shall be delivered into the pipe "to the credit of the party of the first part." It provides no separate delivery, but for running the oil as a whole into the pipes. This peculiar provision distinguishes it from an agricultural lease. Delivery to the pipe line was a separation, going to the credit of the lessor gave him title.

Counsel make the point that the lease provides royalty, and the lessee had a right to pay to one hand, and cannot be called upon to split it into parts, and assign to each his part. We do not see that this is so. Why cannot the company give each credit for his share?

It is said that the carrier cannot tell just what oil comes from each well; that other wells might deposit in the tank. Oil companies have a means of telling this, and it seems that no other wells poured into these tanks. Anyhow, the Pipe Line Company did file a statement of the production from each well, which was accepted and acted on as the basis of the commissioner's report. There was no exception to it. It does not, under these circumstances, lie with the appellant to find fault in this, when the fact that it kept a record from which it filed this statement shows, not only that it was in its power to ascertain what the output of each well was, but that it did so ascertain. Fault is found by counsel in the fact that the commissioner made his report of output of oil from the statement filed by the company. The company filed it as a discovery; it was its own evidence. Besides, there was no exception to the report on this score.

Complaint is made that no storage charge was made. Its amount does not appear. But could the defendant unlawfully hold against Smith and Underwood, the true owners, deny their right, and charge storage?

It is assigned for error that the decree gives oil to T. K. Harter. We think this assignment valid. Harter, after conveying $\frac{1}{16}$ of the oil to Smith and Underwood, conveyed interests in the oil to Mitchell and Fitch, and, these conveyances having been canceled by decree in another suit, the court in this suit held that those interests reverted to Harter, and hence decreed him 672.75 barrels in oil produced and declared that he retained a certain fractional interest in the two wells. This suit cannot be held to be a partition or lien suit to settle the rights of defendants inter sese. It is a suit brought to vindicate the rights of Smith and Underwood against the Oil Company, the Pipe Line Company, and adverse claimants to oil. The relief given Harter does not grow out of relief administered the plaintiffs. Harter filed no answer, asked for nothing. This decree would prejudice the right of the Pipe Line Company as between it and Harter about a matter not cognizable in this suit.

The decree gave a money recovery to T. K. Harter against Smith and Underwood for \$295 for the deferred purchase money for the assignment by Harter to Smith and Underwood of $\frac{1}{32}$ of the oil. That is not involved in this suit. Harter did not by answer claim it, if he could have done so. This money is recoverable at law. Smith and Underwood cross-assign this as error. This decree for money does not grow out of relief administered the plaintiffs and the corporations.

We reverse the two decrees so far as they decree oil to T. K. Harter, and so far as the decree of 12 November, 1908, decrees $295 to Harter against Smith and Underwood, without prejudice to Harter touching those matters, and in other respects we affirm the decrees.

(99 W. Va. 219)

LEACH v. MARTIN.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 196*)—"FELLOW-SERVANTS."

All who serve the same master, working under the same control, deriving authority and compensation from the same source, and are engaged in the same general business, though in different grades or departments thereof, are "fellow-servants," each taking the risk of the others' negligence, except when one of them stands as the representative of the master in relation to a duty incumbent on the master toward the others.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 486; Dec. Dig. § 196.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2716-2730; vol. 8, p. 7662.]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 196*)—"FELLOW-SERVANTS."

A servant employed by a wholesale merchant in building a platform from the business house to an adjoining railway track, for the convenience of the business in transporting goods, is a fellow-servant to another of the merchant's servants who is engaged in transporting goods, to a railway car, across the space where the platform is being constructed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 486; Dec. Dig. § 196.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 173*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—FELLOW-SERVANT—INCOMPETENCY—MASTER'S KNOWLEDGE.

The master is liable for injury to the servant by the incompetency of a fellow-servant, if the master had notice of the incompetency before the injury and the injured party himself did not know of the incompetency of his fellow-servant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 343-346; Dec. Dig. § 173.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 260*)—NEGLIGENCE OF FELLOW-SERVANT—PLEADING.

In a declaration basing a cause of action against the master on the ground that he knowingly employed an incompetent servant to the injury of the plaintiff, a fellow-servant, it is not essential to aver that the plaintiff had no knowledge of the incompetency of his offending fellow-servant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 844-848; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Wood County.

Action by W. T. Leach against C. C. Martin, trading as C. C. Martin & Co. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

F. P. Moats, for plaintiff in error. Van Winkle & Ambler, for defendant in error.

ROBINSON, J. In this action for damages arising from a personal injury, the plaintiff's declaration was dismissed on demurrer. The writ of error brings up the question: Does the declaration state a good cause of action?

Defendant was carrying on a wholesale grocery business. Plaintiff, in the service of defendant, was engaged in constructing a platform to extend from defendant's business house to a railway track a few feet from the building. This platform was needed in the transaction of defendant's business, so that articles of merchandise could be conveniently received and discharged. While plaintiff was engaged on the ground in preparing a foundation for the platform, a temporary bridge was made of boards, extending from the door of the building to the door of the freight car on the railway track, and goods were being handled over this bridge by means of a truck. The work of trucking these goods was being done by another servant of defendant. He allowed some of the packages or boxes to fall from the truck and to strike plaintiff who was working below the temporary bridge in constructing the platform. Plaintiff was thereby injured, and for the injury so received he claims damages by this action.

The declaration founded on the injury stated cannot be sustained as one showing a failure on the part of the master to provide the servant a reasonably safe place in which to work. It does not sufficiently aver facts to show that there was such failure. It does not directly set forth that the temporary bridge was a defective appliance, or that the method by which goods were trucked over it made plaintiff's working place a hazardous one. For all that the declaration says, the bridge was perfectly safe and a proper handling of goods over it in no way endangered plaintiff. The real gist of the declaration is that the servant handling the goods on the bridge was an incompetent one and that his incompetency led to a negligent act on his part whereby plaintiff was injured. The declaration specifically avers the incompetency of this servant for the work in which he was employed. It also plainly avers that his incompetency caused the plaintiff's injury. It presents only a case of injury to plaintiff by a fellow-servant.

[1] Plaintiff and the servant who injured him were fellow-servants, notwithstanding the allegation that they were engaged in different departments of the master's business. The so-called department rule does not prevail in this jurisdiction. Kniceley v. Railroad Co., 64 W. Va. 278, 61 S. E. 811, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 370; Jackson v. N. & W. R. Co., 43 W. Va. 380, 27 S. E. 278, 31 S. E. 258, 46 L. R. A. 337. "The decided weight of authority is to the effect that all who serve the same master, work under the same control, deriving authority and compensation from the same source, and are engaged in the same general business, although it may be in different grades or departments of it, are fellow servants, each taking the risk of the other's negligence." 28 Cyc. 1282. [2] Though plaintiff was only engaged in making repairs or improvements so that the business of the master in which the other servant was engaged might be promoted, yet they were in a common employment, servants in the same general business. Plaintiff, we may say, was employed in the repair or improvement department of the master's mercantile business, while the other servant was engaged in the sales department. But the grades or departments in which they were employed have nothing to do with a proper test as to whether they were fellow-servants. "It has been said that the most approved test of a common employment is whether the injured servant can be said to have apprehended the possibility of injury from another servant while engaged in the service for which he hires. It is not necessary that both be engaged in the same or even similar acts, so long as the risk of injury from the one is so much a natural and necessary consequence of the employment which the other accepts that it must be included in the risks which have to be considered in his wages." McKinney on Fellow-Servants, § 13. Is the negligence of the one likely to inflict injury on the other, when both are engaged by the same master in the promotion of the same general business? If so, they are fellow-servants and the master is not liable for injury of the one by the other, unless the offending one clearly stands as the representative of the master and is acting in relation to some duty incumbent on the master toward the injured servant. When plaintiff undertook employment to build a platform for the promotion of the master's business, did he not reasonably know that other servants would be engaged near him in also promoting that business by acts and duties different from his? Did he not assume the risk of injury from the servants working in and about the store? He could not reasonably suppose that all sales and shipments would be stopped for his safety until he could complete the work he was employed to do. Risk of injury from other servants in handling goods was a necessary consequence of the employment which plaintiff accepted when he undertook to build the platform. That natural and necessary consequence defines plaintiff's employment as one of fellow-servancy with those working directly at the mercantile business, when taken in connection with the fact of a common master and the promotion of the same general business. If employees operating trains are fellow-servants of track and bridge repairers or builders, and it is well settled that they are, surely this platform builder is a fellow-servant of the employees operating the defendant's wholesale store.

[3] The declaration, however, alleges that the servant that injured plaintiff was an incompetent one and that the master had notice of the incompetency. It is distinctly averred that this incompetency caused the servant to be so negligent and careless that he injured plaintiff. The master is liable for injury to one servant by the incompetency of another, if the injury occurs after the master has had notice of the incompetency and has still retained the incompetent servant in his employment. This rule is elementary. But the point is made that the declaration fails to state that plaintiff did not know of the incompetency of the fellow-servant who injured him. [4] It is argued that the declaration does not state a cause of action because it omits to charge that plaintiff was ignorant of the incompetency while working with the fellow-servant. This argument is not tenable. That plaintiff knew of the incompetency and continued at the risk of it may be a good defense on a trial, but a negative statement in this particular is not necessary in the declaration. Hoffman v. Dickinson, 31 W. Va. 142, 6 S. E. 53; 2 Labatt on Master and Servant, § 857. The averments of the declaration relative to the incompetency of the offending servant and the injury to plaintiff which that servant inflicted by reason of his incompetency are entirely sufficient. A cause of action against the master on this score is sufficiently stated.

A further objection made to the sufficiency of the declaration is that the pleading shows that the injury came to plaintiff by his own contributory negligence. It does not appear from the averments that plaintiff was negligent in working below the bridge. Neither that structure, nor the method by which goods were taken across it, is shown to be of a character that gave notice to plaintiff that he would be injured in the handling of goods over it. It does not plainly appear that plaintiff did that which a prudent man would not do. The declaration in this particular is not bad.

The judgment of the circuit court will be reversed, the demurrer overruled, and the case remanded.

(68 W. Va. 562)

HENDERSON v. HENRIE.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Jan. 31, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 39*) — CONTRACTS ENFORCEABLE—VERBAL CONTRACT FOR SALE OF REALTY.

A court of equity will not decree specific performance of a verbal contract for the sale of real estate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 114-119; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

2. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 63*) — CONTRACT FOR SALE OF EQUITABLE ESTATE.

A contract for the sale of an equitable estate is within the statute of frauds.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. §§ 97-104; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

3. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 142*) — VERBAL CONTRACT.

To enable a court of equity to exclude a verbal contract of sale of land from the operation of said statute, there must be a collateral circumstance, constituting an independent equity, imposing an obligation in conscience.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. § 343; Dec. Dig. § 142.*]

4. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 142*) — VERBAL CONTRACT FOR SALE OF LAND.

Mere breach of an oral agreement does not constitute such an equity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. § 343; Dec. Dig. § 142.*]

5. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 74*) — VERBAL AGREEMENT FOR SALE OF LAND.

A verbal agreement between two bidders for land at a judicial sale, each desiring a portion thereof, to the effect that the successful bidder will allow the other to take and pay for the portion he desires, is, in substance and effect, a contract for the sale of land, and unenforceable; the successful bidder having paid for all of the land, and the unsuccessful bidder not having paid for the portion it was agreed he should have, though prevented from doing so by breach of the agreement on the part of the other.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Dec. Dig. § 74.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

6. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 63*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF TRUSTS AND CONFIDENCES.

The ninth section of the English statute of frauds, requiring assignments of trusts and confidences to be in writing, is not in force in West Virginia.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Wood County.

Action by Jock B. Henderson against James M. Henrie and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and the mentioned defendant appeals. Reversed and dismissed.

McCluer & McCluer, for appellant. V. B. Archer and Wm. H. Wolfe, Jr., for appellee.

POFFENBARGER, J. The general nature of the contract involved in this cause is set forth in the report of a former decision here, on another appeal, found in 61 W. Va. 183, 56 S. E. 369. This appeal is from a final decree, requiring Henrie to convey to Henderson a portion of the land purchased by him at the judicial sale, by way of specific performance of the verbal agreement constituting the basis of the suit.

The former decision disposes of the charge of illegality or invalidity of the contract, as alleged, on the ground of fraud or inhibition by public policy; and the remaining argument against the sufficiency of the bill, namely, that it does not allege irreparable injury, is wholly inapplicable; the legal remedy for breach of a contract to convey land being obviously inadequate, and the law affording no remedy at all for enforcement of a trust. Hence the demurrer was properly overruled.

The vital inquiry is the character of the contract, viewed in the light of the statute of frauds, relied upon in a plea to the bill—a question neither raised nor considered on the former appeal, involving only the ruling on a motion to dissolve an injunction, made in vacation. At that time no demurrer, plea, or answer had been filed. The contract is verbal, and prior in date to the purchase by the defendant. The plaintiff, though willing to pay, or, to be strictly accurate, repay, a portion of the purchase money, and claiming the right to do so, has in fact paid nothing at all, and title has vested in the defendant. At the date of the making of the agreement, neither party had any interest whatever in the land, either legal or equitable, and there was no copartnership relation. Each was to take and hold a portion of the land. In bidding, each acted for himself and as agent of the other at the same time; the action in one capacity relating to one portion of the land, and in the other to the residue thereof.

The basis of the cause of action, as disclosed by this inquiry and analysis, seems to be the oral agreement, and nothing more. We perceive nothing of a collateral nature, constituting an independent equity, such as payment of purchase money; a prior interest in the land, not released; lack of consideration moving from the grantee, accompanied by an agreement to take mere legal title as a necessary step in the execution of some plan or purpose previously agreed upon; or a copartnership, covering the subject-matter of the conveyance. Such an equity seems to be essential to the establishment of a trust or immunity of a contract of sale of land from the inhibition of the statute of frauds. In Floyd v. Duffy, 69 S. E. 993, we said, speaking of certain provisions of that statute: "These provisions absolutely prevent the acquisition of any estate in land for more than five years by means of a mere verbal contract. There must be something more—an equity outside and independent of, or in addition to, the contract. * * * By the great weight of authority, if not, indeed, by all courts, an agreement on the part of one purchasing land with his own money, and taking the conveyance in his own name, to hold it in trust for another person, or to convey it to the grantor, is within the statute of frauds." In resulting trusts, the basis of the equity is the payment of money. In those instances in which deeds, absolute on their faces, are construed and enforced as mortgages, the antecedent interest in the land lies at the bottom of the equity. In cases of voluntary conveyances for specific purposes, the fraud of the grantee is the circumstance imposing an obligation in conscience. To apply the statute under such circumstances would allow the grantee to obtain the land for nothing, defeat the meritorious purpose of the conveyance, and make the statute an instrument of fraud, contrary to legislative design. As copartnership is a confidential relation, and there is a joint interest in firm assets, a conveyance to one member, under a purchase with partnership funds, creates a constructive or resulting trust; the confidential relation constituting the ground of equity. In cases of exception, on the ground of part performance, the altered situation of the vendee, in reliance upon the contract, working irreparable injury, constitutes the independent equity. In parol gifts of land, enforceable, the equitable foundation is the same.

No precedent or declaration of principle by this court is broad enough to except this agreement from the operation of the statute. The decisions making the nearest approach to it are Currence v. Ward, 43 W. Va. 367, 27 S. E. 329, and Hamilton v. McKinney, 52 W. Va. 317, 43 S. E. 82, but the cestui que trust in the former had an antecedent interest in the land, being an unfortunate debtor, for whose benefit another had purchased it at judicial sale; and, in the latter, the plaintiff had paid a portion of the purchase money. Some of the language in the opinions in both cases may be broader than the view here expressed, and unnecessarily so, since the facts established in each brought it within the limits here fixed. However that may be, the broad terms there used must be read and considered in the light of the facts, since the court cannot be deemed to have intended to assert anything beyond the equities and requirements of the particular cases. Ordinarily anything additional would be regarded as obiter dicta, having only persuasive influence, and rejected for unsoundness, if unable to stand the test of logic and the application of general legal principles, and particularly so, if in conflict with express decisions and the general current of authority, applicable to the precise question. Taken as a whole, the opinion in Currence v. Ward asserts and applies sound propositions of law. One part must not be taken to the exclusion of others. By the terms of the contract, Currence retained his equity of redemption. Between him and the Wards, the relation of debtor and creditor was established and continued. He paid money under that contract. His real status was that of mortgagor. Judge Brannon is not to be regarded as having attempted to state all the law of the case in any single sentence.

The assertions in Floyd v. Duffy that an agreement, valid in law, is valid in equity, and one, not valid in law, will not be enforced in equity, and that equitable title to land must rest upon something more than a mere verbal contract, are in perfect accord with almost uniform authority everywhere, and not in conflict with any actual decision of this court. Our decisions, properly analyzed and understood, will verify this statement. In every instance of exclusion from the statute, an independent equity has been found. Floyd v. Duffy, supra; Bond v. Taylor, 69 S. E. 1000; Johnson v. Ludwick, 58 W. Va. 464, 52 S. E. 459; Ratliff v. Sommers, 55 W. Va. 30, 46 S. E. 712; Moore v. Mustoe, 47 W. Va. 549, 35 S. E. 871, 81 Am. St. Rep. 812; Boyd v. Brown, 47 W. Va. 238, 34 S. E. 907; Myers v. Myers, 47 W. Va. 487, 35 S. E. 868; Harris v. Elliott, 45 W. Va. 245, 32 S. E. 176; Currence v. Ward, 43 W. Va. 367, 27 S. E. 329; Marshall v. Hall, 42 W. Va. 641, 26 S. E. 300; Webb v. Bailey, 41 W. Va. 463, 23 S. E. 644; Deck v. Tabler, 41 W. Va. 332, 23 S. E. 721, 56 Am. St. Rep. 837; Seller v. Mohn, 37 W. Va. 507, 16 S. E. 496; Frame v. Frame, 32 W. Va. 463, 9 S. E. 901, 5 L. R. A. 323; McClintock v. Loiseau, 31 W. Va. 865, 8 S. E. 612, 2 L. R. A. 816; Shaffer v. Petty, 30 W. Va. 248, 4 S. E. 278; Kimmins v. Oldham, 27 W. Va. 258; Tichenell v. Jackson, 26 W. Va. 460; Hefskell v. Powell, 23 W. Va. 717; Murry v. Sell, 23 W. Va. 475; Hamilton v. Steele, 22 W. Va. 349; Renick v. Ludington, 20 W. Va. 511; Campbell v. Fetterman, 20 W. Va. 398; Middleton v. Selby, 19 W. Va. 167; Pack v. Hansbarger, 17 W. Va. 313; Snyder v. Martin, 17 W. Va. 276, 41 Am. Rep. 670; Troll v. Carter, 15 W. Va. 567; W. Va., etc., Co. v. Vinal, 14 W. Va. 687; Tracy v. Tracy, 14 W. Va. 243; Smith v. Patton, 12 W. Va. 541; Vickers v. Slason's Adm'r, 10 W. Va. 12; Lowry v. Buffington, 6 W. Va. 249; Capehart v. Hale, 6 W. Va. 547; Pumphry v. Brown, 5 W. Va. 107; Hardman v. Orr, 5 W. Va. 71; Hedrick v. Hern, 4 W. Va. 620.

Seeking the limitation, as indicated by decisions denying exception or exclusion, we find it in perfect harmony with these propositions. Henderson v. Hudson, 1 Munf. (Va.) 510; Jarrett v. Johnson, 11 Grat. (Va.) 327; Nash v. Jones, 41 W. Va. 769, 24 S. E. 592. In all these cases claims for relief in equity, resting upon mere verbal contracts, and nothing more, have been denied, without reference to the forms of such contracts or the relations of the parties; the contracts relied upon being substantially for the sale of real estate. In the first two claims of joint purchase were rejected, and in the other a claim of purchase by an agent; the alleged principal having paid none of the purchase money. Sugden on Vendors, vol. 2, top page. Section 15, c. 21, saying: "Where a man merely employs another person by parol, as an agent to buy an estate, who buys it for himself and denies the trust, and no part of the purchase money is paid by the principal, and there is no written agreement, he cannot compel the agent to convey the estate to him, as that would be directly in the teeth of the statute of frauds"—is sustained by a vast array of authority. We observe the same as to the text in 29 A. & E. Enc. Law, 899, saying: "It is equally well settled that agreements for joint purchases of land, not for the purpose of speculation, whether the title is taken in the name of one for the benefit of all or in the individual names of the parties, are within the statute, and are required to be in writing."

Joint purchases of land are sometimes upheld as having been made in pursuance of an existing partnership or an agreement for one; the relation of copartnership constituting the essential equitable circumstance attending the verbal contract (Floyd v. Duffy, supra; Bond v. Taylor, supra; 20 Cyc. 237); but we have here not a particle of evidence of such a relation or agreement.

The suggestion of immunity from the statute, on the ground that the contract was made before the defendant acquired the legal title and was recognized by him, while holding the equitable title only, founded upon expressions in Currence v. Ward and Hamilton v. McKinney, is wholly untenable, in view of the application of the statute of frauds to equitable estates. See 20 Cyc. 230, and 29 A. & E. Enc. Law, 888, citing numerous decisions holding it to be applicable to such interests. I have found no Virginia or West Virginia decisions to the same effect, and the ninth section of the English statute, requiring assignments of trusts and confidences to be in writing, is not in force here; but equitable estates are regarded in these states as having about all the incidents of legal ones. 2 Min. Inst. 195, 196; 1 Lomax, Dig. 277. They are regarded and dealt with as real estate. In some of the states said section may be, and no doubt is, in force. In view of this, our holding as to that question would not necessarily have to harmonize with those of such other states. However, as equitable titles are here regarded as land and estates of inheritance, they fall within both the terms and policy of section 1, c. 71, and subsection 6 of section 1, c. 98, of the Code. That these statutes are broad enough to reach them is suggested in 1 Lomax, Dig. 278.

Under these principles and conclusions, we reverse the decree, dismiss the bill, and decree to the appellant his costs in the court below, as well as in this court.

WILLIAMS, P., absent.

(69 W. Va. 18)

RIEDEL v. WHEELING TRACTION CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
March 7, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. STREET RAILROADS (§ 85*)—OPERATION—CARE REQUIRED.

Street railways and pedestrians have equal right to the use of the public street crossings, and the law enjoins upon both the exercise of reasonable care and caution.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 193, 195; Dec. Dig. § 85.*]

2. STREET RAILROADS (§ 81*)—OPERATION—SPEED OF CARS.

Unless a street railway company is expressly permitted by law to run its cars over the streets of a city at a high rate of speed, the speed should not be greater than is reasonable and consistent with the safe use of the streets by the public.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 172-177; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

3. STREET RAILROADS (§ 114*)—OPERATION—ACTION FOR INJURIES—EVIDENCE.

If a street railway is not expressly permitted by law to run its cars over the streets of a city at a high rate of speed, it is evidence of negligence, if it operates its cars at so great a speed as not to be able to stop them readily, and within reasonable distance, when approaching a public street crossing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 239-250; Dec. Dig. § 114.*]

4. STREET RAILROADS (§ 117*)—OPERATION—INJURIES AT CROSSING—QUESTION FOR JURY.

A traveler on the streets of a city has a right to assume that street cars will not be run at an excessive rate of speed; and if a car running at a high rate of speed collide with a traveler at a public crossing, whereby the traveler is injured, it is for the jury to say, under all the facts in the case, whether or not the street railway company is negligent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 239-257; Dec. Dig. § 117.*]

5. STREET RAILROADS (§ 103*)—OPERATION—INJURIES AT CROSSING—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

If plaintiff is guilty of negligence which might have produced his injury, but before the injury actually results the defendant is guilty of negligence which is the immediate cause of the injury, the negligence of defendant becomes, in law, the sole proximate cause of the injury, even though no injury could have resulted to plaintiff, if he had not been originally negligent. The negligence of defendant, supervening between the original negligence of plaintiff and the happening of the injury, destroys the legal force of plaintiff's negligence as a contributing cause to the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 219; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Marshall County.

Action by Louisa Riedel against the Wheeling Traction Company. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded for new trial.

See, also, 63 W. Va. 522, 61 S. E. 821, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1123.

J. Howard Holt and Martin Brown, for plaintiff in error. W. A. Duggan, C. C. Newman, and Wm. Erskine, for defendant in error.

WILLIAMS, P. Defendant operates an electric car line between the cities of Wheeling and Benwood, and through Benwood. Plaintiff attempted to cross defendant's tracks at a public street crossing in Benwood, and was run over by defendant's car, and was maimed. She brought an action against the defendant for negligently causing her injury. Defendant offered no evidence, and on its motion the court struck out plaintiff's evidence, and directed a verdict for the defendant, and entered final judgment in its favor. Plaintiff has brought the case here on writ of error. Defendant insists that plaintiff's evidence proves such contributory negligence as precludes a recovery.

The proof is that plaintiff was about 41 years of age, strong, and in good health, at the time of the accident; that about 4 or 5 o'clock on the 11th of April, 1906, she left her home to go to Dolan's store on the southeast corner of McMechen and Sixth streets; that she came to McMechen street by way of an alley which intersects it some distance north of Sixth street crossing, and followed down McMechen street, on the west side thereof, to Sixth street crossing, and left the sidewalk at the intersection of the streets and started diagonally across the street; that when she was almost across defendant's track she was struck by a south-bound electric car, running at the rate of 15 or 20 miles an hour, and was thrown forward upon the track a distance of some 12 or 15 feet, and the wheels of the car passed over her leg, and cut it off; that from the time she came upon McMechen street, until she reached the point where she left the sidewalk to cross diagonally over the intersection of McMechen and Sixth streets, she was going southward, with her back toward the car which was coming in the same direction; that after leaving the sidewalk, and when at a point about midway between the curb and the car tracks, she glanced back over her shoulder, to see if there was an approaching car, and saw none. But it appears from other facts proven that the car must then have been visible to her, and not far away, and that if she had looked straight up the tracks, instead of diagonally across, she could have seen it. She also testifies that she heard no car. Benwood is a manufacturing town, in which are located a number of iron mills, which produce a great deal of noise when in operation. The tracks of the Baltimore &

Ohio Railway are not far away from McMechen street, and when its trains are moving makes a good deal of noise. Two or three eyewitnesses to the accident testify that the motorman could easily have seen plaintiff in her perilous situation, if he had been looking out for pedestrians at the crossing.

Witness McCabe, who was standing on the southwest corner of the street crossing, says he saw the car coming when it was about 15 yards from the crossing; that at the same time he saw it he also saw the motorman, and that he was looking in the direction of witness; that plaintiff was then out in the street, going in the direction of the tracks. According to this testimony, plaintiff must have been almost in a direct line of the motorman's vision, walking diagonally towards the track, with her back rather toward the motorman, and it is difficult to understand how he could have failed to see her. The proof is that he sounded no alarm, and made no effort to stop or check the speed of the car, until after he had struck plaintiff. It does not appear that there is any municipal ordinance regulating the speed of defendant's cars in passing over the streets of Benwood. It is also proven that the car, running at the rate of 15 miles an hour could have been stopped within the distance of 45 feet.

Upon this state of facts, can it be said, as matter of law, that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence? If it can, then the judgment of the lower court is right, and it should be affirmed; but, if not, then the question should have been submitted to the jury, and the judgment is erroneous.

There was a former trial of this case, which was reviewed on writ of error to this court, and will be found reported in 63 W. Va. 522, 61 S. E. 821, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1123. It was first tried upon conflicting testimony; but the case is now before us upon different evidence, which presents facts which, according to the report of the former decision, did not then appear. The case is now to be reviewed upon the uncontradicted testimony of plaintiff and her witnesses, which the lower court held not sufficient to warrant a recovery in her favor. We cannot look to the testimony of witnesses on the former trial for any purpose.

Granting that plaintiff was negligent in the first instance in not taking reasonable precaution to ascertain whether a car was approaching, before she attempted to cross the tracks, still it does not follow that such negligence was the proximate cause of her injury. If the defendant was guilty of a subsequent act of negligence, either in the omission of a duty or in the commission of a wrongful act, such supervening negligence becomes, in law, the proximate cause of the injury, and plaintiff's prior negligence will not defeat her recovery. "It is now perfectly well settled that the plaintiff may recover damages for an injury caused by the defendant's negligence, notwithstanding the plaintiff's own negligence exposed him to the risk of injury, if such injury was more immediately caused by the defendant's omission, after becoming aware of the plaintiff's danger, to use ordinary care for the purpose of avoiding injury to him." 1 Shear. & Red. on Negligence, § 99.

The rights of the traction company to the use of the street at the crossing is not superior to the rights of pedestrians. Their rights at that point are equal; and the law requires that both shall exercise reasonable care. The law does not apply the same rule in determining the relative rights between a street car company and other persons in the use of a public street crossing that it applies in case of a steam railroad crossing a public highway. The rights of the former are more analogous to the rights of ordinary vehicles. 2 Shear. & Red. on Negligence, § 485a, and numerous cases cited in the notes; Richmond, etc., Co. v. Garthright, 92 Va. 627, 24 S. E. 267, 32 L. R. A. 220, 53 Am. St. Rep. 839; Bass' Adm'r v. Norfolk, etc., Co., 100 Va. 1, 40 S. E. 100; Richmond Traction Co. v. Clarke, 101 Va. 382, 43 S. E. 618.

Plaintiff's negligence in failing to observe the approaching car would not excuse defendant from the duty of exercising reasonable care to avoid doing her injury. If the motorman saw plaintiff in her perilous situation, or if he could have seen her by the exercise of reasonable caution, and could thereafter have avoided the accident by sounding the alarm, or by checking the speed of the car, and failed to do so, then his failure to do so was a supervening, independent act, or acts, of negligence which were the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. The defendant's negligence is therefore a mixed question of law and fact, properly to be determined by the jury, upon proper instructions. If the case had been submitted to them, they would certainly have been warranted in finding, from the testimony of the witnesses, that defendant's motorman was guilty of negligence after he saw, or should have seen, plaintiff's danger. This fact established, the law is that it, and not the plaintiff's original negligence, was the proximate cause of the injury. Plaintiff was struck just as she was passing beyond the farthest rail of the track, and if the motorman had checked his car ever so little, if he had delayed it even the fractional part of a second, it is highly probable that plaintiff's body would have cleared the track, and she would not have been hurt; or, if he had sounded the alarm and given her warning, she might have quickened her pace, and thus have avoided the collision.

But it is insisted that plaintiff's negligence, if not the sole proximate cause of her injury, at least combined with defendant's negligence to produce it, and that therefore she cannot recover. Such is the law, if such were the fact. 1 Shear. & Red. on Negligence, § 93; Eastburn v. Railway Co., 34 W. Va. 681, 12 S. E. 819; Carrico v. Railway Co., 39 W. Va. 86, 19 S. E. 571, 24 L. R. A. 50; Humphrey's Adm'r v. Railway Co., 100 Va. 749, 42 S. E. 882. But such is not the fact, as it appears from the only evidence before us—the undisputed testimony of plaintiff and her witnesses. The negligence of plaintiff and that of defendant's motorman were separate and independent of each other; and the motorman's negligence was later in time, and the last to occur before the accident. It was therefore necessarily the proximate cause of the injury, unless it had been shown that, after discovering plaintiff's danger, he used reasonable care to avoid the collision, and was, nevertheless, unable to avoid it. In view of the respective rights of the parties to the use of the street crossing, it was the duty of the motorman to have approached the crossing with reasonable precaution, and to have kept a lookout for pedestrians at that point. His negligence in not sounding an alarm, and in not making an effort to stop the car, is not in any way related to plaintiff's negligence in attempting to cross the street ahead of the car; and the legal effect of it, as constituting the proximate cause of the injury, depends upon whether he exercised reasonable diligence to avoid a collision with plaintiff, after he should have seen her danger. Its relation to the cause of the accident depends upon his duties and his opportunities, one a question of law and the other a fact for the jury. After plaintiff had failed in her duty to use reasonable precaution the motorman later, according to the testimony, failed in his duty which, if it had been performed, might have prevented the injury.

The law applicable to actions involving both negligence and contributory negligence is clearly stated in point 6 of the syllabus in Washington v. Railroad Co., 17 W. Va. 190, as follows, viz.: "It is therefore not contributory negligence for the plaintiff to be guilty of a negligent act, which might have produced the injury, if, before it actually results, the defendant is guilty of some negligent act which was the immediate cause of the injury, even though no damage could have resulted to the plaintiff, had he not been originally negligent." See, also, Richmond Traction Co. v. Clarke, 101 Va. 382, 43 S. E. 618; Grand Trunk Railway Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 12 Sup. Ct. 679, 36 L. Ed. 485; Inland, etc., Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 11 Sup. Ct. 653, 35 L. Ed. 270. This principle seems to have been first announced by the English Court of Exchequer, in the case of Davies v. Mann, decided in 1842, 10 M. & Wel., side page 546. That was an action brought for the negligent killing of an ass, which the owner suffered to be in the public highway, with his front feet hobbled together, and which a driver carelessly ran into with his wagon and horses. The court there held that the plaintiff's negligence in-suffering the animal to be in the public highway, thus hobbled, did not preclude him from recovery, if the defendant carelessly caused the death of the animal. That case has been almost universally followed by the courts of this country as the law. 1 Shear. & Red. on Negligence, § 99.

In view of the uncontradicted testimony of witnesses, proving negligence of defendant's motorman, it cannot be said, as matter of law, that plaintiff's negligence was the proximate cause of her injury, or that it combined with defendant's negligence as the proximate cause. The trial court erred in excluding plaintiff's evidence and directing a verdict for the defendant.

The judgment will be reversed, the verdict set aside, and the case remanded for a new trial.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(69 W. Va. 260)

STATE v. POE.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 940*)—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS—CONFESSION OF OTHER THAN ACCUSED.

Evidence that a person made a statement that he, and not the accused, committed the crime, would not be admissible on a trial of the accused, and therefore is not ground for a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2324-2327; Dec. Dig. § 940.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 958*)—NEW TRIAL—PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE—SUFFICIENCY OF MOVING PAPERS.

On motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence, the affidavit of the new witness showing to what he will testify must be produced, or good excuse shown for its absence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2401; Dec. Dig. § 958.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Taylor County.

Burt Poe was convicted of stabbing another, and he brings error. Affirmed.

Sommerville & Sommerville, for plaintiff in error. Wm. G. Conley, Atty. Gen., and G. W. Ford, Pros. Atty., for the State.

BRANNON, J. Burt Poe was indicted for stabbing William A. Rogers and was convicted by a jury, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years.

Poe made a motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence; but he does not rely upon that in this court. There is a large volume of conflicting evidence, and it is useless to say anything more as to this.

The only point relied upon here is the refusal of the court to grant a new trial on newly discovered evidence. This motion was based on two affidavits. Poe's affidavit says that he has learned from a good, reliable, and creditable source that Joseph Shackelford will testify upon retrial that he was present during the difficulty between W. A. Rogers and Poe, and saw Luther Rogers cut and stab W. A. Rogers. Poe does not name the good, reliable, and creditable source of such information, unless it be Benjamin F. Bailey. Poe's affidavit says that he had tried to get an eyewitness to the trouble, and that his first information that an eyewitness to the crime could be produced was given him by Benjamin F. Bailey, his attorney. Is Bailey the person who gave him this information? If he is not, then the affidavit is fatally defective in not naming the person who gave him information that Shackelford would so testify. It is a prime necessity that the person should be named, and should have talked with the proposed witness.

[2] Is a court to turn down a verdict upon the mere statement of a prisoner that he has received information that a witness would say so and so, when he does not state who so informed him? He does not state that he ever talked with Shackelford, and he does not give the name of the person who informed him that Shackelford would give such evidence. Where is Shackelford? He must be in that country, because Poe's affidavit says on another trial he can prove certain things by Shackelford. Why is Shackelford's affidavit not produced? Our case of Jacobs v. Williams, 67 W. Va. 377, 67 S. E. 1113, demands that the affidavit of the new witness showing what he will testify must be produced, or good excuse shown for its absence. So State v. Stowers, 66 W. Va. 198, 66 S. E. 323. He must produce the affidavit of the witnesses, or, if that be impracticable, the affidavit of some one who has conversed with them showing what facts they would state. Brown v. Speyers, 20 Grat. (Va.) 290; Nuckolls v. Jones, 8 Grat. (Va.) 267. Poe does not say he talked with Shackelford, nor does any one else. Benjamin F. Bailey made an affidavit stating that he was standing in front of the post office, "and a thoroughly reliable citizen, who is acquainted with all the parties concerned in the above prosecution, approached affiant, and inquired about the status of the above case. Affiant fully advised him of the exact status, and he proceeded to advise affiant in regard to evidence that can be secured that affiant never heard of before the trial. And affiant further says that the substance of information given him is as follows: That Joseph Shackelford will testify that he saw Luther Rogers cut and stab W. A. Rogers; that affiant's informant advised him that Ford went home with said Rogers, and fully advised him that Luther Rogers was the party who committed the crime—cut and stabbed him." Who is that thoroughly reliable citizen? The affidavit does not tell us. But the law says that Shackelford's affidavit must be produced, or the affidavit, not merely an unsworn statement, of somebody who talked with him stating that Shackelford would give such evidence. If Bailey is the one who gave Poe information, Bailey's affidavit is in itself insufficient, and neither he nor Bailey tells us who it was that talked with Shackelford. Under these and many other authorities, these affidavits are wholly inadequate to overturn the verdict. It is an established rule to grant new trials very rarely on after-discovered evidence, and never but under very special circumstances.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes
71 S.E.—12

[1] Another ground is presented to us for a new trial. On the hearing of the motion Mary A. Rogers, mother of Luther Rogers, gave oral evidence that her son Luther confessed to her that he cut W. A. Rogers, and that Poe did not do so. That is mere hearsay. Is the confession of an outside party that he committed a murder charged to another admissible? Surely not. Can such a hearsay statement acquit a prisoner on trial? We find it stated in 6 Ency. of Evidence, 752, that, "neither the extrajudicial admissions or confessions of third persons, though made as dying declarations, nor their acts and conduct in the nature of admission, are admissible to show that they and not the defendant are guilty of the homicide charged." Many cases from other states are there cited and support the text. We find in the case of Greenfield v. People, 85 N. Y. 75, 39 Am. Rep. 636, that a letter written by another to a third person containing admissions that the writer committed the murder is incompetent evidence for the prisoner, and so of like conversation overheard between other persons. The Supreme Court of Georgia in a note found in said American Report ridiculed such propositions. Luther Rogers was present when his mother gave this testimony on the motion for a new trial, and said nothing. He did not corroborate his mother. He was not called to state that he could, or would, give such evidence. He did not so state under oath or even make an unsworn statement that he could or would give such evidence. The cutting was at a gathering at a schoolhouse on the occasion of a Christmas tree, and numerous persons present, yet none of the many witnesses hint that Luther Rogers did the act. Luther Rogers was arrested, and on legal examination on the charge was discharged. Can it be expected that he would on a retrial give evidence to send himself to the penitentiary? He could not be forced to do so. That confession would not be evidence, and we have no assurance that he would give evidence to send himself to the penitentiary. Shall we set aside a verdict on a such a ground? This application for a new trial does not bear the hue of candor and sincerity, but seems to rest on fabrication. It does not appeal to a court of justice. Solemn verdicts in criminal cases cannot be overturned thus. For a court to do this would seem to be a travesty on criminal justice. Luther Rogers is a mere boy. His mother's evidence bears on its face plain evidence of her zeal for Poe, and is suspicious on its face. Wonderful that a mother would make such a statement. Her evidence shows her to be ignorant and uncultivated.

Judgment affirmed.

(69 W. Va. 228)

HARVEY COAL & COKE CO. v. CHESAPEAKE & O. RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia. April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

RAILROADS (§ 443*)—INJURY TO ANIMALS ON TRACK—EVIDENCE.

Judgment below reversed, verdict set aside, and a new trial awarded for want of sufficient evidence showing actionable negligence of defendant in killing plaintiff's mules. Applying Toudy v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 38 W. Va. 694, 18 S. E. 896; and Lovejoy v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 41 W. Va. 693, 24 S. E. 599.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1606-1620; Dec. Dig. § 443.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Fayette County.

Action by the Harvey Coal & Coke Company against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Simms, Enslow, Fitzpatrick & Baker, for plaintiff in error. Dillon & Nuckolls, for defendant in error.

MILLER, J. The verdict and judgment below, on appeal, by defendant, from the judgment of a justice, was for three hundred dollars, interest and costs, damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff, by the killing by defendant of a pair of mules astray on its railway tracks.

All questions of error presented are covered by defendant's motion, denied by the court below, to set aside the verdict and grant it a new trial.

The sole question is, was the law properly applied, and the verdict warranted by the facts proven? The complaint was that defendant negligently ran over and killed the mules, in the early morning of January 18, 1909. The facts proven are, that plaintiff owned and operated a coal mine on the Loop Creek branch of defendant's railway, in Fayette County. It employed mules and kept them in its stable, located on the side of the railway opposite the mine, and from seventy to ninety feet distant therefrom, and about three hundred feet west of a public road crossing the track, and about four hundred feet west of a curve in the track going up the creek. The stable and any object on the track opposite it could be seen in the day time by trainmen, after rounding the curve going west. The mine was usually reached from the stable by following a road way along the defendant's right of way leading to the public road, and then crossing over the track on the public road. Sometimes, however, drivers crossed the track directly opposite the stable. On this morning, Roach had gone to the stable, a little after seven o'clock, gotten the mules, and had started to the mine in the usual way, but was called back by the stable boss to take along another team of mules for another driver, who was late. Roach left his mules, unguarded and unhitched, standing in front of the stable, while he went around on the side of the stable to get his dinner bucket and lamp. Left alone as they were, the mules went directly to the track, got on it and started up the track in the direction of the public road and the approaching engine, when they were almost instantly hit and killed by the locomotive, in charge of an engineer and fireman, running at the rate of about eight miles an hour. Roach says, the mules started right across in front of the train, had just got on and started up the track, about fifteen feet, when the engine struck them; and they were almost instantly killed. This witness did not see the engine hit the mules; he was watching the engine, he says, and waving his light to make them stop. He swears that when he came around in front of the stable the engine was on the crossing where he could see it, and that he waved his light at them; that if the engineer had been looking down the track when he waved his light, he could have seen the mules. But he does not say the mules were then on the track. Cumbo, another driver, and a witness for plaintiff, says: The mules went straight across from the stable, and that about fifty feet up from where they got on the track they were struck by the engine. He was standing just opposite the point on the track where the engine hit the mules. He says, he could plainly see the engine from the point where he was standing, that it was light enough to see. He thinks the engineer could and should have seen the mules; but he admits that, standing right opposite, and within fifty feet of the place where the engine hit the mules, and saw them start across the track, he did not watch them on the track, as he thought the driver was with them. If in such close proximity, he did not see, or thought the mules were in charge of the driver, should not the engineer and fireman be excused, for not observing the mules on the track without driver? Dixon, superintendent of plaintiff's mines, who measured the distance, says that it was from two hundred to two hundred and fifty feet west of the public crossing to the point where the mules were killed, seven rail lengths from the frog.

And he would think, he says, that an engineer ought to be able to see from two to two hundred and fifty feet before reaching that point. This witness was asked by plaintiff's counsel, whether he knew within what distance an engineer could stop a single engine, without cars, going at the rate of six or eight miles an hour, and he answered that he did; but for some reason he was not asked to state the distance. It plainly appears from all the evidence, though the witnesses do not exactly agree as to the distance from the public road, that the mules were struck by the engine at from fifteen to fifty feet from the point where they went on defendant's track.

The only evidence offered by defendant, was that of Neil, the engineer, and R. L. Dixon, the brakeman or fireman, in charge of the engine. Neil says, referring to the mules, "They were right in front of the stable." "We were coming in that morning just about 6:45, about that time, and the brakeman called my attention that way. I had struck something, and I blew the whistle for the station, and just as I blew the whistle, the brakeman caught me by the arm and said I had struck something." He also says, that he was in his proper place, looking out ahead, and that he did not see the mules, and as a reason for not seeing them, further says: "Well, there were a good many miners down there with bank lamps on, between the railroad and the stable and it seems to me from where the first mule was laying, they come right up behind this trestle that they use to haul feed down to the stable on and they were struck just as they were crossing the track." He states, moreover, that the morning was dark and smoky from the coke ovens, that it was just before day; that the cut east of the crossing was about three hundred and fifty feet from where the mules were killed; that the curve was to the left, and he on the right side of the engine going west, and his vision thereby obstructed. His head light was not a very good one, but he says he does not think that a good one would have enabled him to see much better on account of the miners' lights, as they blinded him. He could see, he thinks, about one hundred feet ahead of his engine, and the fireman about the same distance. Dixon, the fireman, says: "I was looking out for obstructions. * * * I saw the mules just before we hit them. * * * I could not tell you whether they were standing still or coming ahead, or what they were doing. It was dark, and the light from the coke ovens was shining over there right in my face." Asked how far away the mules were when he first saw them, he says: "They were ten or fifteen feet to the best of my knowledge." Considerable reliance is placed by plaintiff on the testimony of this witness on cross-examination, which implies that the mules had gone up the track to within fifty feet of the crossing, when they were struck by the engine, that is that they had traveled from the point where they went on the track, opposite the stable, up the track about two hundred and fifty feet; thereby disagreeing with all the plaintiff's witnesses, and the testimony of the engineer, who says the mules were struck just as they were crossing the track. The witness had been asked: "How far from the stable up toward the crossing were the mules hit?" He evidently meant to say about fifty feet; but whatever the fact may be, he does say that he is not sure about this statement. But if the fact was, that the mules were struck within so short a distance from the railroad crossing, we do not see that this fact would make a better case for plaintiff. It would destroy very much the force of the testimony of its witnesses, to the effect that the mules could have been seen for a distance of three hundred feet from the crossing, before they were hit by the engine.

In our view of this evidence it wholly fails to make out a case of negligence, and liability on the part of the defendant company. In what particular does it show defendant negligent? The testimony of the plaintiff's own witnesses is that the mules went directly from the stable onto the track, and in front of the engine, and were struck within fifteen to fifty feet from the place where they got on the track. Even if the trainmen could have seen, or did see the mules in front of the stable, or going in the direction of the track, they may have thought, as did witness Cumbo, who was within fifty feet of them, that they were in charge of the driver, and would be taken care of; and that plaintiff's own servants, standing at the stable, in plain sight of the approaching engine, would not allow them to go upon the track and be killed. We judicially know that it is still dark at 6:45 or 7:00 o'clock a. m. in the month of January. We are persuaded also that the light and smoke from the coke ovens, and the miners' lights, were well calculated to confuse and obscure the vision of the trainmen at that early hour. It would be carrying the doctrine of negligence very far, we think, to hold the defendant liable on this evidence. We think the case one of inevitable accident, and that it is controlled in its facts, and the legal principles applicable, by Toudy v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 38 W. Va. 694, 18 S. E. 896; Lovejoy v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 41 W. Va. 693, 24 S. E. 599, and other cases. The rules and principles of these cases require a reversal of the judgment below, and the awarding of a new trial to defendant.

It is urged by the defendant that, as the court below denied its motion to exclude plaintiff's evidence, and rejected its instruction number one to the jury to find for the defendant, which was error, we should enter judgment here for the defendant, notwithstanding the verdict. But we can not clearly see that a different case may not be made on a new trial. In such cases our practice, declared in recent decisions, is to simply reverse the judgment below, and award a new trial. Accordingly, the judgment below will be reversed and a new trial awarded.

(60 W. Va. 223)

SNEDEKER v. RULONG.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WILLS (§ 360*)—CONTEST—IRREGULARITY—WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS.

It is irregular for a contestant to institute contest proceedings before a will is offered for probate by some one desiring its probate; but if a proponent, after objecting, appears thereto, and offers evidence to establish the due execution of the will, and on appeal by the contestant, from the order or sentence of the county court, to the circuit court, again appears, and without objection there takes the affirmative of the issue, devisavit vel non, and there again offers the will for probate, he will in this court be treated as having waived his objection to the regularity of the proceedings begun in the county court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 825; Dec. Dig. § 360.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS—EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT.

If there be evidence tending in some appreciable degree to support the theory of proposed instructions, it is not error to give such instructions to the jury, though the evidence be slight, or even insufficient to support a verdict based entirely on such theory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 596-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

3. WILLS (§ 166*)—VALIDITY—UNDUE INFLUENCE—EVIDENCE.

Undue influence sufficient to overthrow a will will not be inferred from opportunity, suspicion, physical or even mental weakness, or from attachment or love for, or a desire to gratify the wishes of a beneficiary. It is necessary to show in addition that the free agency of the testator, at the time of the execution of the will, was overcome thereby.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 421-437; Dec. Dig. § 166.*]

4. WILLS (§ 386*)—VALIDITY—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE—REVIEW.

Where a will is offered for probate, as a holographic, and on an issue devisavit vel non, the evidence is conflicting on the question whether the will was wholly written by the testator, and signed by him, the verdict of the jury will not be set aside, unless shown to have been influenced by fraud, bias, prejudice or corruption, or some other undue influence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 359; Dec. Dig. § 386.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Marshall County.

Proceeding by J. M. Snedeker to contest probate of a writing offered by J. M. Rulong as the last will and testament of Lula L. Conner, deceased. From an order of the county court admitting same to probate, Snedeker appealed to the circuit court, where judgment denying probate was pronounced, and Rulong brings error. Affirmed.

C. A. Showacre and D. B. Evans, for plaintiff in error. Martin Brown, for defendant in error.

MILLER, J. On appeal by Snedeker, contestant, to the circuit court, from so much of the order or sentence of the county court, as admitted to probate, as the last will and testament of Lula L. Conner, deceased, a paper writing, dated January 23, 1909, the jury upon the issue of devisavit vel non, found, that neither the writing, dated December 9, 1908, also involved therein, nor said writing of January 23, 1909, offered for probate, taken separately or together, constituted the true last will and testament of said decedent.

On this verdict the court below denied the motion of Rulong, proponent, and devisee, to enter judgment, non obstante veredicto, that said paper writing, dated January 23, 1909, was the true and last will and testament of said decedent; and also his motion to set aside the verdict of the jury and grant him a new trial. And on November 6, 1909, the court pronounced the judgment complained of, that neither the said writing of December 9, 1908, nor the said writing of January 23, 1909, separately or together, constituted the true last will and testament of said Lula L. Conner.

To this judgment, on the petition of Rulong, a writ of error was awarded, bringing the case here for review, for the errors assigned.

[1] A preliminary point presented in the briefs, is that as no one who desired it had offered the alleged wills for probate in the county court, and as the proceedings there had been initiated by Snedeker, contestant, that court should not have proceeded, over the objections of Rulong, to try the contest begun by Snedeker. Section 26, chapter 77, Code 1906, does not authorize the institution of such a contest, before the will has been offered for probate by some one desiring the probate thereof. But Rulong did not stand on his objection, either in the county court, or on appeal, in the circuit court. After his objection had been overruled by the county court, he took the affirmative, and offered evidence to prove the due execution of said paper writings, resulting in the order and sentence of that court, denying the probate of the paper of December 9, 1908, but admitting to probate the paper of January 23, 1909, as the true last will and testament of said testatrix.

In the circuit court, on appeal, no question was presented by proponent as to the regularity of the proceedings in the county court. In the circuit court the proceedings were altogether regular, resulting in the judgment now under review. There the proponent, without again questioning the regularity of the proceedings in the county court, again took the affirmative of establishing the due and proper executions of the testamentary papers, and there, after the verdict, moved the court, notwithstanding the verdict, to pronounce judgment that the said paper writing of January 23, 1909, is the true and last will and testament of said Lula L. Conner. We are of opinion, therefore, that Rulong must be regarded as having waived all objections to the irregularity of the proceedings in the county court.

But three other points of error are presented: First, the giving of contestant's instructions to the jury, numbers one, six, seven, eight and nine; second, overruling proponent's motion for judgment non obstante veredicto; third, overruling proponent's motion to set aside the verdict and award him a new trial.

First, as to the instructions. It is not claimed that these instructions do not state correct legal propositions. The contention is that there was no evidence justifying them, and that for this reason they were misleading and ought not to have been given. Without quoting, all of them, except the eighth, were intended to cover contestant's theory of undue influence, controlling the mind of the testatrix. Numbers one, seven and nine seem to have been approved, as correct legal propositions, in McMechen v. McMechen, 17 W. Va. 711, 41 Am. Rep. 682; and number four, in Forney v. Ferrell, 4 W. Va. 737. Number eight related to the theory of incompetency, and simply told the jury that they might consider in connection with all the other evidence on that question, the unnatural disposition of her property by the testatrix to others than her next of kin, her living father, mother and sisters. The other instructions of contestant given, and not excepted to, were intended to cover his theory that said testamentary papers were not written, or wholly written and signed by the testatrix, and that not being witnessed, as required by section 3, chapter 77, Code 1906, could not be probated as her will, the burden of proving which and to establish the due execution of which was devolved, by the statute, on the proponent thereof. The proponent's theories on these and other questions, were fully covered by the eight several instructions given the jury at his instance. The case seems to have been fully and fairly tried and submitted to the jury, on all questions presented by the evidence.

[2] But did the evidence warrant contestant's several instructions given on the theory of incompetency and undue influence? We think it did. By so saying we must not be understood as indicating the opinion that the evidence justified the verdict of the jury on these theories. What we mean to say is, that the evidence tended in an appreciable degree to establish these theories of the case, justifying the giving of the instructions, and that no error was committed in doing so. As was said by Judge Poffenbarger, in State v. Clifford, 59 W. Va. 1, 18, 52 S. E. 981, 988: "A court need not withhold an instruction for paucity of evidence, if there be any, tending, in an appreciable degree to establish the hypothesis embodied in the instruction." Citing and quoting from Judge Lee in Hopkins v. Richardson, 9 Grat. (Va.) 485, and criticising the expressions of some of our previous decisions, and relying on Carrico v. Railroad Co., 39 W. Va. 86, 19 S. E. 571, 24 L. R. A. 50, as justifying his conclusion. The later case of Diddle v. Casualty Co., 65 W. Va. 170, 63 S. E. 962, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 779, point eight of the syllabus is also applicable.

[3] We have carefully examined the evidence on the questions of incompetency, and undue influence, and while we find evidence of an appreciable degree justifying the giving of the instructions on these theories, it is very doubtful whether the verdict could be justified on these theories. Indeed our doubt, based on numerous prior decisions, amounts to substantial conviction that the verdict and judgment, if they stood alone on these theories, and the evidence thereon, would have to be reversed. It is not only proven, but admitted, that the testatrix was sick and weak physically, at the dates of the alleged execution of these papers; that Rulong, who practiced the profession of "Masseur,"—treatment of the body, as described by him, by the process of manipulation, concussion, kneading and rubbing, and who had been employed, professionally, by Mrs. Conner's husband, before his death, and afterwards by her; had visited her nearly every day, sometimes remaining with her for long periods, and in this way, and by befriending her in other ways, had gained great favor with, and influence over her, and had many opportunities to unduly influence Mrs. Conner; and had gone to the extent of advising her to make a will. Other facts proven arouse grave suspicions of improper and undue influence, by Rulong; but our decisions say that, opportunity, suspicion, physical and even mental weakness, attachment or love for, and desire to gratify the wishes of a beneficiary, are not enough to overthrow a will, if the free agency of the testator, at the time of the execution of his will, be not overcome by undue influence; and that such undue influence must have amounted to such force or coercion as to overcome such free agency. Woodville v. Woodville, 63 W. Va. 286, 60 S. E. 140; Stewart v. Lyons, 54 W. Va. 665, 47 S. E. 442, and the numerous prior decisions cited therein. We find little in the evidence justifying the conclusion that the testatrix did not, at the date of these papers, have sufficient mind to execute a will; or that her free agency was then overcome by Rulong.

[4] But may the verdict and judgment stand on the other theory of the case, namely, that the papers were not wholly written and signed by the testatrix? We think it can. The county court found against the paper of December 9, 1908. The motion of the proponent in the circuit court, for judgment non obstante veredicto, did not include a motion for a judgment of probate of that paper; that motion was limited to the paper of January 23, 1909. Does this not show lack of faith on his part in the validity of that paper? The evidence relating to handwriting was practically the same as to both papers. The opinion of the witnesses as to handwriting and signatures of the testatrix, and their comparisons of these papers with her letters and checks introduced was conflicting. The jury and the court below heard the witnesses, had all the original papers before them; and had better opportunities than we have of getting at the truth. The sufficiency of the evidence was challenged in the court below, and was deliberately considered, weighed and passed upon by an able, painstaking and learned judge; and it is of such a conflicting character as to preclude us from overthrowing the verdict and the judgment, for want of sufficient evidence to support them. To do so would be violative of rules and principles too familiar to require repetition. Our plain duty, therefore, is to affirm the judgment.

(69 W. Va. 216)

DAWKINS v. ELLIS.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 19, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 86*)—ATTACHMENT—PLEADING.

In an attachment before a justice, when the ground of attachment justifies the issuance of the writ before maturity of the debt, it is not absolutely essential to set out that the debt is due or when it will become due, if the debt is otherwise sufficiently described.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 282, 284; Dec. Dig. § 86.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 502*)—REVIEW—EXCEPTIONS TO RULINGS—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—NECESSITY.

Exceptions taken to rulings of the court in the progress of a trial are not available in the appellate court, though made part of the record by bill of exceptions or otherwise, unless the record shows a motion for a new trial made and overruled below and also shows an exception to the action of the court in refusing a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2305-2309; Dec. Dig. § 502.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Kanawha County.
Action by J. W. Dawkins against E. S. Ellis. Judgment for plaintiff before a justice, and on appeal to the intermediate court judgment was again rendered for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

E. E. Robertson and Linn, Byrne & Linn, for plaintiff in error. M. M. Robertson, D. W. Taylor, and J. A. Seaman, for defendant in error.

ROBINSON, J. Dawkins sued Ellis before a justice of the peace and took out an attachment with the action on the ground of fraud in the procurement of the debt. The justice gave judgment for plaintiff, and also sustained the attachment. On appeal to the intermediate court, a motion to quash the attachment was overruled, and a trial was had before a jury, which resulted in judgment for plaintiff and an order sustaining the attachment. Defendant was denied a writ of error by the circuit court. Thereafter, he obtained a writ of error from one of the judges of this court.

[1] The action of the court in overruling the motion to quash the attachment was duly excepted to; and it is relied on as error. The writ of attachment and the affidavit supporting the same are in compliance with the statute for such proceedings before justices. The debt is sufficiently described, and good ground for attachment is sufficiently set forth. It was not absolutely essential to show that the debt was due or to state when it would become due, since the ground of attachment was one which justified the issuance of the writ even before the maturity of the debt. The claim was definitely described by other particulars.

[2] There are two other assignments of error. One relates to the refusal at the trial to exclude alleged improper testimony; the other to the refusal to set aside the verdict and to grant a new trial. Neither of these can be considered, for no exception was taken to the action of the court in refusing to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. Defendant, as far as the record shows, willingly submitted to the action of the court in this behalf. While there is an exception to the refusal to exclude the alleged improper testimony, yet that can avail nothing without an exception to the court's action in refusing a new trial. The exception in relation to improper testimony was saved as a reason for securing a new trial if the verdict should be against defendant. But defendant did not pursue this line far enough. He did not pursue it at all after there was refusal to set aside the verdict against him. It was still necessary to ask that the verdict be set aside and a new trial awarded, and also to save an exception to the denial of that request. Were we to pass on the exception to the admission of testimony and find that some testimony was improperly admitted, we could not disturb the verdict, since no objection was made to the refusal to disturb it below. The acquiescence in the refusal to grant the major motion so covers the objection to the refusal to grant the minor one that the latter is waived. This rule is established by a pronounced line of authorities in the Virginias. In 5 Enc. Dig. Va. & W. Va. 372, the cases are cited, and the matter is summed up thus: "Where exceptions are taken to rulings of the court in the progress of a trial before a jury, such exceptions are not available in the appellate court, though made part of the record by bill of exceptions or otherwise, unless the record shows that a motion for a new trial was made in the court below and the action of the court in refusing a new trial was excepted to. In the absence of such motion the error will be considered to have been waived."

An order will be entered affirming the judgment.

(39 W. Va. 85)

BANK OF GASSAWAY v. STALNAKER
et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 4, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 52*)—CIVIL JURISDICTION.

The civil jurisdiction of a justice cannot be extended, even by legislative enactment, beyond the limits of the justice's county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. § 146; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 52*)—JURISDICTION—TERRITORIAL EXTENT—GARNISHMENT.

A justice has no jurisdiction over one as garnishee if he resides in another county and is not served with summons in the justice's own county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

3. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 53*)—JURISDICTION—GARNISHMENT.

A justice cannot summon one as garnishee from another county, and, on his default to appear and answer, render a valid judgment against him in favor of the judgment creditor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. § 147; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Clay County.

Action by the Bank of Gassaway against Mary Stalnakar and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Haymond & Fox, for plaintiff in error. James Coberly and Jared L. Wamsley, for defendants in error.

ROBINSON, J. Can a justice summon one as garnishee from another county than that of the justice, and, upon his default to appear and answer, render a valid judgment against him in favor of the judgment creditor? This question alone is presented by the writ of error.

[1] We answer the question in the negative. Such a judgment is totally void for want of jurisdiction. A justice has no civil jurisdiction beyond the limits of his county.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

To that territory his powers are confined by the Constitution itself. Article 8, § 28. It says that "the jurisdiction of justices of the peace shall extend throughout their county." It grants no power that will enable a justice of the peace to render such a judgment as the one under consideration; but, after defining some powers, it further says that "the Legislature may give to justices such additional civil jurisdiction and powers within their respective counties as may be deemed expedient." Mark the two phrases in these constitutional provisions, "throughout their county," and "within their respective counties." Here by constitutional law we have territorial limits fixed for the exercise of a justice's powers. The first phrase allows the jurisdiction to extend to the confines of the county; the second binds the lawmakers to restrain their further grant of powers within such limits. Pretty plain and specific is all this. Nowhere does the Constitution justify civil action on the part of a justice beyond the county lines. Quite plainly does it forbid the extension of power in civil matters beyond those limits, even though that extension be by the sanction of the Legislature itself.

[2] True it is that some statutes impliedly indicate that a garnishee may be summoned from another county and a judgment be rendered against him on such process. Code 1906, ch. 50, §§ 120-124. But none of these sections expressly provide that a garnishee may be served with summons beyond the county line. The first section cited simply says in effect that process of garnishment against one residing in another county may be issued. It does not assert that it may be served in another county. Certainly service on a garnishee in the county of the justice, though the garnishee live elsewhere, would be good. It may be that procedure only to that extent was contemplated by this enactment. If the Legislature intended more, it ignored the constitutional inhibition upon itself in regard to granting powers to justices. "If a court is invested with jurisdiction by the constitution, such jurisdiction cannot be taken away, changed, or modified by statute." Works on Courts and their Jurisdiction (2d Ed.) 146.

The same chapter in relation to procedure before justices, when it comes to the subject of the service of process on a garnishee in an attachment, expressly confines the service within the county. Code 1906, ch. 50, §§ 193 and 197. But, for these attachment cases, there is a similar provision as that one for suggestions on judgments, providing the manner in which a garnishee residing out of the county may answer. Code 1906, ch. 50, § 206. This may be said to indicate that while a garnishee out of the county may be summoned, and while he may answer from out of the county, yet it was intended that he should be reached and caused so to answer only by service with process in the county. At any rate, that procedure is all that the constitutional powers of a justice will warrant.

Then again, it may be that these references to a garnishee that resides in another county have been inadvertently left in our statutes. They were there long before the adoption of our present Constitution. They are found first in the Acts of 1865. The Constitution then in force contained no such terms in relation to the territorial limit of powers of justices as we find in the present one.

There is a direct way to reach by garnishment a debt in the hands of a creditor of a judgment debtor when that creditor resides out of the county of the justice's court that rendered the judgment, and cannot be served with process therein. A transcript of the judgment may be filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county wherein the judgment is rendered, execution therefrom may be issued to the county wherein the garnishee resides, and upon that execution suggestion proceedings may be had in the circuit court of the last-named county. Code 1906, ch. 50, § 118; ch. 141, § 10.

[3] In the case before us, the record of the justice plainly shows that the judgment against the garnishee is void. It appears that the justice had no jurisdiction over the garnishee, because the summons was served beyond the justice's county. "A justice cannot act outside of his own county in any case." Hogg's Treatise and Forms, § 80. The motion to quash the execution issued on this judgment against the garnishee should have been sustained. The order overruling that motion will be reversed, and the execution will now be quashed.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(69 W. Va. 255)

HEAVNER et al. v. CITY OF ELKINS et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 290*)—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—ASSESSMENT.

An assessment by a city upon lot owners for cost of paving a street is not contrary to amendment 14 of the national Constitution, or section 10 of article 3 of the state Constitution (Code 1906, p. li), either because the assessment is by the number of front feet of lots abutting on the street, or because there was no notice of such assessment to the lot owners.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 871-875; Dec. Dig. § 290.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Randolph County.

Bill by John M. Heavenner and others against the City of Elkins and others. Decree for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

James A. Bent, for appellants. Samuel T. Spears, for appellees.

BRANNON, J. Under power given it by Acts 1906, c. 6, amending section 28 of its charter act, the city of Elkins caused certain of its streets to be paved, and assessed two-thirds of the cost upon owners of lots fronting on those streets. Such taxes or assessments were placed in the hands of its collector for enforcement of payment, and certain chancery suits to enforce such assessments as liens upon the lots charged therewith were instituted in the circuit court of Randolph county against certain lot owners, and other suits were about to be brought for the same purpose against other lot owners. John E. Heavner, George W. Adamson, and Seymour Harper, residents and taxpayers of the city, suing on behalf of themselves and all other citizens, property owners, and taxpayers of the city whose property was so assessed, sued out an injunction to restrain the city and its tax collector from levying the said assessments upon their property, and also to restrain the further prosecution of suits then pending, and to restrain the city from instituting such other suits. The decree in the case was one dissolving the injunction and dismissing the bill, from which decree Heavner and Adamson appeal.

This case is an important one in principle. It involves the right of municipal corporations to improve their streets by paving and otherwise and charge the cost thereof to abutting lot owners. This is an important function of cities and towns, essential, not merely to their beautification, but also to convenience in the use of the streets and the public health. In these days of large population and large business the power is indispensable. That power has been frequently sustained as constitutional and valid. City of Parkersburg v. Tavenner, 42 W. Va. 486, 26 S. E. 179; Hager v. Melton, 66 W. Va. 62, 66 S. E. 13; Chadwick v. Kelly, 187 U. S. 540, 23 Sup. Ct. 175, 47 L. Ed. 293. However, this power is not contested in this case. This case is also important in the respect that it is the first case in this state directly involving the power of a city to fix the amount of such assessment by the front foot, and also whether there must be notice at some stage of the proceeding to the lot owner. Counsel tells us that the assessments involved in this case are void as depriving persons of property without due process of law, and consequently violative of the fifth and fourteenth amendments of the Constitution of the United States and of the state Constitution in their prohibition against depriving persons of property without due process of law. I may remark that the fifth amendment has nothing to do with this case, as that is only a restraint upon the federal and not state government. However, this is immaterial, as the fourteenth amendment and the state Constitution contain the same provision.

The plaintiffs strongly urge that these assessments are void and contrary to such constitutional law, because the assessments were not made according to the benefits conferred upon each lot by the paving improvement, but by the frontage of the lots on the streets; that is, by the front foot. At one time it was a great question whether the assessment could be so made. Some state courts held that it could not be, but that the assessment must be measured by the benefits conferred on each lot. Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 23 S. E. 909, 31 L. R. A. 382, 53 Am. St. Rep. 825. Such was the holding, as commonly construed, of Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 19 Sup. Ct. 187, 43 L. Ed. 443. But in French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 181 U. S. 324, 21 Sup. Ct. 625, 45 L. Ed. 879, that construction of the Norwood Case was repudiated. The common construction was that the Norwood Case condemned such assessment; but, if it did, it has been overruled or ignored by the Supreme Court. The well-considered case of French v. Barber Co., just cited, holds as follows: "The apportionment of the entire cost of a street pavement upon the abutting lots according to their frontage, without any preliminary hearing as to the benefits, may be authorized by the Legislature, and this will not constitute a taking of property without due process of law." This case has been followed in Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 21 Sup. Ct. 609, 45 L. Ed. 908; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 396, 21 Sup. Ct. 644, 45 L. Ed. 914; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 21 Sup. Ct. 623, 45 L. Ed. 912; Chadwick v. Kelly, 187 U. S. 540, 23 Sup. Ct. 175, 47 L. Ed. 293; Davis v. City of Lynchburg, 84 Va. 861, 6 S. E. 230. The Supreme Court has said: "A system of delusive exactness should not be extracted from the very general language of the fourteenth amendment in order to destroy methods of taxation which were well known when the amendment was adopted, and which no one then supposed would be disturbed." L. & N. Ry. Co. v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 197 U. S. 430, 25 Sup. Ct. 466, 49 L. Ed. 819. Thus we hold the assessment by the front foot is not an unconstitutional mode of assessment. What fairer mode of assessment?

This assessment is assaulted also on the ground that no notice was given the lot owners of the assessment. It is contended that, where any proceeding deprivative of property takes place, the first requirement is that there shall be notice, and that, where there is none, is not due process of law, and the state and federal Constitutions are violated. That depends. That depends on the nature of the case and many other considerations. Since the coming of the fourteenth amendment, the powers of the states by their constituted authorities and of counties and mumunicipalities is almost daily challenged. If that amendment means what it is often claimed to mean, then the states have very narrow powers. As was said in Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. Ed. 616, and repeated in French v. Barber Co., 181 U. S. 324, 21 Sup. Ct. 625, 45 L. Ed. 879, there exists some strange misconception of the scope of the provision in the fourteenth amendment in the thought that almost every act of state authority can be arraigned as void at the bar of the Supreme Court, or branded in the state courts as repugnant to the fourteenth amendment. The Supreme Court, the final arbiter on the question, has expressed its strong condemnation of such a construction of that amendment. Now as to the necessity of notice. This power of local assessment for improvements rests under the taxing power. So the courts everywhere say. It is well-known, an axiom in the law, that ordinary annual taxation does not require notice and judicial process. If it did, the heels of government would halt. If it were material here, I would admit that such is not the rule with special assessments like those in this case. They are not annual, but occasional and special. Judson on Taxation, § 327, says: "There is a distinction to be observed between assessments for the regularly recurring general taxation and those specially made for local improvements. The former are reviewed by a board of equalization which sits regularly at stated intervals, and of these sessions the taxpayer is bound to take notice, so that no special notice is required. Special assessments, on the other hand, are not made at regular intervals, but whenever the public necessity or convenience requires. The taxpayer therefore cannot be charged with constructive notice of such proceedings, and he must have some specific notice of the proposed charge against his property. This notice need not be personal, but may be sufficiently made by publication." And I would not deny that, where the assessment is to be tested in amount by law or ordinance by benefits conferred on the property, a notice to the lot owner at some stage of the proceeding before the assessment becomes final must be given. Judson on Taxation, § 312; Page & Jones on Taxation, § 119; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 17 Sup. Ct. 966, 42 L. Ed. 270. As this charter act contains no requirement of notice, it is said to be for that reason unconstitutional. We cannot accede to this proposition. If the nature of the case is such as to require notice, we think that the requirement would be implied, and that there must be such notice, but that it would not render the act void for that reason. B. & O. R. Co. v. P. W. & Ky. Co., 17 W. Va. 812. I have said that if the process of charge were according to the benefits accruing to the lots that notice would be essential; but in this case it was by the front foot. In 25 Am. & Eng. Ency. L. 1215, it is stated that, where the assessment is dependent on special benefits to the property, it is essential that notice be given; but it is further stated that, "Where, however, the only act necessary to ascertain the amount of an assessment upon property is a plain mathematical calculation, as where the apportionment is made by the front foot rule or according to area, and no discretion is left to the officers, a notice seems not to be essential to the validity of the assessment and levy," unless the statute require a notice. For this proposition are cited the cases of Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., 111 U. S. 701, 4 Sup. Ct. 663, 28 L. Ed. 569, and Shumate v. Heman, 181 U. S. 402, 21 Sup. Ct. 645, 45 L. Ed. 922, and other cases. Our Code in chapter 47, § 34, authorizes such paving, and fixes the front foot rule as the one to be observed in the assessment, and we see such rule is not repugnant to the federal Constitution. The assessment conforms to this rule. Thus we hold that this assessment is not void under either of the Constitutions for want of notice.

As said above, this injunction went to restrain the prosecution of regular suits in the circuit court to enforce these assessments. Of course, the injunction would be untenable in that feature, even if the assessment were unconstitutional, because the circuit court would have jurisdiction to pass on the question, and the party would have his day in court, and could not say that he had no hearing, and that the proceeding was without due process. The plaintiffs could not thus deprive the court of general jurisdiction the benefit of that jurisdiction.

Our conclusion is to affirm the decree.

(69 W. Va. 263)

STATE v. BAKER et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. GAMING (§ 75*)—KEEPING GAMING HOUSE—MISDEMEANOR.

The keeping of a common gaming house is a misdemeanor at common law, and consequently a violation of the law of this state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 199-201; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

2. GAMING (§ 75*)—KEEPING GAMBLING HOUSE.

That only those who gamble are admitted to the room where the gambling is carried on, and the rest of the public are excluded therefrom, does not affect the crime.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 199-201; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

3. GAMING (§ 75*)—KEEPING GAMBLING HOUSE.

The keeping of a common gaming house is unlawful, whether the gambling therein be lawful or unlawful.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 199-201; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

4. GAMING (§ 75*)—KEEPING GAMBLING HOUSE.

It is not material that a common gaming house should be kept for lucre or profit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 199-201; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

5. GAMING (§ 75*)—KEEPING GAMBLING HOUSE.

It is not essential to constitute the offense of keeping a common gaming house that the gambling therein should be in view of the public, or that the public should be disturbed by noise therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Gaming, Cent. Dig. §§ 199-201; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Cabell County.

Wiley Baker and Dick Rader were convicted of keeping a gaming house, and bring error. Affirmed.

Marcum & Shepherd, for plaintiffs in error. Wm. G. Conley, Atty. Gen., and Jean F. Smith, Pros. Atty., for the States

WILLIAMS, P. Wiley Baker and Dick Rader were indicted, tried, and convicted, and adjudged by the circuit court of Cabell county to pay a fine of $50 each, and the costs of their prosecution, for keeping a common gaming house; and they have brought the case here by writ of error.

[1] Is the keeping of a common gaming house a violation of the law of this state? We think it is. It was certainly an offense at the common law. "Common gaming houses are a public nuisance at common law, being detrimental to the public, as they promote cheating and other corrupt practices; and incite to idleness and avaricious ways of gaining property persons whose time might otherwise be employed for the good of the community." 2 Russell's Law of Crimes (7th Eng. Ed.) 1897; 1 Bishop's New Crim. Law, § 504. In section 1135, Bishop says: "A common gaming house is a species of disorderly house; the disorder consisting of its allurements tending to evil." Its unlawfulness does not depend upon the unlawfulness of the games which may be therein played. The keeping of a common gaming house is forbidden because it is a public nuisance, tending to evil consequences. All the text-writers say that it is an indictable offense at the common law. Joyce's Law of Nuisance, § 395; 1 Wood on Nuisance, § 45; Bacon's Abridgment, p. 223; 14 A. & E. E. L. 668; 20 Cyc. 893; Woods v. Cottrell, 55 W. Va. 476, 47 S. E. 275, 65 L. R. A. 616, 104 Am. St. Rep. 1004; State v. Ehrlick, 65 W. Va. 700, 64 S. E. 933, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 691; Commonwealth v. Warren, 161 Mass. 281, 37 N. E. 172; Thrower v. State, 117 Ga. 753, 45 S. E. 126.

The common law of England was made a part of the law of Virginia; and later, the law of this state. In May, 1776, Virginia passed an ordinance providing that "the common law of England, all statutes or acts of Parliament made in aid of the common law prior to the fourth year of the reign of King James the First, and which are of a general nature, not local to that kingdom, together with the several acts of the General Assembly of this colony now in force, so far as the same may consist with the several ordinances, declarations, and resolutions of the general convention, shall be the rule of decision, and shall be considered as in full force, until the same shall be altered by the legislative power of this colony."

9 Henning's Statutes at Large, 127. The General Assembly by act passed December 27, 1792, repealed so much of the above ordinance as relates to the English statutes made in aid of the common law; but that part of the ordinance making the common law a part of the law of Virginia was not repealed, and the common law of England continued to be the law of Virginia. 1 Min. 51. The first Constitution (1861-63) of West Virginia which became the law of the state upon its admission into the Union (section 8, art. 11) declares: "Such parts of the common law and of the laws of the state of Virginia as are in force within the boundaries of the state of West Virginia, when this Constitution goes into operation, and are not repugnant thereto, shall be and continue the law of this state until altered or repealed by the Legislature." And section 21 of article 8 of the present Constitution (Code 1906, lxxviii) also declares the common law to be the law of this state until altered or repealed by the Legislature. There is no statute in this state which repealed the common law in relation to the offense of keeping a common gaming house; and the common law relating thereto is the law of this state. The statutes against gaming do not repeal by implication the common-law offense of keeping a common gaming house.

The demurrer to the indictment was properly overruled. The offense of keeping a common gaming house is sufficiently alleged. The fact that the indictment alleges that the games which were played in the house kept by defendants were unlawful games is immaterial. Such allegation may be treated as surplusage. It is not necessary that the games which were played should have been unlawful in order to constitute the offense with which defendants are charged.

The state produced a number of witnesses who testified that they had gambled in the room kept by defendants, and that they sometimes lost money, and sometimes won money, at a game played with cards called "stud poker." It does not appear that any greater amount of money than $1 or $2 was ever won or lost by one person at any one game or sitting. But the amount won or lost is immaterial, as the amount of money or value of the thing gambled for constitutes no part of the offense of keeping a common gaming house.

It appears that the gambling room was over Rau's barber shop in the city of Huntington, and had to be reached by way of an alley. A stairway led from the alley up to a door opening into a hall or anteroom; and, in order to obtain admission, the visitor had to knock on this outer door, and, if the guard or keeper of the door was satisfied that he was a gambler, he was then admitted. From this hall, or anteroom, another door led into another and still more private room where the gambling was carried on. There was a hole in the door leading into this room, through which the keeper inside could look out in order to determine whether the visitor was a proper person to be admitted. If he was known to the gambling fraternity as a gambler, he was admitted, if not too drunk. Only those who wished to gamble were admitted. The room was kept closed, and the gambling could not be seen except by those in the room. Some of the witnesses were advised of the location of this gambling room by persons on the street who knew of its location, and who would tell them when a game was going on. It appears that this room was only kept and used for the purpose of gambling. It does not appear that the room was used for any other purpose than as a gambling place. Neither does it appear that the defendants kept this gaming house for gain or lucre. It is testified to by at least one witness, who says he used to run the place himself, that the defendants kept this gaming house in the year 1909 prior to October. The indictment was found on the 28th of October, 1909. Defendants offered no testimony, and there is no conflict in the evidence. Defendants rested upon their motion to strike out the state's evidence. This motion was overruled by the court, and the case allowed to go to the jury, and defendants excepted.

[4] The fact that it is not proven that defendants kept the room for lucre is not material. True, some authorities hold that to constitute the offense of keeping a common gaming house it must be alleged and proven that it was kept for gain or lucre; but the better opinion, as well as the weight of authority, is to the contrary. The offense consists in the keeping of a gaming house. The keeping of such house is, in law, a public nuisance. Its character as a nuisance in no wise depends upon the matter of profit to those who maintain it. 1 Bishop's Crim. Law, §§ 1086, 1137; 14 A. & E. E. L. 715.

[5] That the game was not carried on in view of the outside public, or that the public was not disturbed by noise from within, does not affect the case. These are not necessary elements of the offense. 14 A. & E. E. L. 697, and cases cited in notes 3 and 4.

[2] It is none the less a common gaming house because only those who desired to gamble were admitted within its walls. Says Hawkins, J., in Jenks v. Turpin, 13 L. R., Q. B. D., 515: "To no gambling house is the public at large invited to go without restriction of some sort or other. The keeper of such a house has always the right to admit or refuse admission to any one he pleases, or to make such rules as he may think fit for the regulation of such admission." Again, on the same page, the learned judge further says: "It is true that no annoying interference in the public street can be pointed to, so that in that sense a public nuisance can be said to have been created; but that is not necessary"—citing Reg. v. Rice et al., 2 L. R., 1 C. C. R. 21, which we do not find in the library. Commonwealth v. Blankinship, 165 Mass. 40, 42 N. E. 115; Commonwealth v. Warren, 161 Mass. 281, 37 N. E. 172; 14 A. & E. E. L. 679; 20 Cyc. 893.

[3] Counsel for defendants cite State v. Maynard, 66 W. Va. 522, 66 S. E. 688, as authority for the proposition that, in order to constitute the offense of keeping a common gaming house, it must be shown that it was carried on in a public place. That case was an indictment under section 4 of chapter 151, Code 1906, for playing cards in a public place, and the proof showed that the playing was carried on in a secluded place. It was quite a different case from the present one. There the player was indicted for playing cards at a public place, a statutory offense; here the keepers are indicted for keeping a common gaming house, a common-law offense, and it matters not whether the gambling carried on in the house was visible to the general public or was lawful or unlawful. This case is not controlled by that one.

We find no error in the judgment of the court below, and it will be affirmed.

(69 W. Va. 313)

CLARK v. BEARD.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 19, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TENANCY IN COMMON (§ 15*)—ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Adverse possession between cotenants. Some principles restated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tenancy in Common, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-62; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

2. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 99*)—CONVEYANCE OF TITLE TO LAND—PAROL DISCLAIMER.

Vested title in land cannot be divested by mere parol disclaimer. The following writing does not do so: "This receipt is to show I have no interest in the 350 acres that Preston sold to Cherry River Company. This the 20 day of January, 1900. S. H. Clark."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. § 188; Dec. Dig. § 99.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1015*)—REVIEW— WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE.

The Supreme Court will pass on the weight and effect of oral evidence on a motion for a new trial when the justice of the case, in its opinion, demands it, though there be other ground of reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3860-3876; Dec. Dig. § 1015.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Pocahontas County.

Action by Preston S. Clark against Emma O. Beard. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

R. S. Turk and F. R. Hill, for plaintiff in error. L. M. McClintic and Price, Osenton & McPeak, for defendant in error.

BRANNON, J. A motion was made to reject the evidence because the bill of exceptions does not identify it; but there is the evidence found in the bill. It is certified by the stenographer as the evidence in the case, giving names of witnesses, and the order of the judge showing his execution of the bill naming and identifying the witnesses, and saying that the evidence is duly certified by the stenographer. It is also said there was no exception to the decision of the judge overruling the motion for a new trial; but the bill of exceptions says there was.

This is an action of ejectment by Preston S. Clark against Emma O. Beard involving the ownership of coal. The nature of the case will be found in a former decision in the case in 59 W. Va. 669, 53 S. E. 597. When the case went back from this court to the circuit court, a second trial resulted in a verdict and judgment of recovery by the plaintiff. As was settled in the case by our former decision, Preston S. Clark owned the surface of certain lands and half the coal in those lands, and Sherman Clark owned the other half of the coal in those lands, and Emma C. Beard was owner of this half of the coal by devise from her father, Sherman Clark. Thus Preston S. Clark and Sherman Clark were joint tenants in the undivided coal. This is clear from the record and undisputed. Preston Clark admits this. He does not show the scratch of a pen of paper title to this coal, but he claims that he ousted his brother Sherman and acquired title to the coal under the statute of limitations. He says himself as a witness that that is his only title. On what does this claim rest? Some 30 years before the trial Preston Clark opened a coal mine on his land. A little coal was taken from it, and the mine was not fit for use because it "dipped," and filled with water. Then he opened a second mine, and from it some coal was taken; not a large quantity. There was no coal mining in that country then. The land was in the wilds of Pocahontas county, far from a railroad; the coal not worth anything then. Preston used coal in his house; but Sherman, living distant, did not. Here is one brother taking a little coal from time to time occasionally, intermittently, for mere home and neighborhood use. No mining operations of any extent. No mining business carried on. The coal belonged to two brothers; the surface to Preston. Preston takes a little coal for his own use and that of neighbors; one brother digging on his own land and taking some coal from the common property. How can it be said that this constitutes an ouster of the other brother? Sherman would not deny his brother the privilege of coal of so little value. Preston paid the tax on the land and his brother would not perhaps for that reason protest against his use of a little coal.

[1] And then Preston owned the surface. Is this hostile possession? The law is old that "it is the intention of the tenant or parcener in possession to hold the common property in severalty and exclusively as his own, with notice or knowledge to his cotenant of such intention, that constitutes disseisin," as we said in Reed v. Bachman, 61 W. Va. 452, 57 S. E. 769, 123 Am. St. Rep. 996, citing Cooley v. Porter, 22 W. Va. 120. There is no show of intention of Preston to claim adversely until very lately, since his brother's death. As a witness he says he had no thought of adverse claim until he wanted to sell. The books say that when possession is taken there must be then intent to claim adversely. Hudson v. Putney, 14 W. Va. 561. Probably he never thought of such claim to his brother's coal until after his death, which was in 1901, and the suit was brought in 1904. As he claimed to have had possession for 20 years before that, why did he not sue his brother? Why did he wait until he was dead, and then sue his daughter? A court should be very rigid about defeating a clear title between cotenants on the ground of limitation. Such claim does not address itself with strong favor to a court of justice. Preston Clark does not show a jot or tittle of claim, except this unfounded claim of adverse possession. Could Sherman Clark infer an intention on his brother's part to claim adversely from his taking a little coal from under the surface of his own land? Plainly not. The act did not import such intention. Therefore the plaintiff's case lacks the essential element demanded by all authorities—intention to claim as an enemy of his brother. But not only must there be such intention, but notice of such hostile intention must be brought home to Sherman Clark. Justice v. Lawson, 46 W. Va. 163, 33 S. E. 102. There must be what is considered in law an ouster, an intention to oust and deprive the true owner, evidenced by acts importing only hostility—acts under circumstances importing hostility. And such acts and intent to claim adversely must be brought home to the knowledge and notice of the owner. We said in the former decision of this case what seems to have been ignored in the trial, that "the statute of limitations does not begin to run in favor of one cotenant of land in possession against another cotenant thereof until actual ouster by the former or some other act or acts on his part amounting to a total denial of the right of the latter, and until notice or knowledge of the act or acts relied on as an ouster is brought home to him; and that the notice or knowledge required must be either actual, or the act relied on as an ouster must be of such an open and notorious character as to be notice of themselves, or reasonably sufficient to put the disseised cotenant on inquiry which, if diligently pursued, will lead to notice or knowledge in fact." Preston Clark on the witness stand does not pretend to say that he ever let his brother know that he was his enemy. He would have been incompetent to do so; but he gives some evidence in the case which is incompetent, but he omits to say that he served such notice on his brother, and he does not prove it. And is it possible to say that this digging of a little coal for home use, not in a big development, coal almost worthless, dug from under the surface of his own land, who with his brother owned the coal, would be notice of adverse possession? It is unreasonable. Is only the taking of rents and profits by one cotenant for his exclusive use evidence of his adverse possession? It would not be between strangers, especially not between brothers. It would give a right to demand compensation from one cotenant taking more than his share of the rents and profits, but would not be adverse possession. It is shown in this case by a little evidence that Sherman Clark passed by the premises sometimes and may have seen the little coal bank open. But would that tell him of hostile claim? Would he have to go to Preston, and inquire whether it was an act of hostility? Would he not think that his brother was taking the little privilege in friendship and brotherhood? Courts and juries must view men's acts and intentions according to the instincts of human nature and social conduct. "Actual ouster of one cotenant in common cannot be presumed except where the possession has become tortious and wrongful by the disloyal acts of the cotenant which must be open, continuous, and notorious so as to preclude all doubt of the character of his holding or the want of knowledge thereof by his cotenant. This conduct must amount to a clear, positive, and continued disclaimer, and disavowal of his cotenant's title, and an assertion of an adverse right, and a knowledge of this must be brought home to his cotenant," we said in Reed v. Bachman, 61 W. Va. 456, 57 S. E. 769, 123 Am. St. Rep. 996, quoting from Bogges v. Meredith, 16 W. Va. 1. We said so in this very case. We said also in the Reed Case that: "Mere silent possession ever so long by one taking rents and profits without notice or knowledge of such adverse claim on the part of the other will not be adverse possession under the statute." There is not a bit of evidence in this case to prove ouster but the digging of a little coal irregularly, only on occasions, broken use, having no continuity, hardly any notoriety. Thus we hold that the evidence in this case is wanting to show (1) intent of Preston Clark to claim against his brother adversely; (2) want of such acts as manifested ouster under the circumstances in this case; (3) want of notice to Sherman Clark of hostile intent and purpose; and (4) want of continuity of such use as I have spoken of.

Therefore a new trial should have been granted, not exactly on the theory that it was contrary to the evidence, but without evidence to support it. That the verdict is without evidence to support it is another ground for a new trial. This occurs where there has been no proof whatever of material facts or facts in issue, or where the evidence is plainly insufficient to warrant the verdict. See the volume of cases cited for this proposition in 10 Encyclopedic Digest of Va. and W. Va. Reports, 453, 454. I say that this verdict is also contrary to law. Why? Because there are certain essential points that the plaintiff must prove, and his evidence does not do so. The verdict is contrary to the law of disseisin and adverse possession between cotenants. Same authority, p. 454; Ritz v. City, 45 W. Va. 262, 31 S. E. 993, 43 L. R. A. 148; Manse-Bruning Shoe Co. v. Prince, 51 W. Va. 510, 41 S. E. 907. This court is unanimous in the opinion that, if there had been a demurrer to evidence, this court would render a judgment for the defendant for the coal claimed by her in her disclaimer, except the one-eighth of coal in the 1,355 acres mentioned in her disclaimer, she not having given any evidence on the trial as to that eighth. I would myself not hesitate to do so as it is for reasons which I state in Hoylman v. Railroad, 65 W. Va. 264, 64 S. E. 536, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 741.

As we remand the case, we may advert to some other matters in the record. It is said there was no issue, and this is relied upon as ground for a reversal. It is hardly worth while to mention this, because I find two entries of the plea of not guilty. Or do counsel mean that there is no similitude? That is dispensed with by Code 1906, c. 134, § 3.

It is assigned as error that the court admitted for the plaintiff evidence that Preston S. Clark posted at the coal bank a notice warning persons against entering the coal entry. This would seem to be admissible as a circumstance to show claim; but Preston Clark on the stand says it was only intended to warn off persons stealing coal. Therefore it did not evince claim against his brother. But we would not reverse for its admission.

It played no part in the case, or ought not to do so.

A lease was introduced by which Clark leased to Walton the coal bank. We do not think it was error to admit this as an item under the claim of adverse possession, though standing alone it would have little effect, as it would not bring home notice of ouster. Evidence not contradicted shows that Sherman Clark also gave people leave to take coal.

[2] There was admitted a paper reading: "This receipt is to show I have no interest in the 350 acres that Preston sold to Cherry River Company. This the 20 day of January, 1900. S. H. Clark." I do not see that this bears on the question of adverse claim. Its only tendency is to show a disclaimer of title. But this rude instrument cannot confer title of its own force. As it seems Clark places great reliance on this paper, it may be well to discuss it. It is a parol disclaimer, not a sealed instrument. It is not a deed. It has no parties, no consideration. The legal title to land was in Sherman Clark, for coal in place is part of the land, and, when legal title is vested, a parol disclaimer cannot be divested except by deed or record. Our statute of frauds requires a deed. Such is the doctrine stated in our former decision in this case. See Wade v. McDougle, 59 W. Va. 114, 52 S. E. 1026; cases cited in High v. Pancake, 42 W. Va. 607, 28 S. E. 536; Minor's Law Real Prop. § 1248. I need cite no authority to prove that an agreed destruction of a deed does not destroy the estate in its grantee. It was error to admit this paper, and this would reverse the case.

[3] We have sometimes said that, where there is other ground for reversal, we will not pass on evidence. That depends on the evidence. If there is apparent probability of the case being bettered, perhaps that practice may in some cases be proper; but that is a matter of discretion. We can pass on the evidence if we choose. When we reflect, we may have gone too far in so saying. The party makes a motion for a new trial. The circuit court is bound to pass on it. Why is not this court likewise bound to do so? If there should be a new trial, what we say of the evidence cannot be read to the jury. It would be for the court. This course tends to end litigation. Why refrain from giving an opinion on the evidence when we are satisfied that the case cannot be materially changed on retrial?

It is pointed out that the motion for a new trial does not specify grounds. That does not matter, if the court deems it proper to look through the record for them. It need not do so in voluminous evidence, without specification; but it may do so.

Judgment reversed, verdict set aside, and case remanded.

(89 W. Va. 190)

HAWKINS v. BLAKE et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS (§ 36*)—ACTION TO SET ASIDE CONVEYANCE.

The limitation in section 14 of chapter 104 of the Code of 1906, upon suits to avoid voluntary conveyances, is applicable to such a conveyance made with fraudulent design on the part of the grantor, if such design is not known to, nor participated in by, the grantee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. § 173; Dec. Dig. § 36.*]

2. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS (§ 60*)—ACTIONS TO SET ASIDE CONVEYANCE—ACCESSION.

Said statute runs from the date of the conveyance, unless the plaintiff is in a position to claim the benefit of some exception from its operation or suspension thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. § 336; Dec. Dig. § 60.*]

3. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS (§ 37*)—DISTRRAINT—BAR OF STATUTE.

If a debtor procure a conveyance to be made to himself and his infant children jointly, the latter being volunteers and free from the imputation or charge of fraud by reason of the tenderness of their age, and then execute to the creditor a deed of trust on the land, such deed of trust is not the equivalent of a distraint or levy on the subject of the conveyance or any part thereof, and does not affect the interests of the children.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Raleigh County.

Bill by E. B. Hawkins against Mary Blake and others. Decree for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Modified and affirmed.

File & File, for appellants. Dillon & Nuckolls, for appellee.

POFFENBARGER, J. The decree from which this appeal was taken grows out of transactions following the conveyance from Blake to Hawkins, involved in the chancery cause of Blake v. O'Neal, finally decided by this court, and reported in 63 W. Va. 483, 61 S. E. 410, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1147. By that decision, the grantee of Hawkins lost title to the land conveyed to him by Blake. Thereupon he instituted this suit against Blake and his infant children by a second wife to set aside a conveyance made to them and Blake by Wm. E. Godbey and wife at the instance of Blake and in consideration of purchase money paid by him, part of the money he received from Hawkins, as voluntary and made with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud Blake's creditors and especially the plaintiff as one of them. From the decree granting the prayer of the bill, the children and their mother have appealed.

Blake and wife conveyed a tract of land in Fayette county to Hawkins by deed dated February 12, 1902, for and in consideration of $1,700. On the 5th day of May, 1902, the conveyance involved here, covering surface land in Raleigh county, was made, in consideration, it is alleged, of $200 of the money received from Hawkins for the Fayette county land. C. T. Blake and others commenced their suit against Sue O'Neal and others, claiming the land conveyed to Hawkins, and in which they made that claim good on the 23d day of November, 1903. That litigation ended in 1908. This suit was brought in May, 1909, more than seven years after the date of the conveyance it seeks to set aside. At the date of this conveyance, these children of Blake, to whom he caused three-fourths of the Raleigh land to be conveyed, were of tender age, being 11, 9, and 7 years old, respectively.

[1] As more than five years had intervened between the date of the deed and the institution of the suit attacking it, they rely upon the statute of limitations, (section 14 of chapter 104 of the Code), in so far as lack of consideration is relied upon, and deny the allegations of fraud.

That statute says: "No gift, conveyance, assignment, transfer or charge, which is not on consideration deemed valuable in law, shall be avoided, either in whole or in part, for that cause only, unless within five years after it is made, suit be brought for that purpose, or the subject thereof, or some part of it, be distrained or levied upon by or at the suit of a creditor, as to whom such gift, conveyance, assignment, transfer or charge is declared to be void by the second section of the seventy-fourth chapter of this Code." That it precludes relief on the ground of want of consideration, if applicable under the peculiar circumstances shown here, is not denied, but its applicability is. This position is founded, in part, upon the assumption of accrual of the cause of action on the final adjudication against Hawkins in Blake v. O'Neal.

[2] As the statute in express terms fixes the date of the conveyance as the date from which it runs, we are unable to give this view our sanction or approval. It says no such conveyance as is mentioned in that section shall be avoided "unless within five years after it is made."

A further objection to the applicability of this statute is founded upon its terms, saying no conveyance which is not on consideration deemed valuable in law shall be avoided for that purpose only, unless suit be brought for the purpose within five years after it is made; fraud on the part of the grantor being another or additional element charged in the bill as a ground of relief.

[3] Fraud on the part of both grantor and grantee clearly and admittedly takes a case out of this statute, but ordinarily the fraud of the grantor must have been participated in by the grantee, to enable a court to set a conveyance aside. It is rather conceded here that, owing to the tender age of the grantees, they cannot be deemed to have participated in any fraud on the part of the father; but it is plausibly argued that the fraud of the father is an element or factor in the case which makes the suit one to set aside the conveyance not only because made without consideration, but also because it was made to defraud creditors. Though plausible, this theory has been rejected by this court, after careful consideration, and the limitation held to be applicable to all voluntary conveyances, unless fraudulent on the part of both grantees and grantors. Laidley v. Reynolds, 58 W. Va. 418, 52 S. E. 405; Scrags v. Hill, 43 W. Va. 162, 27 S. E. 310; McCue v. McCue, 41 W. Va. 151, 23 S. E. 689; Mfg. Co. v. Carr, 65 W. Va. 673, 64 S. E. 1030. We have again re-examined the statute, and see no reason for changing our conclusion. The question has been fully discussed from every point of view in the opinion in Laidley v. Reynolds, and nothing of value could be added here.

Regarding the deed of trust by which Blake, the father of the infant defendants, conveyed his interest to a trustee, to indemnify the plaintiff against loss from failure of title to the Fayette county lands, as being in effect a distraint of the Raleigh county land, or the equivalent thereof, the benefit of an exception in the statute is claimed. This exception says the limitation shall not apply if, within the period of five years from the date of the gift or conveyance, the subject thereof, or some part of it, be distrained or levied upon by or at the suit of a creditor, as to whom the gift, conveyance, assignment, transfer, or charge is declared to be void. The deed of trust reaches only the interest of Lewis Blake, the father of the infant defendants. If it could be regarded as the equivalent of a distraint or levy, it does not affect the interests of the latter. It is neither a distraint nor a levy upon any part of the land as to them or their interest therein. However, we do not regard it as the equivalent of either a distraint or a levy. Hence we think the case is not within this exception.

These conclusions render it wholly unnecessary to enter upon any inquiry as to whether the conveyance made to the children, at the instance of their father, was a gift superinduced by a fraudulent purpose on his part. If such purpose existed, but was not participated in by the donees, it cannot avail the plaintiff now. We are also of the opinion that the tender age of these infant defendants relieves them of any imputation or charge of participation in such fraudulent purpose, if it existed.

The decree ascertained and declared a lien by reason of the deed of trust on an undivided one-fourth of the land in favor of the plaintiff and ordered a sale thereof. It also ascertained and ordered paid the amount of money expended by the plaintiff in the defense of said cause of Blake v. O'Neal, secured by the deed of trust, in addition to the purchase money of the Fayette county land. Uncertainty in the deed of trust as to the amount of the lien debt and the interest in the land conveyed by that instrument probably justified resort to a court of equity to have them settled and determined before sale. Whether this be true or not, these matters were properly involved in the cause, and, as to them, there is no error.

For these reasons, the decree will be reversed and annulled in so far, and only so far, as the same holds the undivided three-fourths of the 59.5 acre tract of land, belonging to the infant defendants, Dennis, Kenneth, and Augusta V. Blake, in the bill and proceedings mentioned and described. Liable to be sold for the indebtedness of Lewis Blake and Mary Blake, or either of them, to the plaintiff, and subjects the same to such indebtedness in any manner, or any of the costs of this suit, and orders sale thereof, and impairs or affects the title of the said Dennis, Kenneth, and Augusta V. Blake to said interest in said tract of land, and, as to the said Dennis, Kenneth, and Augusta V. Blake and their said interest in said land, the bill and amended bill will be dismissed; but in all other respects the decree will be affirmed and the cause remanded. Costs in this court and the court below will be decreed to the said infant defendants.

(40 W. Va. 268)

McDERMITT v. FORBES.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 26, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 548*)—REVIEW—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—EXCLUSION OF EVIDENCE.

If written evidence offered is excluded by the trial court, it should be made a part of the record by a bill of exceptions, if the party offering it desires to have the action of the trial court in excluding it reviewed on writ of error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error. Cent. Dig. §§ 2433-2440; Dec. Dig. § 548.*]

2. EJECTMENT (§ 90*)—EVIDENCE—COMMISSIONER'S DEED.

A special commissioner's deed, not recorded for as much as 10 years, and unaccompanied by any portion of the record of the cause in which it purports to have been made, is not even prima facie evidence of title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Dec. Dig. § 90.*]

3. EJECTMENT (§ 9*)—TITLE OF PLAINTIFF—OUSTER BY TRESPASSER.

A plaintiff who has been in peaceable possession of land, and who is entered upon and ousted by a mere intruder or trespasser having no semblance of right or claim to the land, may recover in ejectment without proof of legal title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Cent. Dig. § 19; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

4. EJECTMENT (§ 109*)—EVIDENCE—DIRECTING VERDICT.

If the evidence upon a trial in ejectment is sufficient to warrant the jury in believing that defendant was a mere trespasser upon plaintiff's previous quiet possession of land, it is error for the court to direct a verdict for defendant, even though plaintiff has failed to prove legal title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Cent. Dig. § 312; Dec. Dig. § 109.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Mason County.

Action by George McDermitt against Lewis Forbes. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

John L. Whitten and B. H. Blagg, for plaintiff in error. J. E. Beller, for defendant in error.

WILLIAMS, P. McDermitt brought ejectment against Forbes in the circuit court of Mason county, and the court, on motion of defendant, excluded plaintiff's evidence from the jury, directed a verdict for the defendant, and entered judgment thereon; and plaintiff has brought the case here on writ of error. The action involves title to a tract of about two acres of ground. Plaintiff claims title by two sources: First, by a special commissioner's deed executed to him July 1, 1908; and, second, by long-continued adverse possession by himself, and by others under whom he claims. The two acres is inclosed by fence. It has an orchard and stable upon it, and has been in actual use and occupancy for 30 or 40 years by those under whom plaintiff claims.

Plaintiff offered in evidence the special commissioner's deed, and the court excluded it. An objection was made and an exception noted on the record, and the deed also appears in the record; but it does not appear that the court was asked to incorporate the deed in the bill of exceptions. The first assignment of error relates to the exclusion of the deed, and we are confronted with the preliminary question whether it is a part of the record or not. The following memorandum was made in the bill of exceptions by the judge at the time he signed it, to wit: "The deed was not filed in the papers, and is not in the papers at this time, and the court was not asked to put it in a bill of exceptions, and did not do so, and the court cannot say whether the following is a correct copy or not." The deed which appears in the record corresponds to the description of the deed that was offered, by date, consideration paid, etc. But, in view of what we are about to say, we do not think it necessary to decide whether the deed is or is not a part of the record. If plaintiff was not prejudiced by its exclusion, the question becomes immaterial.

[1] It appears in the record, otherwise than by the deed itself, that the deed which was offered was dated July 1, 1908, and was made by a special commissioner of the court; but no part of the record of the suit, or proceeding, in which the land was sold appears in this record. The record was offered and was excluded by the court and an exception taken, but the excluded record is not made a part of the record in the present case. We are unable, therefore, to see whether or not the court erred in excluding it. We do not know what the record which was excluded contained, and cannot say it was error to exclude it. It is necessary that error should affirmatively appear, and, so far as the action of the court relates to the excluding of the record, it is not made to appear that it erred. The title to the land may have been before the court, and it may have been properly disposed of in that proceeding, in which case the record would have been proper evidence in this case. But the record may have been excluded because it showed that the title to the land in question was not before the court in that proceeding, or because of some other irregularity. The record should have been made a part of the record in this case by a bill of exceptions, but was not.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes
71 S.E.—13

[2] There being no error shown in excluding the record as evidence, it follows that there was no prejudicial error in excluding the commissioner's deed as evidence. The deed was made under authority of decrees rendered in that case. Its recitals, even if we are authorized to consider the deed as part of the record, are not sufficient proof of the facts recited to make the deed evidence of title (Feder, Adm'r. v. Hager, 64 W. Va. 452, 63 S. E. 285; Wilson v. Braden, 48 W. Va. 196, 36 S. E. 387; Ronk v. Higginbotham, 54 W. Va. 137, 48 S. E. 128), and the deed is of too recent date to be of any service to plaintiff as color of title. Section 2, c. 76, Acts 1907, dispenses with proof of the authority of the commissioner to make the deed. Presumptively the commissioner had authority. But in order to be even prima facie evidence of title, unsupported as it is by the record of the cause, the deed must have been recorded for at least 10 years; and, not having been recorded for 10 years, and not being accompanied by the record, so as to show that the title was properly before the court and was properly disposed of by it, the deed was not evidence of title; and it was not prejudicial error to exclude it.

[3] But the court erred in excluding plaintiff's parol evidence from the jury. There was testimony tending to prove that plaintiff was in possession of the land, and was entered upon and ousted by defendant; that plaintiff was claiming under Stover from whom he held a deed to an undivided half interest in a tract of nine acres adjoining the land in dispute; that the two acres was considered as a part of the nine acres; and that it had been occupied and used continuously by plaintiff and those under whom he claims for a long period of time, more than 30 years. It does not appear by what right defendant claims the land. He offered no evidence. There is also testimony tending to prove that defendant was a mere trespasser. Plaintiff says that he had plowed up a part of the ground, and that defendant came upon the land and took possession of it and planted what he had plowed. If defendant is a mere trespasser, having no semblance of right, the plaintiff can recover in ejectment upon his previous peaceable possession without proof of title. Tapscott v. Cobbs, 11 Grat. (Va.) 172; Witten v. St. Clair, 27 W. Va. 771.

[4] It was error to strike plaintiff's oral evidence from the jury; and the judgment will be reversed, the verdict of the jury set aside, and the case will be remanded for a new trial.

(69 W. Va. 129)

S. M. SMITH INS. AGENCY v. HAMILTON FIRE INS. CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 11, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 668*)—SUMMONS—MOTION TO QUASH.

Withdrawal from the State by a foreign insurance company, after liability incurred, but before suit brought, if otherwise available in abatement of the suit, such fact not appearing on the face of the summons or return of service thereof, is not good ground for quashing the summons.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2603-2627; Dec. Dig. § 668.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 668*)—FOREIGN CORPORATIONS—SERVICE OF PROCESS.

The statute prescribing no form for acceptance of service of process by the auditor, for and on behalf of a foreign corporation, authorized by section 3805, Code 1906, such acceptance, signed by the auditor, neither the process nor acceptance showing that defendant is a foreign corporation, or sued as such, is sufficient, unless the fact be controverted by plea in abatement, properly verified, and filed at rules, to confer jurisdiction, and to affirmatively show the necessary jurisdictional facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2603-2627; Dec. Dig. § 668.*]

3. MONEY PAID (§ 6*)—PAYMENT BY THIRD PARTY—RELIEF IN EQUITY—ALTERNATIVE RELIEF.

If a stranger pays the debt of another, without the debtor's request, such payment not having been ratified by the debtor, the stranger may sue the debtor in equity, and if such payment be not then ratified, the debt may be enforced against the debtor, in favor of such stranger, as equitable assignee thereof; or, if then ratified, he may be decreed repayment of the amount paid for the use of the debtor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Money Paid, Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

4. INSURANCE (§ 26*)—FOREIGN INSURANCE—CONTRACTS—JURISDICTION OF COURT.

Withdrawal by a foreign insurance company from doing business in this State, will not deprive the courts of this State of jurisdiction of actions subsequently brought against it for liabilities incurred and accruing here before such withdrawal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 33; Dec. Dig. § 26.*]

5. INSURANCE (§ 125*)—CONTRACT—PROPERTY IN ANOTHER STATE.

A policy of fire insurance of a foreign insurance company, which provides that it shall not be valid until countersigned by an agent located in this State, although the property covered by the policy be located in another State, and which provides for no particular place of payment of the loss, becomes a contract in this State and of the county where so countersigned, giving the circuit court of that county jurisdiction of the subject matter of the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 173-175; Dec. Dig. § 125.*]

6. INSURANCE (§ 539*)—PROOFS OF LOSS—WAIVER.

Although a policy of fire insurance requires that proof of loss shall be furnished within sixty days after the fire occurs, unless the time be extended by the company, but there is no provision therein forfeiting the policy for failure to comply with this requirement, the effect of such provision is to postpone right of action until such proof be furnished, but not to wholly destroy all right of recovery thereon.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1328-1336; Dec. Dig. § 539.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Mercer County.

Appeal by the S. M. Smith Insurance Agency against the Hamilton Fire Insurance Company. Decree for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

J. R. Henry, for appellant. Sanders & Crockett, for appellee.

MILLER, J. The decree appealed from adjudged plaintiff to be the equitable assignee or owner of a demand of six hundred and sixty-eight dollars and seventy-five cents, due from the defendant company to J. H. Maness, for loss by fire of his saw mill, covered by a policy of insurance of said company; and that plaintiff recover from defendant seven hundred and forty-eight dollars and thirty-nine cents, principal and interest accrued to the date of said decree, with interest thereon from that date until paid, and costs.

Jurisdiction in equity is predicated on the theory that after said loss, and liability to Maness, plaintiff, at his solicitation and request, but without the knowledge or assent of defendant, paid Maness on account of said loss seven hundred dollars, assuming, the loss being total, or practically so, that defendant was liable to Maness, for eight hundred dollars, the full amount of the policy; that though there was no assignment, or express agreement by Maness to assign to plaintiff seven hundred dollars of his claim against defendant, it was nevertheless the intention of both that plaintiff should be substituted and succeed to all the rights and benefits of Maness, as against the defendant company, to the extent of the sum so paid him; and that plaintiff should be decreed, as it was decreed, to be the equitable assignee and owner to that extent of his demand against defendant.

The defendant company, before answering, as it did, under protest, without waiving its rights, appeared specially, to challenge the jurisdiction of the court, either of the person of defendant, or of the subject-matter of the suit. First, it moved the court to quash the summons, and dismiss the suit from the docket, assigning as grounds therefor, that it had withdrawn from and had ceased to do business in the State of West Virginia, not before the policy was written, in 1906, or the loss occurred, in March, 1907, but on January 1, 1908, before suit brought, and could not, therefore, be sued on said policy in the courts of West Virginia; and that the acceptance of A. C. Scherr, Auditor, endorsed on said summons, as follows, "Service of the within process accepted for Hamilton Fire Insurance Company this 13th day of January, 1908. A. C. Scherr, Auditor," was of no effect, null and void.

[1] The first question is, did the court below err in denying said motion? Withdrawal from the State before suit brought, a fact not appearing on the face of the summons, or in the acceptance of service thereof, if otherwise available, would certainly not be good ground for quashing the summons. That would be matter of abatement, pleadable, if good, by proper plea filed at rules. Sections 15 and 16, chapter 125, Code 1906. Such a plea must not only be filed at rules, as required by said section 16, but by section 39 of said chapter, it must be verified by affidavit. No such plea was filed. Defendant does set up the same matter in its answer, not verified, but the answer, if it had been verified, was not filed within the time required for a plea in abatement.

[2] But it is said jurisdiction must affirmatively appear on the face of the summons and acceptance of service, and as neither the summons nor the acceptance of service shows defendant to have been a foreign corporation, or sued as such, or the auditor's acceptance a valid exercise of authority conferred by statute or by power of attorney, jurisdiction was not thereby made to affirmatively appear, and defendant was therefore never legally brought before the court. For this proposition counsel rely on Hunter v. Spotswood, 1 Wash. (Va.) 145; Moore v. Holt, 55 W. Va. 507, 47 S. E. 252; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 450, 44 S. E. 300, 62 L. R. A. 178, and Railway Co. v. Wright, 50 W. Va. 653, 41 S. E. 147. Neither of these cases support the proposition stated. Railway Co. v. Wright, and Railroad Co. v. Rogers relate to the sufficiency of service on a corporation of process from justice's court, as provided by section 38, chapter 50, Code 1906, which required that the officer's return should show on whom service was had, and that he was served in the county in which he resided. This was because the statute so required. The statute does not prescribe any form of service on foreign corporations, or of acceptance of service by the auditor on their behalf. Of course jurisdiction must always affirmatively appear by proper process, and due and legal execution on or acceptance of service by or on behalf of defendant. But the statute, section 3805, Code 1906, constituting the auditor attorney in fact for and on behalf of every foreign, and non-resident corporation, doing business in this State, and authorizing service of process on him, and empowering him to accept service of process, prescribes no particular form of service. The question presented then is, was the auditor's acceptance of service in this case sufficient? We are of opinion that it was, and that jurisdiction thereby appeared. Having accepted service as auditor, and in the form shown, the court must regard it a declaration on its face, either that defendant was a foreign, or a non-resident corporation, and in either case, the auditor was authorized by law to accept service, binding defendant. The only way in which defendant could put this fact in issue was by plea in abatement, filed at rules, duly verified, as the statute requires. The reason is plain, for mere defect in the form of service or acceptance of service is correctible. Section 15, chapter 125, Code 1906. We conclude, therefore, that there was sufficient process, and service thereof, appearing, to confer jurisdiction on the court.

We need not inquire therefore, whether defendant waived its rights to object to the jurisdiction by subsequent appearances, and defenses to the suit. We must dispose of the case on the issues presented by the pleadings and proofs.

[3] Several questions, some arising on the demurrer alone, others on both demurrer and answer, and the evidence, are presented. The first is had equity jurisdiction in the premises? Whatever may be the rule in other jurisdictions, we think this question is foreclosed in this State by Neely v. Jones, 16 W. Va. 625, 37 Am. Rep. 794, and Crumlish v. Improvement Co., 38 W. Va. 390, 18 S. E. 456, 23 L. R. A. 120, 45 Am. St. Rep. 872. Point three of the syllabus of the latter case, substantially point four of the syllabus in the former case, and particularly applicable here is: "A stranger who pays a debt without request by the debtor, when his payment is not ratified by the debtor, may bring a suit in equity praying relief in the alternative; that is, that if the debtor do not ratify such payment, the debt may be enforced in his favor as its equitable assignee, or, if so ratified, that he be decreed repayment of the amount paid for the use of the debtor." The allegations of the bill in this case, and the proofs taken, make out such a case of equitable jurisdiction.

As the amount advanced or paid Maness was more than the amount of principal decreed, we see no force in the suggestion that the assignment must be complete. At law this is the general rule, but not in equity.

[4] Another question is, did the court below have jurisdiction of the subject-matter? It is argued that because the property destroyed was located in Virginia, the cause of action arose there, and as defendant had withdrawn from and had ceased to do business in this State at the time the suit was brought, the lower court was without jurisdiction of the subject matter thereof. Withdrawal from the State, while liability remained on account of business previously transacted, could not defeat action on a contract made before such withdrawal, nor render void service on or acceptance of process by the auditor. Section 16, chapter 34, Code 1906. This section provides that, "As long as any liability of the company in this State remains unsatisfied, no revocation of any such power of attorney shall be of any effect, until after a like power to some other person residing in this State has been filed by the said company in the office of the auditor. And when any such attorney dies or resigns, the company shall immediately make a new appointment and file the evidence thereof as aforesaid, until all its liabilities in this State are discharged."

[5] But did the cause of action arise in Mercer County? giving the court jurisdiction on that ground? The policy of insurance provides, on its face, that it shall not be valid until countersigned by the duly authorized agent of the company at Bluefield, West Virginia. The policy was countersigned by S. M. Smith, Agent, at that place. This court has decided that if a policy so provides, and be so countersigned, it is a contract of the State where so countersigned. Galloway v. Standard Fire Insurance Co., 45 W. Va. 237, 31 S. E. 969. This case also decides, citing authority, that if a policy does not say the loss shall be payable in any particular place it shall be payable at the place where issued. The policy involved here provides for no particular place of payment. It was payable therefore at Bluefield, where issued, and mailed to the assured. Clearly then the court below had jurisdiction of the subject matter.

Another point made is, that the contract is invalid by the laws of Virginia. This point is sufficiently answered by what has just been said on the question of want of jurisdiction.

[6] Lastly, was right of action forfeited by the failure of the assured to furnish proofs of loss within the time provided by the policy? This was the only ground on which liability was denied by defendant, on receipt of the proofs of loss, mailed to it June 5, 1907. The policy does provide that the insured shall furnish the proofs of loss within sixty days after the fire, unless the time be extended by the company. But there is no provision forfeiting the policy for failure to comply with this requirement. This point is fully covered by the fifth point of the syllabus of Munson v. German Insurance Company, 55 W. Va. 423, 47 S. E. 160, as follows: "If a fire insurance policy provide that proof of loss shall be furnished within a given time, and that no action shall be brought upon it until such proof is furnished, and provide for its forfeiture for certain causes, but not for failure to furnish such proof of loss, failure to furnish such proof of loss within the given time does not wholly destroy all right of recovery, but only delays right of action; but action upon it cannot be brought until such proof is furnished."

No other point deserving consideration being presented, and seeing no error therein, we affirm the judgment below.

(68 W. Va. 779)

SLATER v. WILLIAMSBURG CITY FIRE INS. CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Oct. 18, 1910. On Petition to Rehear, May 19, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INSURANCE (§ 556*)—POWER OF ADJUSTER—WAIVER OF PROOFS OF LOSS.

An adjuster of an insurance company has no authority or power, as such, to waive proof of loss, required by the policy, as a condition precedent to a right of action, by denying liability on the part of the insurer upon other grounds, when the policy contains the clause, limiting the authority of agents, found in the standard insurance policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1374-1377; Dec. Dig. § 556.*]

Error from Circuit Court, Mingo County.

Action by D. F. Slater against the Williamsburg City Fire Insurance Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed, and judgment rendered for defendant.

Holt & Duncan, for plaintiff in error.
Stokes & Bronson, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. In an action, upon a fire insurance policy, against the Williamsburg City Fire Insurance Company, D. F. Slater recovered a judgment for $1,000, in the circuit court of Mingo county. The defendant relied chiefly upon failure of the plaintiff to furnish a proof of loss. None was furnished within the time specified in the policy, nor at any time before the action was commenced. Denial of liability, on other grounds, by an adjuster, is relied upon by the plaintiff as a waiver of fulfillment of this condition. There was a demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence and a conditional verdict, on which the court rendered judgment, after overruling the demurrer.

If the adjuster had no power or authority to waive this condition of the policy, and it was not waived, no right of action had accrued, for performance thereof was made a condition precedent to a right of action, by the terms of the policy. There is no evidence or claim of waiver by any other representative of the company, nor by the company otherwise than by the acts and conduct of the adjuster. Under the policy sued on, no agent could waive any of its promissory warranties. It is a standard policy, containing a clause limiting the authority of the officers and agents of the company, such as that found in the policy sued on in Morris v. Duchess Ins. Co., 68 S. E. 22, in which it was held that an adjuster, without special authority so to do, cannot waive performance of this condition of the policy by denial of the company's liability or otherwise. See, also, Cooley's Briefs L. Ins. vol. 3, p. 2497. This conclusion renders it unnecessary to inquire whether the conduct of the adjuster would have constituted a waiver, if he had had authority to waive conditions.

As no right of action on the policy has accrued, there is no occasion to consider the other defenses and controversies, disclosed by the record.

It results from these conclusions, that the judgment must be reversed, the demurrer to the evidence sustained, and judgment rendered for the defendant.

On Petition to Rehear.

The argument accompanying the petition to rehear discloses considerable authority against the conclusion here stated, based upon the theory of limitation of the nonwaiver clause to the life of the policy antedating the loss. They say this clause is inapplicable after the loss occurs, since the policy has run its course and is no longer operative in the sense of protecting property, and it only remains to agree upon the amount of the loss and pay it. This is a plausible theory, but we find no warrant in the terms of the policy for its adoption. The nonwaiver clause is broad, withholding from agents power to waive "any provision or condition" of the policy otherwise than in a prescribed manner. We see no room in this clause for any exception.

We have re-examined the evidence as to the authority of the adjuster and find nothing to sustain the claim of general authority in him. Though he says he was sent to the scene of the fire to adjust the loss, and that no other person had had anything to do with the matter, or authority to have anything to do with it, these facts do not make out a general agency in him. The language means only that the adjustment had not been delegated to any other person. Adjustment does not include liability and payment.

These questions need not be committed to agents in the field. Authority in an adjudicator to deal with them must rest upon more than mere surmise, suspicion, or slight inference.

(59 W. Va. 233)

HOFFMAN v. SHOEMAKER.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 25, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 19, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 743*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—TRESPASS QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT.

A judgment for the plaintiff in an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against a defendant, claiming a way over the premises on which the act of alleged trespass was done, is not conclusive of the right claimed by the defendant, unless it is shown to have been relied upon by the latter as a defense and actually litigated in the action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1253, 1275-1277; Dec. Dig. § 743.*]

2. EASEMENTS (§ 18*)—WAYS.

A grantor may claim a way over the granted premises, as reserved by implication, if it is shown to be strictly necessary to the use and enjoyment of adjacent land retained by him, and the intent to reserve it is not negated by any express terms of the deed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 50-55; Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

3. EASEMENTS (§ 17*)—GRANT OR RESERVATION BY IMPLICATION—WAYS—NECESSITY FOR CONTINUITY.

The legal principle, requiring an easement to be "continuous" as a requisite to a grant or reservation thereof by implication, is not applicable to a way.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 45-49; Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

4. EASEMENTS (§ 1*)—"CONTINUOUS EASEMENT."

A continuous easement is one which operates without the interference of man, such as a water course or a drainpipe, and a way is said not to be continuous, because, in the use of it, there is involved the personal action of the owner in setting his foot upon it or driving his team or cattle upon it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 2, p. 1511.]

Robinson, J., dissenting.

Appeal from Circuit Court, Mineral County.

Suit by Charles S. Hoffman against Charles W. Shoemaker. Decree for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed and dismissed.

H. K. Drane and W. H. Griffith, for appellant. Frank C. Reynolds and Taylor Morrison, for appellee.

POFFENBARGER, J. In this suit by a landowner to enjoin the defendant from the use of a right of way over his land claimed in part by a deed and in part by prescription and long user, the defenses were a former adjudication in favor of the plaintiff and insufficiency of the defendant's evidence to establish the right claimed by him. The decree appealed from, general in form and without indication as to its legal basis, is for the plaintiff, and perpetually enjoins the defendant from the use of said right of way.

The plaintiff owns three contiguous tracts of land, adjacent to the northwestern end of which lies the farm of the defendant. From the latter an old road, holding a southeasterly course, runs over the farm of the plaintiff, consisting of said three tracts to a public road called the "New Creek Pike." The evidence conclusively shows that this road has been used by persons residing back of the plaintiff's land for a long time, 40 or 50 years, and by the defendant and his predecessors in title for at least 25 or 30 years, and possibly for the whole period aforesaid. If nothing else appeared, this would make under our decisions a clear case of a right of way by prescription. But there are some other facts to be considered. The three tracts of land constituting the plaintiff's farm seem to have been owned at one time by James B. Rees as a single tract. The deeds exhibited indicate this. By deed dated February 6, 1884, said Rees conveyed to Joseph W. Parish a tract of about 56 acres practically out of the center of what now constitutes the plaintiff's farm. In that deed he granted to Parish a right of way over the land thereby conveyed, determinable as to location by the old existing road, out to the public road. He also reserved a right of way over the land granted to Parish "for the use and benefit of William Leatherman, his heirs and assigns." At that time Leatherman owned the farm now owned and occupied by the defendant. Hence this reservation constituted an exception from the grant to Parish in favor of Leatherman, the predecessor in title of Charles W. Shoemaker, the defendant here. The right of way, so given to him or recognized by these deeds, did not extend up to Leatherman's land, but he used and enjoyed a right of way over Rees' land down to the road so provided for him over the Parish land. Robert Burkhisser having apparently acquired the Parish land and the James B. Rees land lying between it and the public road, containing 104 acres, conveyed both of these tracts to the plaintiff, C. S. Hoffman, by deed dated April 3, 1900. Just one year later William S. Leatherman conveyed to Charles W. Shoemaker his tract of land. In the meantime some other conveyances had taken place. S. S. Rees who, in some way, became the successor of James B. Rees to the northwestern part of the Rees land, adjoined by the Leatherman land, conveyed it to A. T. Leatherman, the son of William S. Leatherman, by deed dated December 10, 1889. A. T. Leatherman, by deed dated December 15, 1889, conveyed to his father, William S. Leatherman, a small portion of this land, containing about 18 acres. A part of the old road leading from Leatherman's land down to the Parish tract was wholly on this 18 acres and the balance of it on the line between it and the other land then held by A. T. Leatherman. The evidence tends to show that W. S. Leatherman made this purchase to strengthen and secure his right of way. The Leathermans being unable to pay for this land, Rees took it back, by a deed from A. T. Leatherman, dated December 11, 1895; W. S. Leatherman having reconveyed the 18 acres to A. T. Leatherman on the same day. In this reconveyance W. S. Leatherman did not reserve his road over the 18 acres, but from the date of that deed, December 11, 1895, until April 3, 1901, he continued to use the road without objection from Rees, and also without objection from Hoffman, who acquired the Rees land by deed dated April 3, 1900. Thereafter Chas. W. Shoemaker, who became the owner of the Leatherman land April 3, 1901, used the road over this Rees land without objection from the plaintiff until about the year 1903. Some time in the year 1903, the latter placed a wire fence across the road, and the defendant applied for, but did not obtain, an injunction, and the fence was removed. Plaintiff says he removed it and suffered the defendant to continue the use of the road, but not that there was any agreement between them or that, with the consent of the defendant, the subsequent user was permissive only. All that appears is that the fence was put up, the injunction applied for, the fence removed, in two or three days from the date of its construction, and the defendant continued the use of the road. Later there were some negotiations between the parties in an effort to compromise and settle the controversy by agreement. This having failed, the plaintiff some time in 1908 locked the gates and built additional fences across the road. These the defendant opened by cutting a gate from its hinges, cutting a wire fence and hitching a horse to another fence and a gate and pulling them down. Thereupon the plaintiff instituted an action of trespass against him and recovered a judgment for $1.50, which is the one relied upon as a former adjudication.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[1] As to the effect of a judgment in such an action upon title, the authorities are in great conflict. Dickinson v. Mankin, 61 W. Va. 429, 56 S. E. 824; Clark v. Dower, 67 W. Va. 298, 68 S. E. 369. In the latter case the judgment was held not to be appealable, although a special plea was entered by the defendant, setting up a right of way by prescription. In the former the title was held not to have been settled and determined, although the defendant entered both a plea of not guilty and plea of liberum tenementum, and evidence was adduced on the question of title. No good purpose would be subserved here in attempting to analyze or reconcile the conflicting authorities, or deduce from them the true rule, since we are of the opinion that the right claimed by defendant was not litigated in the action of law. The only plea shown by any order entered in the case was that of not guilty. A paper is certified by the clerk of the trial court which purports to be a copy of a special plea, setting up the right of way by prescription, but we find no order showing it to have been tendered or filed, or in any way made a part of the record. Though it is not clearly shown that any of the evidence used in that action has been made a part of the evidence in this cause, or that the right was litigated and determined, what on its face seems to have been evidence used in the action at law has been incorporated in this record. No witness testifies that it is the evidence in that case nor does the clerk of the circuit court certify that it was. However, conceding it to be such, it only shows the title of the plaintiff to the land, the erection of fences and locking of gates across the road and the breaking of the same by the defendant and his continued use of the road. No evidence of any prescriptive right was introduced or offered by the defendant. Hence we are clearly of the opinion that neither by plea nor evidence was the defendant's right of way put in issue. So we hold the defense of former adjudication to be unsustainable.

[2] The all-important question remaining to be considered is the effect of the deed made by William S. Leatherman to S. S. Rees, conveying land on which a part of the road is without a reservation thereof. Ordinarily a grantor is not permitted to set up by parol any reservation against his deed purporting on its face to grant all of his right, title, and interest in a tract or parcel of land. Of course, he cannot claim any of the land against his deed. Such a construction of a deed would render it nugatory and defeat its purpose in whole or in part. Under a well-settled rule, it must be so construed as to give it effect to the extent of its entire subject-matter. It is nevertheless possible for a grantor to claim, under exceptional and peculiar circumstances, an easement over the land granted as appurtenant to other lands retained by him. This easement is not the land itself, and the retention thereof does not wholly defeat the deed as to any part of it. It is a mere right of use, not title. In such cases the question is one of intention, but the circumstances must be such as to disclose the existence of that intent beyond any reasonable doubt, and such intent must arise from necessity, else the doubt is not excluded and the reservation cannot be maintained. The law on this subject is stated as follows in Jones on Easements, § 136: "There is no implied reservation of an easement in case one sells a part of his land over which he has previously exercised a privilege in favor of the land he retains, unless the burden is apparent, continuous, and strictly necessary for the enjoyment of the land retained. A grantor cannot derogate from his own grant, and as a general rule he can retain a right over a portion of his land conveyed absolutely only by express reservation." Again, in section 138, this author says, quoting from Lord Justice Cotton: "So, again, where there is existing at the time that which is said to be a continuous easement, and of necessity—not an easement strictly, but that which is in the nature of an easement—as a way of necessity, of that there is or may be an implied reservation. Take the common case of a man having a field, which he does not sell, in the midst of land which he sells. Of course, it is implied that he intends to have the power of using the field not sold, and not to give the exclusive right or control over it to the person to whom he sells the surrounding land, and a way over that is said to be a way of necessity, and that is reserved without express words as an implied reservation."

[3] In the text-books and decided cases we are told that the easement to pass to the grantee, or be retained by the grantor by implication only, must be apparent, continuous, and necessary. Naturally the use of these terms is sometimes confusing, for the reason that they are employed in the long course of discussion, and not always defined. Each has its own definition with which the reader is supposed to be familiar. An apparent easement need not be actually visible. It is enough that the facts and circumstances fairly construed will disclose it, as in the case of a drainpipe under the surface into which the water is conducted from a roof. There are different kinds of necessity. A thing may be necessary in the physical sense or in a practical or legal sense. So the word "continuous" has its different meanings. In a practical sense a road is continuous as long as it is maintained and used, although the use is unautomatic, and from necessity intermittent. But it is not continuous within the meaning of the technical law of easements.

[4] The distinction made is that a continuous easement is one which operates without the interference of man, such as a water course or a drainpipe. A way is said not to be continuous, because, in the use of it, there is involved the personal action of the owner in setting his foot upon it or driving his team or cattle upon it. Jones on Easements, §§ 143-153, inclusive. Judges and text-writers do not always stop to define these terms. Hence the danger of misapprehension on the part of the reader and the necessity of noting the facts in respect to the terms used.

In some decisions it has been held, though perhaps erroneously, that an apparent and technically continuous easement would always pass to a grantee, or be reserved to the grantor, by implication, even though it did not appear to be necessary. In other words, if the owner of two adjacent pieces of property having subjected one to the use of the other by making a drain over it or running an undersurface ditch through it, or otherwise connected them, and this connection was apparent, it was a continuous easement, because it was self-acting, and, being apparent, if he conveyed away the servient estate, without an express reservation of the easement, it was reserved to him by implication as matter of intent arising from the known facts and circumstances, and without any consideration of the element of necessity. Lampman v. Milks, 21 N. Y. 505. For this proposition, Selden, Judge, delivering the opinion, referred to the case of Coppy, 11 Henry VII, 25, cited from the Year Books by Gale & Whately on Easements, p. 41. In Nicholas v. Chamberlain, Cro. Jac. 121, "It was held by all the court, upon demurrer, that if one erect a house, and build a conduit thereto, in another part of his land, and convey water by pipes to the house, and afterwards sell the house with the appurtenances, excepting the land, or sell the land to another, reserving to himself the house, the conduit and pipes pass with the house, because it is necessary and quasi appendant thereto; and he shall have the liberty by law to dig in the land for mending the pipes, or making them new, as the case may require." That case has been regarded as authority for the same proposition. Another case propounding the doctrine is Robins v. Barnes, Hob. 131. In these old cases, it is said to have been held that, if the common owner, having used the two properties as connected by a lead pipe or some other continuous arrangement, sell one piece of the land and cut that pipe or otherwise break the connection, he thereby altered the rule by signifying intent to destroy the easement. He thereby rendered the easement no longer continuous in nature, and overcame the presumption of intent either to grant or reserve the easement, arising from the condition of the property.

This rule of construction came in time to be regarded as too liberal, and the later authorities added the element of necessity, holding that an easement of this kind must be not only apparent and continuous, but also necessary. This addition has in later years been a subject of learned and earnest discussion in both England and America, and is now generally accepted. Accordingly, we find this in Jones on Easements, § 156: "To establish an easement by an implied reservation, where there has been a unity of possession, and a subsequent sale of a portion of the land over which the easement is claimed, such easement must have been apparent, continuous, and necessary at the time of such sale." As authorities for this proposition, the author cites cases involving, not ways, but drains and other such easements as would have been retained by implication, under the old common law, without the element of necessity. They are Crosland v. Rogers, 32 S. C. 130, 10 S. E. 874; Ferguson v. Witsell, 5 Rich. Law (S. C.) 280, 57 Am. Dec. 744, and Elllott v. Rhett, 5 Rich. Law (S. C.) 405, 57 Am. Dec. 750, all involving drains. There is reason for saying a drain must be continuous, for that is its nature. It is one of its essential elements or qualities. It is continuous by operation in and of itself without human aid. To be a drain, therefore, it must have this quality, and, to have an easement for drainage, a dominant owner must have either an artificial or a natural means of continuous drainage, though continuous and unceasing flowage is not necessary. Close scrutiny of the history of the use of the terms "apparent" and "continuous" will disclose that they are applicable only to technically continuous easements or quasi easements, and not at all to noncontinuous easements. The latter rest upon necessity only, cannot be continuous, and probably need not be apparent.

This quality or characteristic of continuousness does not belong to a right of way. Such an easement is not self-operating. It is only a place in which its owner operates. So it is not continuous in the technical sense of the word. Jones on Easements, § 143. Therefore, to say that, in order to pass to a grantee, or be retained by a grantor, by implication, a right of way must be apparent, continuous, and necessary, is to state that which can never be true of such an easement, and also that it never can pass or be retained in that way. It seems clear, therefore, that a right of way, to pass or be retained by implication, need not be continuous. If it must, it never can be the subject of an implied grant or reservation. That it can be is put beyond doubt by authority, both English and American. A way of necessity may be reserved to a grantor by implication, though it is confessedly not continuous. Pinnington v. Galland, 10 Eng. Rul. Cas. 35, 9 Ex. 1. In that case Martin, Baron, said it might be both granted and reserved by implication. For the first proposition he quotes from the note of Mr. Serjt. Williams to the case of Pomfret v. Ricroft as follows: "Where a man, having a close surrounded with his own land, grants the close to another in fee, for life, or for years, the grantee shall have a way over the grantor's land as incident to the grant; for without it he cannot derive any benefit from the grant." As to the other proposition, he said: "There is no doubt, apparently, a greater difficulty in holding the right of way to exist in this case than in the other; but, according to the same very great authority, the law is the same, for the note proceeds thus: 'So it is when he grants the land and reserves the close to himself.' And he cites several authorities which fully bear him out.

Clark v. Cogge, Staple v. Heydon, Chichester v. Lethbridge, Willes, 72, note. It no doubt seems extraordinary that a man should have a right which derogates from his own grant; but the law is distinctly laid down to be so, and probably for the reason given in Dutton v. Taylor, that it was for the public good, as otherwise the close surrounded would not be capable of cultivation." That case is one of actual decision, not mere dictum. In discussing the law generally in a case not involving a right of way nor a continuous easement, Bacon, Chancellor, said in Wheelodon v. Burrows, 12 Ch. Div. 31, 44: "But I take it that the rule of implication is founded upon the mere necessity of the case, and the impossibility of admitting that the contract and the intention of the parties to it would be complete without the implication. The subject of the implication is held to have been involved in the terms of the contract, and the justice and honesty of the transaction require that the law should supply that, the expression of which by the inadvertence of the parties has not been expressed in words. Upon this principle every one of the cases referred to is founded, and all are reconcilable; and no case has been cited, nor, as I believe, can any be found, in which an implication has been made not based upon necessity and the justice which that necessity imperatively calls into active operation." This is a broad and liberal view, stripped of all fanciful, narrow, and technical considerations, not applicable to any particular kind of easements, but universally reducing the whole question to one of intent, determinable by the rule of necessity. It accords with the just and reasonable observation found in Jones' quotation from Lord Justice Cotton in Russell v. Watts, 25 Ch. Div. 559. The rule of necessity as justifying a grant or reservation of a right of way by implication is recognized and asserted in Fetters v. Humphreys, 18 N. J. Eq. 260, but the way was there denied, because it was not necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of the land. The chancellor in that case distinguishes between continuous and noncontinuous easements, holding that the former may pass by implication without necessity, but that the latter cannot. After reviewing the decisions at great length, he said: "Discontinuous easements not constantly apparent are continued or created by a severance only when they are necessary." He concluded by saying: "The property of the complainant could be better and more beneficially enjoyed by the use of this alley, as it was used by the testator in his lifetime, but it is not necessary to the beneficial enjoyment of it. The right of way therefore cannot arise by implication from the devise to her." The proposition, with its limitations, is also recognized in Warren v. Blake, 54 Me. 276, 89 Am. Dec. 748; the court holding that a right of way may be reserved by implication in a case of strict necessity, but denying it in the particular case, because such necessity was not shown. It is stated in the same way in Carbrey v. Willis, 7 Allen (Mass.) 364, 83 Am. Dec. 688. In that case Mr. Justice Hoar said: "A way when it is strictly a way of necessity has been considered as falling under the same rule, and as passing to the grantee, or being reserved by the grantor, without any express words of grant or reservation. In the case at bar, the way and other privileges claimed by defendant were not annexed to the sugar house estate by any natural or legal necessity." In Pingree v. McDuffie, 56 N. H. 306, the court held as follows: "A party having conveyed a portion of his land over which was the only means of access to the remaining land, held, that a right of way by necessity to the remaining land was reserved." A right of way to the grantor by necessity was sustained in Davies v. Sear, L. R. 7 Eq. Cas. 427. In this state a way of necessity may be granted by implication. This is so well settled that no authority need be cited for it. Like reason for an implied reservation is obvious.

These authorities amply justify the view that Leatherman impliedly reserved the right of way over the land he granted by his deed of December 11, 1895, if such right of way was strictly necessary to the enjoyment of his property. He clearly has a right of way by prescription over the Parish and Burkhiser lands down to the public road. He had formerly enjoyed the use of a road over the Rees-Leatherman 18 acres, down to the terminus of the old road at the northern Parish line. The reservation of this, if sustainable, completed his outlet to the public road. Was such reservation necessary to the enjoyment of his land in the strict and extreme sense of the term? On this question the evidence is not as complete as it might have been made. It is not shown that the defendant's lands are surrounded by lands of strangers over which he has no right of way. But it seems to be conceded that neither he nor his predecessors in title had any other means of access to the land. The plaintiff himself told the defendant, shortly after he had purchased it, he was surprised at his purchasing it, if he had no outlet or no right of way from it, and that "he had no right of way out of the land and he couldn't get in and out of it"; and admits that thereupon the defendant said he had the right of way he now claims. This question was propounded to the defendant: "Have you any other outlet or means by which you can get from your farm to the New Creek Pike, except over the road running through the Hoffman farm?" His answer was: "No, sir. None at all." Leatherman was put on the witness stand, and in the course of his examination this question was propounded to him: "You may state, Mr. Leatherman, whether or not this is the only way by which you could get out from the place formerly owned by you, which you sold to Charley Shoemaker, over this road-way that you have talked about?" His answer was: "Well, there could be other ways you could get out, of course, but it's the only way there has been since I have been there. It was always a free road, so we could get in and out as we pleased, so we kept the gaps up." This answer seems to relate to the physical possibility of making a road in a different location upon the same land or upon other lands, if the right had been or could be acquired for it; but it does not import any right to make a road over any other land, or that defendant's lands extend to a public road or any other he has the right to use. On the whole, we think it sufficiently appears that neither the defendant nor his predecessor could get out over his own land to any public road or had any right of way over any lands, other than those in question here.

These conclusions result in a reversal of the decree, dissolution of the injunction, and dismissal of the bill.

ROBINSON, J., dissenting.

(69 W. Va. 80)

KING et al. v. PORTER et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 4, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 232*)—BONA FIDE PURCHASER—NOTICE.

To be notice to a purchaser, possession of land by one other than the vendor must be actual, distinct and visible. It must be such as is inconsistent with the title of the vendor. A mere unoccupied improvement is not notice of another's rights.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 540-562; Dec. Dig. § 232.*]

2. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 238*)—BONA FIDE PURCHASER—NOTICE.

A purchaser with notice from a purchaser without notice is protected in his title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 580-582; Dec. Dig. § 238.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Randolph County.

Bill by J. J. King and others against W. A. Porter and others. Decree for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

W. B. Maxwell, for appellants. Talbott & Hoover, for appellees.

ROBINSON, J. By this suit, the heirs of Peter King claim title to 150 acres of land as against H. Yokum, Trustee, and the Roaring Creek Lumber Company. The plaintiffs allege title and possession in themselves and seek to annul the claim of title on the part of the defendants as a cloud. From a decree dismissing the bill on a hearing, the plaintiffs have appealed.

The merits of the case are against the plaintiffs, and the decree is plainly right. It is useless to consider the question of the demurrer to the bill, and some other minor questions that have been raised. While we assume the broadest view, in every particular, that can be taken for the plaintiffs, we cannot grant them relief.

In 1856, Peter King purchased of Henry O. Middleton 150 acres of land by a contract in writing which was never recorded. The vendee took possession of the land and resided thereon until 1870. He then removed to Grafton, and later to Pittsburg, residing at the latter place until his death, in 1897. It is claimed that he left the land in charge of John A. King, who lived on a tract adjoining. But, even though we look to testimony that cannot properly be considered in the cause, certain it is that there is no evidence as to actual possession of the land in behalf of Peter King after he left the premises, except for the short period of a year or two, and that only of the most desultory and uncertain nature. The fences around the limited improvements which Peter King had made were totally destroyed by fire, and the small area that he had improved in time became covered with brambles, laurel, and second growth timber. Some stones of a chimney only were left to indicate that there had once been a house on the land. The land lay in a mountainous region and was a part of the unfenced forest. Peter King never had the land entered for taxation and never paid any taxes thereon. Nor did he ever take steps to obtain a deed from Middleton, or to protect the tract from the adversary possession of others. The whole story, only a few details of which we have given, indeed makes a case of abandonment of the land and relinquishment of claim to ownership thereof.

Now, this tract of 150 acres was a part of a large territory of land embraced in several adjoining surveys that had been patented to Middleton. Middleton died in 1867. His will empowered his personal representatives to sell the lands owned by him in this state. The administrator with the will annexed, in 1874, sold and conveyed to Totten a tract of 1050 acres which included the Peter King parcel. The deed described the land conveyed, by specific metes and bounds, and then immediately recited: "Containing one thousand and fifty acres more or less, the tract of land being the residue unsold out of several larger surveys granted to Henry O. Middleton, to-wit: one survey of 1000 acres, one of 825 acres, one of 6000 acres, and one of 1650 acres." There is no evidence that any one had any sort of possession of the Peter

King parcel at the time Totten purchased the 1050 acres which embraces it. Nothing in the case brings notice to Totten of any rights of Peter King, unless it be the fact that there were no doubt evidences that at a prior time some one had been in possession and made small improvements. But Peter King had left the land before Totten purchased, and it is not proved that Totten was put on notice or even inquiry of King's rights, unless the mere evidences of former improvement did it. It does not even appear that a house stood on the land at this time. A little later, Totten conveyed to Kutz and others, and one Jabez Wolley became an owner of an interest in the 1050 acres. Wolley maintained a tenant, Lantz, on the 1050 acres for several years prior to the conveyance of the same made by Wolley and others to Yokum, Trustee, and Lantz continued as the tenant of the latter to the time of the institution of this suit. So the defendants and those under whom they hold have had actual possession under the Totten deed to the 1050 acres for a period longer than the statutory bar.

In 1905, one of the heirs of Peter King came from Pittsburg and took up his residence on the 150 acres. The Coal & Coke Railroad had been built through the tract, and the land had evidently become quite valuable. No more was it the wild, cheap mountain land which his father had deserted and failed to protect from the ownership of others. On behalf of himself and the other heirs, he sought the legal title which his father had failed to call in from Middleton. By a suit against Middleton's heirs only some of whom were proceeded against as unknown, the heirs of Peter King were given a deed, through the offices of a special commissioner. It is upon a legal title so obtained that the plaintiffs by this suit seek to cancel the title of Yokum, Trustee, as far as it affects the 150 acres, and to enjoin the cutting of the timber thereon by the Roaring Creek Lumber Company, which now owns the standing timber on the 1050 acres through a conveyance of the same by Yokum.

Presumably the taxes on the whole 1050 acres were paid by Middleton and those that succeeded him in title through the conveyance made by his administrator. That fact being true, and the legal title to the 150 acres not having been severed from that to the 1050 acres, the King claim cannot be considered as forfeited for nonpayment of taxes. If King had good equitable title to the 150 acres, of which those who purchased the 1050 acres had notice, and the owners of the 1050 acres paid the taxes on the whole, they did so in King's behalf, as far as the 150 acres was concerned, since they must be considered as trustees holding the legal title for him. We do not consider the question of forfeiture as pertinent. But a pertinent question is: Did Totten buy and take a conveyance from Middleton's administrator with notice of King's rights under his contract of purchase?

[1] We have stated that the evidence shows no notice to Totten relative to King's rights, at the time he purchased, unless it be that the mere mark of a former improvement on the land put him on inquiry. Did it do so? It is certainly true that one purchasing land must take notice of the rights of another in actual possession of the land. 18 Enc. Digest Va. & W. Va. 598; also Preston v. West (decided this term) 70 S. E. 853. But to be notice the possession must be actual and existing. It must be that which is inconsistent with the title for which the purchaser is negotiating. A mere mark of former possession is not notice, for that is entirely consistent with the legal title. A vacant house or unoccupied field does not put a purchaser to notice. Neither raises a presumption against the legal title, for it is by no means inconsistent with one's title to have such things on land. The following from a standard work is in point: "With respect to the character of possession which is sufficient to put a person upon inquiry, and which will be equivalent to actual notice of rights or equities in persons other than those having a title of record, it is well established by an unbroken current of authority that such possession and occupation must be actual, open and visible; it must not be equivocal, occasional or for a special or temporary purpose; neither must it be consistent with the title of the apparent owner of record. All the cases agree that notice will not be imputed to a purchaser except where it is a reasonable and just inference from visible facts; and these can only exist where there is an exclusive possession, actual and distinct, and manifested by such acts of ownership as would naturally be observed and known by others." 1 Warvelle on Vendors, § 271.

[2] The argument that the Roaring Creek Lumber Company had notice of the King claim before it purchased is not tenable, even if the fact asserted is true. That company is protected because it is a purchaser of the Totten title. Since Totten purchased of Middleton's administrator without notice of King's rights, then those who hold under Totten are protected, even if they had notice. A purchaser with notice from a purchaser without notice is protected in his title. If it were otherwise an innocent purchaser might be deprived of the benefit of disposing of his estate. 2 Minor's Inst. (4th Ed.) 234; 13 Enc. Digest Va. & W. Va. 589.

Plaintiffs urge that the deed to Totten, by the recital in it which we have quoted above, imparted notice of the King claim to him and all who hold under him. In other words, they say that the deed, by the use of the words "the tract of land being the residue unsold," gave notice that there were vended parcels within the 1050 acres conveyed. This recital surely imparts exactly the contrary sense to that claimed for it. The clause virtually says that none of the land within the boundary of the 1050 acres has been sold. It indeed asserts that all within the boundary was "unsold."

The defendants, as parties holding under one who was a purchaser without notice, are protected against the claim of plaintiffs. The title of defendants is not a cloud on plaintiffs' rights; it is the real protected title to the land. Even were defendants not protected on this score, it would seem that plaintiffs would be barred from the relief sought by reason of laches and adversary possession. But it is unnecessary to discuss these features of the case.

An order will be entered affirming the decree.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(89 W. Va. 51)

JUSTICE v. MOORE.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
March 14, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. DETINUE (§ 17*)—PLEADING—ALLEGATION OF VALUE.

A declaration in detinue for sawlogs, stating the average value of each and the aggregate value of all, suffices as to specification of value.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Detinue, Cent. Dig. §§ 26-33; Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

2. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 3*)—VENDOR'S LIEN.

A vendor of timber, severed from his land by the vendee, under a written contract, may, in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, retain possession thereof to secure payment of the purchase money, although the title has passed to the vendee, and such right of retention is not relinquished nor destroyed by a clause in the contract, saying the timber shall "stand good for the purchase money."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 10; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

3. CHATTEL MORTGAGES (§ 140*)—VENDOR'S LIEN.

If the vendee in such case execute a deed of trust upon the property so sold, while it remains upon the lands of the vendor, the right of the trustee therein to possession of the timber is subordinate to that of the vendor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Chattel Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 237, 238; Dec. Dig. § 140.*]

4. DETINUE (§ 5*)—RIGHT OF ACTION—SUFFICIENCY OF POSSESSION.

If a vendor, having such right of possession, repurchase the timber in consideration of his claim for purchase money, after execution of the deed of trust and with notice thereof, and then make delivery of the same, under a contract of sale from him to a stranger, at a place on his own land or land of another, under a license secured by him for the purpose, and thereafter the trustee in the deed of trust take possession of the same, such vendor has sufficient prior possession to enable him to maintain detinue against the trustee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Detinue, Cent. Dig. §§ 5-9; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

5. DETINUE (§ 8*)—DEFENSES—OUTSTANDING TITLE IN THIRD PERSON.

A defendant in an action of detinue cannot set up, against a plaintiff whose possession he has wrongfully invaded by taking the property, an outstanding title in a third person, under which he does not claim.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Detinue, Cent. Dig. § 14; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Logan County.

Action by W. E. Justice against J. M. Moore, trustee. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Lilly & Shrewsbury, for plaintiff in error. Campbell, Brown & Davis, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. Right to the possession of certain sawlogs is the matter involved in the judgment to which this writ of error was obtained.

W. E. Justice, by a written contract, dated January 18, 1896, sold to Aaron Browning & Co. certain poplar trees, divided into classes, according to size, for determination of purchase prices, which were $1 and $2 per tree. Along with the timber, he sold a log cart at the price of $60. The last sentence in the contract reads as follows: "The said timber to stand good for the purchase money and expense." Under it, the Brownings cut the timber and marketed a portion of it. In so doing, they became indebted to Justice for goods and supplies to the amount of $300, and the stumpage or price of the timber amounted to $500. For these two items, amounting to $800, a note was given. The Brownings also incurred indebtedness, for merchandise and supplies, to the Standard Mercantile Company, of which U. B. Buskirk was president and manager. To secure this, they executed a deed of trust on the timber, dated January 15, 1897, in which J. M. Moore and Joseph Anderson were made trustees. Having become financially embarrassed and unable to complete their timber enterprise, the Brownings, some time in the same year, resold the timber, or relinquished their rights and interest in it, to Justice, in consideration of what they owed him, said to be $500; payment of $300 on the note being claimed. At this time some of it had been rafted and sold, and the balance having been cut down lay in the woods as felled trees on the land of Justice. He cut them up into logs, 216 in number, hauled them to the Guyandotte river, at the mouth of Leatherwood creek, branded them, and put some of them over the bank and into the river, and sold them to Newman & Spanner along with other timber, and they measured, branded, and paid for them. As to the exact condition he left them in, there is some controversy. At this juncture Moore, the trustee in the deed of trust, and Buskirk appeared upon the scene, claiming title to the logs and right of possession, branded, took possession of, and advertised them for sale under the deed of trust. Thereupon Justice brought this action of detinue, regained possession of the logs by giving a bond, and, after some two or three abortive jury trials, a verdict and judgment that he retain possession thereof. In the meantime, Newman & Spanner were permitted by Justice to take them under their purchase from him.

The demurrer to the declaration, founded upon alleged insufficiency of specification of the value of the property, was properly overruled. The declaration demands 216 sawlogs of the average value of $5.25 and a total value of $1,134. Good pleading in detinue requires specification of the value of each article sued for. The purpose of this is to give the defendant notice of what is demanded of him. It is not the function of the declaration to fix unalterably the value of the property, but only to apprise the defendant of the nature and amount of the demand. The averment of value in this declaration puts a price upon each log. It may be, in some instances, too high, and in others too low; but the actual value is a matter for determination upon the evidence. We think the declaration sufficient.

The giving of two instructions, at the instance of the plaintiff, is assigned as error. One of these told the jury they should find for the plaintiff, if they believed from the evidence that Buskirk, president of the Standard Mercantile Company, had notice of the contract for the purchase of the timber at the time he took the deed of trust; and the other that the plaintiff could maintain his action, if the jury should find the logs had not been put into the stream by him, in pursuance of the contract to sell them to Newman & Spanner, at the time at which Moore, the trustee, took possession of them.

The first of these two instructions proceeds upon the theory of a right of retention of the possession of the timber in the plaintiff, to secure payment of his purchase money, founded upon the clause in the contract or sale, saying the timber was to stand good for the purchase money and expense, notice of which to the mercantile company, at the time it took the deed of trust, is indicated by some evidence adduced. The clause upon which Justice relies for this claim is not as broad in its terms as those considered and enforced in Buskirk Bros. v. Peck, 57 W. Va. 360, 50 S. E. 432, and Wiggin v. Mankin, 65 W. Va. 219, 63 S. E. 1091. In each of those cases the contract expressly stated that the timber or lumber should not be removed until paid for. This clause says only that the timber shall stand good for the purchase money. Right of retention of possession is not in terms reserved, and the purchasers were allowed to remove and sell some of the timber without having paid for it. The seller also took the promissory note of the purchasers for it. This conduct, however, is not irreconcilable with right of retention. His release of part of it does not necessarily imply intent to release the residue. Though the lien clause does not expressly reserve right to detain the timber until paid for, the vendor had such right as long as it remained upon his land, under principles declared in Curtin v. Isaacsen, 36 W. Va. 391, 15 S. E. 171. It is a common-law right in the seller, which the lien clause in the contract does not relinquish in express terms, nor by necessary implication. This clause could have been intended to secure to the seller a lien in addition to that given by the common law, one continuing after removal from the premises, and may have been inserted in the contract for this purpose. Jones on Liens, § 816. However this may be, nothing in its terms indicates intent to abrogate the seller's common-law lien. As this timber was all on the premises of the plaintiff at the date of the execution of the deed of trust, the right created by that instrument, as to possession, was necessarily subordinate to that of Justice. By it the trustee secured only such right as the vendees of the timber had under their contract. They may have had title; but, if so, they had no right to possession, and therefore could not confer it upon the trustee, otherwise than subject to the precedent condition—that of payment of the purchase money before removal. This instruction was good, therefore, unless the direction in it to find for the plaintiff was improper for some reason other than that based upon the defendant's claim as to the construction of the contract between Justice and the Brownings.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Whether it is bad for such other reason depends upon the inquiry raised by said second instruction, the theory of which is that the plaintiff was not barred of right of recovery by reason of his sale of the timber to Newman & Spanner. Though he took the timber back from the Brownings in satisfaction of his claim for purchase money, he could fall back on his original lien and right of retention, if his right as purchaser from the Brownings failed, and pass that right to Newman & Spanner. As to this we have no doubt. His purchase was subject to the trust deed lien, but his own lien prior, and his right to possession superior, unless lost by the sale to Newman & Spanner. But said second instruction enunciates the principle that a defendant in detinue cannot defeat the plaintiff's action by showing an outstanding title in a third person, unless he claims under it. As the defendant here does not claim under Newman & Spanner, but only under the Brownings, he has not connected himself with their outstanding title. Hence, if the theory of the instruction is legally sound, we must ascertain whether it applies under the circumstances of this case. If the plaintiff has not had previous possession, but relies solely upon legal title in himself, his action may be defeated by showing an outstanding title in a third person. Under such circumstances, the question is one of title, pure and simple, and the plaintiff, in order to prevail, must show that he has it, as in the case of ejectment and unlawful detainer. 14 Cyc. 248; 6 Ency. Pl. & Pr. 657. But, if the defendant has acquired his possession by a wrongful invasion of the actual possession of the plaintiff, then, under a principle observed in ejectment and unlawful detainer law, he cannot prevail by showing outstanding title or right in a third person, unless he claims under, or connects himself with, it in some way. As to this exception to the general rule, there is some conflict in the decisions; but the decided weight of authority, as well as reason, sustains it. 14 Cyc. 248. "Where, however, a plaintiff in detinue has shown a prior possession and made out a prima facie case, the defendant cannot defeat a recovery by showing merely an outstanding title in a third person, without connecting himself therewith." 6 Ency. Pl. & Pr. 657. See, also, Miller v. Jones, 26 Ala. 247; Hall v. Chapman, 35 Ala. 559; Gafford v. Stearns, 51 Ala. 434; Tanner v. Allison, 3 Dana (Ky.) 422; Townsend v. Burton, 24 S. W. 1069, 15 Ky. Law Rep. 648; Banking Co. v. Bank, 34 Neb. 93, 51 N. W. 596; Calvit v. Clond, 14 Tex. 53. If, therefore, the plaintiff had possession and was ousted thereof by the defendant, the case falls within the exception, and the title of Newman & Spanner cannot be relied upon as a defense.

The other members of the court are of the opinion that the plaintiff had sufficient possession to claim the benefit of this exception. His written contract with Newman & Spanner required him to deliver the logs on the banks of Leatherwood creek and Guyandotte river, there to be measured and paid for by the purchasers. He had made delivery thereof at the places designated, and the purchasers had measured, branded, and paid for the logs. No further obligation rested upon the plaintiff, except a duty to roll the logs into the streams. Whether they were on his land is not shown by the record. If they were, his continued possession thereof would seem to be clear, as their presence on his land would indicate a bailment or custody of the same for and on behalf of his vendees. It seems to me that, to make out a case of continued possession, he should have shown, if he could, that the logs were still upon his premises. For this omission in the proof, I would hold his possession did not continue, and that the further requirement of the contract was one of mere service for the purchasers. In other words, I think his contract was so far executed as to divest him of title, actual possession, and right of possession, and the service he owed the purchasers had been substantially performed, as nearly all the logs were down over the banks of the streams. The other members of the court, however, think they were either upon land owned by him, or land which he had the right to use for deposit thereof, and therefore his own land, for the purposes of this case, and, as some of the logs were still on top of the banks, he was bound to bestow further labor upon them. This conclusion relieves said first instruction of the possible objection to it above noted, and also sustains the action of the court in giving the second, excluding the defense of title in Newman & Spanner. My own conclusion would render both instructions bad and reverse the judgment.

For the reasons stated, the judgment will be affirmed.

(68 W. Va. 734)

CURTIS et al. v. PINEY COLLIERY CO.
et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Feb. 28, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

MINES AND MINERALS (§ 55*)—CONVEYANCES —EXCEPTIONS.

A deed to defendants' predecessors in title conveyed to the grantees, with general warranty, "all the coal and other minerals in, upon and under" a certain tract of land; but contained the following exception, under which plaintiffs claim: "And said grantors reserve the top vein of coal in hill tops above my dwelling house." Considered in the light of all the facts and circumstances known to and surrounding the grantors at the time, this exception should be construed as applying to a vein of coal then existing, and of which the grantors are shown to have had some knowledge, and believed by them to exist in the hill tops back of said dwelling, and not to the vein or seam of coal in controversy then and prior thereto, sometimes referred to as the "top vein," and by other names, found some sixty or seventy feet under ground at said dwelling house, and not in the hill tops back of said dwelling.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 153-185; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Raleigh County.

Action by Milton Curtis and others against the Piney Colliery Company and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

File & File, for plaintiffs in error. McGinnis & Hatcher and Brown, Jackson & Knight, for defendants in error.

MILLER, J. In ejectment, after plaintiffs had introduced all their evidence, oral and documentary, defendant offering no evidence, the court below on its motion struck out all the evidence and directed a verdict for defendant, and to the judgment of the circuit court thereon, that plaintiffs take nothing by their action, they obtained a writ of error from this court.

The property sued for, as the declaration in three counts alleges, is the "Sewell seam or vein of coal, * * * now also known as and called the No. 5 seam or vein of coal, and which * * * was on the 10th day of December, 1888, and for many years prior" thereto "known as and called the top vein or seam of coal," and which is in and underlying the tract of land in Raleigh county, described in the declaration, by metes and bounds, as containing 108½ acres, and of which it is alleged plaintiffs were possessed of an estate in fee simple absolute.

Plaintiffs and defendant have a common source of title, and their respective rights to the coal in controversy depend on the construction to be given to the deed from Amos Williams and Susan A., his wife, to H. A. Gray, and others, trustees, dated December 10th, 1888, whereby, for the consideration therein expressed, the grantors granted unto the grantees with general warranty, "all the coal and other minerals in, upon and under" said tract or parcel of land further described as "containing by recent survey 108½ acres, and known on the plat of the lands of the C. C. C. L. Association as No. 6, and bounded," as described in the declaration. After this grant the deed contains this exception or reservation: "And said grantors reserve the top vein of coal in hill tops above my dwelling house." By a subsequent clause in the deed the usual mining rights are also granted to said second parties.

Plaintiffs claim the coal excepted or reserved in said deed, by a subsequent deed from said Susan A. Williams, widow, and Elsie W. Williams, sole heir of said Amos Williams, deceased, dated March 10th, 1904, granting unto each of them, with general warranty, a one-half undivided interest, being all the right, title and interest, both legal and equitable, to the said tract of land, described as in said declaration, excepting therefrom, however, "a part of the coal and other minerals as heretofore conveyed to H. A. Gray," of record in said Raleigh county, in Deed Book "J," page 341. Defendants by mesne conveyances have derived title to the coal and mining rights granted to said Gray and others, trustees.

Counsel for plaintiffs have in their brief argued elaborately, with copious citations of authorities, the question of plaintiffs' remedy by ejectment; also the question whether the clause in the deed of December 10th, 1888, reserving "the top vein of coal in hill tops above my dwelling house," should be construed as an exception or a reservation. Defendants' counsel concede the remedy, and admit that the so called reservation should be construed as an exception. So we need not trouble ourselves for the purposes of this case with these questions. Indeed, we think, there can be no doubt as to the remedy by ejectment; nor as to the proposition that the reservation in the deed, properly construed, is an exception.

So we have but the one question, what was excepted from the grant? Was it, as plaintiffs claim, the Sewell, or No. 5 seam, described in the declaration, or, as defendants contend, some other vein actually existing or believed by the grantors at the time to exist "in the hill tops above my dwelling house"?

Plaintiffs' contention and theory is that on and prior to the date of the deed, in the vicinity of this land, there was but the one seam or vein of coal known and recognized as the top vein or seam, namely, the one now in controversy, from four to five feet in thickness, and that this seam or vein of necessity must have been the one referred to, and excepted in the grant of 1888. The evidence, however, shows that this seam had then been opened on the William Warden land adjoining the Williams tract on the south, and within about three hundred yards of his South West line, at an elevation of about 123.19 feet, an outcrop thereof also appearing in a little branch or stream of water traversing both tracts from North East to South West, about a hundred yards north of the first opening, at an elevation of about 117.19 feet, and also at one or two other places within a mile or so of the Williams tract as early as the year 1889, and which seam was also referred to by various names, "McNamee Seam;" "Top Seam;" "Upper Seam;" "Warden Seam;" "Bill Warden Coal Bank," &c. These coal banks had never up to the date of the deed been worked, except in a small way for local and domestic use. The evidence further shows that this seam of coal does not exist in the hill tops back of the dwelling house. The hill tops are there, but the seam of coal is not found present. It was found, however, before the deed, at the bore hole south of the house, and a little north of Warden's line at about the depth of thirteen feet, and later at the house, situated two to three thousand feet north of the opening on the William Warden land, at an elevation of 149.34 feet, and at a depth below the house of from sixty to seventy feet, and at an increased depth as you go north and north east on adjoining lands.

But notwithstanding the existence of these physical facts respecting the location of the Sewell or No. 5 seam, it is insisted that that seam, must, in the light of the surrounding facts and circumstances, by proper construction, be regarded as the subject matter of the exception in the deed, even though to do so requires us to wholly disregard the words of description therein, "in the hill tops above my dwelling house." Many decisions are cited and relied on, and rules of construction invoked in able and exhaustive briefs of learned counsel pro and con this proposition. Included among the cases cited is our own case of Armstrong v. Ross, 61 W. Va. 38, 55 S. E. 895, which plaintiffs' counsel regard as decisive of the case at bar.

But the view we take of the documentary and oral evidence does not require us to here examine the many decisions cited, or to apply all the various rules of construction relied on.

The general rule to be observed in construction of deeds as of all other contracts, and which we think is the only rule we need observe in disposing of this case, is that in construing a deed the object is to ascertain the intention of the makers, as gathered from the language used, and the general purpose and scope of the instrument in the light of the surrounding circumstances, and when such intention clearly appears by giving the words their natural and ordinary meaning technical rules of construction will not be invoked to defeat it. Citation of authority for this proposition seems wholly unnecessary, but we cite Uhl v. Railroad Co., 51 W. Va. 107, point 6, 41 S. E. 340; McDougal v. Musgrave, 46 W. Va. 509, point 2, 33 S. E. 281; 17 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (2d Ed.) 7; Devlin on Deeds (2d Ed.) §§ 837, 850; Preston v. White, 57 W. Va. 280, 283, 50 S. E. 236.

If we could view the evidence as counsel for plaintiffs view it, there would be great force in their argument, that in construing the deed here and applying the exception to the subject matter we should reject the description "in the hill tops above my dwelling." They assume that the Sewell seam, as then exposed on the William Warden land, in the light of the surrounding facts and circumstances, was necessarily the subject of that exception, and the only seam or vein to which the parties could have had reference in the execution of the deed. But we cannot so view the evidence. We cannot view the words of description, which we are asked to reject, otherwise than as having great force. While it is true the Sewell seam was sometimes referred to as the top seam, it does not follow that that was the seam intended to be excepted. It is practically conceded that the grantors must have thought that the top seam intended to be excepted, and described as located "in the hill tops back of my dwelling" actually existed there, else they would not in the deed have located it there. But it is said that in this supposition they were evidently mistaken, and as they call for the "top vein" in their exception the parties must have had in mind the Sewell seam, or the vein of coal exposed on the Warden and other lands in that vicinity, a seam now shown to be from sixty to seventy feet below the surface at the dwelling house, and at a still greater depth under the hill tops back of the house. The evidence, however, also discloses the fact that there is and then was a vein of coal answering more or less accurately the description in the deed, located in the hill tops above the dwelling house, at or below a small sulphur spring, at an elevation of about five feet above the bottom sill of the house and at a distance of from three to four hundred feet therefrom, and about five and a half inches thick, and which has been found cropping out at one or two other points. It is argued by counsel, however, that the evidence shows that this small insignificant vein had not then been discovered, and was unknown to the grantors, prior to or at the date of the deed, and that it cannot be assumed the parties were contracting with reference to a vein or seam of coal unknown to them. For this proposition Armstrong v. Ross, supra, is cited and relied upon. That decision would be in point if the facts were as assumed. Aside from the fact that the description in the deed points to a vein of coal in the hill tops above the dwelling, the evidence satisfies us that the grantors, at the date of their deed, did have actual knowledge or belief in the existence of a seam of coal in the vicinity of the sulphur spring. The evidence shows that he and others had prospected for coal in that vicinity. Witness Jeff Warden says, that prior to the death of Williams, he had been at this sulphur spring a number of times; he could not say how often. The last time he remembers to have been there was a month or two prior to the death of Williams. There was then "a space as big as this court room of brush, and amidst the brush was a spring just flowing out of the hill, and they called it the sulphur spring." When asked about the condition of the ground, with reference to having been prospected for coal, he says, there was "just a little coal in the mouth, in the flow of the spring, that was all." Frank Greer, another witness, referring to a time before the death of Williams, and to the prospecting that had been done for coal at or near this spring, says, that there had been some prospecting done there just opposite the spring on the left hand side, but he does not know that any coal was found there, but says, there might have been. John Williams, a brother of the grantor, testifies that prior to his brother's death he and his brother had prospected for coal in the vicinity of this spring, but he professes not to have found any coal there. Josiah Teel and Levi Williams, two other witnesses say, that after the death of Williams they were both at this sulphur spring looking for coal; the former says this was the next fall after Williams' death, "that we aimed to open up the coal for his wife." The latter says: "We went there to look for coal," and "found a little bit." On cross-examination the former says, that he had never seen any prospecting done there before that; he had heard that the water came off of coal, but had never heard that there was coal back there. True all this evidence may not be proof positive that Williams had seen this coal at the spring; but his reference in the deed to the existence of coal in that vicinity, and the fact that at least one witness proved that coal was exposed in the opening of that spring, and other witnesses proved prospecting to have been done there, and that Williams was there with one or more of these witnesses prospecting for coal, we think conclusive of the fact that he at least believed coal existed there, and that the subject of the exception in his deed was the vein of coal there, or supposed to be there when he made the deed. Another very strong fact and circumstance proved, supporting our conclusion is, that prior to making the deed the prospective purchasers had made tests of this and adjoining lands for this Warden seam of coal, so called, and that one, if not more, of these bore holes had been put down on the Williams land, the first, already referred to, near the south western boundary line of the Williams tract, and where the Warden or Sewell seam or vein was found at the depth of some thirteen feet below the surface. The proof is that Williams himself was there at that hole, and knew that the purchaser was then making a test of his land for that very Sewell seam. Other seams of commercial value have since been located below the Sewell seam, but these have not been proved by actual test to be present under the Williams tract. These lower veins of coal, the first found some three hundred feet below the Sewell seam, and others at still lower depths, had not then been discovered or worked, and it is quite evident that these lower veins were not the only veins covered by the grant to the grantees in the deed. Before their purchase they tested the land for the Sewell seam. Williams knew this. We must assume also that he had knowledge of the conditions existing about the sulphur spring, and believed that a vein of coal existed there. Coal appeared in the spring. The fact that that vein is of little, if any, commercial value is unimportant. If that was the vein excepted, or intended to be, and we think it undoubtedly was, the exception must be applied to that vein as its subject matter.

But we cannot further detail the evidence. It suffices to say, that after having carefully read and considered all the evidence, and the many authorities cited and relied upon by counsel, we have concluded that the judgment below was clearly right, and should be affirmed, and it will be so ordered.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(155 N. C. 212)

YOUNT et al. v. SETZER.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. INJUNCTION (§ 16*)—ADEQUACY OF LEGAL REMEDY—SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

As a rule, an injunction will not issue to restrain the sale of personal property, when it can be recovered in a legal action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. § 15; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

2. INJUNCTION (§ 12*)—RIGHT TO RELIEF—DEFENSES—COMMISSION OF ACT.

An injunction will not issue to restrain an act which has already been committed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. § 12; Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

3. INJUNCTION (§ 18*)—ADEQUACY OF LEGAL REMEDY—INSOLVENCY.

Except where made unnecessary by statute, an allegation of insolvency is necessary to authorize the issuance of an injunction to restrain the disposition of personalty if damages would afford an adequate remedy, unless the injury would be irreparable irrespective of insolvency.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

4. PLEADING (§ 37*)—ANSWER—FAILURE TO PLEAD—FACTS WITHIN DEFENDANT'S KNOWLEDGE.

Where defendant knows facts which would relieve him from liability, it is his duty to allege them, and, failing to do so, the inference most unfavorable to him may be taken.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 87, 88; Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 21*)—JURISDICTION—PURPOSES OF RELIEF—PROTECTION OF FIDUCIARY RIGHTS.

The jurisdiction of equity to restrain any violation of fiduciary obligations or equitable interests is commensurate with the equitable remedies to enforce fiduciary duties; there being no legal remedy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 48, 49; Dec. Dig. § 21.*]

6. INJUNCTION (§ 18*)—PURPOSES OF RELIEF—VIOLATION OF FIDUCIARY RIGHTS.

Sureties on a guardian's bond having become such upon an agreement that they should hold the proceeds of the sale of the ward's lands for their indemnity, the land was sold, and a negotiable note, secured by a mortgage, was taken for the deferred payment. A short time thereafter the guardian's husband procured the note and mortgage from her against her will, and turned it over to defendant, who claimed to hold it as collateral security for an obligation of the guardian's husband; defendant having knowledge that the mortgage and note were obtained from the sale of the ward's lands. Plaintiff's affidavit for an injunction alleged that the guardian's husband was insolvent, and that, if the note was collected, the bondsmen would be unindemnified, and the guardian would not be able to pay over the funds to the sureties as agreed, and that defendant is trying to sell the note. It did not appear that the note was beyond defendant's control. Held, that an injunction would issue to enjoin defendant from disposing of the note under the general equity jurisdiction to protect fiduciary property, though he was not alleged to be insolvent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

7. INJUNCTION (§ 163*)—PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION—CONTINUANCE TO HEARING.

Where there is a serious controversy between the parties raising issues which must be determined by a jury, the restraining order should be continued to the hearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 357-371; Dec. Dig. § 163.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Catawba County; Long, Judge.

Action by Ora J. Yount and others against P. C. Setzer. Decree for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The plaintiffs are Ora J. Yount, guardian of George Hoke, and E. C. Burns and T. L. Henkel, sureties on the guardian bond.

The plaintiffs allege in their affidavit: "That from about 30 to 40 days ago the plaintiff, Ora J. Yount, applied to the said E. C. Burns and T. L. Henkel to become her sureties upon a guardian bond, so that she might file a petition and procure the sale of some of the real estate left by her first husband at the time of his death and which was inherited by her said son, George Hoke. That said sureties agreed to become such upon her bond if she would agree that the amount which the land would bring, less the cash payment, should be held by T. L. Henkel, one of said bondsmen, so that the said bondsmen might be protected and indemnified against loss or defalcation by reason of their suretyship. That the said Ora J. Yount acceded to the terms of the bondsmen, and agreed that if they would become such that the said T. L. Henkel, one of them, should hold the proceeds arising from the sale of the lands that were to be sold, except the cash payment, and thereupon the said Henkel and the said Burns, said sureties, signed the said bond. That immediately after the said bond was filed the plaintiff, Ora J. Yount, qualified as guardian as aforesaid. She filed a petition in the superior court of Iredell county and procured the sale of a portion of the real estate left by her said husband to his son, George Hoke, and at such sale one Lee Bradford of Iredell county became the purchaser at the price of $1,600, of which amount the sum of $500 was paid down, and the residue secured by a note and mortgage—the mortgage being duly registered in Iredell county, the said guardian, Ora J. Yount, having first made to the purchaser a deed to the land in accordance with the order of the court. That, after said sale was made, the said Ora J. Yount, guardian as aforesaid, neglected turning over the said note and mortgage to T. L. Henkel as agreed, and that a short time after receiving it, to wit, about a week or ten days ago, the husband of the said Ora J. Yount procured said note and mortgage from her, and turned the same over to P. C. Setzer, who now holds the same, claiming that he holds it as collateral security or indemnity to himself on account of a transaction between said Setzer and said C. J. Yount, the facts being, as affiant avers, that prior to the time when said note and mortgage was turned over to said Setzer by the said C. J. Yount that said Setzer had become surety for said Yount at the bank for a sum of money, and the said Setzer required that said Yount turn said paper over to him as indemnity as aforesaid. That at the time said note and mortgage was so turned over said Setzer knew, as affiant is informed and believes, that the same had been obtained by her from the sale of the land of her ward, George Hoke, and that the mortgage deed was taken back upon the land so sold by her as guardian. That said note and mortgage were not turned over by her voluntarily to her said husband, and that she only surrendered it to him after she had been importuned to do so, by him. Affiant further avers that her said husband has become involved in debt and is insolvent, and that she is not solvent or responsible in law, and that, if said note is collected and the funds used by the said P. C. Setzer, defendant, the bondsmen will be compelled to meet any defalcation that she may make, and she verily believes that she will not be able to respond to her obligation and pay over the funds which have come into her hands as guardian for her son. That the said Setzer since he has procured said note, as affiant is informed and believes, has been trying to sell and dispose of the same, and is claiming his right to hold the same and refuses to surrender the same, although he has been asked to do so. That plaintiffs have commenced a civil action in Catawba superior court by the issuance of summons for the recovery of the possession of said note and mortgage." The note referred to in the affidavit was exhibited to the court, and it is negotiable and not due. It is payable to the order of Ora J. Yount, and is indorsed in blank by her. The defendant filed an affidavit, denying all the material parts of the affidavit of the plaintiffs, and, among other things, alleges: "It is not denied that the defendant, P. C. Setzer, undertook to sell and dispose of the note and mortgage hereinbefore mentioned, and this defendant respectfully sheweth to the court that before the issuing and serving of the restraining order herein that he had transferred and assigned the said note to the First National Bank of the city of Hickory."

A restraining order was issued, and on the return day it was continued to the final hearing, and the defendant appealed. The defendant denies the right of the plaintiffs to a restraining order: (1) Because the action is to recover personal property and there is an adequate remedy at law. (2) Because there is no allegation that the defendant is insolvent. (3) Because it appears that the note was transferred before the restraining order was issued.

A. A. Whitener, for appellant. Council & Yount, W. A. Self, and O. L. Whitener, for appellees.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1, 2] It is true, as contended by the defendant, that ordinarily the equitable jurisdiction of the court cannot be invoked to restrain the sale or other disposition of personal property when an action at law may be maintained to recover the property (Baxter v. Baxter, 77 N. C. 119; Kistler v.

Weaver, 135 N. C. 391, 47 S. E. 478), and it requires no authority to sustain the proposition that, if the act has been committed, it cannot be restrained.

[3] It is also true that an allegation of insolvency is necessary, except where dispensed with by statute, in cases where compensation in damages afford an adequate remedy. McKay v. Chapin, 120 N. C. 159, 26 S. E. 701; James v. Markham, 125 N. C. 145, 34 S. E. 241; Porter v. Armstrong, 132 N. C. 66, 43 S. E. 542; Kistler v. Weaver, 135 N. C. 388, 47 S. E. 478.

We do not think, however, that these principles are applicable to the facts of this case. The subject-matter of the controversy is a negotiable instrument that has not been dishonored, and it may be assigned to an innocent purchaser. If so assigned, the holder would become the owner and could enforce payment (Revisal 1905, § 2201, 2206), and the right of the plaintiffs to recover the property would be thereby defeated; while in the ordinary action by the owner to recover personal property a sale by the defendant would not have this effect. It is also, if the allegations of the plaintiffs are true, a trust fund, which belongs to the ward, George Hoke, and the plaintiffs, who seek to recover it, are the guardian and the sureties on her bond.

[4] Nor does it appear that the note is beyond the control of the defendant. He says it has been transferred and assigned to the bank, but he does not allege that the assignment was for value, and there is no pretense that it was a gift. He knows the facts, and it was his duty to disclose them. If he remains silent, we are justified in concluding that his assignment is not beyond recall, and particularly when the bank makes no claim to the note. The failure to allege insolvency is not decisive of the right to a restraining order, although in many cases it is material. Railway v. Mining Co., 112 N. C. 662, 17 S. E. 77. It is no more than evidence on the question of irreparable injury, and, if such injury is shown without proof of insolvency, a court of equity will intervene. Irreparable injury is frequently dependent on the nature of the subject-matter. Chief Justice Marshall, in Osborne v. Bank, 9 Wheat. 845, 6 L. Ed. 204, speaking of the grounds on which the jurisdiction of the court of equity to restrain may be placed, says: "One which appears to be ample for the purpose is that a court will always interpose to prevent the transfer of a specific article, which, if transferred, will be lost to the owner. Thus the holder of negotiable securities, indorsed in the usual manner, if he acquired them fraudulently, will be enjoined from negotiating them, because, if negotiated, the maker or indorser must pay them. Thus, too, a transfer of stock will be restrained in favor of a person having the real property in the article. In these cases the injured party would have his remedy at law. * * * But it is the province of a court of equity in such cases to arrest the injury and prevent the wrong. The remedy is more beneficial and complete than the law can give."

[5, 6] The doctrine is stated accurately and clearly in Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1839, 1840, as follows:

"Sec. 1839. The jurisdiction to grant injunctions restraining acts in violation of trusts and fiduciary obligations, or in violation of any other purely equitable estates, interests, or claims in and to specific property, is really commensurate with the equitable remedies given to enforce trusts and fiduciary duties, or to establish and enforce any other equitable estates, interests or claims, with respect to specific things, whether lands, chattels, securities, or funds of money, or to relieve against mistake or fraud done or contemplated with respect to such things. In all such cases the question whether the remedy at law is adequate cannot arise; much less can it be the criterion by which to determine whether an injunction can be granted; for there is no remedy at law.

"Sec. 1840. Among the instances in which equity will grant an injunction, preliminary or final, in pursuance of the general doctrine as stated in the foregoing paragraph, the following are some of the most important, and they fully illustrate and establish the doctrine itself, in all its generality, and the grounds upon which it rests: To prevent the transfer of negotiable instruments, at the suit of the defrauded maker or acceptor, or of the party claiming to be the true owner, or who have an interest in them; or the transfer, under like circumstances, of stocks or other securities not strictly negotiable."

The rule was applied in Caldwell v. Stirewalt, 100 N. C. 205, 6 S. E. 262, and a restraining order granted, although there was no allegation of insolvency. See, also, Manf. Co. v. Summers, 143 N. C. 102, 55 S. E. 522.

[7] There is a serious controversy in this action between the plaintiffs and defendant, and issues are raised which must be settled by a jury, and under such conditions the restraining order should be continued to the hearing. Hyatt v. De Hart, 140 N. C. 270, 52 S. E. 781; Tise v. Hardware Co., 144 N. C. 507, 57 S. E. 210.

The case of Zeiger v. Stephenson, 153 N. C. 528, 69 S. E. 611, in which the same rule is stated, is in many respects like the one we have under consideration, but it is chiefly valuable for the learned discussion of the distinction between common and special injunctions by Justice Walker.

We find no error.

Affirmed.

HOKE, J., not sitting.

(155 N. C. 494)

STATE v. BALDWIN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 203*)—EVIDENCE—"DYING DECLARATIONS."

That statements of deceased may be admitted as "dying declarations," they must have been made in the expectancy and contemplation of impending death.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 430-437; Dec. Dig. § 203.*

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2297, 2298.]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 190*)—EVIDENCE—UNCOMMUNICATED THREATS OF DECEASED.

Uncommunicated threats of deceased, uttered shortly before the homicide, tending to show animosity towards defendant and a purpose to do him serious bodily harm, are admissible in connection with evidence tending to show a killing in necessary self-defense, such evidence tending to throw light on the occurrence; evidence of such threats being admissible under such circumstances, as well as where they tend to corroborate communicated threats.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 399-413; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

3. HOMICIDE (§ 300*)—INSTRUCTIONS—SELF-DEFENSE.

The portion of a charge that, if defendant fought willingly at any time up to the fatal moment, it would be the jury's duty to convict him of manslaughter, erroneous because, though fighting willingly, he might be fighting rightfully in necessary self-defense, was not sufficiently qualified by the concluding portion; there being no evidence that he retreated or otherwise showed that he abandoned the fight; but if you should find that he entered into the combat unwillingly, then you should proceed to consider his plea of self-defense, to correct it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 614-632; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Watauga County; Pell, Judge.

William Baldwin was convicted of manslaughter, and appeals. Reversed, and new trial ordered.

L. D. Lowe and T. A. Love, for appellant. Atty Gen. Bickett and Geo. L. Jones, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. On a former appeal in this cause, the prisoner having been convicted of murder in the first degree, it was held that the testimony as it then appeared of record did not justify such a verdict, and a new trial was awarded, with the direction that if the evidence was the same the prisoner should be tried on the question of his guilt or innocence of the crime of manslaughter. State v. Baldwin, 152 N. C. 822, 68 S. E. 148, where the facts are very fully reported. This opinion having been certified down, and the evidence relevant to the inquiry being substantially the same as that received on the former trial, the case was submitted on the issue as indicated, and defendant, having been convicted of manslaughter, again appeals, assigning errors committed on the second trial.

[1] It was urged that the court improperly excluded relevant statements of the deceased, tending to support the plea and claim of self-defense on the part of the prisoner, the same having been offered as dying declarations; but it is essential to the admissibility of such statements that they be made in the expectancy and contemplation of impending death, and we concur with his honor in the view that the facts as they now appear of record do not establish the conditions required.

[2] It was insisted, further, that his honor made an erroneous ruling in excluding evidence of certain uncommunicated threats of the deceased, uttered shortly before the homicide, tending to show animosity towards the prisoner, and a purpose to do him serious bodily harm. It is now generally recognized that in trials for homicide uncommunicated threats are admissible, where they tend to corroborate threats which have been communicated to the prisoner; second, where they tend to throw light on the occurrence and aid the jury to a correct interpretation of the same, and there is testimony ultra sufficient to carry the case to the jury, tending to show that the killing may have been done from a principle of self-preservation, or the evidence is wholly circumstantial, and the character of the transaction is in doubt. Turpin's Case, 77 N. C. 473, 24 Am. Rep. 455; State v. McIver, 125 N. C. 645, 34 S. E. 439; Horhigan & Thompson, Self-Defense, p. 927; Stokes' Case, 53 N. Y. 164, 13 Am. Rep. 492; Holler v. State, 37 Ind. 57, 10 Am. Rep. 74; Cornelius v. Commonwealth, 54 Ky. 539. In the present case, while there was evidence on the part of the state tending to show that the prisoner fought wrongfully and killed without necessity, there is testimony on his part tending to show a homicide in his necessary self-defense, and the proposed evidence, tending as it did to throw light upon the occurrence, should have been received.

[3] The prisoner excepts, further, that his honor charged the jury in part as follows: "Now, gentlemen of the jury, I repeat, if you should find that he fought willingly at any time up to the fatal moment, it would be your duty to convict the defendant of manslaughter, there being no evidence that he retreated or otherwise showed that he abandoned the fight; but, if you should find that he entered into the combat unwillingly, then you should proceed to consider his plea of self-defense." In Garland's Case, 138 N. C. 675-678, 50 S. E. 853, 854, the court said: "It is the law of this state that, where a man provokes a fight by unlawfully assaulting another, and in the progress of the fight kills his adversary, he will be guilty of manslaughter at least, though at the precise time of the homicide it was necessary for the original assailant to kill, in order to save his own life" (citing Foster's Criminal Law, p. 276); but authority does not justify the position, as contained in the excerpt from his honor's charge, "That if he fought willingly at any time up to the fatal moment, it would be your duty to convict of manslaughter." This would be to inculcate a man who fought willingly, but rightfully, and in his necessary self-defense. True the concluding portion of the statement would seem to qualify the position to some extent, but not sufficiently so to correct it, and in a case of this importance, and as a matter goes back for another hearing, we have considered it best to advert to the error.

For the reasons stated, we think the prisoner is entitled to have his cause tried before another jury, and it is so ordered.

Venire de novo.

(155 N. C. 208)

JINKINS et ux. v. NORFOLK & S. RY. CO.
et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. RAILROADS (§ 327*)—CROSSINGS—DUTY TO LOOK AND LISTEN.

It is the duty of one approaching a railroad crossing to look, listen, and take every reasonable precaution to avoid a collision.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1043-1056; Dec. Dig. § 327.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 312*)—CROSSINGS—SIGNALS FROM TRAINS.

It is a railroad engineer's duty to blow his whistle or ring his bell at a reasonable distance from a crossing, to warn those approaching the crossing with a view to passing over the tracks.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 988-1003; Dec. Dig. § 312.*]

3. RAILROADS (§ 348*)—CROSSING ACCIDENTS —CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to one whose horse was frightened by a train at a crossing, evidence held insufficient to show contributory negligence on plaintiff's part.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1138-1150; Dec. Dig. § 348.*]

4. RAILROADS (§ 360*)—OPERATION—PERSONAL INJURIES—FRIGHTENING STOCK.

A railroad is not liable for injuries received from horses becoming frightened on a highway at the mere sight of trains, or the noises necessarily incident to the running of trains and the operation of the road.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1241-1244; Dec. Dig. § 360.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Justice, Judge.

Action by J. F. Jenkins and wife against the Norfolk & Southern Railway Company and others. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants appeal. No error.

The action was brought to recover damages for alleged negligence in frightening the feme plaintiff's pony, whereby she was thrown from a buggy and injured. The usual issues were submitted and answered in favor of the plaintiff, and her damages assessed at $500.

Rouse & Land, for appellants. Emmett Wooten and Murray Allen, for appellees.

BROWN, J. The feme plaintiff was driving in a buggy with her father, and as they approached within 10 or 12 feet of McIlwain street crossing, for purpose of passing over the defendant's track, an engine and train rushed over the crossing and badly frightened the pony, causing him to swerve suddenly and throw the feme plaintiff from the buggy, injuring her.

The motion to nonsuit presents two questions:

(1) Is there any evidence of negligence? The evidence of plaintiff, as well as of her father, appears to be quite positive that the engineer gave no signal, either by bell or whistle, as he approached the crossing. The plaintiff states that she listened and could have heard the signal of an approaching train, but that none was given. The plaintiff's father says with equal positiveness that no signal was given, no whistle blown, or bell rung, but that train ran on the crossing without warning.

[1, 2] It has been repeatedly held in this state that it is the duty of a person approaching a railroad crossing to look, listen, and to take every reasonable precaution to avoid collision; and that it is likewise the duty of the engineer to blow his whistle or ring his bell at a reasonable distance from the crossing, in order to enable travelers approaching the crossing, for the purpose of passing over the tracks, to avoid danger. Gilmore v. Railroad, 115 N. C. 657, 20 S. E. 371; Hinkle v. Railroad, 109 N. C. 472, 13 S. E. 884, 26 Am. St. Rep. 581; Russell v. Railroad, 118 N. C. 1098, 24 S. E. 512; Butts v. Railroad, 133 N. C. 82, 45 S. E. 472.

[3] (2) Does the evidence introduced by the plaintiff make out a case of contributory negligence? This evidence, if taken to be true, establishes that when she turned into McIlwain street the view of all that part of the track from whence the train approached was entirely obstructed by a building 75 yards long and situated within 25 feet of the track, so that neither she nor her father could see the train; that both looked up and down the track at the last available point; that the pony was gentle, and they were driving very slowly; that the pony saw the train first when within 10 feet of the track and swerved suddenly and threw plaintiff out. The evidence is positive and unequivocal that the plaintiff and her father looked for approaching trains at the last available moment before approaching the track.

It was, of course, plaintiff's duty, as well as that of her father, who was driving the pony, to listen for approaching trains, and especially so as the view of the track was obstructed by the house. After reading their evidence, we do not think that the inference is necessarily to be drawn from it that they did not listen for the train signal. On the contrary, from many of the answers, it would seem that the plaintiff listened for train signals and is positive none were given. While the plaintiff's evidence upon this phase of the case is not as clear as it should have been made, we do not think, as matter of law, a motion to nonsuit could have been properly sustained, upon the ground that, in any view of it, the plaintiff contributed by her own negligence to her injury.

[4] It is true, as contended by defendant, that a railroad company is not liable for injuries received from horses becoming frightened upon a highway at the mere sight of its trains, or the noises necessarily incident to the running of the train and the operation of the road. 3 Elliott, R. R. 1264, and cases cited. But the basis of plaintiff's cause of action is the negligence of the defendant in failing to give a signal in reasonable time to warn her of the approach of its train to a public crossing. If it had been given, she avers she would have heard it and stopped, before getting in such dangerous proximity to the track, and thereby avoided injury.

Taking the evidence as a whole, we think the case was properly submitted to the jury in a charge which followed the settled decisions of this court.

No error.

(155 N. C. 219)

COMMISSIONERS OF LEXINGTON v. AETNA INDEMNITY CO. OF HARTFORD, CONN., et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. INDEMNITY (§ 14*)—CONCLUSIVENESS OF JUDGMENT.

Generally, in an action for indemnity, brought by one held liable for negligence, for which another, as between themselves, is primarily liable, the judgment in the action against the party indemnified is evidence of his liability, and, when notice to defend was given the indemnitor, of the amount of damages; but it does not establish which of the wrongdoers is primarily liable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indemnity, Cent. Dig. § 41; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

2. INDEMNITY (§ 14*)—JUDGMENT—CONCLUSIVENESS.

In an action by a municipality on an indemnity bond, given by a street contractor, for reimbursement on account of recovery by a pedestrian who fell into an unguarded excavation, judgment in the pedestrian's suit established the contractor's primary liability, as well as the town's liability, where such primary liability is shown by the record in that suit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indemnity, Cent. Dig. § 41; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1068*)—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTIONS.

Any error in instructing that primary liability for negligence claimed to be covered by an indemnity bond should be determined by the bond was harmless, where such liability was established by the undisputed facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4225-4228; Dec. Dig. § 1068.*]

4. INDEMNITY (§ 8*)—MUNICIPAL CONTRACTORS—SCOPE OF BOND.

A street contractor's bond to indemnify a town against actions for injuries to persons from causes under the contractor's control, or for his negligence in guarding the work, entitles the town to indemnity against recovery by a pedestrian, injured through falling into a trench left unguarded by the contractor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indemnity, Cent. Dig. §§ 10-15; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

5. INDEMNITY (§ 4*)—MUNICIPAL CONTRACTORS—VALIDITY OF BOND.

A street contractor's bond to indemnify a town against actions for injuries to persons from causes under the contractor's control, or for his negligence in guarding the work, is not opposed to public policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indemnity, Cent. Dig. §§ 2-6; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Davidson County; W. J. Adams, Judge.

Action by Commissioners of Lexington against the Ætna Indemnity Company of Hartford, Connecticut, and another. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant company appeals. Affirmed.

The West Construction Company contracted with the town of Lexington to do certain work in grading, paving, macadamizing, and otherwise improving its streets, according to plans and specifications furnished; and, to secure the faithful performance of the work in a proper and careful manner, it executed to the town its bond with the other defendant, Ætna Indemnity Company, as surety, by which it agreed to indemnify the town and save it harmless "from all suits, actions, proceedings of every name or description, in law or equity, brought against the said town or any officer or officers, agents or servants thereof, for or on account of any injuries or damages received or sustained by any person, structure or property, by or from said contractor, his servants or agents, and also to indemnify and save harmless the said (town) from all suits or actions for any injuries or damages sustained by any party or parties by or from any causes under the control of said contractor while in the construction of the streets or any part thereof, or any negligence in guarding the same or by or on account of any act of omission of said contractor or his agents or employés." The construction company, while in the prosecution of the work, caused a trench to be dug across a sidewalk, and piled earth and rocks near it, which made it very dangerous to the public using the street, and failed to place lights or barriers around it, so as to warn pedestrians and render the use of the sidewalk safe.

C. M. Clodfelter, while walking along the sidewalk at night, fell into the excavation without any negligence or fault on his part, and was seriously injured. He brought an action against the town and the construction company, alleging substantially the foregoing facts, and, further, that he was injured by the negligence of the construction company in digging the trench and not properly safeguarding it, and by the negligence of the town, in that the latter did not cause the trench to be thus safeguarded by lights or barriers, in order to prevent injury to persons passing along the sidewalk. There was a recovery in that action against the town and the construction company upon issues and a verdict of the jury, which found that Clodfelter had been injured by the negligence of the construction company and the town, as alleged in the complaint; that is, that the construction company was negligent in not putting up lights or barriers at the trench to prevent injury to pedestrians, and that the town was negligent for the same reason. The jury assessed Clodfelter's damages at $1,700, and judgment was entered upon the verdict for that amount, which was paid by the town. The indemnity company was duly notified of the pendency of that action and requested to come in and defend the same. This action was brought against the construction company and the indemnity company, as its surety upon their bond, to recover the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff and costs. Issues were submitted to the jury and found in favor of the plaintiff. Judgment was rendered upon the verdict for the damages assessed, and the defendant appealed.

Walser & Walser, for appellant. Emery E. Raper, for appellee.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] As a general rule, when indemnity is sought by one who has been adjudged liable for damages arising from negligence for which another, as between themselves, is primarily liable, the judgment in the action against the former is evidence in the action brought for indemnity that the defendant in the first action, plaintiff in the second, was liable for the damages, and, when notice has been given to defend, of the amount of the damages arising from the injury; but it does not establish which of the wrongdoers is primarily liable, unless that question was involved in the issue and decided. Mayor v. Brady, 70 Hun, 250, 24 N. Y. Supp. 296; O. S. Nav. Co. v. C. T. Espanola, 134 N. Y. 461, 31 N. E. 987, 30 Am. St. Rep. 685.

[2] But in this case we are of the opinion that the judgment in the first action must be given greater effect than it would have under the ordinary rule, as by referring to the record in that case, which was in evidence, we can see clearly, by reading the verdict in connection with the pleadings, that the jury have found such facts as establish the primary liability of the West Construction Company for the injury to Clodfelter, and, besides, the undisputed facts in this case show the same liability. The facts are that the construction company dug the trench and failed to place lights there, or to erect barriers around the trench, to warn persons using the walk. It was the author of the injury and the principal wrongdoer. As between it and the town, the latter has committed no wrong. An illustration of the rule will be found in Mayor v. Brady, supra, where it is said: "The right to lay the pipe carried with it to the contractors the obligation to so protect and guard it as to warn passers-by, and thus save them from injury. Consent by a municipal corporation to a person to do a lawful act merely permits it to be done in a careful, prudent, and lawful manner, and when it is performed in any other manner, and injury to third persons ensues, the author of the injury is liable therefor. Had the contractors performed their full duty by so guarding the pipe as to warn travelers of its presence on the walk, there could have been no recovery in the action of Cruikshank against the city."

So in Port Jervis v. Bank, 96 N. Y. 550, it was said: "It is well settled that a municipal corporation, which has been compelled to pay a judgment recovered against it for damages sustained by an individual through an obstruction, defect, or excavation in the sidewalk or street of such corporation, has an action over against the person who negligently or unlawfully created the defect which causes the injury. City of Rochester v. Montgomery, 72 N. Y. 67, and cases there cited. This liability grows out of the affirmative act of the defendant and renders him liable, not only to the party injured, but also mediately liable to any party who has been damaged by his neglect. Liability in such a case is predicated upon the negligent character of the act which caused the injury, and the general principle of law which makes a party responsible for the consequences of his own wrongful conduct. Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 359 [72 Am. Dec. 590]; Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Co., 75 Eng. C. L. 767. Consent given by a corporation to a citizen to make an excavation in a public street does not vary the rights or liabilities of the parties in respect to such a cause of action, when it is based upon the wrongful and negligent manner in which the act was done, and not upon its unlawfulness. Upon receiving a license from the body authorized to grant it to dig in a street, the licensee impliedly agrees to perform the act in such a manner as to save the public from danger and the municipality from liability."

The town of Lexington had a right to suppose that the construction company would guard the excavation it had made, so as to prevent injury to the public. "Under such circumstances, the parties cannot be said to be in pari delicto. It is true that the plaintiffs thereby became liable to the party who suffered injury in consequence of this neglect; but they were under no obligation to shield the defendants from the consequence of their own omissions. The decisions in Swansey v. Chace, 16 Gray (Mass.) 303, and other cases above cited, fully sustain the position that the party which placed the obstruction in the highway cannot resist the claim of the town to indemnify for damages paid, on the ground that the neglect of the town to remove the obstruction contributed to the injury." Woburn v. Railroad, 109 Mass. 283. But more to the point is the decision in the leading case of Lowell v. Railroad, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 24, 34 Am. Dec. 33, where the principle was thus stated and applied: "The distinction in all these cases is the same. The parties are not in pari delicto, and the principal offender is held responsible. This distinction is manifest in the case under consideration. The defendants' agent, who had the superintendence of their works, was the first and principal wrongdoer. It was his duty to see to it that the barriers were put up when the works were left at night; his omission to do so was gross negligence, and for this the defendants were clearly responsible to the parties injured. In this negligence of the defendants' agent, the plaintiffs had no participation. Their subsequent negligence was rather constructive than actual. The most that can be said of it is that one of their selectmen confided in the promise of the defendants' agent to keep up the barriers; and by this misplaced confidence the plaintiffs have been held responsible for damages to the injured parties. If the defendants had been prosecuted, instead of the town, they must have been held liable for damages, and from this liability they have been relieved by the plaintiffs. It cannot, therefore, be controverted that the plaintiffs' claim is founded in manifest equity. The defendants are bound in justice to indemnify them, so far as they have been relieved from a legal liability; and the policy of the law does not, in the present instance, interfere with the claim of justice. The circumstances of the case distinguished it from those cases where both parties are in pari delicto, and one of them, having paid the whole damages, sues the other for contribution."

The case of Waterbury v. Traction Co., 74 Conn. 152, 50 Atl. 3, presented facts very similar to those in this case, and the court held: "The primary cause of the accident was the act and fault of the defendant in taking down the railing and failing to restore it, assuming that the defendant took it down as alleged. As between the plaintiff and defendant, there was no co-operation in the act of negligence which caused the injury. The plaintiff did not permit the defendant to leave the railing down. If the defendant took it down, it promised impliedly, if not expressly, to do so in a way not to endanger public travel, and to put it up again. If it failed to keep that promise, it cannot justly charge the plaintiff with negligence, either in having relied upon such promise or in having failed to compel its performance. If the defendant removed the railing and left it down, as alleged, the fact that the plaintiff had knowledge of the defect and neglected to repair it, although it had a fair opportunity to do so, will not prevent a recovery in this action." The subject was discussed to some extent in Gregg v. Wilmington, 70 S. E. 1070, at this term, and the two cases, while not precisely alike, have some features in common.

The jury in this case, under the instructions of the court, found that the injury was caused by the negligence of the West Construction Company, and that, as to Clodfelter, the town of Lexington concurred in that negligence; but that the construction company was primarily liable, as between it and the town. This is the meaning of the verdict, when it is read in the light of the evidence and the charge of the court. So far as the liability of the construction company to the town is concerned, the fact that the city did not guard against the consequences of the negligent act committed by the construction company, by lighting the dangerous place or erecting barriers there, does not prevent its recovery against that company for its primary negligence. The original wrong which caused the injury was done by it, and not by the town, and, as between the two, it cannot be correctly said that the town participated in its wrong or was codefendant, or a joint tort-feasor. If the town was under the obligation to see that the negligence of its contractor was so guarded against as to prevent injury to pedestrians, and to take proper measures of precaution for that purpose, before it could recover from him such damages as it had been compelled to pay to a person injured by his negligence, the doctrine we have stated would be of little or no practical value for the protection or indemnification of the town. If the construction company had given proper warning to Clodfelter, as he approached the trench, by lights, or had erected sufficient barriers there to prevent his falling in it, the accident would not have happened, whether the town had lighted its streets or not. The wrong done to Clodfelter is, therefore, traceable directly to its negligence in having an unguarded trench in the sidewalk. It had promised, with its surety, that the work of construction should be performed carefully, and that the town should be indemnified from "all suits against it for any injuries or damages sustained by any person by or from any cause under its control, while in the construction of the streets, or any part thereof, or any negligence in guarding the same, or by or on account of any act or omission of said contractor or its agents or employes." This provision is certainly broad enough in its terms to cover this case, and to entitle the plaintiff to full indemnity from loss by reason of the negligence of the construction company, which caused the injury to Clodfelter.

[3] The judge may have erred when he told the jury that the primary liability of the construction company should be determined by the terms of the indemnity bond; but this is not such an error as will vitiate the trial, for the reason that it appears from the entire case and the real facts, which are not disputed that the primary liability did exist in law, and, consequently, that the defendants are liable to the plaintiff. We would grant a new trial for this error, if we thought it was a substantial and prejudicial one; but we do not think so. The main question upon which the case was contested in the court below, and in this court, by the defendants, we have decided against them; and, if the case should be returned to the court below for another trial, the result upon the facts must inevitably be against the defendants. It would therefore serve no useful purpose to do so. In Cherry v. Canal Co., 140 N. C. 422, 53 S. E. 188, 111 Am. St. Rep. 850, Justice Hoke thus states the rule which should prevail in such cases: "In 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Pl. & Pr. 499, we find it stated that 'appellate courts deal with judicial acts, and it would not avail to reverse a ruling or judgment correct on the record, though it may be founded on an erroneous reason.' And again, in the same volume, at page 500: 'This system of appeals is founded on public policy, and appellate courts will not encourage litigation by reversing judgments for technical, formal, or other objections which the record shows could not have prejudiced the appellant's rights.' The decided cases in this and other jurisdictions support this position. In Butts v. Screws, 93 N. C. 215, Asha, J., for the court, says: 'A new trial will not be granted when the action of the trial judge, even if erroneous, could by no possibility injure the appellant.' See, also, Ratliff v. Huntly, 27 N. C. 545; Fry v. Bank, 75 Ala. 473. The rule also finds support in the case of Shackleford v. Staton, 117 N. C. 73 [23 S. E. 101]." The verdict and judgment, upon the merits of the case, were right. City of Rochester v. Montgomery, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 394; Brookville v. Arthurs, 130 Pa. 501, 18 Atl. 1076; Seattle v. Regan, 52 Wash. 262, 100 Pac. 731, 132 Am. St. Rep. 963; Milford v. Holbrook, 9 Allen (Mass.) 17, 85 Am. Dec. 735.

[4] But we think the instruction of the court on the sixth issue, as to the primary liability of the construction company, may be sustained as a correct one in the following view of it. It must, of course, be considered and construed with reference to the pleadings, the facts of the case, and the issues. The construction company, as we have shown, committed the original wrong which caused the injury, and the city was not, in a legal sense, particeps delicti. It was liable to Clodfelter, because it failed to discharge the duty of keeping the walk in proper repair, and preventing injury to others from the wrong of the construction company. This brought the case within the terms of the indemnity bond, and by its very words the construction and indemnity companies are liable over to the town for what it has paid under the judgment, with reasonable attorney's fees and costs. The question of primary and secondary liability, as between the plaintiff and the construction company, depended upon whether they were joint tortfeasors, and not upon the fact that a bond had been given to indemnify the town; but, as it appears that they did not unite in committing the wrong, the construction company being the active and principal offender, the court properly instructed the jury that the defendants were liable upon their undertaking to indemnify the plaintiff from "any negligence in guarding the trench," or from the consequences of "any act or omission of the construction company," and directed the jury to answer the issue in the affirmative, as the execution of the bond was admitted. This was correct, even if they were not otherwise liable.

[5] The contract of indemnity between the plaintiff and defendants was a lawful one. There is no stipulation in it which is contrary to public policy. K. C., M. & B. Railroad Co. v. S. R. News Company, 151 Mo. 373, 52 S. W. 205, 45 L. R. A. 380, 74 Am. St. Rep. 545; T. P. Railway Co. v. G. L. Indemnity Co., 60 N. J. Law, 246, 37 Atl. 609, 44 L. R. A. 213.

We find no error in the case.

No error.

(155 N. C. 196)

TOWN OF SHELBY et al. v. CLEVELAND MILL & POWER CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 81*)—HEALTH (§ 20*)—POLICE POWER—PRESERVATION OF PUBLIC HEALTH AND MORALS.

The preservation of the public health and morals is within the police power of the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 148; Dec. Dig. § 81;* Health, Cent. Dig. § 24; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

2. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 7*)—AGAINST WHOM PRESCRIPTION MAY BE CLAIMED—PUBLIC.

In the absence of statute, no title can be acquired against the public by user alone, nor lost to the public by nonuser.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 24-42; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

3. NUISANCE (§ 66*)—WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 196*)—POLLUTING STREAMS—PRESCRIPTION.

One does not acquire by prescription, by over 20 years' use, a right to empty its raw sewage into a river, and it is not exempted from the operation of Revisal 1905, § 3051, prohibiting the discharge of sewage into streams from which a public drinking water supply is taken, unless the same has passed through a well-known system of purification, since the right which the state seeks to enforce is a right to protect public health.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Nuisance, Cent. Dig. § 139; Dec. Dig. § 66;* Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 270; Dec. Dig. § 196.*]

4. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 26*)—NUISANCE (§ 60*)—LEGISLATIVE POWER.

The power of the Legislature to pass laws, except when barred by the Constitution, is plenary, and the Legislature may declare places or practices to the detriment of the health, morals, or welfare of the community public nuisances.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 30; Dec. Dig. § 26;* Nuisance, Cent. Dig. § 137; Dec. Dig. § 60.*]

5. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 81*)—POLICE POWER—RIGHT TO EXERCISE.

The state may not divest itself of the right to exercise its police power inherent in the state for the protection of the public.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 148; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

6. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 70*)—POLICE POWER—PROTECTION OF HEALTH—VALIDITY OF REGULATION.

The question whether the pollution of a stream by raw sewage, poured into it from a mill settlement where hundreds of operatives are employed, is dangerous to the public health, so that the Legislature may prohibit it, is a legislative question, for the power of the Legislature in such cases is not limited to cases where actual injury is shown to have occurred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 129-132; Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

7. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 70*)—POLICE POWER—JUDICIAL QUESTIONS.

The police power must be exercised for the general good, and every intendment will be made in favor of the lawfulness of regulations made by the Legislature, and the courts, except in clear cases, will not interfere with the exercise by the Legislature of such power, so that, where a regulation for the protection of public health bears a real relation to that object, the courts will not interfere.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 129-132; Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

8. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 2*)—VESTED RIGHTS—REGULATIONS TO PROMOTE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Where one could not acquire any vested right to drain its raw sewage into a river, Revisal 1905, § 3051, prohibiting the discharge of raw sewage into streams, enacted to protect the public health, is not invalid, as a taking of property for public use without compensation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 6; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

9. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 2*)—POLICE POWER.

The power of the state to protect the health, morals, and safety of the public cannot be burdened with the condition that the state must compensate individuals for pecuniary losses sustained, because they will not be permitted, by a noxious use of their property, to inflict injury on the community.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 6; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Cleveland County; Biggs, Judge.

Action by the Town of Shelby and another against the Cleveland Mill & Power Company. From a judgment for plaintiffs, rendered after sustaining a demurrer to the answer, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The plaintiffs seek to enjoin the defendant from turning its raw sewage into the First Broad river some eight miles above the intake of the Shelby waterworks system. The defendant answers, admitting the material allegations of the complaint, and that it does empty the raw sewage from its mills and water-closets into said river, and claims the prescriptive right to do so, and further avers that the water supply of the plaintiff town is not contaminated thereby. The plaintiffs demur to the answer. The court sustained the demurrer and gave judgment against defendant, which excepted and appealed.

Burwell & Cansler, John F. Schenck, and Ryburn & Hoey, for appellant. Bickett & White, and Webb & Mull, for appellees.

BROWN, J. The plaintiffs do not rely upon the principles of the common law, but rest their case solely upon section 3051 of the Revisal of 1905, which reads as follows: "No person or municipality shall flow or discharge sewage into any drain, brook, creek or river from which a public drinking water supply is taken, unless the same shall have been passed through some well-known system of sewage purification approved by the State Board of Health; and the continual flow and discharge of such sewage may be enjoined upon application of any person." A violation of this statute is made a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, by section 3858.

The defendant contends, as a matter of law, that it cannot be restrained from emptying its raw sewage into the river in question, because that, prior to the enactment of the statute forbidding it, it had acquired the prescriptive right to do so, and that consequently the statute, if it was ever intended to apply to such a case, is void to the extent that it undertakes to deprive the defendant of a valuable property right without making compensation therefor.

The propositions sought to be maintained in their brief by the learned counsel for defendant are: (1) Whether the right to pollute a stream can be acquired by prescription, and, if it can, (2) whether, when such right has been acquired, it can be destroyed by a statute, making no provision for compensation therefor.

The statute upon which this action is founded is one of several laws enacted in pursuance of what appears to be an intelligent purpose upon the part of the General Assembly to protect the health and well-being of the citizens of the state, by guarding the watersheds and public water supplies of the cities and towns of the state from contamination as far as possible. The value and wisdom of such legislation is established by experience and needs no defense at our hands, even if it was a subject within our domain. It is in line with the most enlightened legislation of Great Britain and of states of this Union.

[1] The preservation of the public health, as well as public morals, is a duty devolving on the state, the discharge of which is denominated an exercise of the police power, and it is under such power that such legislation is sustained and enforced.

This particular statute was considered by this court, in the case of City of Durham v. Eno Cotton Mills, 141 N. C. 615, 54 S. E. 453, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 321, and 144 N. C. 706, 57 S. E. 465, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1163, and its constitutionality sustained at all points in well-considered opinions by Mr. Justice Walker, in which practically all the authorities are cited and discussed. It is unnecessary to review them here.

The only point not considered in those opinions is the contention of the defendant that by over 20 years' continuous usage it has acquired a prescriptive right to empty its raw sewage into the river, with which the state has no power to interfere without making provision for compensation. There are authorities to the effect that, as against a private individual lower down on the stream, the right to pollute it to a greater extent than is permissible at common law may be acquired by prescription by an upper riparian owner. But we are not now dealing with the rights of riparian owners, but with the rights of the public at large, as represented by the General Assembly.

[2] It is well settled that, unless by legislative enactment, no title can be acquired against the public by user alone, nor lost to the public by nonuser. Commonwealth v. Moorehead, 118 Pa. 344, 12 Atl. 424, 4 Am. St. Rep. 601, and cases cited; 22 Am. & Eng. p. 1190. Public rights are never destroyed by long-continued encroachments or permissive trespasses.

[3] If it was in the power of the General Assembly, in the exercise of its police power, as we have held in the Durham Case, to enact this law and make its violation a misdemeanor, it necessarily follows that the defendant could not acquire a right by prescription which would exempt it from the operation of the statute.

Whether the pollution of this stream by emptying raw sewage into it was a nuisance at common law it is unnecessary to consider. Since the passage of the statute it may be classified as a public nuisance, unless the provisions of the act be complied with. The learned counsel properly admits that, if a stream should be polluted, to the extent, and under such circumstances as to create a public nuisance, then no prescription would justify such nuisance.

[4] The power of the General Assembly to pass all needful laws, except when barred by constitutional restrictions, is plenary, and the Legislature has the power to declare places or practices to the detriment of the health, morals, or welfare of the community public nuisances, although not such at common law. This seems to be well settled. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. 273, 31 L. Ed. 205; Lawton v. Steele, 119 N. Y. 226, 23 N. E. 878, 7 L. R. A. 134, 16 Am. St. Rep. 818; State v. Tower, 185 Mo. 79, 84 S. W. 10, 68 L. R. A. 406.

The right which the state is seeking to enforce through this statute is a public right—a right to protect the health of the people of the state. As against such public rights, prescription cannot run. There is no such thing as a prescriptive right to maintain a public nuisance. Joyce on Nuisances, § 51; Cyc. 29, 1207; Jones on Easements, § 178; McMoran & Willis on Sewers and Drains, 238. In Commonwealth v. Upton, 6 Gray (Mass.) 473-476, the court says: "It is therefore immaterial, so far as the government is concerned, in the administration of the law for the general welfare, how long a noxious practice may have prevailed, or illegal acts been persisted in. Easements may be created in lands and the rights of the individuals may be wholly changed by adverse use and enjoyment, if it is sufficiently protracted; but lapse of time does not equally affect the rights of the state." See, also, cases collected in 3 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. p. 25. The General Assembly cannot grant a right to maintain a public nuisance of this character which a succeeding General Assembly could not repeal.

[5] The state cannot divest itself of the right to exercise its police power for the general good. Such power is conceded to be one inherent in the state for the protection of the public, and of such character that the state may not waive or divest itself of the right to exercise it. State v. Holman, 104 N. C. 861, 10 S. E. 758; 1 Abbott on Mun. Corp. 209; In re O'Brien, 29 Mont. 530, 75 Pac. 196; 1 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 373; Portland v. Cook, 48 Or. 550, 87 Pac. 772, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 733; Miles City v. Board of Health, 39 Mont. 406, 102 Pac. 696, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 591. As said by the Supreme Court, in Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. Ed. 1079: "All agree that the Legislature cannot bargain away the police power of the state."

It follows from these, and many other authorities, that the defendant could not acquire any right by prescription, or otherwise, which would prevent the General Assembly of the state, at any time, from exercising its police power to regulate the discharge of sewage into the First Broad river.

[6] The issue attempted to be raised by the pleadings that the stream is not dangerously polluted by the raw sewage poured into it from a large mill settlement, working hundreds of operatives, can be of no avail to defendant. That is a matter for the judgment of the Legislature. Such legislation is preventive, and to limit it to cases where actual injury is shown to have occurred would be to deprive it of its most effective force. To be of value, such laws must be able to restrain acts which have a tendency to produce public injury.

[7] The police power of a state is to be exercised for the general good, and every intendment is to be made in favor of the lawfulness of regulations, such as the statute under consideration, intended to protect the public health and safety. It is not the province of the judicial authority, except in clear cases, to obstruct or interfere with the exercise of such power. The General Assembly, chosen biennially by the people, are better judges than we are of what regulations are necessary to promote the public health and comfort of the citizens of the state.

The Supreme Court of the United States, which has always upheld every reasonable exercise of the police power of the states, has said: "The possession and enjoyment of all rights are subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed by the governing authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, good order, and morals of the community. Even liberty itself, the greatest of all rights, is not an unrestricted license to act according to one's own will." Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 83, 11 Sup. Ct. 13, 34 L. Ed. 620. If a regulation enacted by the Legislature for the protection of the public health bears, as this does, a real and substantial relation to that object, the courts will not strike it down, although it may appear to bear hard upon some individual.

[8] The second proposition of the defendant, that the right to drain its raw sewage into the river cannot be taken from it without compensation, necessarily falls with the first. As the defendant could acquire no vested right of the character claimed, there is no taking of property for a public use, and nothing to compensate the defendant for. The state takes no right from the defendant, but only prescribes the conditions upon which it may use the river for its private purposes.

[9] The present case is governed by principles that do not at all involve an exercise of the power of eminent domain. As said by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. 273, 31 L. Ed. 205: "The power which the states have of prohibiting such use by individuals of their property as will be prejudicial to the health, the morals, or the safety of the public, is not, and, consistently with the existence and safety of organized society, cannot be, burdened with the condition that the state must compensate such individual owners for pecuniary losses they much sustain, by reason of their not being permitted, by a noxious use of their property, to inflict injury upon the community." See, also, Sedgewick on Statutory and Const. Law, pp. 434, 435; Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Works, 199 U. S. 307, 26 Sup. Ct. 100, 50 L. Ed. 204; Durham v. Cotton Mills, 141 N. C. 640, 54 S. E. 453, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 321.

The judgment of the superior court is affirmed.

(155 N. C. 121)

ANDERSON v. AMERICAN SUBURBAN CORPORATION.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 3, 1911.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 443*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—VARYING WRITTEN CONTRACTS.

A written contract for the sale of lots near the suburbs of a city, executed by the owner who divided the tract into lots, is not contradicted or varied by a parol agreement, whereby the owner guaranteed the extension of a street car line to the property, the putting in of granolithic walks, and other improvements; the agreement being collateral to the written contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2048-2051; Dec. Dig. § 443.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 433*)—SALE OF REAL ESTATE—REPRESENTATIONS.

Whether a corporation owning and subdividing into lots a tract near the suburbs of a city, and offering the same for sale through an agent, who made representations to intended purchasers, had authorized the agent to make such representations, so as to be bound thereby, held, under the evidence for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 433.*]

3. CORPORATIONS (§ 426*)—CORPORATE ACTS—REPUDIATION.

A corporation may not repudiate the representations of its agent employed to sell its real estate, where the agent acted in good faith, with the knowledge and authority of the principal officers of the corporation, while it still retains the purchase money paid by purchasers relying on such representations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 426.*]

4. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 207*)—CONTRACTS ASSIGNABLE.

A contract for the sale and purchase of real estate, induced by representations of the vendor, is assignable by the purchaser; the assignee being thereby vested with the rights of the purchaser, including the right to sue, as the real party in interest, on the contract for the vendor's failure to comply with his representations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 423; Dec. Dig. § 207.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Guilford County; Daniels, Judge.

Action by J. W. Anderson against the American Suburban Corporation. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

This issue was submitted: "Is the defendant indebted to the plaintiff? If so, in what amount? Answer: Yes; in the amount of $700 and 6 per cent. interest from the time indicated in the complaint." From the judgment rendered, the defendant appealed. The facts are stated in the opinion of the court.

Justice & Broadhurst, for appellant. A. L. Brooks and C. A. Hall, for appellee.

BROWN, J. There is evidence tending to prove that Dr. Z. T. Brooks contracted to buy 10 lots of land of the defendant of a tract which the defendant had purchased and divided up in lots, and was offering for sale through its agent, Anderson, the present plaintiff. The land was situated near the suburbs of Greensboro. The agreement in writing is entitled "Bond for a deed," and is signed by defendant and Z. T. Brooks. It contains a number of stipulations and restrictions which it is unnecessary to set out.

The plaintiff was permitted to offer evidence that he was the agent of the defendant, and that, as such, and with defendant's knowledge, he guaranteed to Dr. Z. T. Brooks that if he would purchase said lots and give his obligation therefor that the defendant corporation would guarantee to build a street car line to and make certain improvements upon the property sought to be sold within 12 months from the signing of the contract, and that if the improvements were not so made that his money would be refunded and the contract canceled. With this understanding and agreement, Dr. Z. T. Brooks entered into the contract for the purchase of the lots and paid $550 thereunder. At the expiration of 12 months, the defendant corporation had not built the street car line as guaranteed, had not made the improvements connected with the lots, to wit, put in granolithic sidewalks, extended the water main, and other improvements guaranteed, whereupon Dr. Z. T. Brooks demanded of the defendant the return of the money paid, $550, and a cancellation of the contract. The company refused this demand, and the plaintiff, J. W. Anderson, himself made demand upon the company to carry out its contract with Dr. Z. T. Brooks. Upon their refusal to do so, he notified them that he would take an assignment of the contract from Dr. Z. T. Brooks, pay the additional $150 then due upon same, and sue the defendant company for the total amount of $700 unjustly held by them. Dr. Z. T. Brooks thereupon assigned these several contracts to the plaintiff, and with the knowledge of all the facts the defendant corporation accepted the assignment and substituted the plaintiff as assignee to all the rights of Dr. Z. T. Brooks under the contract.

There are eight assignments of error set out in the record, and we think six of them relate to the competency of the evidence tending to prove a parol contract or guaranty on the part of the defendant that if Brooks would buy the lots the defendant would build the car line and make the improvements referred to.

[1] We are of opinion that the evidence admitted does not tend to contradict or vary the paper writing executed by Brooks and the defendant; the terms of which are confined to the payments, restrictions, and stipulations under which Brooks was to hold the property. The agreement to extend the street car line, put in granolithic walks, and other improvements was a separate and distinct contract, or representation amounting to a contract, and was not required to be in writing. Such evidence did not in the least contradict or vary the terms of the written instrument, but is consistent with it, and both can stand together. The principle is well expressed in Kernodle v. Williams, 153 N. C. 475, 69 S. E. 431, citing Nissen v. Mining Co., 104 N. C. 310, 10 S. E. 512, as follows: "While it is true that a contemporaneous parol agreement is not competent to vary, alter, or contradict the written agreement, still, when a contract is not required to be in writing, it may be partly written and partly oral, and in such cases when the written contract is put in evidence it is admissible to prove the oral part thereof." These collateral agreements, which do not contradict the writing, but are entirely consistent with it, are generally enforceable, and may be proved by parol, notwithstanding the rule excluding parol evidence to vary or contradict the terms of the contract. Evans v. Freeman, 142 N. C. 61, 54 S. E. 847; Penniman v. Alexander, 111 N. C. 427, 16 S. E. 408; Typewriter Co. v. Hardware Co., 143 N. C. 97, 55 S. E. 417; Hughes v. Crocker, 148 N. C. 318, 62 S. E. 429, 128 Am. St. Rep. 606; Kelly v. Oliver, 113 N. C. 442, 18 S. E. 698.

[2] The seventh assignment of error is that the court erred in charging the jury, as appears in exception No. 12, and in submitting to the jury the question as to whether the plaintiff was authorized to make to Z. T. Brooks the representations which the plaintiff alleges he did make, when there was not sufficient evidence to go to the jury that the defendant had authorized any such representations to be made. There is abundant evidence to justify the court in submitting to the jury the question as to how far defendant's principal officers knew of and authorized such representations, such as newspaper advertisements by the defendant, printed cards, and the like. As a sample of one advertisement, we note the following: "Watch the new town grow. Look at Piedmont Heights lots before you purchase. Listen to our representatives who will call on you to explain our proposition and to tell you what we propose and guarantee to do, and it will make you money. Water pipes have arrived and will be distributed over the property in a few days and be laid. The cars will be running within twelve months or your money refunded. The company's representatives are R. Y. Zachary, E. W. Wilcox, J. W. Anderson, T. N. Ramsey, W. S. Mallory, D. R. Creecy, Jr. We are already making improvements to the lots equal to any in the heart of the city. Go out and investigate, it costs you nothing to look. Call up the office over phone No. 932, and the company's representatives will take you out and show you the property. Piedmont Heights Co., Room 308, City National Bank Building."

There is also evidence that the president of defendant company gave to the plaintiff, who was then acting as its sales agent, a card for exhibition to purchasers which reads as follows: "Piedmont Heights. Lots $240 to $290. Terms $10 cash and $5 per month. No interest whatever, and no taxes until paid for in full. Free deed in case of death. Electric cars, city water, granolithic sidewalks, etc., guaranteed within 12 months. American Suburban Corporation, Room 308, City National Bank Building, Greensboro, N. C. Telephone 932. Presented by J. W. Anderson, Agent." The law would be untrue to itself if it permitted corporations engaged in developing and selling property to publish such advertisements and issue such cards, to sell the lots, receive the purchase money, and then repudiate the acts of its agents as unauthorized.

[3] As said by Mr. Justice Rodman: "A corporation can only act through its agents, and must be responsible for their acts. It is the greatest public importance that it should be so. If a manufacturing or trading corporation is not responsible for the false and fraudulent representations of its agents, those who deal with it will be practically without redress, and the corporation can commit fraud with impunity." Peebles v. Guano Co., 77 N. C. 233, 24 Am. Rep. 447; Unitype Co. v. Ashcraft, 71 S. E. 61, this term. In this case the agent, Anderson, appears to have acted in good faith, and to have made the representations with the knowledge and authority of the principal officers of the defendant. It cannot be permitted to repudiate his acts, and at same time retain the purchase money paid because of such representations.

[4] The eighth assignment of error relates to the right of the plaintiff to maintain this action, and is likewise untenable. This is clearly a contract that can be assigned, and the assignment by Dr. Brooks to the plaintiff vested in the assignee all the rights, title, and interest of the assignor, and the assignee has the legal right to maintain the action as the real party in interest.

No error.

(156 N. C. 179)

JONES v. WILLIAMS et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. LIS PENDENS (§ 25*)—PURCHASE OF PENDING SUIT.

One purchasing notes and mortgages from the mortgagee, after the complaint in an action to foreclose a subsequent mortgage was filed, acquired them, subject to any judgment rendered in the foreclosure suit; it being a lis pendens.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Lis Pendens, Cent. Dig. §§ 47-57; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

2. LIS PENDENS (§ 13*)—PENDENCY OF ACTION—FILING LIS PENDENS.

The filing of a formal lis pendens in a mortgage foreclosure suit is not necessary to affect purchasers with notice of the proceeding, if the suit is brought in the county where the land is situated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Lis Pendens, Cent. Dig. § 23; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

3. MORTGAGES (§ 497*)—FORECLOSURE—PARTIES—JUNIOR MORTGAGOR.

The lien of a junior mortgagee under a registered mortgage was not affected by judgment of foreclosure in a suit by a prior mortgagee, where the junior mortgagee was not made a party thereto, even though he was not a necessary party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1460-1473; Dec. Dig. § 497.*]

4. COURTS (§ 100*)—PRECEDENT—BINDING EFFECT.

Persons may rely upon the decisions of the Supreme Court in acquiring titles, and titles so acquired will not be prejudiced by the subsequent reversal of a decision.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 341-343; Dec. Dig. § 100.*]

5. MORTGAGES (§ 390*)—FORECLOSURE—EQUITABLE FORECLOSURE.

Though the mortgage contains a power of sale, the mortgagee may foreclose the equity of redemption without resorting to the power; the court acting under its general equitable jurisdiction in such case, and granting relief, irrespective of its provisions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1156; Dec. Dig. § 390.*]

6. MORTGAGES (§§ 242, 340*)—TRANSFER OF TITLE—TITLE OF MORTGAGEE.

Since the mortgage deed passes legal title at once to the mortgagee, defeasible by subsequent performance of its conditions, the assignment of the note and mortgage by the mortgagee did not vest the legal title, nor, as an incident thereto, the power of sale contained in the mortgage, in the assignee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 627, 1037; Dec. Dig. §§ 242, 340.*]

7. MORTGAGES (§ 517*)—FORECLOSURE—SALE.

One bidding at a mortgage foreclosure sale was a mere proposer, until it was accepted, and the sale confirmed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1519; Dec. Dig. § 517.*]

8. MORTGAGES (§ 489*)—FORECLOSURE.

A mortgagee upon foreclosure is not entitled to recover more than the amount of his debt, or such part thereof as remains unsatisfied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Dec. Dig. § 489.*]

9. EQUITY (§ 39*)—RELIEF.

When a court of equity is invoked to grant relief, it will do justice between the parties, and not deprive a party of property without a hearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Dec. Dig. § 39.*]

Clark, C. J., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Duplin County; Whedbee, Judge.

Action by Anderson Jones against A. F.

Williams and others. From a judgment for defendant named, plaintiff appeals. Reversed, and new trial granted.

This action was brought by the plaintiff to foreclose a mortgage on a tract of land, containing originally 245 acres, executed to him by the defendants, Rufus Branch and wife, to secure a debt of $379.50 therein described. The other defendant, Fred Martin, trading under the name and style of E. J. Martin & Son, was made a party, as Rufus Branch and wife had also mortgaged the land to him, and he had assigned his notes and mortgages to his codefendant, A. F. Williams.

The following facts appear in the case: Summons was issued on the 24th day of December, 1903, in behalf of the plaintiff and against Fred Martin, trading under the firm name and style of E. J. Martin & Son, Rufus Branch and wife, Christiana Branch, and was served the 18th day of January, 1904, on Rufus Branch and wife, Christiana Branch, and the 15th day of January, 1904, on Fred Martin. Complaint and answer were duly filed, and at the March term, 1904, upon affidavit, A. F. Williams was made a party defendant; he having purchased the two mortgages of E. J. Martin & Son. At August term, 1904, an order was made, directing summons to issue to A. F. Williams, and on October, 1904, summons was served upon him. The plaintiff, Anderson Jones, prior to 1890, sold to the defendant Rufus Branch a tract of land containing 245 acres, and the latter made various payments up to January 16, 1902, on which date Rufus Branch and wife executed to Anderson Jones their mortgage upon the tract of land to secure the balance of the purchase money of $379.50, which mortgage was duly recorded on October 24, 1902. In part payment of the purchase price of said tract of land, Rufus Branch and wife, on November 23, 1901, reconveyed to Anderson Jones 46 of the 245-acre tract of land by deed, which was duly recorded on the 17th day of November, 1902. On the 30th day of October, 1901, Rufus Branch and wife executed a mortgage deed to Fred Martin, trading as E. J. Martin & Son, to secure an indebtedness of $328 on the 245-acre tract of land, which mortgage was duly recorded on the 2d day of November, 1901. On the 16th day of January, 1902, Rufus Branch and wife executed to Fred Martin, trading as aforesaid, a mortgage upon the 245-acre tract of land, to secure an indebtedness of $250, which was duly recorded January 25, 1902. On the 3d day of March, 1904, A. F. Williams commenced an action in the superior court of Duplin county against Rufus Branch and wife, to foreclose the mortgage assigned to him by Fred Martin, and Branch and wife filed no answer. At the August term, 1904, the court rendered a judgment, ordering the land to be sold, and the land was sold by a commissioner and bought by A. F. Williams, and a final decree entered at the November term, 1904, confirming the sale and authorizing the purchase price of the land to be credited on Williams' judgment, and directing a deed to be made to him for the land. A deed was made and registered November 26, 1904.

Anderson Jones alleged in his complaint that the defendant Rufus Branch executed to him the mortgage on the land to secure the purchase money, and was indebted to him on that account in the sum of $544.50, and also alleged that he had purchased the 46-acre tract, describing it by metes and bounds, and paid him $150 for the same, and received a deed therefor. He also alleged that the defendant Rufus Branch executed to E. J. Martin & Son the notes and mortgages hereinbefore described, and that the defendant A. F. Williams purchased the notes and mortgages after they were due, and since the institution of this action, and while the same was pending, and that the defendant A. F. Williams went into the possession of all the land, except the 46 acres, and received the rents and profits therefrom, and asked for an accounting and a sale of the land to pay off both debts. It is admitted that the defendant A. F. Williams became the owner of the notes and mortgages of Fred Martin, executed to him by Rufus Branch and wife, after the maturity of the notes and mortgages. It is also admitted that A. F. Williams has been in possession of the 199 acres of land since the notes and mortgages were signed to him by Martin, receiving the rents and profits. The evidence showed the annual rental value of the 199 acres of land was $100, and the annual rental of the 46 acres was $35.

It was admitted that A. F. Williams commenced the action against Rufus Branch and wife after he had been made a party to this suit by order of the court, although summons was not served upon him until October 5, 1904. The court submitted to the jury certain issues, which, with the answers thereto, are as follows: "(1) What amount, if anything, is due Anderson Jones on account of his notes and mortgage, executed by Rufus Branch and wife? Answer: $379.50, with interest from November 1, 1902, subject to credit of $16.24, made November 1, 1902. (2) What sum, if anything, is due upon the mortgage assigned to A. F. Williams by E. J. Martin & Son? Answer: $250, with interest at 6 per cent. from the 16th day of January, 1902, until paid, subject to a credit of $13.91, made December 31, 1902; $164. with interest at 6 per cent. from the 30th day of October, 1901; and $328, with interest at 6 per cent. from the 30th day of October, 1901, until paid. (3) Is the defendant A. F. Williams the owner and entitled to the possession of all the land described in the complaint? Answer: Yes. (4) What is the annual rental value of the 46 acres of land mentioned in the complaint? Answer: Thirty-five dollars." The first two issues were submitted at the request of the plaintiff, and to the third and fourth he excepted and tendered the following additional issue: "What is the annual rental value of the 199 acres of land which has been in the possession of the defendant A. F. Williams?" The court refused to submit this issue, and held, and so adjudged, that in no view of the evidence was the plaintiff entitled to recover with respect to the 46 acres, either the land or any interest therein, and charged the jury that, if they believed the evidence, they should answer the third issue, "Yes." The court further held, as matter of law, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a foreclosure, and the defendant Williams was not liable to account for the rents and profits which he had received while in possession of the 199 acres of land. Exceptions were duly taken by plaintiff to the several rulings of the court. It was adjudged upon the verdict that A. F. Williams is the owner of all the land—that is, the 245 acres—and that he recover possession of the same from the plaintiff, with $175, the rental value of the 46 acres. Plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Stevens, Beasley & Weeks, for appellant.
W. S. O'B. Robinson & Son, for appellees.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] We think it may fairly be inferred from the record that A. F. Williams bought the notes and the mortgages from Fred Martin during the pendency of this action, and after the complaint had been filed therein. If so, he acquired his interest in them, subject to any judgment rendered herein, for this suit would be a complete lis pendens. Lord Bacon stated the common-law rule to be that: "No decree bindeth any that cometh in bona fide by conveyance of the defendant before the bill exhibiteth, and is made no party, neither by bill or order; but when he comes in pendente lite, and while the suit is in full prosecution, and without any order of allowance or privy by the court, then regularly the decree bindeth." This rule had its origin in the civil law, and was pungently stated in the legal maxim, "Pendente lite, nihil innovetur." 4 Bacon's Works, p. 515. Sir William Grant said, in Bishop of Winchester v. Paine, 11 Vesey, 194-201, that: "He who purchases during the pendency of the suit, is bound by the decree that may be made against the person from whom he derives the title; the litigating parties are exempted from the necessity of taking any notice of a title so acquired; as to them it is as if no such title existed; otherwise suits would be interminable, or, which would be the same in effect, it would be the pleasure of one party at what period the suit should be determined. The rule may sometimes operate with hardship, but general convenience requires it." Wiltale, Mortgage Foreclosures, § 41, and notes. It may therefore be taken as well settled that a judgment, in an action in rem or one to foreclose a mortgage, binds, not only the parties actually litigating and their privies, but also all others claiming or deriving title under them by a transfer pendente lite.

[2] The filing a formal lis pendens is not required for the application of this recognized principle, when the suit is brought in the county where the land is situated. Dancy v. Duncan, 96 N. C. 111, 1 S. E. 455; Collingwood v. Brown, 106 N. C. 362, 10 S. E. 868; Overton v. Hinton, 123 N. C. 2, 31 S. E. 285; Harris v. Davenport, 132 N. C. 697, 44 S. E. 406; Morgan v. Bostic, 132 N. C. 743, 44 S. E. 639; Pell's Revisal, § 460, and notes; Wiltsie, § 40. While the facts relating to the lis pendens are not very clearly set out in the record, we think it sufficiently appears that A. F. Williams was a purchaser pendente lite and must be held bound by the judgment in this action; but there is another question raised in the case which we think was erroneously decided. Our decision is based upon both grounds.

[3] The defendant Williams failed to make the plaintiff, who was a junior incumbrancer, a party to the foreclosure suit brought by him against Rufus Branch, the mortgagor. The plaintiff is therefore not bound by the proceedings and judgment in that case, and his lien upon the land was not affected thereby.

In treating of this question, Wiltsie, in section 60, says that persons who have acquired an interest in the equity of redemption by incumbrance, such as a mortgage, subsequent to the execution of the mortgage under foreclosure, are necessarily parties to the foreclosure suit, in order to extinguish their claims. "The theory of the law is, that such an incumbrance is a pledge of the equity for the debt, and gives the lienor an equitable interest in the mortgaged premises. As the owner of the equity may, by an absolute conveyance, transfer his entire interest, and thereby make his transferee a necessary party, as we have seen, so he can on the same principle pledge, by a mortgage, judgment, or otherwise, a part or the whole of his interest in the premises, and thereby render the incumbrancer a necessary party, in order to wipe out his interest. Though a lienor does not acquire the fee title to the equity, he acquires an interest in the premises which the statutes of the various states have long established, and which the courts have long recognized and sustained, and which parties, dealing with the premises, cannot ignore, except at their own peril."

He thus sums up the law upon the subject: "All authorities, in all countries where mortgages are foreclosed by equitable actions, are agreed that subsequent and junior mortgages are necessary parties to the foreclosure of a prior mortgage, in order to extinguish and cut off their liens. The action can be sustained without them, but a defective title would be offered at the sale, which no court would compel a bidder to accept. The rule has long been settled that in a bill to foreclose a mortgage, the rights of incumbrancers, not made parties to the suit, are not barred or affected by the decree. If a junior mortgagee is omitted as a party, his remedy is to redeem from the sale under foreclosure." Wiltsie, § 61. He cites numerous and well-considered cases to sustain his views.

In Gage v. Brewster, 81 N. Y. 218, a case much like ours, the court said: "The plaintiff was not affected by the foreclosure suit upon the defendants' mortgage, to which he was not made a party. He was therefore entitled to redeem, precisely as though no such action had been brought, namely, by paying the mortgage debt and interest. * * * When seeking to extinguish the equity of redemption and to bring the premises to a sale, it was his duty to ascertain to whom that equity of redemption belonged. It was the subject of transfer by sale or mortgage, and it had been actually mortgaged to the plaintiff, and his mortgages were on record."

So it was said in Gould v. Wheeler, 28 N. J. Eq. 541: "The complainant would be entitled to a decree of foreclosure and sale, but for the fact that it appears by her bill that there is a subsequent incumbrancer, a mortgagee, who is not made a party to the suit. That mortgagee is a necessary party. A mortgagee who comes into court for foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged premises is not at liberty to omit, as parties to the proceedings, those who hold incumbrances subsequent to his own. The general rule is that the holders of all incumbrances existing at the time of commencing the suit must be made parties. Story's Eq. Pl. § 193; Ensworth v. Lambert, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 605; Adams v. Paynter, 1 Col. C. C. 530; 1 Fisher on Mortgages, 554, 555, 556. It is true that, if they be not made parties, the proceedings are of no avail against them; but that is no reason for making a suit for foreclosure and sale of mortgaged premises an exception to the general rule of equity, which requires that all persons in interest be parties to the suit. It is manifestly unjust to all persons interested in the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises that the sale be made subject to an outstanding right to redeem, for that invariably and inevitably prejudices the sale. The bill must be amended by making the holder of the mortgage given by Stewart (the third mortgage) a party, and he must be brought into court, and the cause be proceeded in regularly as against him. In the meantime the suit will be stayed." Cases directly in point are Murphy v. Farwell, 9 Wis. 102; Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 221; Johnson v. Hosford, 110 Ind. 572, 10 N. E. 407; County of Floyd v. Cheney, 57 Iowa, 160, 10 N. W. 324; Stewart v. Johnson, 30 Ohio St. 24; Johnson v. Hambleton, 52 Md. 378; Watson v. D. M. & T. Investment Co., 12 Or. 474, 8 Pac. 548; Rogers v. Holyoke, 14 Minn. 220 (Gil. 158); Smith v. Chapman, 4 Conn. 344; Hodgen v. Guttery, 58 Ill. 431. The case last cited is strikingly like the case at the bar in its facts.

In Hall v. Hall, 11 Tex. 547 (approved afterwards in Mills v. Traylor, 30 Tex. 7), it is said: "All persons having an interest in the equity of redemption should be made parties to a bill of foreclosure. If such incumbrancers, whether prior or subsequent, are not made parties, the decree of foreclosure does not bind them, as also a decree of sale would not. The prior incumbrancers are not bound, because their rights are paramount to those of the foreclosing party. The subsequent incumbrancers are not bound, because their interest would otherwise be concluded, without an opportunity to assert or protect them. In the case now under consideration, the lands were sold to the appellees subsequent to the mortgage to appellants, and it may be held, that the appellees took the property, subject to that incumbrance. They should, however, not have been precluded or affected by a proceeding had in their absence, and without notice."

In Cram v. Cotrell, 48 Neb. 646, 67 N. W. 452, 58 Am. St. Rep. 714, the court applied the principle, and said: "The plaintiffs were not made parties to the foreclosure suit, and were not bound by those proceedings. The mere fact that they had notice of its pendency did not make them parties or bind them by the decree. This is elementary. The foreclosure and sale were therefore utterly ineffectual to bar plaintiff's mortgage. A junior mortgagee who has not been made a party to the proceeding foreclosing the senior mortgage has thereafter a right to redeem from such senior mortgagee (the purchaser at the judicial sale). Renard v. Brown, 7 Neb. 449. Therefore, when this foreclosure was properly pleaded in the present case, the facts demanded that the plaintiffs, instead of merely having their mortgage re-established, should be permitted to redeem the Stoddard mortgage. Why the court denied this relief and denied plaintiffs any relief, the record does not inform us. * * * If he (Stoddard) did not know of plaintiffs' rights when he took the mortgage, he learned them within a very few days thereafter. At the time of the foreclosure sale, this very suit was pending, in which he is a party. He had full notice of all the facts. A mistake of law would not protect him."

The court, in Howard v. Railway Co., 101 U. S. 837, 25 L. Ed. 1081, held that while the senior mortgagee can proceed by suit to foreclose against the mortgagor alone, and in that sense a subsequent lienor or incumbrancer is not a necessary party, the decree is not binding upon the latter, so as to supersede or displace his lien, but it left him still the right, as a second incumbrancer, to redeem, which he may do if his right is not lost by laches or lapse of time. "Subsequent incumbrancers," says Justice Clifford, who delivered the opinion, "when not made parties to a bill for foreclosure or sale, are not bound by the decree; nor is that rule violated in the least degree when it is held that the title of the defendants is paramount, as that consequence flows from the fact that the lien of the judgment under which the defendants claim is prior to that under which the plaintiff claims his title. Whatever rights the plaintiff had, prior to the sale in equity, which gives the defendants the paramount title, he still has, wholly unimpeached by that sale or by any other cause, unless they are barred by lapse of time or laches. Process against the plaintiff under that decree could not affect his rights, as he was not a party to the proceeding; consequently the lien of his judgment still remained in full force. Even if the plaintiff had been made a party to that proceeding, the only effect would have been to cut off his equity of redemption, and, as he was not made a party, his equity of redemption is not extinguished."

The counsel of defendant Williams, Mr. John Robinson, in his excellent brief, and also at the bar, in his well-prepared and forceful argument, relied on the following cases: Kornegay v. Steamboat Co., 107 N. C. 115, 12 S. E. 123; Lumber Co. v. Hotel Co., 109 N. C. 658, 14 S. E. 35; Williams v. Kerr, 113 N. C. 306, 18 S. E. 501; and Gammon v. Johnson, 126 N. C. 64, 35 S. E. 185; and contended that it had been decided by them that a second incumbrancer is not a necessary party to a foreclosure suit by the first lienholder or mortgagee. This may be conceded, and yet the deduction drawn therefrom, that he will be barred of his right to redeem, is not warranted. We have said he is not a necessary party, in the sense that the decree will be void without him as to those who are parties; but he is clearly entitled to redeem, and we think that the court, in Williams v. Kerr and Gammon v. Johnson, approves the principle as we have stated it. In the case last mentioned, he is said to be a necessary, or at least a proper, party, in order to have a complete adjustment of the rights of all interested persons, and, further, that the court should, ex mero motu, require him to be brought in by process, so as to conclude him. In Williams v. Kerr, the assignee of the mortgagor was held, for special reasons, to be affected by the foreclosure suit, as a lis pendens, and to be bound by its orders and decrees. In the Kornegay and Lumber Company Cases, the court had under consideration the priority of a lien, under the statute, of a mechanic or materialman. In none of those cases, as we read and understand them, was the precise question raised which is now before us for decision, and we think that all those cases may be reconciled with what we have hereinbefore said as to the effect of a decree upon a junior incumbrancer, not a party to the foreclosure sale. Pitt v. Moore, 99 N. C. 85, 5 S. E. 389, 6 Am. St. Rep. 489.

There is nothing decided in Hinson v. Adrian, 86 N. C. 61, that militates against the views we have so far expressed, but the decision rather coincides with them. The court says: "While there is some diversity of opinion as to the practice in requiring the presence of prior and posterior mortgagees in a foreclosure suit, the preponderance of authority favors the propriety, if not the necessity, of their being parties, in order to a full and final adjustment of all the equities involved." It is true that, when referring to certain authorities upon the subject, it is casually said that, if not made a party, the second incumbrancer would be concluded without an opportunity to assert his rights or protect them; but this was an inadvertence, we think, and not justified by the cases, and directly opposed to the overwhelming weight of authority, and it was not at all necessary to the decision of the case. Nor do we think it is sustained by the authorities cited. It was merely stated for the purpose of showing how unjust it would be to bind without a hearing. The court, in that case, ordered the junior incumbrancer to be made a party. We think there is nothing decided in those cases in conflict with our present ruling: but, if anything had been so decided, we would unhesitatingly refuse to follow it, in view of the great weight of authority the other way, unless compelled to do so, because it may involve a question of title. But we are not confronted by any such situation. If we have decided in any case the very question now presented contrary to what we now decide, the precedent will be controlling, so far as to protect any titles or vested interests which have been acquired upon the faith of it.

[4] Parties have the right to act upon the decisions of this court in acquiring titles, and such titles will not be disturbed, or the parties prejudiced, by a subsequent reversal of the decision. We have so held in two recent cases: Hill v. Railroad, 143 N. C. 539, 55 S. E. 854, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 606; Hill v. Brown, 144 N. C. 117, 56 S. E. 693. Such a rule is based upon an ancient maxim of the law, is a just one, and should be perpetuated. Broom's Legal Maxims (8th Ed.) pp. 34, 35. Further, we will say that the principle of this decision will not apply to a subsequent mortgagee whose mortgage is not registered. This application of the rule to such a case would be intolerable. If parties withhold their deeds from registration, they must take the consequences of their own neglect. The law abhors secret liens, and it is now the firmly established policy of this state, and has been since 1885, to require the registration of deeds and other instruments, and to protect innocent purchasers against the claims of those who have not complied with the law. Pell's Revisal, §§ 979-981, and notes; Acts of 1885, c. 147.

It is suggested that the rule applied in this case does not obtain in states where the legal title is held to pass by the conveyance to the mortgagee, as in this state, but only in those where a mortgage is considered merely as a lien, or a security for the payment of the debt. But an examination of the authorities will disclose that they recognize no such distinction. In the states of New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Illinois, Ohio, and others, from the reports of which we have cited cases, it has been held that the legal title passes to the mortgagee. 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. (2d Ed.) p. 900, and note 5. The rule rests upon the reasonable assumption that the junior incumbrancer has an interest which should be protected by the courts, and which cannot be taken from him or impaired without notice and an opportunity to be heard. "It has long been the received rule (expressed in the maxim, 'Audi alteram partem') that no one is to be condemned, punished, or deprived of his property in any judicial proceeding, unless he has had an opportunity of being heard." Broom, Legal Maxims (8th Ed.) p. 112.

[5] The defendant Williams further contends that he had as good a title as if he had foreclosed under the power of sale, as the court in the foreclosure suit was merely selling in accordance with the power, by substituting a commissioner in the place of the mortgagee, and that therefore the case of Dunn v. Oettinger, 148 N. C. 276, 61 S. E. 679, where the trustee sold under the power, applies. But this contention is squarely met by our recent decision in McLarty v. Urquhart, 153 N. C. 339, 69 S. E. 245, in which Justice Brown says: "Notwithstanding the power, the mortgagee may invoke the aid of the court in foreclosing the equity of redemption, instead of resorting to the power. Likewise, in case of complications, the mortgagor has frequently resorted to the courts for protection and compelled foreclosure under their protection. Capehart v. Riggs, 77 N. C. 261; Kornegay v. Spicer, 76 N. C. 96; Whitehead v. Hellen, 76 N. C. 99; Kidder v. McIlhenny, 81 N. C. 131; Manning v. Elliott, 92 N. C. 51, are precedents in point. This plaintiff preferred to seek aid of the court to foreclose, instead of pursuing the power contained in the instrument. Had he pursued the latter, he must follow its provisions substantially; but the court is not bound to follow them. Its power to foreclose is not derived from the power of sale in the mortgage. It could decree foreclosure, if the instrument contained no such power." The court acts under its general equity jurisdiction, and proceeds to grant relief, irrespective of the stipulations contained in the power of sale. It pursues its own course and practice without any restraint by reason of the power of sale contained in the deed, so as to administer the rights of the parties according to law and its own equitable procedure, acting under its own powers and jurisdiction, and not by virtue of any contractual power given in the mortgage or deed of trust.

[6] But it must not be overlooked that the defendant Williams did not acquire the legal title to the land by the assignment of the notes and mortgages to him. The notes were transferred, and the mortgage, but without any conveyance sufficient to transfer the legal title of the mortgagee. Williams v. Teachey, 85 N. C. 402; Dameron v. Eskridge, 104 N. C. 621, 10 S. E. 700; Hussey v. Hill, 120 N. C. 312, 26 S. E. 919, 58 Am. St. Rep. 789; Morton v. Lumber Co., 144 N. C. 31, 56 S. E. 551; a. c. 152 N. C. 54, 67 S. E. 67; Modlin v. Insurance Co., 151 N. C. 35, 65 S. E. 605. "In some of the states a mortgage is held by statutory regulation or judicial construction to be simply a lien, leaving the legal estate in the mortgagor. In North Carolina and many other states, the common law prevails, and the mortgage deed passes the legal title at once, defeasible by subsequent performance of its conditions." Lumber Co. v. Hudson, 153 N. C. 96, 68 S. E. 1065. This being so, and it is conceded in the defendant's brief that it is so, the assignment of the note and mortgage did not vest the legal title to the land in Williams, nor the power of sale as an incident of it. Norman v. Hallsey, 132 N. C. 6, 43 S. E. 473; Williams v. Teachey, supra. The legal title and power, therefore, remained in Fred Martin, the mortgagee, and he was not a party to the foreclosure suit. It follows that the court was not proceeding under the power contained in the deed when it ordered a sale of the land. The person having the legal title and power is a party to this suit, and was at the time that Williams took the assignment, and Williams himself was made a party by the service of process, before his bid at the sale had been accepted by the court, and the sale confirmed.

[7] He was a mere proposer, until it was accepted, and confirmation took place. Joynner v. Futrell, 136 N. C. 301, 48 S. E. 649, and cases cited. The sale and deed of the commissioner had no more than the effect of foreclosing the equity of redemption, leaving the legal title outstanding in Fred Martin, the mortgagee. Under all these circumstances, Williams must be adjudged to be bound by the orders and decrees in this suit, so far, at least, as may be necessary to a satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim by foreclosure of his mortgage, or otherwise. In other words, whatever rights or interest Williams has, he acquired subject to the plaintiff's lien, and the latter may redeem as against him, if his debt has not already been paid or satisfied; and in order to ascertain the status of the several claims an account may be taken, if necessary.

[8] We will not even suggest upon what principle the account should be taken, as that must be decided. first, by the court below, and besides we cannot anticipate what the evidence will be. But we may safely say that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover any more than the amount of his debt, or such portion of the original debt as remains unsatisfied.

There is no analogy between this case and those where sales are made under a power contained in a mortgage or deed of trust, or under an execution issued upon a judgment, for in the former case, when the party acts under a power, he is proceeding out of court, and in the case of an execution sale he is proceeding under a statutory power or mandate, and the court is not called upon to exercise its equitable jurisdiction and do what is manifest justice as between all parties interested. The plaintiff is merely enforcing a right acquired at law by legal process, in accordance with the statute, and that is all. In such cases third parties must be vigilant and take care of their interests.

[9] But when a court of equity, or a court having equitable jurisdiction, is invoked to grant relief, quite a different case is presented. It strives to do justice, and will not deprive a party of his property without a hearing. The distinction is too familiar and manifest to require further elucidation. Menzel v. Hinton, 132 N. C. 660, 44 S. E. 385, 95 Am. St. Rep. 647; Cone v. Hyatt, 132 N. C. 810, 44 S. E. 678.

Our conclusion is that the court erred in its rulings. The verdict will be set aside and a new trial granted, the case to proceed further in the court below, in accordance with the law as herein declared.

New trial.

CLARK, C. J. (dissenting). It has always been held for law in this state that a purchaser at a sale under a second mortgage acquires the property, subject to the lien of the first mortgage; but that the purchaser at a sale under the first mortgage acquires the property absolutely free from the liens of subsequent mortgages. Purchasers at such sales are required therefore to examine only for prior incumbrances, not as to subsequent ones.

In Gambrill v. Wilcox, 111 N. C. 43, 15 S. E. 885, it was held that the purchaser at an execution sale under a junior docketed judgment acquires the property, subject to the lien of prior docketed judgments, but that the purchaser at an execution sale under a senior docketed judgment acquires the property free from the liens of all junior judgments. This is put upon the express ground therein stated that "the lien of a docketed judgment is in the nature of a statutory mortgage." This case has been cited since in Baruch v. Long, 117 N. C. 511, 23 S. E. 447; Bernhardt v. Brown, 118 N. C. 710, 24 S. E. 527, 715, 86 L. R. A. 402, and other cases.

When the sale is made under a power of sale contained in the mortgage, there is no opportunity to make subsequent mortgagees parties, nor has it ever been required that notice be given to them. The second mortgagees are fixed with notice of the prior recorded mortgage by statute, and they take only the equity of redemption. When the sale is made under foreclosure proceedings, the purchaser is not required to examine for subsequent incumbrances. He takes with notice only of the judgment which adjudges the validity of the mortgage and decrees the sale thereunder. He is not required to examine for subsequent incumbrances, any more than a purchaser at a sale under a docketed judgment, or a purchaser at a sale under a mortgage with power of sale.

It has been repeatedly and most explicitly declared by this court (Kornegay v. Steamboat Co., 107 N. C. 117, 12 S. E. 123; Lumber Co. v. Hotel Co., 109 N. C. 663, 14 S. E. 85; Williams v. Kerr, 113 N. C. 311, 18 S. E. 501; Gammon v. Johnson, 126 N. C. 66, 35 S. E. 185) that in a proceeding for foreclosure it is not necessary that the holders of junior mortgages be made parties. But if the purchaser could not get a good title at such sale, unless subsequent mortgagees are made parties, then they would be necessary parties beyond question. Those decisions hold that it is advisable to make such junior mortgagees parties, and even that the court may add them ex mero motu. The reason given is that thereby they may have opportunity to participate in the surplus, if any, derived from the sale over and above the payment of the first mortgagee and the cost of proceedings, which surplus the mortgagor might otherwise dissipate. This reason looks to the convenience and advantage of the second mortgagees, but does not affect the title acquired by the purchaser.

It has been held in many cases that a docketed judgment, though a lien upon the land, does not divest the estate out of the debtor, nor transfer his title, and does not even make the land primarily liable for the debt. Dysart v. Brandreth, 118 N. C. 968, 23 S. E. 966, and cases cited; Clark's Code (3d Ed.) p. 592. If, therefore, in such case, where the title and the estate still remain in the judgment debtor, the purchaser at the execution sale under a senior judgment takes the property, divested of the lien of subsequent docketed judgments, without any notice being given to them of the sale, for a stronger reason, when the land is sold under a decree of foreclosure, the purchaser must take without notice of any subsequent incumbrances which are not recited in the judgment, because by the first mortgage the title and the estate is transferred to the mortgagee, subject only to the sale and return of the surplus, if any, to the mortgagor.

The subsequent mortgagees take only a mortgage upon the equity of redemption. The legal title and the estate are in the first mortgagee, and the purchaser at the sale under the first mortgage can be no more affected by any subsequent liens than the first mortgagee himself. Indeed, the purchaser at such sale is in a better condition than the mortgagee, for he takes the legal title, which was vested in the mortgagee, discharged of the trusts thereto attached. The purchaser is not required to see to the application of the purchase money. He has discharged his duty when he has paid the money into court at a sale under a decree of foreclosure, or has paid it to the mortgagee at a sale under power of sale, and has taken his deed.

In foreclosure proceedings, as the court has always held (Gammon v. Johnson, 126 N. C. 66, 35 S. E. 185, and other cases above cited), it is advisable to make subsequent mortgagees parties, that they may look to their liens upon the surplus. If not so made parties in the summons, they can ask to be joined, or the court ex mero motu can make them parties. But their not being parties cannot impair the title of the first mortgagee who, by virtue of his prior contract, holds the legal estate, nor can it affect the purchaser who acquires the estate and title of the first mortgagee.

For the above reasons this court has always held that junior mortgagees are advisable parties to foreclosure proceedings upon a prior mortgage, but not necessary parties. Hence, if they are not made parties, the purchaser at the sale acquires, nevertheless, a good title. It will place a new burden upon purchasers at such sales to impair their title by a constructive notice of junior incumbrancers, whom the court, ordering the sale has not seen fit to make parties.

The purchaser at the foreclosure sale under the first mortgage in this case had a right to rely upon the uniform decisions of this court that it was not necessary to make subsequent incumbrancers parties. But if, notwithstanding, his title is held defective, and that, too, not by setting aside the sale by motion in that cause, but in a collateral proceeding to foreclose under the junior recorded mortgage, certainly in this proceeding it is necessary to make the senior mortgagee a party. At such sale under the junior mortgage, the first proceeds must be applied to the payment of the lien of the first recorded mortgage, after payment of costs.

If, as is suggested, the assignment by the first mortgagee is defective, the assignee (who was also purchaser at the foreclosure sale) must be made a party, and the decree should direct a repayment to him of the purchase money out of so much of the proceeds of the sale, now to be made, which are to be applied to the discharge of the lien of the first mortgage.

The foreclosure sale under the first mortgage was either valid or invalid. If valid, the purchaser got a good title. If invalid, then at the foreclosure sale under the second mortgage the lien of the first mortgage must first be paid off out of the proceeds of the sale. The first registered mortgage cannot be deprived of its priority given by statute.

(156 N. C. 213)

SHELL & SOUTHERLAND v. AIKEN et al.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM (§ 44*)—MUTUALITY OF DEMANDS.

A maker of a joint and several note payable to a firm may, in an action by the firm against him and the co-maker, set up a counterclaim due him from the firm.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Set-Off and Counterclaim, Cent. Dig. §§ 82-99; Dec. Dig. § 44.*]

2. SALES (§ 428*)—COUNTERCLAIM—DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY.

A claim for damages for breach of warranty in a contract of sale arises out of contract, and is available as a counterclaim under Revisal 1906, § 481, authorizing a counterclaim based on a cause of action arising on contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1214-1223; Dec. Dig. § 428.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Catawba County; Long, Judge.

Action by Shell & Southerland against J. H. Aiken and another. From a judgment granting insufficient relief, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

A. A. Whitener, for appellant. W. A. Self and C. L. Whitener, for appellees.

OLARK, C. J. The plaintiffs Shell & Southerland, a partnership, sold their livery business to the defendants, who were husband and wife, taking a note signed by them both in the sum of $600, upon which this action is brought. The husband pleaded as a counterclaim that subsequently to the above sale the plaintiffs sold him a surrey for $142 and warranted the same, that the surrey proved to be worthless, and he sets up damages for the breach of warranty as a counterclaim. The jury assessed the counterclaim at $100 which was deducted from the amount which was admitted to be due upon the note.

The plaintiffs present several exceptions, but in their brief they are practically reduced to two propositions.

[1] They contend that the counterclaim was due to the husband only, and therefore judgment should have been rendered against the wife for the full amount of the note. But, as the note was joint and several, any credit allowed thereon in the judgment rendered against one of the obligors will, of course, be a payment as to the other. The note sued on was due to the partnership, and the counterclaim was owing by the partnership, and was therefore properly allowed as a counterclaim.

[2] The second contention of the plaintiffs is that the counterclaim was for a tort, and, inasmuch as it did not arise out of the same transaction, it could not be set up as a counterclaim. Revisal 1906, § 481. The answer to this is that the damage for breach of warranty arises out of contract, and is therefore a proper counterclaim. Even if the counter-claim had been for fraud and deceit, and therefore an action ex delicto under the old procedure, the defendant could waive the tort and sue in contract. Bullinger v. Marshall, 70 N. C. 526.

No error.

(33 S. C. 26)

BARTOLI v. GRANDY et al.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. TRIAL (§ 178*)—MOTION FOR DIRECTED VERDICT—EVIDENCE CONSIDERED.

Until a ruling admitting evidence was reversed by the trial court, or until the objection to it was sustained on appeal, such evidence should be considered on a motion for directed verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 401-403; Dec. Dig. § 178.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 142*)—DIRECTION OF VERDICT.

Where the evidence is susceptible of more than one inference, it is error to direct a verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 337; Dec. Dig. § 142.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Greenville County; Ernest Gary, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by L. Bartoli, doing business as the Bartoli Mosaic & Tile Company, against John F. Grandy and another, copartners as John F. Grandy & Son, and another. From a judgment upon a directed verdict, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded for new trial.

Wm. G. Sirrine, for appellant. Haynsworth & Haynsworth, for respondents.

GARY, A. J. This is an action against John F. Grandy & Son and Greenville Hotel Company, to recover the sum of $248.62 for work done by L. Bartoli on the Ottaray Hotel, Greenville, S. C. The Greenville Hotel Company awarded the contract, for the erection of said hotel, to John F. Grandy & Son, who in turn awarded to Bartoli, the contract for all tiling work in the hotel, specified in the original contract, between John F. Grandy & Son and the hotel company. This original contract did not call for tile floors and bases in the bathrooms, but subsequently it was decided to have such work done by contract. At a meeting for this purpose, the following persons were present: Bartoli, one of the Grandys, A. A. Bristow, and D. W. Ebaugh—the two last mentioned representing a majority of the building committee of the hotel company—and they entered into a contract, the provisions of which are in dispute. After the completion of the hotel, and the settlement between the hotel company and Grandy & Son, there remained due from Grandy to Bartoli, on account of work done under the original contract, the sum of $44. This sum John F. Grandy & Son tendered to Bartoli; but the latter refused to accept it, claiming that there was an additional sum due him, amounting in all to $248.62, and, upon the defendant's refusing to pay the latter sum, this action was begun. On the trial of the case, it was contended, on behalf of plaintiff, that the work done on the base of the walls should be paid for at the price of 26 cents per lineal foot, which contention, if correct, would entitle plaintiff to a judgment for the full amount asked for. On the other hand, it was contended on the part of the defendants that this work was to have been paid for on the basis of 26 cents per square foot. If the latter contention is correct, it appears that the plaintiff has been paid in full, with the exception of the item of $44, for work done under the original contract. The record contains the following statement: "The jury, after retiring to consider the case, returned and announced to the court that they had been unable to arrive at a verdict. By Mr. Haynsworth: I move the court to direct a verdict in this case, except for $44. By the Court: I think that is what you are entitled to, so I will direct the verdict for you. Write out the verdict, Mr. Haynsworth." This amount was for other work than the tiling and was not disputed. The plaintiff appealed upon exceptions, which raise, practically, the single question whether there was any testimony whatever tending to show that the work done on the base of the walls was to be paid for at a higher price than 26 cents per square foot.

P. M. Feltham, a civil engineer, thus testified as a witness for the plaintiff: "Q. What is the usual method of computation to measure the base, as distinguished from the method of measuring the floor? A. You measure the base by the lineal foot, and the floor by the square foot. Objected to by Mr. Haynsworth: He is measuring under a contract, and the terms of the contract would determine that question. By Court: He can prove what this base terrazzo was, and estimate the value of it." Cross-examination: "Q. You mean to say that, according to Bartoli's claim, it was 240 odd dollars? A. No, sir; Grandy and I figured this together, and by our figures made the calculation. Q. Didn't the whole difference arise between Bartoli and the Greenville Hotel Company with reference to the measurements of the bases? A. My understanding, of course, I was not present, my understanding was that the dispute arose in the difference of the height of the bases. Q. If the hotel company was right about this claim, there would be nothing—there is where the difference arose, the difference in the measurement? A. Yes, sir. There being no written contract, I understood it."

D. W. Ebaugh, vice president of the Greenville Hotel Company, thus testified in behalf of the defendants: "Mr. Bartoli came over, and we had a meeting with him at the old Board of Trade rooms. We asked him what the work would be worth, and, as near as I remember it, the work was 26 cents a square foot. Q. As I understand, you asked him specially with reference to the bases? A. Yes, sir. Q. What did he say? A. He said it was all the same price. Q. What was that? A. Twenty-six cents a square foot." Cross-examination: "Q. You asked how much the work was a square foot? A. Yes, sir. Q. It was 26 cents? A. Yes, sir. Q. The floor? A. Yes, sir. Q. Then you afterwards asked him (Bartoli) how much the base was? A. Asked him how much the washboard was. Q. And didn't he say 26 cents, the same? A. I can't remember that distinctly. I understood it to be the same price. Q. I am asking you, didn't he say 26 cents? A. I can't recollect that just now. Q. You didn't give it any particular significance, did you? A. No, sir."

A. A. Bristow, president of the Greenville Hotel Company, thus testified as a witness for the defendants: "Q. Were you present when the arrangement was made with Mr. Bartoli to do this mosaic work? A. Yes, sir. Q. Just tell what took place at that meeting. A. Well, we had a meeting, and I think considered it. Mr. Ebaugh, myself, and Mr. Grandy, and Mr. Bartoli, I guess it was, I can't say positive, he or his representative, in regard to putting the terrazzo tiles in the bathroom at the hotel. The price agreed on was 26 cents to my recollection, a square foot. That was about all there is to it. Q. Didn't you ask him something about the floor? State whether or not the question was asked him, what would be the charge for the bases? A. Mr. Ebaugh asked him if it made any difference whether it was four or eight inches. He said, no, it was all the same price. Q. What was that price? A. Twenty-six cents a square foot. Q. What was the height of the base? A. I can't tell you what the height of it is. Q. According to the contention of the hotel company as to the price to be paid, has the hotel company paid in full? A. I can't answer that." Cross-examination: "Q. The conversation you refer to is the one that took place between Mr. Ebaugh and Mr. Bartoli? A. Yes, sir. Q. Mr. Ebaugh is the man who asked him about the bases, how much for the base? A. Yes, sir. Q. He said 26 cents a square foot, or something like that? A. The same price."

Let us first consider the status of the case at the close of the plaintiff's testimony. It shows that the work was done by the plaintiff; that the usual method of computation is to measure the base by lineal measure, and the floor by the square foot; that the calculation made by Bartoli and the witness Feltham showed that the work was worth more than $240. It is true the defendants' attorneys made objection to the testimony, as to the usual method of measuring the base and the floor; but the objection was not sustained. In overruling the objection, his honor the presiding judge said: "He can prove what this base terrazzo was, and estimate the value of it."

[1] If the defendants had then made a motion for a nonsuit, it could not properly have been sustained. Until the presiding judge reversed his ruling as to the admissibility of the testimony, or until the objection to it was sustained on appeal, it was necessary to consider such testimony.

[2] The defendants undertook to destroy the effect of the plaintiff's testimony, by examining as witnesses the president and vice president of the hotel company. Neither of them, however, seems to have been able to state, positively, the terms of the verbal contract that was made with Bartoli; and when their testimony is considered, in connection with the testimony in behalf of the plaintiff, it is susceptible of more than one inference.

It was therefore error to direct the verdict herein.

It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the circuit court be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for a new trial.

JONES, C. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(88 S. C. 4)

HASELDEN v. HASELDEN et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 9, 1911.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1170*)—REVIEW—CLERICAL ERRORS.

A decree will not be disturbed on account of an obvious clerical error; the judge's intention clearly appearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4540-4545; Dec. Dig. § 1170.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Berkeley County; George W. Gage, Judge.

Action by Rebecca Haselden against Herbert D. Haselden and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

W. St. Julien Jervey, for appellant. Willcox & Willcox and Octavus Cohen, for respondents.

GARY, A. J. This is an action for the admeasurement of dower. The facts are fully stated in the decree of his honor the circuit judge.

The third assignment of error is as follows: "Because his honor showed a misapprehension of the evidence in this: He says the deed from the children to the mother 'does not (sic) declare, that the land so conveyed is the dower of the said Rebecca from the landed estate of her late husband, James H. Haselden'; whereas, by an inspection of the deed, before court, it appears expressly stated in the deed that this property is set off as dower in the lands of her husband. Therein he erred." It appears that the error was merely clerical, and that the circuit judge intended that the word "only" should be inserted between the words "not" and "declare."

We do not deem it necessary to consider any other exception specifically.

For the reasons assigned by the circuit judge, the said decree is affirmed.

(88 S. C. 561)

WITHERSPOON v. HURST.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 5, 1911.)

DEEDS (§ 175*)—RESTRICTIONS—WAIVER—EVIDENCE.

Where a grant of land was made subject to the condition that it should never be built upon, but always remain an open space in front of the respective houses of the grantor and grantee, without any restriction upon the character of the buildings upon the lots mentioned, no abandonment of the right of the dominant tenement arose, because grantees of that tenement for a time maintained a fence around the property abutting on the locus in quo, or because the character of the buildings on both lots was changed, or because at an annual fair lunch tables were allowed on that land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 545, 548; Dec. Dig. § 175.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Sumter County; Geo. W. Gage, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by E. D. Witherspoon against E. W. Hurst. From a decree for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The following is the diagram referred to in the opinion:

L. D. Jennings, for appellant. Lee & Moise, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. On March 14, 1884, E. W. Moise, in consideration of $15, conveyed to C. M. Hurst a small triangular lot of land situate in the city of Sumter, in the angle between Mary street on the north and northwest and Hauser street on the south and southwest, measuring 80 feet on Mary street and 60 feet on Hauser street; the eastern line being 50 feet along the lot of E. W. Moise. At the time of the conveyance the residence of C. M. Hurst was on Hauser street, fronting on this triangle, and also fronting thereon was a tenant house on the remaining premises of E. W. Moise. The habendum clause of the conveyance was: "To have and to hold the said small triangular piece of land to C. M. Hurst, and his heirs and assigns, forever, subject to a condition: That it shall never be built upon, but always remain an open space in front of my house, and also of his house, as per diagram hereto attached." The diagram attached represented the triangle as has been described.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

The plaintiff became the owner of the remainder of the lot of E. W. Moise, east of the triangle, through successive conveyances, and the defendant became owner of the property on Hauser street fronting the triangle, and also owner of the triangle. On May 23, 1906, the defendant rolled a small wooden building upon the triangle over the protest of plaintiff, and this action was immediately brought for injunction to remove the building and restrain any interference with the triangle by obstructions contrary to the conditions of the above deed, with demand, also, for damages. Defendant contended that, if any easement ever existed in favor of the lot of plaintiff, it had been abandoned and extinguished by the acts of plaintiff and his grantors. The case was heard before Judge Memminger and a jury, and the court directed a verdict for plaintiff but without damages. This was followed by a decree holding that the condition of the deed was binding on the defendant and enforceable by plaintiff, and that there had been no extinguishment or abandonment of plaintiff's right, requiring removal of the structure, and enjoining interference with the premises as an open space.

The exceptions of appellant depend substantially on the question whether there was any evidence of an abandonment or extinguishment of the alleged easement or condition which should have been submitted to the jury, and whether the court was in error in holding as matter of fact that there had been no such abandonment or extinguishment. As the circuit court held, there was no claim or evidence of adverse possession. There was testimony that, for several years during the time the Sumter Colored Industrial Fair Association, grantor of plaintiff, owned the Moise lot adjoining the triangle, the association maintained a high, close fence near the eastern line of the triangle and around its property, so as to prevent those outside from seeing into the fair ground, with a gate of entrance and exit on the line next to the triangle; that the association converted the tenant house on its lot into an exhibition building, with additions thereto; that plaintiff, after acquiring the property from the association in 1904, removed this building, and erected a bottling plant, some feet from the eastern line of the triangle and across plaintiff's lot, with an office door on the side next to the triangle, but fronting on Hauser street.

It is very clear that such facts are not evidence of any abandonment or extinguishment of the condition for an open space on the triangle, but are entirely consistent with such condition. The provision for an open space in front of Hurst's house and in front of Moise's house, "as per diagram," appertained to the adjoining lots of Hurst and Moise, and not merely to the houses thereon as places of residence. There being no condition restricting the character of the buildings to be erected on the lots of Hurst and Moise, such structures could not affect the continued validity of the condition in question. Hence, also, the fact that the house on the Hurst lot adjoining was burned, and other houses for residence and stores were erected on that lot, has no bearing on the question of extinguishing the condition for an open space over the triangle. There was also testimony that, while the fair association was holding its annual fair, defendant permitted lunch tables to be erected and used on the triangle, and that after the association sold to plaintiff the defendant permitted a long billboard to be erected on the triangle, which remained there about two years, and was removed, so defendant testified, because some of his tenants on the lot adjoining had complained about it, although plaintiff testified that the removal was at his request.

But such facts have no tendency to show extinguishment or abandonment of plaintiff's right to have the space kept open. This is not a case in which an easement or servitude was granted for a particular purpose, which no longer exists, or which has been obstructed by the owner of the dominant estate, in a manner inconsistent with its further enjoyment; hence the principle declared in Taylor v. Hampton, 4 McCord, 96, 17 Am. Dec. 710, does not apply. Whether the condition stated be considered as creating an easement, or as being a covenant running with the land, in either case there is nothing in the record tending to show any intention on the part of plaintiff to abandon, extinguish, or annul the same.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(89 S. C. 30)

ROBINSON v. TOWN OF ST. MATTHEWS.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 822*)—DAMAGES—PERSONAL INJURIES.

Under Civ. Code 1902, § 2023, a municipality is liable for injuries through a defect in a street occasioned by its neglect or mismanagement. The neglect alleged was in digging a ditch in a street to a depth dangerous to ordinary travel and leaving same uncovered and unlighted. Held, it was not error to fail to instruct that it is discretionary with a municipality to place permanent lights in a street, as the case presented not merely a failure so to do, but a defect in the street as a result of neglect in leaving an uncovered and unlighted ditch in a street.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1762; Dec. Dig. § 822.*]

2. DAMAGES (§ 50*)—MENTAL SUFFERING.

Mental pain and suffering connected directly with physical injury constitute a part of the physical injury, for which compensatory damages may be allowed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. § 100; Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Calhoun County; Thos. S. Sease, Judge.
"To be officially reported."

Action by Wesley Robinson against the Town of St. Matthews. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

M. M. Mann, for appellant. J. M. Walker and J. C. Elliott, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. This action was brought under section 2023, 1 Code of Laws, for damages for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff as the result of the neglect and mismanagement of the defendant in not keeping the streets of the town in good repair, and in not providing lights at a certain church within the corporate limits. The jury awarded a verdict to the plaintiff in the sum of $100.

Appellant's exceptions to the judgment rendered are upon two grounds:

[1] First. Error in failing to charge defendant's fourth request as follows: "It is discretionary with a municipality as to the erection and placing of permanent lights, hydrants and like structures, and it is no negligence on the part of a municipality to place lights in some parts of a town and not place them in others, if in the discretion of the municipality they do not deem it wise or expedient to erect or establish such lights." It appears that the court overlooked the request to charge as it was handed to him on a sheet of paper detached from other sheets containing requests which were considered. But the request did not contain a sound proposition of law applicable to the case, and hence there was no error or harm in overlooking it. Under section 2023, a municipality is liable for an injury through a defect in any street occasioned by its neglect or mismanagement. The delict alleged was in digging a ditch along one of the principal streets of the town to a depth dangerous to ordinary travel and leaving the same uncovered and unlighted, which caused plaintiff on a dark night to drive therein to his injury, although he was exercising due care. The case as presented was not a mere failure to establish a permanent light for the benefit of the citizens, but a defect in the street, as a result of neglect or mismanagement under the peculiar circumstances. Hence the test of liability could not depend upon whether the municipal authorities deemed it wise or expedient to guard the exposed ditch with a light; but the test was whether the uncovered and unlighted ditch was a defect in the street resulting from defendant's neglect or mismanagement.

Second. The court charged the jury: "If you find that the plaintiff is entitled to recover, you have the right to take into consideration his loss of time, his physical and mental pain and suffering, and that which he is reasonably certain to endure in the future, if any, his expenditures as a result of the injury sustained, if any, the injury to his health if you find those things to exist as a matter of fact."

[2] Appellant contends that it was error to allow the jury to take mental pain and suffering into consideration in estimating damages. Mental pain and suffering connected directly with physical injury constitute a part of the physical injury for which compensatory damages may be allowed. Mack v. South Bound R. R. Co., 52 S. C. 332, 29 S. E. 905, 40 L. R. A. 679, 68 Am. St. Rep. 913.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

STATE v. JACKSON.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

On petition for rehearing. Petition dismissed.

For former opinion, see 87 S. C. 407, 69 S. E. 883.

PER CURIAM. After careful consideration, we find no ground for rehearing. It is therefore ordered that the petition be dismissed, and the stay of remittitur be revoked.

(88 S. C. 9)

PATTERSON v. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 9, 1911.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 690*)—REVIEW—RECORD—EXHIBITS.

An exhibit admitted in evidence, not being printed in the "case," so that its contents cannot be known, it cannot be said that its admission was error, or, if so, was prejudicial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2897-2908; Dec. Dig. § 690.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 695*)—RECORD—EVIDENCE.

It appearing that all the evidence is not before the court on appeal, it cannot say there was no evidence of negligence or damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2911-2915; Dec. Dig. § 695.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Hampton County; R. C. Watts, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by James M. Patterson against the Western Union Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Dismissed.

E. F. Warren, for appellant. James M. Patterson, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. Plaintiff recovered judgment against defendant in the court of a magistrate for $35 damages, caused by negligent delay in the transmission and delivery of a telegram. On appeal to the circuit court, the judgment was affirmed.

The first two exceptions assign error in the admission of a letter and two service messages, and the last two on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence or of damages.

[1, 2] The record is very defective. It shows that a number of letters and telegrams were admitted in evidence and considered by the magistrate and circuit court; but not one of them is printed in the "case." Without knowing the contents of an exhibit, we cannot say whether there was error in admitting it, or, if so, whether it was prejudicial. And, as it appears that all the evidence is not before us, we cannot say there was no evidence of negligence or of damages.

Appeal dismissed.

JONES, C. J., and GARY, A. J., and WOODS, J., concur.

(88 S. C. 1)

GRAHAM v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 9, 1911.)

1. NEW TRIAL (§ 77*)—EXCESSIVE RECOVERY—WRONGFUL CONDUCT OF EMPLOYE.

One thousand dollars recovery against a railroad company by a freight patron, grossly insulted and maliciously assaulted by a station agent, was not so excessive as to show passion or prejudice, entitling the railroad company to a new trial as a matter of right.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 157-161; Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

2. NEW TRIAL (§ 97*)—GROUNDS—ABSENT WITNESSES—JUDICIAL DISCRETION.

It was not an abuse of discretion to refuse defendant a new trial, asked on account of absent testimony, where there was no motion for continuance on that ground.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. § 197; Dec. Dig. § 97.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Florence County; Thos. S. Sease, Judge.

Action by O. O. Graham against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Lucian W. McLemore, for appellant. J. W. Ragsdale, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The complaint in this case was based on the allegation that, on November 5, 1909, in Florence county, at Coward's Station, on defendant's line, defendant, by its station agent, E. L. Smith, grossly insulted and abused plaintiff, and maliciously assaulted him with a pistol, while he was lawfully upon defendant's premises, for the purpose of obtaining freight and paying the charge due thereon. Verdict and judgment were rendered in favor of plaintiff for $1,000.

Motion for a new trial was made on two grounds: (1) "That the verdict is so excessive as to show on its face that the jury were influenced by passion, or whim, or prejudice; (2) that the failure of defendant to have the benefit of the testimony of the witness S. C. Smith could not have been foreseen and guarded against, and without this testimony the defendant has not had a fair and impartial submission of its case to the jury." These grounds are renewed here by exceptions; all other exceptions being abandoned.

[1] We cannot say that the verdict was the result of passion, whim, or prejudice upon anything appearing in the record, or that there was abuse of discretion in refusing a new trial for excessive verdict. There was evidence tending to show that defendant's agent assaulted plaintiff with a deadly weapon, upon the station premises, while plaintiff was there dealing with the agent in reference to business within the scope of the agent's employment. The verdict may be regarded as large; but, not being without support in the evidence, this court cannot interfere. Bing v. Atlantic C. L. R. R. Co., 86 S. C. 529, 68 S. E. 645.

[2] It may have been unfortunate for the defendant that it went to trial without the testimony of the witness Smith, but that affords no ground for relief in this court. There was not even a motion for continuance, on the ground of the absence of the witness. There was certainly no abuse of discretion in refusing a new trial on this ground.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(39 S. C. 32)

MARTIN v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 275*)—FAILURE TO STOP TRAIN AT PASSENGER'S DESTINATION — SPECIAL DAMAGES—PLEADING.

A complaint in an action by a passenger for the failure of the carrier to stop the train at the station of his destination, which alleges that the passenger gave the ticket collector money and told him to stop the train at the station, and permit him to alight to attend to his business there, is sufficient to permit testimony of notice to the carrier of the passenger's business engagement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1076, 1077; Dec. Dig. § 275.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 277*)—BREACH OF CONTRACT—SPECIAL DAMAGES.

In the absence of proof of such notice, proof of loss arising from the passenger's failure to meet the business engagement is inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1082-1084; Dec. Dig. § 277.*]

3. CARRIERS (§ 277*)—BREACH OF CONTRACT OF CARRIAGE — SPECIAL DAMAGES — EVIDENCE.

In an action against a carrier for failing to stop its train at a passenger's destination, the testimony of the passenger that, when he paid the fare to the ticket collector, he stated that he wanted to go to the station of his destination, did not alone show that the carrier had notice of the passenger's special business engagement there, and evidence of loss arising from his failure to meet the business engagement was properly excluded under the rule that special damages are recoverable only on allegation and proof that the carrier had notice of the special circumstances at the time of the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1082-1084; Dec. Dig. § 277.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 278*)—CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS—DAMAGES—INSTRUCTIONS.

Instructions in an action against a carrier for its willful failure to stop its train at a passenger's destination to enable him to alight held not to preclude a recovery of actual damages alleged and proved, but merely to leave to the jury to determine what damages, whether actual or punitive, should be awarded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1080, 1081; Dec. Dig. § 278.*]

5. CARRIERS (§ 275*)—DAMAGES — COMPENSATORY AND PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

A complaint in an action against a carrier, which is based on a willful breach of the carrier's duty to stop its train at a station to permit a passenger to alight, does not prevent recovery for the actual damages alleged and proved as a result thereof, but authorizes a recovery of both actual and punitive damages on proof of willfulness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1076, 1077; Dec. Dig. § 275.*]

6. CARRIERS (§ 275*)—FAILURE TO STOP TO PERMIT PASSENGER TO ALIGHT—ISSUES.

Where the complaint in an action against a carrier was based on its failure to stop its train to permit a passenger to alight at his destination, and not on any abusive and humiliating language of the conductor, the exclusion of the language of the conductor as an independent act of damage was proper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1076, 1077; Dec. Dig. § 275.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Greenville County; John S. Wilson, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Ben P. Martin against the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

The following is the second paragraph of the complaint:

"That on the 10th day of December, 1908, the plaintiff became a passenger on one of defendant's trains at Easley, one of defendant's stations, in Pickens county in the state aforesaid, to go to Crosswell, about six miles from Easley in the direction of Greenville, for the purpose of attending to some business in the neighborhood of Crosswell. The plaintiff gave the ticket collector, the agent of the defendant, 50 cents, and told the said agent to stop the train at Crosswell, and let plaintiff off so that plaintiff could attend to plaintiff's business there. The said agent gave plaintiff 5 cents back, and passed on, the plaintiff thinking that the said agent would give the balance of the change back later, but said agent never did give back the balance of said change. The said agent failed to have the said train stopped at Crosswell, and plaintiff was, therefore, carried on to Greenville, one of defendant's stations, in the said city in state and county aforesaid, a distance of 12 miles from Easley; the regular fare from Easley to Greenville being only 30 cents."

The following is the charge of the court on the issue of damages:

"Now, what are damages in law? He sues for damages. It is a sum of money assessed by a jury on finding for the plaintiff or successful party in an action as compensation for the injury done him by the opposite party. Damages may be classed under two general heads, compensatory and vindictive, the former—that is, compensatory damages—when they are allowed as measuring the actual loss, and are allowed as amends therefor. Vindictive damages exceed the loss sustained and given as a kind of punishment to the defendant, with a view of preventing a similar wrong in the future. That is the latter kind of damages, and they are also called exemplary or punitive damages.

"Now, in this case, the principal allegation is for vindictive, punitive, or exemplary damages, claiming that the plaintiff's rights have been invaded and invaded willfully—not only negligently, but willfully, intentionally, and hence the plaintiff says that he is entitled not only to his actual damages, whatever he lost, but is entitled to exemplary, vindictive, or punitive damages as I have defined it to you, as a kind of punishment to the defendant, to deter the defendant from committing similar acts in the future against others. That is the meaning of vindictive, exemplary, or punitive damages.

"Now, in this case, the complaint is based on alleged willfulness and wantonness. The complaint says that the damage done to the plaintiff was done willfully, wantonly, and negligently, with a reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights. Now, I charge you that must be proven by the greater weight of the evidence before you can find anything for the plaintiff, and you must find by the greater weight, or preponderance of the evidence, that the injury, if any at all, was as alleged in the complaint. Let me read that to you again, because, if there were any other injuries, any other words, or any other acts took place other than are embraced in the allegations of the complaint, you cannot find damages on that account. You are confined to the allegations of the complaint. I will repeat that to you—what the complaint says. [Court read complaint.]

"So, that is the allegation now, and you must find before you can find for the plaintiff from the greater weight of the evidence that that took place—anything else—you heard some discussion here as to what was said. That is not alleged in the complaint, and you have got nothing to do with that. Any abusive language he has not sued for, that, if there was any damage done at all, it must be done as alleged in the complaint. And parties when they come into court, they must go by the pleadings. I charge you another thing, that every one in a case of negligence, where the negligence occurs in any case—if a party is injured by the negligence of a railroad company, and he is damaged in any way, the law says if he can in a reasonable way minimize the injury in any way. * * *

"Now, you heard a lot said about punitive damages. This suit is based principally on that, and allege punitive, vindictive, or exemplary damages. When are punitive allowed? When the act is intentional, willful. It is the intentional, willful invasion of the personal rights of another. You see it goes a little further than mere negligence. Negligence is the want of due care. The doing of a thing in a way that a person of ordinary prudence and care would not have done under the circumstances, or the not doing of a thing which a person of ordinary prudence and care would have done under the circumstances. That is simple negligence.

"In this complaint it is alleged that alleged injury was caused by the willful, intentional act on the part of the defendant. It meant the conscious violation of another's rights. That you violated another's rights, and that you are conscious at the time—that you know at the time, that you are violating the rights of another. That is the meaning of wantonness. It means a gross disregard of the rights of another."

Adam C. Welborn, for appellant. Cothran, Dean & Cothran, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The plaintiff sought to recover of defendant actual and punitive damages for alleged grossly negligent and willful failure to stop its train at plaintiff's destination; he having boarded defendant's train at Easley, S. C., on December 10, 1908, as a passenger for Crosswell, S. C. Verdict and judgment were for the defendant.

[1,2] Appellant's first exception alleges error in the ruling that plaintiff could not prove what his business at Crosswell was, and what was his loss in his business on account of the failure to stop the train at his station. The court at first ruled that the testimony was incompetent because there was no allegation in the complaint that defendant had notice of the business engagement. This was a mistake, as the complaint alleges: "The plaintiff gave the ticket collector, the agent of defendant, 50 cents, and told the said agent to stop the train at Crosswell and let plaintiff off, so that plaintiff could attend to plaintiff's business there." This was sufficient to permit testimony as to notice of special loss arising from failure to meet the business engagement. But later the plaintiff renewed his effort to introduce testimony as to the loss from failure to meet the business engagement, and the court excluded the testimony on the ground that there had been no notice to the defendant, and, unless defendant had notice, proof as to such loss was inadmissible. The last ruling was upon the proper ground.

[3] We find nothing in the testimony to support the allegation that defendant had notice of the special engagement, and no assurance was given the trial court that proof of such notice would be made. Plaintiff testified that, when he paid the fare to the ticket collector, he, plaintiff, said, "I want to go to Crosswell," but that he said nothing more then. No further testimony on this point was given. The general rule is that special damages cannot be recovered except upon allegation and proof that defendant had notice of the special circumstances at the time of the contract. Kolb v. Southern Railway, 81 S. C. 536, 62 S. E. 672; Berley v. Seaboard A. L. Ry., 83 S. C. 411, 65 S. E. 456.

[4] The second exception alleges that the court committed error in charging practically that plaintiff was not entitled to recover actual damages. This is a misconception of the charge, as it clearly appears therein that it was left to the jury to determine what damages, if any, whether compensatory or punitive, should be given to the plaintiff. The court read the complaint to the jury, and confined them to its allegations. The court correctly construed the complaint as based upon alleged willfulness and wantonness, the allegation being "that the conduct of the defendant through its agent as set forth in paragraph 2 of this complaint was willful, grossly negligent, and in total disregard of plaintiff's rights."

[5] The fact that a complaint is based upon a willful breach of duty does not prevent recovery for the actual damages alleged and shown as a result of the willful tort. The cause of action is not to be tested by the kind of damages sought, which appertain rather to the remedy, but by the nature of the delict alleged. If the breach of duty is merely negligent, only compensatory damages may be recovered, but, if the breach of duty is willful, recovery may be had for both compensatory and punitive damages upon proof of the willful tort. Wilson Co. v. Alderman Co., 75 S. C. 301, 55 S. E. 447.

The third and fourth exceptions allege that the court charged the jury with respect to matters of fact; but a fair reading of the charge shows no foundation for the exceptions.

[6] The complaint being based upon the failure of defendant to stop its train at plaintiff's destination, and not upon any abusive and humiliating language of the ticket collector or conductor, as the cause of action, it was not a charge upon the facts, or error to exclude from the consideration of the jury the language of the ticket collector or conductor as an independent act of damage. Plaintiff had full latitude to show that the failure to stop at the station was willful, and nothing was withdrawn from the jury on that issue.

The exceptions are overruled, and the judgment of the circuit court affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(89 S. C. 24)

TOWN OF GREENWOOD v. YOE.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 193*)—PROCEEDINGS TO TAKE PROPERTY TO ASSESS COMPENSATION—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Civ. Code 1902, § 2012, amended by Act March 2, 1909 (26 St. at Large, p. 42), which confers upon cities and towns the power to condemn lands for water supply, and provides that compensation is to be determined as provided by law for the condemnation of land and rights of way of railroad corporations, does not provide any method for determining the right to institute such proceedings, and the only matter to be determined thereunder is the amount of compensation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 528; Dec. Dig. § 193.*]

2. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 274*)—REMEDIES OF OWNER—INJUNCTION—GROUNDS OF RELIEF.

Questions as to the right of a city or town to condemn lands for water supply purposes cannot be determined in condemnation proceedings begun by the city or town, but can only be determined by a proceeding by the owner, instituted before the verdict in condemnation to test the right to condemn, and to enjoin the condemnation proceedings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 753, 756-768; Dec. Dig. § 274.*]

3. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 262*)—REVIEW—DISCRETION—DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL.

Since, in condemnation proceedings, the appellant is not entitled to a trial de novo in the circuit court, unless the court shall be satisfied, of the reasonable sufficiency of the grounds, where an order dismissing an appeal recites that the circuit judge was not satisfied, the Supreme Court cannot question such view of the circuit court on appeal therefrom.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Dec. Dig. § 262.*]

4. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 262*)—REVIEW—DISCRETION OF LOWER COURT—DAMAGES.

Where the circuit court denies a new trial in condemnation proceedings, in which the verdict was not so inadequate as to suggest caprice, partiality, or corrupt motive, and where the evidence admitted could not have been prejudicial, and was not regarded by the circuit court as sufficient to warrant a trial de novo, the Supreme Court will not review a dismissal on the ground of an abuse of discretion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Dec. Dig. § 262.*]

5. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 261*)—REVIEW—TRIAL DE NOVO—RECORD.

In determining the sufficiency of the grounds on appeal in condemnation proceedings to warrant a trial de novo, it is proper for the circuit court to consider the record in connection with the grounds of appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Dec. Dig. § 261.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Greenwood County; John S. Wilson, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by the Town of Greenwood against Belle Yoe to condemn and assess land taken for public use. Judgment for damages for defendant, and, being dissatisfied, she appealed to the circuit court, where her appeal was dismissed, and she again appealed. Affirmed.

The following are the exceptions.

"I. It is respectfully submitted that his honor, Judge Wilson, erred in refusing to allow the appeal and grant the new trial asked for in this matter because it is submitted that the grounds of appeal were reasonably sufficient as is laid down by statute for the granting of new trials in matters of this kind. The following grounds relied upon are all reasonably sufficient to cause the granting of a new trial in this matter.

"Ground 1: (a) Because the verdict of the said jury is not sustained by the evidence, in that the valuation fixed is too little.

"Ground 2: (b) Because the verdict of the jury is contrary to the evidence, in that the value of the land is more than the amount fixed by the jury."

"Ground 4: (c) Because it is error to allow the contract between B. F. Yoe and the town of Greenwood by its commissioners of public works to be introduced in evidence for the purpose of showing that the said lands were already burdened by an easement in the said lands for the reason that this said fact is a matter of construction, and, since there was no judicial officer present to give the said paper its judicial construction, it was prejudicial to the value of lands in the eyes of the said jury. It was argued that the said contract burdened the greater portion of the said lands with an easement, when as a matter of law it is submitted that only a very small part of the lands, if any, is affected by the terms thereof.

"Ground 5: (d) Because the introduction of the said contract in evidence was prejudicial to the appellant, in that the said jury was led to believe therefrom that the part of the said lands on the public road was burdened with an easement which would prevent its use for any purpose whatsoever, whereas it is submitted that the effect of the said contract should enter in no way into a proper valuation of the said lands for the following reasons: (a) The easement, if any exists, is based upon a continuing consideration, a part of which the town of Greenwood would be unable to perform after the taking of the lands in question, and, where consideration for an easement is destroyed by an act of law, it is submitted that the easement for which this consideration was given is also destroyed, and in a case like the present, where a corporation takes lands upon which they are bound to furnish water by a previous contract, and the said furnishing formed a part of the consideration for which an easement over the said lands is given, the consideration will be destroyed by the act of law and the valuation to be put on the said lands should be fixed as though the lands were free from the said easement.

"Ground 6: (e) Because no testimony was taken to establish the allegations of the petition in the said condemnation proceedings.

"Ground 7: (f) Because no testimony was taken to establish the necessity of taking the said lands for the purpose set forth in the said petition.

"Ground 8: (g) Because no testimony was taken or offered by the town of Greenwood in reference to the construction of the proposed improvement to be made by the town of Greenwood and the quantity of land which shall be required therefor.

"Ground 9: (h) Because no testimony was taken or offered as to how much of the said land was required by the town of Greenwood for the purpose of protecting its said watershed.

"Ground 10: (i) Because no testimony was offered or taken to prove that the town of Greenwood needed any of the said lands for the purpose of increasing its said water supply, since no testimony was offered or taken to prove that the present supply of water was insufficient to the needs of the said town. * * *

"Ground 12: (j) Because the order upon which the said jury assessed the value of the said property was not signed by the judge of the circuit wherein the said lands lay, in that the order as signed by his honor, Judge Robert Aldrich, whereas his honor, Judge Klugh, is the judge of the Eighth judicial circuit, in which circuit the said lands lay.

"Ground 13: (k) Because the taking of the said lands would be unlawful, in that the town of Greenwood is attempting to take more land than is necessary for its said purposes.

"Ground 14: (l) Because the taking of the said lands would be unlawful, in that the said lands lie entirely without the corporate limits of the said town of Greenwood, and under no statute has the said town of Greenwood the right to take property outside its corporate limits by condemnation or otherwise.

"Ground 15: (m) Because the charter of the said town of Greenwood does not empower it to take lands without its corporate limits, and such taking would be unlawful.

"Ground 16: (n) Because such taking would be in violation of article 8, § 5, of the Constitution of 1895, in that said section requires that 'no construction or purchase of waterworks plants' shall be made except upon a majority vote of the electors in said cities or towns who are qualified to vote on the bonded indebtedness of said cities and towns, and it is submitted that no election has ever been held by the town of Greenwood to determine whether or not the lands herein shall be purchased.

"II. It is respectfully submitted the presiding judge erred in not allowing the appeal and in not ordering a new trial in this matter because to deny to Miss Yoe the right of a trial of the issues raised in this proceeding before a jury of 12 men in a court of record was in effect denying to her the constitutional right given her by the Constitution of 1895, art. 20 [article 1, § 25].

"III. It is submitted that it was error for his honor to uphold the verdict in this case, because it is submitted that these whole proceedings are null and void, in that the statute of 1909, under which these proceedings were had, is null and void because it is unconstitutional, in that the body of the act does not conform to the title. This act is found in 26 Stat. p. 42.

"IV. The presiding judge erred in not holding that the question for him to decide upon the issue of allowing or disallowing the appeal was the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal; that this question must be decided by an inspection of said grounds, and not by a review of the facts."

Tillman & Watson and Cothran, Dean & Cothran, for appellant. E. L. Richardson and Grier & Park, for respondent.

JONES, C. J. The town of Greenwood instituted proceedings to condemn about 71 acres of land belonging to the defendant, adjoining the water power station of plaintiff, outside its corporate limits, for the purpose of increasing and protecting the water supply of the town. The jury assessed the sum of $7,125 as damages, and the defendant appealed to the circuit court upon certain grounds. Judge Willson, who was presiding, dismissed the appeal upon the ground that he was not satisfied with the reasonable sufficiency of the exceptions taken, and did not consider that defendant had an inherent right to a trial by a jury in the circuit court. The exceptions herewith reported will show the grounds presented to the circuit court and sought to be renewed in this court.

[1] The power of cities and towns to condemn lands for water supply, including lands the drainage of which would contaminate the water supply, is conferred by section 2012, 1 Code of Laws 1902, amended March 2, 1909 (26 Stat. p. 42). The statute provides that the compensation is to be determined in the manner now provided by law for the condemnation of lands and rights of way of railroad corporations. It has been determined by many decisions following Railroad Co. v. Riddlehuber, 38 S. C. 308, 17 S. E. 24, that the condemnation statutes provide no machinery for determining the right to institute such proceedings, and that the only matter to be determined thereby is the amount of the compensation.

[2] Questions as to the constitutionality of the statute, the power of the town of Greenwood to condemn lands for water supply within or without its corporate limits, the jurisdiction of Judge Aldrich to grant the order directing the clerk to impanel a jury in condemnation, the necessity requiring condemnation of the land desired, all relate to the right to condemn, and were not proper to be considered in these proceedings. If defendant desired to make questions of this character, she should have instituted proceedings before the verdict in condemnation to test the right to condemn and to enjoin the condemnation proceedings, as was done in the case of Riley v. Union Station, 71 S. C. 457, 51 S. E. 485, 110 Am. St. Rep. 579; and other cases.

[3] The exception that the verdict was far too small in amount cannot avail in this court. The appellant was not entitled to a trial de novo in the court of common pleas, unless that court was satisfied of the reasonable sufficiency of the grounds, and the determination of the circuit court that it has or has not been so satisfied will not ordinarily be reviewed. Chesterfield & K. R. R. Co. v. Johnson, 58 S. C. 561, 36 S. E. 919; Southern Power Co. v. Williams, 85 S. C. 172, 67 S. E. 136.

[4] There is nothing to show abuse of discretion. The verdict was not so inadequate as to suggest that it was the result of caprice, partiality, or corrupt motive; on the contrary, there was much testimony in support of the verdict as a fair one. The introduction in evidence of the contract between B. F. Yoe and the town of Greenwood for the three acres adjoining the land sought to be condemned was not regarded by the circuit court as sufficient to warrant a trial de novo, and we see no reason to justify our interference on that ground. The contract was not wholly irrelevant to the issue of value, and could not have prejudicially affected the result against appellant.

[5] In determining the sufficiency of the grounds on appeal in condemnation proceedings to warrant a trial de novo, it is, of course, proper for the circuit court to consider the record in connection with the grounds of appeal.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.

GARY, A. J., and WOODS and HYDRICK, JJ., concur.

(126 Ga. 300)

PIEDMONT CANDY CO. v. JOHN NEWTON PORTER CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 11, 1911.)

*(Syllabus by the Court.)REVIEW ON APPEAL.

All reasonable deductions and inferences from the evidence demanded the verdict directed by the court.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action between the Piedmont Candy Company and the John Newton Porter Company. From the judgment, the Piedmont Candy Company brings error. Affirmed.

Walter R. Brown and R. B. Blackburn, for plaintiff in error. Geo. B. Rush, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(126 Ga. 272)

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. MIKO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 10, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)CARRIERS (§ 76)—LOSS OF FREIGHT—ACTION BY CONSIGNEE.

A consignee, having no special or general property in goods consigned to him, and incurring no risk from their transportation, cannot maintain against the carrier an action ex delicto for loss or damage to the goods in transit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 256-271; Dec. Dig. § 76.*]

Error from Superior Court, Haralson County; Price Edwards, Judge.

Action by H. Miko against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Lloyd Thomas, Griffith & Matthews, and Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, for plaintiff in error. J. M. & H. J. McBride for defendant in error.

HOLDEN J. The defendant in error (hereinafter called the plaintiff) brought suit against the plaintiff in error (hereinafter called the defendant) making substantially the following allegations: The defendant was a corporation doing the business of a common carrier of passengers and goods within the state, with officers and agents within the county in which the suit was brought, and on the "16th day of May, 1907, said Southern Railway Company received at its shipping office in Atlanta, Fulton county, Ga., one glazed door, * * * the property of petitioner, for shipment over its said line to Waco, Ga., and issued its receipt of bill of lading therefor, in which bill of lading petitioner was named as consignee." The door was injured and damaged to the extent of $50. She afterwards filed with the agent of the defendant her claim for damages, duly verified, in pursuance of the act of 1906 (Laws Ga. 1906, p. 102, § 2), and the defendant refused to pay and adjust the claim. She brought suit to recover $50 "damage, with legal interest, as well as for the additional sum of $50 as a penalty for its said failure to adjust and pay said claim within 60 days from the time said claim was filed with the agent of defendant as aforesaid." By amendment the plaintiff alleged that the door was injured and damaged, and rendered "almost entirely valueless," by the negligence of the defendant. The defendant filed exceptions pendente lite to the overruling of its general and special demurrer to the petition, and thereon assigned error in its bill of exceptions, wherein error was also assigned on the order of the court overruling its motion for a new trial.

The uncontradicted evidence of Theodore Miko, who was the husband of the plaintiff and testified in her behalf, and who was the only witness testifying with respect to the title or ownership of the door, shows that it belonged to him, and was shipped by him from Atlanta, Ga., to Waco, Ga., and in the bill of lading H. Miko & Co. were named as consignors and the plaintiff as consignee. He further testified that the door was badly damaged when it reached Waco, and was not taken from the custody of the defendant. The consignee never became a bailee in actual possession of the property. The carrier never delivered it to her, or to any one for her. This case does not come within that class of cases where a recovery can be had by a bailee for damages to property while in his possession as bailee. A right of action in assumpsit exists in favor of the consignor, who makes with a carrier a contract for the shipment of goods, for the failure of the carrier to deliver the shipment to the consignee, even though the consignor has no title or interest in the property. The common carrier, having made a contract with the consignor to carry and deliver the goods received by it for shipment, is liable to the consignor for a breach of the contract, and the carrier cannot defeat recovery for a breach of the contract by showing that the consignor had no title or interest in the property. Carter v. So. Ry. Co., 111 Ga. 38, 36 S. E. 308, 50 L. R. A. 354; 3 Hutchinson on Carriers, §§ 1312, 1314, 1320; 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1692. If the consignee owned the property shipped, the consignor would hold the amount recovered in trust for the consignee, and the latter could not afterwards recover of the carrier for its failure to carry and deliver the property to him, or for any injury to the property. The consignee of property delivered by another to a common carrier for shipment is presumed to be the owner, and presumptively a right of action exists in his favor for any injury or damage to the property in transit; but the presumption that the consignee is the owner may be rebutted, and where it appears that the consignee has no general or special property in the goods shipped, and incurs no risk in their being transported, he cannot maintain an action ex delicto for the loss of, or for any damage to, the property. 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1692; 3 Hutchinson on Carriers, § 1320; 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Pl. & Pr. 830 (2), 831 (5); 4 Dec. Dig. § 76; Grinnell v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 109 Minn. 513, 124 N. W. 377, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 437.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexer

Where the consignor makes a contract with a common carrier for shipment of goods which belong to the consignee, the former may recover in assumpsit for a breach of the contract, and the latter may recover for any loss or any damage to the property, and a recovery by either of the full amount of damage caused by the carrier would bar a recovery of such damage by the other. However, if the consignee incurs no risk in the transportation of the goods, and has no general or special property in them, he cannot recover in an action for a tort because of the loss of or injury to them. There are many cases holding that, though the consignee may not be the real owner, if he has a special interest in the property shipped, he may maintain an action for the loss, or for any damage to such property in transit, and in such action may have a recovery of the full value of the property where lost, or full amount of damages to the property where it is damaged. See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Peru-Van Zandt Implement Co., 73 Kan. 295, 85 Pac. 408, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1058, 117 Am. St. Rep. 468, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 790, and authorities cited in the opinion. At 73 Kan. 299, 85 Pac. 410, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 791 (6 L. R. A. [N. S.] 1058, 117 Am. St. Rep. 468), the court says: "The ownership need not be extensive, and an agent, factor, broker, bailee, or other person having rights in the property to be protected may maintain an action, and recover both for himself and the general owner."

In the case we are considering the consignee had no interest whatever in the property damaged while being transported from Atlanta to Waco by the railroad company. Her husband testified he owned the property, and "the reason I shipped this door to Mrs. Miko was because she was my wife, and was running my house, and was home all the time. I could not send it to anybody else, except my wife. I sent the door to my wife, to my home. I could not send it to somebody else." The suit brought by the consignee was for a tort, and for the amount of damage to the property. Whether the consignee could recover in action ex contractu need not be considered. She had no general or special property in the door consigned to her, and incurred no risk in its transportation. She was not damaged, and a recovery in her behalf for any damage to the door was unauthorized. A verdict in favor of the defendant was demanded, and the court committed error in refusing a new trial.

We deem it unnecessary to pass on the other questions made in the case, and they are left undecided, without prejudice to either party.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 247)

MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF CITY OF BRUNSWICK v. DEAVER.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. May 9, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 103*)— SPECIAL TAXES—CITIES.

The act approved August 13, 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 26), was designed to supply the machinery to ascertain if two-thirds of the voters of a municipality approve the levy and collection of a tax for the support of public schools in those instances where the General Assembly had conferred on the municipality authority to establish and maintain a system of public schools by local taxation in whole or in part subject to the approval of the voters, but had omitted to provide machinery for the submission of the proposal to tax to the voters of the municipality.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Cent. Dig. § 241; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

2. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 12*)— CITY SCHOOLS—SUPERVISION—SCHOOLS OF COUNTY.

The system of public schools in the city of Brunswick is supervised by the board of education of Glynn county, which also has control of the county schools; but inasmuch as the acts of the General Assembly (Acts 1873, p. 256; Acts 1900, p. 172) specifically provide that the city schools shall be operated separately from the county schools, and that all municipal revenues are exclusively applied for the support of the city schools, such city schools are none the less the public schools of the city.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Cent. Dig. § 14; Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

3. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS (§ 103*)— CITY SCHOOLS—STATUTES.

Section 10 of the act amendatory of the charter of the city of Brunswick, approved August 6, 1904 (Acts 1904, p. 387), confers upon that municipality the power to maintain a system of public schools in part by local taxation. The machinery provided for in the act of 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 26) supplements the act of 1904 with reference to the submission to the qualified voters of the city for their approval the proposal to levy and collect a tax not to exceed one-tenth of 1 per cent, for the support of the public schools of that city.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Schools and School Districts, Cent. Dig. § 241; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

Error from Superior Court, Glynn County; C. B. Conyers, Judge.

Suit by A. S. Deaver against the Mayor and Council of the City of Brunswick to restrain the levy and collection of a special school tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent. for the support of the schools of the city. From a decree granting the injunction as prayed, defendant brings error. Reversed.

J. T. Colson, for plaintiff in error. R. D. Meader, for defendant in error.

EVANS, P. J. A. S. Deavers, a citizen and taxpayer of the city of Brunswick, filed his petition to enjoin the mayor and council of the city of Brunswick from levying and collecting a special tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent. for the support and maintenance of the public schools of the city. It appears that upon the petition of more than one-fourth of the qualified voters of the city of Brunswick the mayor and council of the municipality ordered an election to be held pursuant to the act approved August 13, 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 26), for the purpose of submitting the question of levying a local tax for the support of the public schools of the city of Brunswick. More than two-thirds of the voters in such election voted in favor of the levy of the special tax. The mayor and council of the city of Brunswick were proceeding to levy and collect the special tax claimed to have been authorized by the election, when the plaintiff filed his petition to enjoin the same.

[1] The sole question to be determined from the record is the applicability of the act approved August 13, 1910, to the municipality of Brunswick. That act provides that "any municipality authorized by law to establish and maintain a system of public schools by local taxation in whole or in part, and which is not now specifically authorized to hold an election on the question of local taxation for school purposes, shall have the right to submit the question of local taxation for public schools to the qualified voters of the municipality." This act was passed shortly after the decision of this court in the case of Brooks v. Town of Loganville, 134 Ga. 358, 67 S. E. 940. In that case it was held that the constitutional provision that authority may be granted by the Legislature to municipal corporations to establish and maintain public schools by local taxation, but that no such law shall take effect unless it has been submitted to a vote of the qualified voters of the municipal corporation and approved by a two-thirds majority of the persons voting at such election was not self-executive; that unless machinery was devised by the Legislature for submitting the proposal to a plebiscite vote no election could be held, although the Legislature had conferred upon the municipality the power to maintain a system of public schools by local taxation. The clear meaning of the act is that, where the Legislature has conferred upon a municipality power to maintain public schools by local taxation and has omitted to provide machinery for submitting the question to the qualified voters of the municipality so as to ascertain whether two-thirds of them favor the proposed tax, the act was designed to supply this omission. It did not confer upon municipalities the power to establish and maintain a system of public schools by local taxation, but only provided a method of holding an election.

[2] The city of Brunswick has a system of public schools administered and supervised by the board of education of Glynn county. This board is a corporate entity, and to it is given the direct supervision and management of the public schools of the city of Brunswick and the county of Glynn. The board is composed of ten members, five of whom are residents of the city of Brunswick and selected by the mayor and council, and the remaining five members are selected by the grand jury. The funds of the board are kept separate, and the money received from the city, such as revenue from the town commons and special appropriations, is devoted to the exclusive use of the city schools. The money received from the county is devoted to the county schools. The public school fund is prorated on the basis of school population. The board of education makes annual reports of the expenditure of the money received from the city to the mayor and council, and of the money expended in the county outside of the city to the grand jury. Teachers in the city schools are nominated by the city members, subject to the approval of the entire board. The office of superintendent of city schools is created, and this officer is selected by the city members. The county school commissioner is given supervision of the schools of the county outside of the city.

[3] For many years, as reflected from the various acts amendatory of its charter, the municipality of Brunswick has maintained a system of city schools under the same management that had control of the county schools. The educational plan comprehended unity in the management of both city and county schools, but complete separation of city from county schools in the expenditure of revenues appropriated by the city to the city schools. It is not the manner of administering the school system of a city which alone makes a system of city public schools. Frequently the Legislature has incorporated city boards of education and invested them with exclusive dominion over the city public schools, devolving on the municipality only the duty of supplying the necessary funds for their maintenance. It is a mere matter of policy whether the school is conducted by a city board of education or according to the Glynn county plan. Until 1904 the General Assembly had provided that the city schools of Brunswick were to be supported from the rents of the public commons and other municipal resources, but in that year the charter of the city was amended, so as to provide a supplementary revenue from local taxation. The tenth section of the act of 1904 is as follows: "That for each and every year, commencing with the year 1905, there shall be appropriated by this act for expenditure for public schools in said city, under the direction of the board of education of Glynn county, one-tenth of 1 per cent. on the taxable values assessed and collected for such year, separate from and exclusive of taxes and revenues collected from town commons. This section to take effect only after a vote of the lawful voters of Brunswick, at an election at which such question shall be voted upon under the Constitution and laws of Georgia." This provision not only recognizes that the city of Brunswick maintained a system of public schools under the direction of the board of education of Glynn county, but directly confers upon the municipality of Brunswick the power to supplement the revenues for the support of the schools by the levy and collection of a tax not to exceed one-tenth of 1 per cent. This section provides that the tax is not to be assessed and collected until it has been voted upon by the qualified voters of the city agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the state. By this act the General Assembly did confer upon the municipality of Brunswick the power to support its public schools in part by local taxation, but made no provision for any machinery for the submission of the question of maintaining the public schools by the levy of the tax provided for in the act. It is to supply such a deficiency as this that the act of 1910 was passed; and we think that the court erred in holding that the act was inapplicable to the city of Brunswick.

There being no complaint as to the regularity of the election or the levy and assessment of the taxes, it follows that the judgment granting an injunction must be reversed. All the Justices concur.

(136 Ga. 202)

JENNISON v. JENNISON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. April 14, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. DIVORCE (§ 286*)—REVIEW—REVISION OF ORDER GRANTING TEMPORARY ALIMONY.

Where, two days before an order revising a previous order granting temporary alimony was signed, the court, at the conclusion of the evidence introduced upon the hearing, orally announced an opinion wherein he stated that the previous order would be revised because of the existence of specified facts, and the bill of exceptions recites that the second order excepted to was granted "in accordance with said opinion," and the order revising the previous order granting temporary alimony recites that, "after hearing and considering the testimony submitted and the argument of counsel for plaintiff and defendant, it is considered, ordered, adjudged, and decreed" that the previous order be revised in specified particulars, and there is nothing in the second order indicating that it was granted on any special ground, it will not be disturbed, if any facts other than those referred to above appear from the testimony submitted to the court upon the hearing which were sufficient to authorize the court to grant the same.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Dec. Dig. § 286.*]

2. DIVORCE (§§ 217, 218*)—ORDER GRANTING TEMPORARY ALIMONY—MODIFICATION.

The court has authority to modify or revoke an order granting temporary alimony to a wife, though such order was passed by consent of the husband and wife and in accordance with an agreement between them, providing for a certain amount to be paid to the wife by the husband, and providing that the agreement might be made the judgment of the court and enforced by contempt proceedings, or otherwise, "as is usual in the enforcement of decrees for alimony."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 637-639; Dec. Dig. §§ 217, 218.*]

3. DIVORCE (§§ 217, 218*)—APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 671*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—SUFFICIENCY—POWER TO REVOKE OR MODIFY ORDER FOR TEMPORARY ALIMONY.

The authority of the court to revoke or modify an order granting temporary alimony is not confined to cases in which there has been a change in the condition or circumstances of the parties since the granting of the order.

(a) Prior to the grant of a total divorce, adultery on the part of the wife subsequent to the grant of temporary alimony, or prior thereto, but unknown to the husband until after the granting of the order for temporary alimony, is a sufficient cause to warrant the court in modifying or revoking the order.

(b) Where the evidence material to an understanding of an alleged error complained of is not brought to this court, an assignment of error necessarily involving a consideration of such evidence cannot be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 637-639; Dec. Dig. §§ 217, 218.* Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2867-2872; Dec. Dig. § 671.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by I. H. Jennison against W. R. Jennison. From an order revoking a provision in a previous order granting plaintiff temporary alimony, she brings error. Affirmed.

On August 13, 1909, the plaintiff in error and her husband, the defendant in error, entered into an agreement reciting that they had permanently separated and were living apart, and the wife was about to institute an action for total divorce from the husband and for temporary and permanent alimony; that the husband desired to make permanent provision for the support and maintenance of the wife, and incidentally for the support, education, and maintenance of an adopted daughter, "all in lieu of temporary and permanent alimony." In full settlement of all such claims, the husband conveyed to the wife certain real and personal property, and agreed to pay her, so long as she remained single, $150 per month for the support and maintenance of herself and adopted daughter. It was agreed that the provisions relating to temporary and permanent alimony "shall be made part of the order or decree of court to be entered in the divorce and alimony suit, the provision herein made by party of the first part to be taken by party of the second part as full and complete settlement," and that, if the husband failed to make the payments voluntarily, they might be enforced by the court "by contempt proceedings, or otherwise, as is usual in the enforcement of decrees for alimony." Three days after this agreement was entered into, the wife instituted proceedings for divorce, and for temporary and permanent alimony. On September 25, 1909, a consent decree was entered in the cause with respect to temporary, wherein the court recited the existence of the agreement between the husband and wife respecting alimony, and that it was made subject to the approval of the court, and fixed the amount of temporary alimony to be allowed the wife as $150 per month, the amount which the husband had agreed to pay by the terms of the separation agreement. On February 18, 1910, by leave of the court, the husband filed an answer in the nature of a cross-bill. On May 12, 1910, he filed an answer to the rule nisi requiring him to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for failure to pay temporary alimony. He alleged that his wife had been guilty of misconduct both prior and subsequent to the execution of the separation agreement (which facts had only recently been discovered by him), and asked that she be denied a divorce and that he be granted one, and that the decree awarding the plaintiff temporary alimony be rescinded, and the agreement of August 13, 1909, above referred to, be annulled, except in so far as it had been executed. The defendant having failed and refused to continue the payment of the monthly installments of alimony awarded under the decree, the plaintiff sought an attachment against him for contempt. Upon the hearing of the contempt proceeding, the court passed an order providing that the defendant at once pay $250 to the wife by way of compensation for having supported the adopted child since the last payment of alimony by the defendant, and that he pay monthly thereafter $50 for the support of such child, but revoked the provision in the decree for temporary alimony directing the payment of $150 per month by the defendant for the support of the plaintiff and the adopted child. To this order the plaintiff excepted.

Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, for plaintiff in error. Van Astor Batchelor and Reuben R. Arnold, for defendant in error.

HOLDEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The wife excepted to the order of the court revoking so much of the previous order as granted her temporary alimony. One of the contentions of the plaintiff is that the court had no right to modify or revoke its previous order granting her temporary alimony, unless there was some change in the circumstances or conditions of the parties since the order was granted. She contends that the record shows that the court did not pass the order excepted to because of any change in the condition or circumstances of the parties occurring since the order for temporary alimony was rendered, but that the court revoked its previous order granting her temporary alimony on the ground that he had a right to do so, whether or not any such change existed. The bill of exceptions has in it the following recitals: "The court, upon hearing the contempt rule, by consent, considered the answer by way of cross-bill aforesaid and the response thereto, both of which were verified, and so far as pertinent were considered by the court as evidence upon the contempt rule, and the response as verified to the said answer and cross-bill was considered by the court as a traverse of the allegations as to drunkenness and adultery, made by the said W. R. Jennison in his response to the contempt rule. The hearing of said matter proceeded from day to day and was concluded upon the 21st day of May, 1910, the court then and there announcing its opinion, in substance, as follows: 'The evidence in this case has covered a somewhat wider field than I anticipated it would when the investigation began. After hearing the evidence I have determined not to pass upon the merits of the several claims of the parties as to right to divorce. I do not agree with Mr. Anderson, representing Mrs. Jennison, that the contract between the parties relative to the alimony is binding upon the court as to temporary alimony. In the court's opinion, the question of temporary alimony is always, pending the divorce suit, in the breast of the court, and notwithstanding the previous order of the court in this case, confirming and adopting the contract aforesaid as to temporary alimony, the court may at this time modify or entirely abrogate said order in its discretion. It appears from the evidence that, shortly after the separation between the parties, defendant, W. R. Jennison, conveyed and turned over to the plaintiff, Irene H. Jennison, all of his tangible assets, consisting of the equity of redemption in the home place at Ansley Park, in the city of Atlanta, which the plaintiff testifies she sold for about $2,200; also the household furniture, furnishings, etc., contained in said home place, which he testified cost him something like $6,900, and was accumulated during the married life of the parties, extending over some years, and which the said Irene H. Jennison testified might possibly be worth $2,000 to $2,500 at the present time. Since the defendant thus gave to his wife, the plaintiff, all of his assets, and since it appears from his testimony that he is earning only $350 per month, less than the income which he received several years ago, I will not make any allowance to the said Irene H. Jennison for temporary alimony for her own support, and the previous order or decree of the court granted on the 25th day of September, 1909, will be modified accordingly. I shall leave the custody of the adopted child, Naomi, with Mrs. Jennison, and require the defendant, W. R. Jennison, to pay to plaintiff, said Irene H. Jennison, at once, the sum of $250 by way of compensation to her for having supported the said Naomi during the past five months, and since January 13, 1910, the date of the last payment of alimony by the defendant, and shall require the defendant to pay to plaintiff, to be used for the support, maintenance, and education of the said Naomi, the sum of $50, payable at once, to cover the month of May, 1910, and the further sum of $50 on the 1st day of each month hereafter until the final hearing and disposition of the case. I shall revoke the provision in the order of 25th of September, 1909, directing the payment of $150 per month by way of temporary alimony and for the support of the plaintiff and the child Naomi. The defendant shall have the right from time to time to visit Naomi.' In accordance with said opinion of the court, the court upon the 23d day of May, 1910, and during said May term, 1910, of the superior court of Fulton county, Ga., signed and entered up its order or decree in accordance with the opinion aforesaid. During the hearing of the matters aforesaid a great deal of evidence was introduced, both by plaintiff and defendant, relative to the cause and circumstances of the separation, the cruel and brutal treatment of plaintiff by the defendant, and relative to defendant's charges against the plaintiff of drunkenness and adultery. Each of the parties introduced much evidence with a view to substantiating her or his charges and contentions of fact, and with a view of rebutting and proving untrue the charges made by the opposing party. None of said evidence, except such as is herein specifically set out, is material to a clear understanding of the errors herein complained of."

The plaintiff contends that the court, in revoking its previous order granting her temporary alimony, was not passing upon any change in the condition or circumstances of the parties, especially in view of the following statements in the opinion announced by the court at the conclusion of the evidence: "The court may at this time modify or entirely abrogate said order in its discretion. * * * Since the defendant thus gave to his wife, the plaintiff, all of his assets, and since it appears from his testimony that he is earning only $350 per month, less than the income which he received several years ago, I will not make any allowance to the said Irene H. Jennison for temporary alimony for her own support, and the previous order or decree of the court granted on the 25th day of September, 1909, will be modified accordingly." The conveyance by the husband to the wife of "all of his assets" occurred prior to the judgment granting temporary alimony, and the order of the court granting temporary alimony was passed only eight months (lacking two days) prior to the order modifying or revoking it, and therefore the fact that at the time of the last-named order the earnings of the husband were less than "he received several years ago," does not show that there was any change in his income since the order for temporary alimony was granted. The plaintiff in error, therefore, contends that the court did not base its order on any change in the condition or circumstances of the parties since the previous order was granted, and that the reasons upon which the court based its order were not such as to authorize the court to grant it. The statements made by the court at the conclusion of the evidence were not incorporated in the order of the court subsequently passed. The reasons given by the court for any ruling he makes are not the subject-matter of exception. Griffith v. Flinger, 115 Ga. 592, 41 S. E. 993; Central Railroad v. Smith, 74 Ga. 112.

The statements made by the court at the conclusion of the evidence, as to what rulings he made in the case and what order he would make, did not bind the court to pass an order in accordance with such statements and rulings. After making these statements from the bench at the conclusion of the evidence, the court had a right to change his views in regard to the case, and to pass an order making rulings in conflict with the oral announcement of his views. It will be observed that the order revoking the previous order of the court, in so far as it granted alimony to the wife, was not passed by the court until two days after the announcement of his oral opinion from the bench at the conclusion of the evidence. At the outset of this order the court states: "Upon a hearing of the contempt rule heretofore filed by plaintiff against the defendant, after hearing and considering the testimony submitted and the argument of counsel for plaintiff and defendant, it is considered, ordered, adjudged, and decreed," etc. In no part of this order signed by the court did he give any special reasons why he granted the same, or made any of the rulings therein contained; but the court based its decision on "the testimony submitted," and, if the testimony submitted before him authorized his order, it should not be disturbed, regardless of whether the reasons appearing in the oral opinion announcing the views of the court at the close of the evidence were such as to authorize the order thus signed. The oral expression of the views entertained by the court at the conclusion of the evidence was not required to be recorded on the minutes of the court, or in any way to become a part of the record of the case; whereas the formal order entered by the court is a part of the record of the case and required to be recorded on the minutes. This order excepted to, which is a part of the record of the case in the court below and here, states that it was granted "after hearing and considering the testimony submitted," and this court would not be justified in treating the order as not having been granted "after hearing and considering the testimony submitted," because of the recitals in the bill of exceptions hereinbefore quoted, which include an oral statement of the court made two days before the order was signed. There is nothing in the order indicating that it was granted on any special grounds after considering only a part of the evidence, but the language is such that it should be treated as having been granted after considering all of the "testimony submitted"; and, if any of such testimony justifies the granting of the order, it should be allowed to stand. The question as to whether the court has authority to revise a former order granting temporary alimony as having been improvidently granted, and where there does not appear to have been any change in the condition or circumstances of the parties after the previous order granting alimony was passed, will be considered later in this opinion.

[2] 2. After the plaintiff and her husband had separated, they entered into an agreement whereby he, in lieu of temporary and permanent alimony, conveyed to her certain property and in addition thereto agreed to pay her as alimony $150 per month for the support of herself and an adopted child as long as the wife should live and remained unmarried. It was provided that, if the wife should die before the marriage of the adopted daughter, he was to pay the adopted daughter $50 per month. It was agreed that the provisions of the agreement relating to alimony might be made the judgment of the court and enforced by contempt proceedings, or otherwise, "as is usual in the enforcement of decrees for alimony." After the suit for divorce the court, on September 25, 1909, entered an order for temporary alimony. This order provided: "The application of the plaintiff in the above-stated cause for temporary alimony, including counsel fees, coming on at this time to be heard, and it appearing to the court that the parties to the cause have agreed that the defendant shall pay to the plaintiff during the pendency of the cause the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars ($150) monthly, * * * it is considered, ordered, and decreed, after a full consideration of said cause and the facts thereof," that the husband should pay the plaintiff $150 per month. Subsequently the court, upon the hearing of a rule for contempt, revoked so much of the order as provided for any monthly payments of temporary alimony for the wife, and made other provisions for the support of the adopted child, as set forth in the statement of facts.

The plaintiff in error contends that, in revoking the order granting her temporary alimony, the court acted without authority, because, her husband having agreed in writing to pay her $150 per month alimony, and having consented upon the hearing for temporary alimony that the order be passed granting alimony in accordance with the agreement, the revocation of such order was equivalent to setting aside the contract, which the court could not do without the consent of the wife. We cannot agree with this contention. Civil Code 1910, § 2978, provides: "The order allowing alimony shall be subject to revision by the court at any time, and may be enforced either by writ of fieri facias or by attachment for contempt against the person of the husband." Under this section, all orders for alimony are subject to revision by the court, and the fact that an order is based upon the agreement of the parties and granted by their consent does not make such order an exception from the ones referred to in the statute, and does not preclude the court from modifying or revoking it. Wallace v. Wallace, 74 N. H. 256, 67 Atl. 580, 13 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 293; Blake v. Blake, 75 Wis. 339, 43 N. W. 144; 2 Nelson on Div. & Sep. § 915, pp. 865-6. Also see, in this connection, McLaren v. McLaren, 33 Ga. Supp. 99. Whether the wife could recover in an action on the contract is a different question from the one we are considering. While some of the states have statutes giving the power to revise decrees for permanent alimony, in this state no such power exists, when the right is not reserved in the decree. Cureton v. Cureton, 132 Ga. 745, 65 S. E. 65. But the right of the court to revise orders for temporary alimony is expressly given by statute, and this right is not abrogated and the effect of the statute nullified simply because the order is entered by consent and in accordance with a previous written agreement of the parties. The revision by the court of an order so entered does not abrogate the agreement between the parties, but is an exercise of a discretion of the court to revise its own order, to whom such discretion is reserved by the statute. The consent of the parties, expressed in the agreement itself, that its provisions respecting alimony might be made the decree of the court, and their consent to the entering of a decree pursuant to the agreement, will be presumed to have been made with the knowledge that the court had statutory power to revise decrees relating to temporary alimony and that the decree so entered was subject to after-revision should it appear to the court that justice so required.

[3] 3. In the answer of the husband to the contempt proceedings brought against him by the wife, he prayed that he be not required to pay her any further temporary alimony. In this answer he charged that his wife was addicted to the habit of excessive use of intoxicating liquors, and was guilty of acts of adultery before the agreement was entered into, and that he did not know these facts when the agreement was made and the order for temporary alimony passed, and that, subsequently to the time the agreement was made and the order for temporary alimony was passed, she was guilty of acts of adultery and addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors. The evidence was not brought to this court, but the bill of exceptions recites that upon the hearing at which the court revised the previous order evidence was introduced by the husband to prove the charges of adultery and drunkenness, and by the wife to prove that these charges were untrue. The order excepted to states that it was granted "after hearing and considering the testimony submitted," and we cannot say that the evidence did not warrant the order granted. When this order was granted the divorce case had not been tried, and the relation of husband and wife existed between the parties. They could have resumed cohabitation without any new marriage ceremony. The court has the right to revise or revoke an order for alimony to be paid out of the future earnings of the husband because of acts of adultery on the part of the wife occurring thereafter, but before a final decree of divorce is granted. Carlens v. Carlens, 50 W. Va. 113, 40 S. E. 335, 55 L. R. A. 930; Cole v. Cole, 142 Ill. 19, 31 N. E. 109, 19 L. R. A. 811, 34 Am. St. Rep. 56; 2 Bishop on Mar., Div. & Sep. § 1230; 14 Cyc. 787. In the absence of the evidence adduced to the trial court, this court is, of course, unable to determine whether or not the charges of misconduct on the part of the wife, without the knowledge of the husband, prior to the execution of the agreement between the parties and the allowance by the court of temporary alimony were sufficiently substantiated on the hearing to warrant the court in revising his order for temporary alimony on that account. Acts of adultery on the part of the wife occurring previously to the agreement and order providing temporary alimony, unknown to the husband when the agreement was made and the order passed by consent, would authorize the court to modify or revoke such order.

Motions for new trials and for second injunctions are granted on newly discovered evidence, and we see no reason why orders for temporary alimony cannot be revised on the same ground. The court may modify or revoke an order granting temporary alimony, even though there has been no change in the condition or circumstances of the parties since the order was granted. Some of the language used in the decision Sumner v. Sumner, 123 Ga. 118, 50 S. E. 1013, is too broad. The statement made therein that, "after an order granting temporary alimony and attorney's fees has been duly passed, the court is without jurisdiction to revise the same or to set it aside on any ground, save one based on a change of circumstances occurring subsequently to the granting of the order," is incorrect. The criticism of the decision above referred to is equally applicable to the decision in the same case (118 Ga. 408, 45 S. E. 315) when it was previously before the court. Civil Code 1910, § 2978, which has reference to temporary alimony, provides: "The order allowing alimony shall be subject to revision by the court at any time." This section does not restrict the right to revise an order granting temporary alimony to instances where there has been a change in the condition or circumstances of the parties, and this court has no right to make any such restriction. The court is not precluded from revising or revoking a previous order granting temporary alimony, even though there be made to appear to the court no facts other than those which were before it when the previous order was passed. An order granting temporary alimony is always in the breast of the court, and may be revised as having been improvidently granted, just as an order or judgment may be revoked or modified during the term at which it was passed. Pinchard v. Pinchard, 23 Ga. 286; Wester v. Martin, 115 Ga. 776, 42 S. E. 81. However, the facts before the court might be such as not to warrant it in modifying or revoking a previous order for temporary alimony, and we do not mean to rule that a state of facts might not exist which would make the modification or revocation of the previous order error. The question as to whether or not the order for temporary alimony to the wife was rightly revoked was one depending on the evidence; and, the evidence not having been brought to this court, we cannot say that the trial judge committed error. Roberts v. Cairo, 133 Ga. 642, 66 S. E. 938.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

(58 W. Va. 636)

MILLER v. JONES et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Jan. 24, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 105*)—RIGHTS OF VENDEE—BREACH OF CONTRACT BY VENDOR.

Where the vendor sells land by written contract providing for the payment of the purchase money in future installments, and for the making of a deed when all the purchase money is paid, and afterwards breaks and wholly repudiates his contract, the vendee may have specific performance immediately, and without waiting until the time of complete performance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 325-341; Dec. Dig. § 105.*]

2. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 131*)—DECREE.

But he can only have performance according to the terms of the contract. The court cannot compel the vendor to receive the purchase money until it is due and payable according to the terms of the agreement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Dec. Dig. § 131.*]

Miller and Robinson, JJ., dissenting.

Appeal from Circuit Court, Marshall County.

Bill by Wilson Miller against A. J. Jones and others. Decree for plaintiff, and defendant Jones appeals. Reversed and remanded.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

Simpson & Showacre, for appellant. McCamic & Clarke, for appellee.

WILLIAMS, P. A. J. Jones sold to George Downs a lot of ground in the city of Moundsville by written contract dated April 5, 1906. The consideration recited is $649.65, and is to be paid as follows: "Twenty-five dollars to be paid on the date of this agreement, and ten dollars on the last of each month until fully paid, with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. monthly. A. J. Jones to make a warranty deed when the lot is paid for with interest." The contract further provides that: "Said Downs is to pay A. J. Jones the amount of money equal to city, county, and state taxes in addition to above stated amount. Said Downs is also to pay said Jones an amount of money in addition to the above which equals the city, county, and state tax on $610.00, for the year 1906, only." Downs did not make the cash payment, but he did make five payments of $10 each on this purchase, the last one on June 18, 1906. On September 1, 1906, Downs assigned his contract to Wilson Miller, the plaintiff. Jones refused to recognize the rights of the assignee, and refused to carry out his contract, and Miller sued to have it specifically enforced. On the 9th of March, 1908, the circuit court of Marshall county decreed relief to plaintiff, and from that decree Jones has taken this appeal.

[1] Counsel for appellant contend that the suit was prematurely brought; that specific performance could not be had until the time arrived for the complete execution of the contract by the making of a deed by the vendor; that the time for appellee to demand his deed had not arrived. We do not so understand the law. A party to a contract enforceable in equity may sue to establish his rights thereunder as soon as the other contracting party has repudiated it, notwithstanding the time for full performance may not have arrived. In the present case, Jones is not required to make a deed for the land until all the payments are made; and the last payment is not due until about five years after the suit was brought. There was nothing for Jones to do in the meantime except to receive the payments as they became due. This he refused to do and declared that he would not carry out the agreement. Plaintiff, therefore, had a right to sue to compel defendant to maintain the contractual relation until the time for executing the deed should arrive. It is very probable that under such conditions his failure to sue promptly after knowledge of the breach would be construed by a court of equity as an acquiescence in the breach and as an abandonment of his right. The following cases support the proposition that suit may be brought as soon as the contract is wholly broken, even though the time for complete performance has not arrived. Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 20 Sup. Ct. 780, 44 L. Ed. 953; White v. Dobson, 17 Grat. (Va.) 262; James v. Kibler's Adm'r, 94 Va.

165, 26 S. E. 417; Lee v. Mutual, etc., Ins. Ass'n, 97 Va. 160, 33 S. E. 556; James v. Adams, 16 W. Va. 245; Davis v. Grand Rapids, etc., Co., 41 W. Va. 717, 24 S. E. 630; Pancake v. George Campbell Co., 44 W. Va. 82, 28 S. E. 719. Most of the above cases were actions at law for damages for breach of contract; but we do not perceive that any different rule applies in equity, provided the contract is such an one as equity can and will enforce specifically. In case of such a contract the injured party may elect his remedy, he may either sue at law for the breach, or he may sue in equity for specific performance. Pomeroy's Spec. Per. of Con. § 4; 36 Cyc. 747.

Hochster v. De La Tour, 6 Eng. Rul. Cases 576, is a leading English case on the question of the right to maintain an action for the anticipatory breach of a contract, and the principle announced in that case has been followed by our own court in James v. Adams, supra, and in Pancake v. George Campbell Co., supra. In Hochster v. De La Tour, supra, plaintiff had employed defendant for three months beginning June 1, 1852, at a certain price per month to travel with him, as courier. He repudiated the contract of employment before the time had arrived for plaintiff's services to begin. Plaintiff immediately brought his action, and in his declaration alleged that defendant had wholly refused to employ him and wholly discharged him from the performance of the contract and from being ready and willing to perform it. Upon a motion in arrest of judgment, the court held that: "After the refusal by the defendant to employ, the plaintiff was entitled to bring an action immediately, and was not bound to wait until after the day agreed upon for the commencement of performance had arrived." In Davis v. Grand Rapids, etc., Co., 41 W. Va. 717, 24 S. E. 630, the principle was announced as follows in point 1 of the syllabus: "Where a party to a contract notifies the other that he does not intend to abide by or perform it, the other may bring an immediate suit for such damages as he may thereby have sustained, without waiting for the time of performance to expire."

The contract in the present case being of that general class of contracts which equity will specifically enforce, we see no reason why plaintiff may not maintain his suit, notwithstanding the time has not arrived for complete performance of the contract. He had a right to a decree declaring the contract to be binding on Jones who had already wholly repudiated it, and also a right to have some means provided whereby he could perform his part of it, such as the designation by the court of some person to whom he could make payment, as Jones had refused the money when tendered to him. The right of a vendor to sue for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land providing for payment of the purchase money in the future by installments whenever the vendee has broken the contract by failure to pay any one of the installments, and before the others are due, is not questioned. 29 A. & E. E. L. 720; Ayres v. Robins, 30 Grat. (Va.) 105; Smith v. Henkel, 81 Va. 524; Kane v. Mann, 93 Va. 248, 24 S. E. 938. Although such suits are usually spoken of by the law writers as suits for the enforcement of liens, nevertheless, strictly and technically, they are suits for specific performance. It is one of the fundamental principles applicable to such suits that the rights of the parties must be mutual—that is, capable of enforcement by either party in case of a breach by the other—else equity will not give relief. Now, if Jones had been willing to carry out the contract, and Downs or Miller, his assignee, had not, and Jones had sued for specific enforcement because of failure to pay the purchase money, he would have been entitled to a decree compelling performance. Why, therefore, may not the plaintiff, Miller, have a decree compelling performance by Jones upon Jones' positive denial of the contract and his refusal to accept the purchase money? We perceive no good reason in law why he should not have such right, and we therefore hold that his suit was not prematurely brought. In support of this view we cite the following authorities: White v. Dobson, 17 Grat. (Va.) 262; Balanewsky v. Gallaher, 55 Misc. Rep. 150, 105 N. Y. Supp. 77; Payne v. Melton, 67 S. C. 233, 45 S. E. 154; Brassell v. McLemore, 50 Ala. 476.

[2] In decreeing specific performance, however, the court has no power to decree performance in any other manner than according to the agreement. 36 Cyc. 789, and numerous cases cited in note 42; Rousmaniere's Adm'r, 1 Pet. 1, 7 L. Ed. 27; Rison v. Newberry, 90 Va. 513, 18 S. E. 916; Grey v. Tubbs, 43 Cal. 359. "Courts will not assume to make a contract for the parties which they did not choose to make for themselves." 1 Beach's Modern Law of Contract, § 707. In the present case the decree recites that Jones declined to receive the amount of money then due, whereupon the court decreed that Miller might pay the whole purchase price, with interest to that time, which it found to be $640, to the general receiver of the court, and Jones should thereupon make to him a warranty deed for the land. This was not according to the terms of the contract, and is clearly erroneous. The decree should have provided for the payment into the hands of the receiver, at that time, only the amount of money then due, including interest and city, county, and state taxes for 1906, on $610, as per the agreement; and should have decreed the payment of the future installments to the receiver as they respectively became due, with interest on each of said payments from the date of the contract, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. It should also have provided for the payment of the annual city, county, and state taxes by Miller, as the contract clearly binds the purchaser to pay such taxes "in addition" to the purchase price named. Possession was delivered to Downs, but title was to remain in Jones until the purchase money is all paid; hence Jones would be assessed with taxes. The contract binds Miller to pay the taxes on the property, or their equivalent, from, and including, the year 1906. If it were possible for us to determine from the record the amount of money due at the date of the decree, this error might be corrected and the decree affirmed. But there is no proof whatever of the amount of taxes for city, county, and state, chargeable on $610 for 1906. This should have been ascertained and included in the decree for the money then due.

We will therefore reverse the decree, and remand the cause for further proceedings.

MILLER and ROBINSON, JJ. (dissenting).
They would affirm the decree.

(68 W. Va. 594)

WESTERMAN et al. v. DINSMORE et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Feb. 7, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 78*)—OIL AND GAS LEASE—PROVISIONS FOR FORFEITURE—TIME AS ESSENCE.

Time is of the essence of a condition in an oil and gas lease, making it forfeitable for failure to drill a well within a specified time or pay a certain periodical rental or commutation in advance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 205-207; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

2. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 78*)—RELEASE FROM FORFEITURE OF AN OIL AND GAS LEASE.

Equity will relieve from a forfeiture of such a lease for nonperformance of the condition, occasioned by fraud, accident, mistake, or inequitable conduct of the lessor, provided its aid is sought with reasonable diligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 205-207; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

3. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 78*)—RELEASE FROM FORFEITURE—LACHES.

Unreasonable delay under the peculiar circumstances of any given case will bar such relief; the rule of laches applying with all its vigor and force.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

4. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 78*)—RELEASE FROM FORFEITURE OF OIL AND GAS LEASE.

If the lessor, after such a forfeiture, not superinduced by his own inequitable conduct, materially alter his condition, relying in good faith upon the forfeiture, or if in any case of such forfeiture the rights of innocent third parties have intervened, equity will not relieve.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

5. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 78*)—JURISDICTION—RELEASE FROM FORFEITURE OF OIL AND GAS LEASE—NECESSITY FOR DILIGENCE.

On the principle of estoppel, laches forbids delay in the assertion of a claim for relief from such a forfeiture with intent to claim or abandon the right according to the event. Equity will not tolerate a fast and loose policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

6. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 77*)—MUTUAL RIGHTS OF COTENANTS.

A cotenant in a lease which has been forfeited does not become a trustee for his associates in the ownership of such lease by the taking of a new one on the same premises, since the subject-matter of the cotenancy has become nonexistent, the unrelieved forfeiture having put an end to the term created by the prior lease, and the subsequent one having brought into existence a new and independent estate in respect to which there never was any cotenancy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

7. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 77*)—MUTUAL RIGHTS OF COTENANTS.

Under such circumstances, the right of the cotenants is limited to the identical term in respect to which the cotenancy existed, enforceable by a timely application for relief from the forfeiture.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Pleasants County.

Bill by C. G. Westerman and others against L. D. Dinsmore and others. Decree for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Thos. P. Jacobs, for appellants. J. F. Barron and Van Winkle & Ambler, for appellees.

POFFENBARGER, J. The appellants, C. G. Westerman and others, filed their bill in the circuit court of Pleasants county for relief against forfeiture of an oil and gas lease in which they were interested, and to enjoin the appellees from operating under a subsequent one on the same land. The preliminary injunction granted thereon was dissolved, and the bill dismissed.

The old lease for a term of two years, dated August 17, 1907, covering 77 acres, executed to L. J. Murphy, by Lloyd Bailey and wife, contained the following condition: "Provided that this lease shall become null and void unless operations shall be commenced on the premises and a well completed, unavoidable delay or accident excepted, within two months from the date hereof, or unless lessee shall pay at the rate of Fifteen Dollars per month payable monthly in advance thereafter for each additional month such completion of well is delayed." Murphy obtained from William Ruttencutter a similar lease, bearing the same date, on an adjacent tract of land, containing 225 acres. On November 4, 1907, he assigned three-fourths of each of these leases to Westerman for and in consideration of $750, which was paid; Murphy agreeing, as part of his contract with Westerman, to drill and complete a well on the Ruttencutter lease, and such additional wells as should be agreed upon were to be drilled at their joint expense. Four unproductive wells were drilled on the Ruttencutter land by March 4, 1908, but none on the Bailey tract. Such further dispositions of interests in the leaseholds were made that A. E. Brast became the owner of three-sixteenths, P. A. Schmuck of two-sixteenths, W. P. Simmons of three-sixteenths, Justus Eakin of two-sixteenths, L. J. Murphy of three-sixteenths, and Westerman of three-sixteenths. The expense incurred on account of these leases and the work done as aforesaid amounted to about $3,000, and the casing and other materials and appliances on the Ruttencutter lease were worth several hundred dollars. Under the Bailey lease, rentals were paid, but no drilling done, while operations were in progress on the other property. These rentals were paid on the day named in the lease until July, 1908, when there was a delay of 10 days, which Westerman, who was attending to that branch of the business, explained by saying it had resulted from confusion in dates, rental under the other lease having been paid, when that under the Bailey lease should have been. This was accepted by Noland, executor of the will of Bailey, who had died. Instead of paying on August 17th for the month commencing on that date, Westerman delayed payment until about August 26th, and Noland returned his check, saying: "As you failed to pay last month's rental when due, the Baileys thought you did not want the lease longer, and notified me that they had leased the land to another, and for me not to receive the rent, if sent." To this Westerman made no reply, nor did he or any one else holding under the lease render or pay any further rentals.

On August 22, 1908, before the remittance of the rental that should have been paid on the 17th, the Bailey devisees had executed a new lease to L. J. Murphy, the same person who had taken the former lease. In the new lease the old one was recognized by the following clause: "This lease being upon the same land leased to L. J. Murphy by Lloyd Bailey during his lifetime." It was recorded on the 29th day of August, 1908. On the 24th day of November L. J. Murphy assigned seven-eighths of his interest in this lease to his son, R. O. Murphy, in consideration of $130. On December 3d he assigned the remaining one-eighth to the same party in consideration of $50. On November 28th R. O. Murphy assigned a five-eighths interest in the lease to John B. Murphy, of Washington, Pa., in consideration of $400, the assignor agreeing to put down a well on the lease with reasonable diligence. On December 1, 1908, R. O. Murphy assigned to Elmer Edmonds a one-eighth interest in the lease, and agreed to pay him $350 in consideration of his completing a well on the lease. On the 29th day of December R. O. Murphy assigned to L. D. Dinsmore his remaining one-fourth interest, together with like interests in three other leases he had, one on other lands of the Baileys, another on lands of Mrs. S. P. Lamp, and another on lands of Mrs. Maggie Lamp, Dinsmore paying him $3,650 cash and agreeing to pay, keep, and perform all the covenants contained in said leases, and pay all outstanding indebtedness against the interests so assigned. On December 18th John B. Murphy, in consideration of $200, assigned to W. McK. Smith a one-fourth interest in the Bailey lease. Edmonds and the Murphys completed a producing well on the Bailey tract about the 22d day of December, 1908. On the question of notice, the following facts are material: Westerman was informed by Noland's letter of August 26th that a new lease had been executed, but the name of the lessee was withheld. The lease under which Westerman and his associates claimed was not admitted to record until December 29, 1908, at 12:50 p. m. The new lease and the assignments of interests therein were recorded very soon after the execution thereof, Dinsmore's on December 29 and W. McK. Smith's on December 30, 1908. As to when Westerman ascertained that L. J. Murphy was the new lessee the evidence is conflicting, but it leaves no doubt that he had sufficient information to put him upon inquiry as to the fact early in December, 1908. Murphy and others endeavored to charge him with notice in October, 1908. He claims not to have known of any entry upon the leased premises by the new lessees until December 29, 1908, a few days after the well had been completed. Nor did he ever give any notice to Murphy or any one else claiming under the new lease of his intention to try to hold the property under the old one. The institution of this suit on the 15th day of March, 1909, was the first act of the plaintiffs signifying intent to resist the claims asserted under the new lease.

[1] Time is of the essence of a condition to pay rental or commutation money to prevent forfeiture of an oil or gas lease for failure to drill a well within a stipulated time. For this universally recognized proposition, not denied or questioned in the argument, no authority need be cited. However, it may be possible that this quality can be extinguished by subsequent parol agreement or conduct, just as it can be imparted, in the same way, to an agreement in which it did not originally exist. This is rather suggested in Hukill v. Myers, 36 W. Va. 639, 15 S. E. 151, and Railroad Co. v. Triadelphia, 58 W. Va. 487, 52 S. E. 499.

[2] Both of these cases, as well as many others, assert jurisdiction in equity based upon estoppel and waiver to relieve from the effect of noncompliance with a condition in which time is made essential on proof of a course of conduct by the parties contrary to the terms of the stipulation as to time. Jurisdiction in equity to relieve against forfeitures of certain kinds and within certain limitations without proof of such previous conduct is also firmly established. Whether in the former class of cases essentially of time is eliminated from the contract by conduct or allowed to remain and relief from the forfeiture given is rather an academic question, since the result is the same in either event. But, if conduct may extinguish it, as suggested, it will most assuredly restore it, for it may be imparted by conduct to stipulations of which it was not originally a part. Jackson v. Ligon, 3 Leigh (Va.) 161.

This bill proceeds upon the theory of an established course of conduct, relating to the time of payment, at variance with the terms of the lease, under a claim of acceptance of rentals after the stipulated time of payment on three or four occasions, not sustained by the evidence. There was an express postponement of the rent due on October 17, 1907, until November 17, 1907. A check for rental bears date November 15, 1907, and a receipt for the same November 16, 1907. A receipt for the next month's rent bears date December 16, 1907. A check and a receipt for the next month's rent are each dated January 17, 1908. A check for the next month's rent is dated February 17, 1908, one for the next month, March 16, 1908; and one for the next April 17, 1908. While the brief does not say so, this payment is evidently one of the alleged departures from the contract. A registry return receipt says delivery of the letter was made April 18, 1908, but this fails to show it was not in the post office at St. Marys on the 17th, when it should have been. A check for the next month's rent bears date May 16, 1908, and the registry return receipt says the letter was delivered May 18, 1908. This is likely another alleged departure, but it is not proven. The check for the next month's rent bears date June 17, 1908. The payment that should have been made July 17th was not made until August 27th. The letter transmitting the check says: "Through an error Mr. Rutten cutter's rental was paid on July 16th instead of yours. Hoping this will be satisfactory, I am," etc. The next payment, tendered on August 26th or 27th and declined, as hereinbefore stated, seems to have been delayed through an error resulting from the former error. Westerman's bookkeeper says he was misled as to the date by the date of the July check, but this mistake is not shown to have been tendered to the lessor as an excuse for the delay. The excuse given for the delay in July was accepted. None was offered for the delay in August. We are unable to say this single condonation of delay, founded upon an excuse and apology, justified Westerman in the belief and assumption that the stipulation in the contract would be waived as to the next payment. This finding and conclusion, as to the facts and their interpretation, make a clear and plain case of forfeiture. This, however, would not preclude relief under the principles above stated. The forfeiture extinguished the legal right of the plaintiffs. Thereafter they could claim no more than a mere equity, possibly resting in the discretion of the court, unless some other principle affords them a claim of right on a different ground.

[3] While the authorities do not explicitly assert the duty of haste and diligence in seeking relief under such circumstances, we are of the opinion that it must necessarily exist. Rescission, cancellation, and other similar forms of relief, based upon fraud, accident, mistake, and the like, are matters of absolute right, though they render the contracts in respect to which they may be obtained only voidable. In such cases relief follows allegation and proof of the fact as a matter of course; but, if the circumstances are such as to impose, in equity and conscience, a duty of election, unreasonable delay is fatal, and what is reasonable diligence depends upon the circumstances. Thus legal rights are sometimes lost by conduct under the principles of laches and estoppel. In the case of a plain forfeiture, not induced or caused by fraud or inequitable conduct on the part of the beneficiary thereof, the legal right is wholly lost. Nothing remains but a mere equity. Such a case seems to me to impose duty to exercise a high degree of diligence and demand full protection to every right and interest respecting the property obtained by third persons in good faith, and also preclusion of relief against the beneficiary, when, in reliance upon the forfeiture, he has in good faith altered his condition by making a new contract or otherwise. Relief against contracts fraudulently obtained is sometimes barred by delay of only a few months. Whittaker v. S. W. Va. Imp. Co., 34 W. Va. 217, 12 S. E. 507; Hunt v. Blanton, 89 Ind. 38; Steveking v. Litzler, 31 Ind. 13; Strong v. Strong, 102 N. Y. 69, 5 N. E. 799. In cases of application for relief from forfeiture, the rule of laches ought to be rigidly applied, for there is no absolute right even in equity, when time is made essential by the contract in express terms or the nature of the subject-matter and circumstances. Pom. Eq. Jur. sec. 455. Some authorities say relief will not be given at all under such circumstances. 16 Cyc. 78. Personally I doubt the soundness of decisions so holding, but it is unnecessary to review them. Assuming susceptibility of relief from forfeiture resulting from noncompliance with such a stipulation, we think the conduct of the plaintiffs, herein set forth in detail, constitutes laches, barring it, as to all against whom it is sought on the sole ground of equity jurisdiction to relieve from forfeitures. Westerman, promptly advised of the declaration of forfeiture, made no complaint, offered no excuse for delay of payment, acquiesced in it, abstained from inquiry as to the identity of the new lessee and as to operation under the new lease, and delayed assertion of claim or right by suit for seven months, in which period the new lessees, by the expenditure of considerable money, had brought in a producing well. His claim of ignorance of operation under the new lease cannot be accepted in view of knowledge as early as August, 1908, of the execution thereof. That sufficed to put him upon inquiry, and made his ignorance of subsequent open and patent transactions inexcusable. It was due either to gross negligence or deliberate and willful abstention from inquiry. Either bars relief on the principle of estoppel.

[4] By negligence or design, the plaintiffs permitted a material change in the value and condition of the property to occur and the rights of third parties to intervene before they sought relief from the forfeiture. Such conduct is everywhere condemned as being inequitable. Hale v. Hale, 62 W. Va. 609, 612, 59 S. E. 1056, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 221; Depue v. Miller, 65 W. Va. 120, 131, 64 S. E. 740, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 775; Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 783, 26 S. E. 262; Whittaker v. S. W. Va., etc., Co., 34 W. Va. 217, 12 S. E. 507; Trader v. Jarvis, 23 W. Va. 100.

[5] Some of the evidence indicates intention on their part to await the event of operations on the lease and make their election depend upon the results, a course of conduct forbidden by the rule of laches. Anthony v. Leftwich, 3 Rand. (Va.) 238; Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 557, 19 L. Ed. 501.

[6.7] An alleged trust relation between L. J. Murphy and the plaintiffs, founded upon the circumstances under which he took the new lease, he having been a joint owner with the plaintiffs under the old one, constitutes an equity wholly different in nature from the one we have been discussing, if established and not subsequently destroyed. That the acquisition of a new lease on property covered by a former one by a tenant in common under such former one after forfeiture thereof falls within the principle making a tenant in common who buys in an outstanding superior title a trustee for his cotenants is a plausible view. The lease creates a term, subject to forfeiture for nonperformance of a condition subsequent, similar in some respects to a freehold liable to forfeiture for nonentry for taxation and sale for nonpayment of taxes, or sale to satisfy a lien by deed of trust or mortgage, in all which cases a purchase by a cotenant is deemed and held to have been made for the common benefit of himself and his cotenants. But are the cases so nearly analogous as to call for the application of this principle? There is a material and radical difference. By rightful declaration of forfeiture the lessor destroys the term—clears his land from the burden thereof. It ceases to exist. He is again clothed with absolute and plenary power over his land, and may create a new lease or not as he sees fit, and give it to whom he pleases. If he executes a new one, the lessee therein becomes the owner of an entirely new estate, which the lessor has undoubted power to create. A mere term for years, forfeitable by the lessor for nonperformance of a covenant or condition subsequent, is not like a nonforfeitable freehold, extending until the happening of a contingency, or an estate in fee simple, continuing forever. Unlike them, the means of its own destruction are inherent in it and borne on its face. Though one of these should be sold for a debt or taxes or become subordinate to a better outstanding title, it does not cease to exist. It is not destroyed. A cotenant, purchasing at such a sale thereof, obtains the subject-matter of the cotenancy, and, purchasing an outstanding title, strengthens his hold upon that subject-matter. He obtains or retains it. After such transaction, he has in his hands by virtue of his purchase the identical thing he previously held in common with his cotenants, and equity demands subject to certain conditions a continuation of the pre-existing relation among them. As the forfeiture of a lease not relieved nor relievable destroys the subject-matter of the cotenancy, and the execution of a new lease brings into existence a separate and distinct thing, there is no basis for the continuance of the former relation of cotenancy. All equitable considerations are overridden and destroyed by the legal dominion and power in the lessor over his property, out of which the new estate is carved, arising by virtue of the forfeiture. In reaching this conclusion we do not ignore the ground usually stated as the basis of the equity out of which the trust springs on a purchase by a cotenant, namely, his failure of duty, causing the sale, nonpayment of the taxes, or debt for which it was made. This failure of duty and continued existence of the subject-matter of the cotenancy unite in those cases with which it is said this one can be assimilated. We differentiate this case on the ground of the nonexistence of one of these two necessary elements or factors. The precedents do not extend to it, nor does the principle include it. Pyle v. Henderson, 65 W. Va. 39, 63 S. E. 762, relied upon in this connection, does not assert the contrary of this proposition. There the forfeiture claimed either did not exist at all, or was relievable as against the lessor, on account of a breach of his implied covenant for quiet enjoyment, or inequitable conduct, causing default in respect to payment of the rental. The decree restored the old term or lease in which the plaintiffs were jointly interested, or declared it never to have terminated or ceased to exist. They neither sought nor obtained, nor did the court take jurisdiction to give them, a new lease or any interest in one.

Nor does Potts v. Fitch, 47 W. Va. 63, 34 S. E. 959, conflict with this view. Potts was let into a lease which constituted the subject-matter of his contract with Fitch and others, a new lease, but one obtained under and in pursuance of the agreement. The plaintiffs here had no agreement with L. J. Murphy by which he was to obtain a new lease on the property for their common benefit. There is neither claim nor evidence of any such an agreement. Murphy does say he intended to let them into it, upon conditions to be agreed upon, but not that he obtained it in pursuance of any agreement of that kind. He denies the existence of any such agreement and also communication to any of the plaintiffs of his admitted intent or desire to associate them with him under the new lease. This lease is new, not only in respect to its commencement and termination, but also in other respects. It is for three years, and contains a covenant to drill a well within one month or pay rentals. The other was for two years without such a covenant, providing only that it should become void, unless a well should be completed in two months or rentals paid monthly in advance. It gives the lessor a better contract which by reason of the forfeiture he was free to obtain from anybody willing to give it.

The principles here announced and applied do not prevent relief in any case in which the forfeiture may be set aside for any reason, such as mistake or accident on the part of the lessee, or fraud on the part of a cotenant, or inequitable conduct on the part of the lessor, causing or superinducing the forfeiture; but they limit the complaining lessee to the acquisition of the estate or term which he owned or in which he had an interest, and require him to seek it with reasonable diligence.

There is no evidence of any actual fraud on the part of Murphy. Alleged constructive fraud, arising out of the subsisting relation of cotenancy, is the basis of the suit in so far as it proceeds upon the theory of fraud. Murphy in no way induced or caused the failure to pay the rent when it should have been paid. Nor did Noland, the executor. It was not expected that Murphy should pay the rentals out of his own funds. As to this, the evidence harmonizes. Besides, he kept the new lease wholly in his own name and ownership for three months after execution and recordation thereof, and almost that long after Westerman had been apprised of its execution. To obtain full information as to the status of the property, it was only necessary for the latter to examine the records. Having wholly neglected to take any steps for the protection of their interests in the old lease, and awaited the event of operations under the new one, he and his associates utterly fail to make out a case for equitable relief.

Seeing no error in the decree, we affirm it.

(89 W. Va. 100)

COMSTOCK v. J. R. DRONEY LUMBER CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 4, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 630*)—LICENSE TAXES—FAILURE TO PAY—EFFECT.

The provision in section 136 of chapter 32 of the Code, relating to proceedings against corporations, delinquent as to license taxes, saying, "Any person or persons who shall exercise or attempt to exercise any powers under the charter of such corporation, after the issuing of the Governor's proclamation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," etc., does not prevent a delinquent corporation from prosecuting or defending suits, after the issuance of such proclamation, respecting contracts made or rights acquired prior to the issuance thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2482-2486; Dec. Dig. § 630.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 8*)—SUFFICIENCY.

In a declaration in assumpsit by one member of a partnership on a contract made with the firm, an allegation that the plaintiff has acquired the entire interest of the firm in such contract is one of fact and not of law, and therefore sufficient in form and effect.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 12-28½; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

3. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 8*)—CONTRACTS—PLEADING.

An averment in general terms of performance of all conditions precedent is sufficient in a declaration on a contract for damages in the form of profits or gains prevented by refusal of the defendant to permit the plaintiff to fully perform his contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

4. CONTRACTS (§ 321*)—CONTRACT OF EMPLOYMENT—TERMINATION.

Performance of an executory working contract may always be discontinued or terminated by the employer, subject to liability on his part for compensation for work already done and damages in the form of profits or gains prevented as to the unexecuted portion thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Dec. Dig. § 321.*]

5. ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL (§ 8*)—ACTION FOR DAMAGES—INJUNCTION.

After the employer in a contract for the cutting of timber on his land has given notice of his desire to discontinue or terminate further performance or execution thereof on the part of the employé and enforced such right by an injunction, the employé has a right of action on his contract for breach thereof, provided he is not in fault himself, and the injunction constitutes no bar thereto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Abatement and Revival, Cent. Dig. §§ 39-72; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

6. ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL (§ 8*)—OTHER ACTION PENDING.

In such case the pendency of the injunction suit cannot be pleaded either in bar or abatement of the action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Abatement and Revival, Cent. Dig. §§ 39-72; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

7. ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL (§ 8*)—OTHER ACTION PENDING.

To be available as matter of abatement, a former suit pending must be as broad in its scope and effect as the subsequent one in which it is tendered by way of abatement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Abatement and Revival, Cent. Dig. §§ 39-72; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

8. WITNESSES (§ 245*)—RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE—REPEATING TESTIMONY—DISCRETION.

A trial court has discretionary power to prevent repetitions of questions previously propounded and answered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 827, 828; Dec. Dig. § 245.*]

9. EVIDENCE (§ 520*)—QUANTITY—EXPERTS.

The opinion of an experienced timberman who has partially gone over a tract of land for the purpose of estimating the quantity of standing timber thereon as to the quantity thereof is admissible in an action for damages on a contract for the cutting of the timber, but is not entitled to as much weight as if he had made a careful estimate of it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2329; Dec. Dig. § 520.*]

10. EVIDENCE (§ 571*)—QUANTITY—OPINION OF EXPERTS—WEIGHT.

In an action for damages to be measured by the profits obtainable from the cutting of standing timber at certain prices per thousand feet, the opinions of witnesses, not shown to have made full and careful examinations and estimates, as to the quantity thereof, are not entitled to as much weight as testimony of other witnesses, founded upon actual measurement of the timber after it had been cut, and showing much less timber; and a verdict based thereon must be set aside as being against the decided preponderance of evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2395-2398; Dec. Dig. § 571.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

11. CORPORATIONS (§ 630*)—"EXERCISE OR ATTEMPT TO EXERCISE ANY POWER"—"DOING BUSINESS."

The phrase "exercise or attempt to exercise any power," within Code 1906, c. 32, § 136, relating to proceedings against corporations, delinquent as to license taxes, should be read as if it said "carry on the business" of the corporation, and "doing business," as found in such statutes, is construed as not extending to the mere act of suits in respect to contracts made or rights acquired while the corporation had power to do business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2482-2486; Dec. Dig. § 630.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2155-2160; vol. 8, pp. 7640, 7641; vol. 3, pp. 2581-2583; vol. 8, p. 7656.]

Error from Circuit Court, Pocahontas County.

Action by M. L. Comstock against the J. R. Droney Lumber Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Dillon & Nuckolls and Henry Gilmer, for plaintiff in error. Price, Osenton & McPeak, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. Assigning numerous errors, the J. R. Droney Lumber Company complains of a judgment against it in the circuit court of Pocahontas county for the sum of $12,000 in favor of M. L. Comstock, rendered in an action of assumpsit on a working contract.

[1] The plaintiff in error is a corporation, organized under the laws of this state, and, having failed to pay its license tax for the year 1909, it has been included in a proclamation by the Governor declaring the delinquency of corporations for that cause, and also in an order of publication, made in a suit instituted by the Attorney General, to forfeit the charters of all the corporations included in said proclamation. Copies of these two papers have been filed here since the allowance of the writ of error in support of a motion to dismiss it.

[11] The theory of this motion is that the prosecution of the writ of error is an exercise of the company's charter powers, which the statute (section 136 of chapter 32 of the Code) inhibits after the publication of such proclamation. This statute must receive a reasonable construction. In our opinion, the phrase "exercise or attempt to exercise any power," under the charter, must be read as if it said carry on the business of the corporation, and "doing business," as found in such statutes, has been construed as not extending to the mere act of suing or defending suits in respect to contracts made or rights acquired, while the corporation had power to do business. Lumber Co. v. Coal Co., 66 W. Va. 696, 66 S. E. 1073, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1101; Typewriter Co. v. Piggott, 60 W. Va. 532, 55 S. E. 664; Story's Const. § 1385; 19 Cyc. 1280. The power to sue and make defense is incident to property and contract rights and the exercise thereof the vindication of such rights, and, though attendant upon or included in the corporate franchise, the exercise of such power does not amount to a prosecution of corporate business in the ordinary sense of the term. Its continuance, after the right to do business or exercise the ordinary corporate powers has ceased, is necessary to the preservation of rights lawfully acquired, and which the Legislature cannot be deemed to have intended to destroy or leave unprotected by denying or withholding it. The legislative purpose is fully accomplished, without detriment to vested rights, by forbidding subsequent acquisitions of contract and property rights, including inhibition of remedy for enforcement thereof.

The sufficiency of the declaration is challenged on several grounds; a demurrer to it and each count thereof having been interposed and overruled. It contains one count only, based upon a written contract between the J. R. Droney Lumber Company, of the one part, and M. L. Comstock & Co., of the other part, by which the parties of the second part agreed to cut and deliver at certain places all of the merchantable timber on a certain tract of land belonging to the party of the first part, which service the latter agreed to pay for at certain prices, ranging from $2.50 to $6 per thousand feet. This contract further provided that if the parties of the second part should comply with the terms thereof, respecting that tract of land, designated in the record as tract No. 1, they should have an option to cut the timber on another tract, designated in the record as tract No. 2. Before cutting the timber on tract No. 2, the parties of the second part were to peel and deliver on board the cars the bark from all chestnut oak trees thereon, for which service the party of the first part agreed to pay them $4.50 per cord. This done, they were to cut the timber into logs and deliver them at certain points called landings or skids, for which service they were to be paid certain prices, ranging from $5 to $5.50 per thousand feet. M. L. Comstock alone sues for breach of this contract, made by a copartnership, consisting of himself and another party, one Odell.

[2] In the declaration he alleges that he had "acquired the entire interest of the said M. L. Comstock & Co. with the knowledge and consent of the said defendant." As the declaration, filed by an individual plaintiff, asserts liability in his favor upon a contract made with a firm, and not otherwise, an allegation of assignment of the contract, or the equivalent thereof, is necessary. Malsby v. Lanark Co., 55 W. Va. 484, 47 S. E. 358. Protesting the lack of such an allegation, the defendant insists that the demurrer should have been sustained. The form of an allegation is immaterial, if, fairly and reasonably construed, its effect is certain in a legal sense. Ceranto v. Trimboli, 68 W. Va. 340, 60 S. E. 138. This declaration says M. L. Comstock acquired the entire interest of the firm, in whose name the contract was made. His sole ownership thereof is all that is required to enable him to maintain an action on it. 1 Chitty, Pl. 11, 12; Dacey, Parties, 172-174. It is usually acquired by assignment, but, if it be acquired in some other way, as by descent or purchase at a judicial sale, the right to sue upon it would be complete. It may be said the averment of mere acquisition of the firm interests states a conclusion, and not a fact, but we do not think so. If the pleader had said the company had assigned to him its entire interest in the contract, this averment would have included matter of law as well as matter of fact, since it might have turned out that the facts relied upon as constituting an assignment were insufficient in law. So here, in saying he acquired his partner's interest, he asserts matter of fact, though matter of law is incidentally included and involved. Hence in our opinion this allegation is sufficient.

[3] The next contention is that the declaration covering both tracts of land and charging a breach of the entire contract does not sufficiently aver performance of all that was required of the plaintiff respecting the work to be done on tract No. 1; completion of that work having been made a condition precedent to any right on his part to work on tract No. 2. The declaration sets forth the contract, showing what it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to perform. This is followed by an averment that he had performed and fulfilled all things on his part and behalf in the said agreement to be performed and fulfilled, and that he did enter upon and commence the said work, and, for that purpose, did procure and find all materials and labor necessary for performing the same and did the same in part, to wit, ——— feet thereof, to the satisfaction of the defendant, and has always been ready and willing to perform and complete the whole of the said work; but that the defendant did not, nor would, perform said agreement, nor his promise and undertaking, and prevented plaintiff from proceeding further with his said contract by securing an injunction against the further performance of the same. We see no just ground of criticism of these averments. In this respect the declaration follows substantially the form prescribed in 2 Chitty, Pl. (11 Am. Ed.) pp. 328-329, departing therefrom in two respects only. Instead of saying how many feet the plaintiff cut by way of part performance, it leaves a blank as to the quantity, and, instead of saying the defendant would not advance or pay money for the work done, it says it secured an injunction and thereby prevented further performance of the contract. It suffices to say as to the first departure that the declaration nevertheless shows part performance. It says some of the work was done. As to the second, we have no hesitancy in saying the general averment is prevention of full performance, though effected by an injunction. Anything constituting a breach of the contract on the part of the defendant excused further performance on the part of the plaintiff and gave him a right of action. The extent to which the contract had been performed, when this accrued, is important only in its bearings upon the quantum of damages, the right of recovery for gains prevented decreasing with the extent of performance, and that for work done increasing correspondingly, if not paid for. Grubb v. Burford, 98 Va. 553, 37 S. E. 4, does not sustain the contention of the plaintiff in error, for the declaration in that case contained no general averment of performance. It stopped with the averment of performance of certain things which did not include all that was required.

The next question raised upon the demurrer embraces also a charge of error in the rejection of a special plea. As the declaration shows, on its face, the awarding of an injunction to prevent the further cutting of timber, under the contract, it is insisted that this admission of the pendency of an injunction suit makes the declaration bad on the theory, either that the plaintiff has no remedy, since the prevention of further performance was by legal process, or that his remedy is by an action upon the injunction bond, and not otherwise. It seems to be well settled that at common law there was no right of action for damages occasioned by an injunction, unless it was sued out without probable cause or maliciously prosecuted. This defect in the law was supplied by statute, requiring a bond and giving a right of action thereon for the damages. Railway Co. v. Railway Co., 47 W. Va. 725, 35 S. E. 978. Therefore, if this action included only the damages occasioned by the injunction and extended no further, it could not be maintained, there being no averment of want of probable cause or malicious prosecution. We are of the opinion, however, that the declaration goes beyond the subject-matter of the injunction. It demands damages for the breach of the contract. The defendant by its injunction seeks only to preserve its timber. The contract involved is a working contract. The plaintiff had no interest in the timber nor title thereto.

[4] The defendant had the power to stop performance of that contract, or at least to give the plaintiff cause to treat it as broken, but, by doing so, it could not discharge itself from the obligation thereof. Rowan v. Hull, 55 W. Va. 335, 47 S. E. 92, 104 Am. St. Rep. 998. An employer may always discontinue the work contracted for, but, in doing so, he may break his contract. Lord v. Thomas, 64 N. Y. 107; Davis v. Bronson, 2 N. D. 300, 50 N. W. 836, 16 L. R. A. 655, 33 Am. St. Rep. 783; Hyland v. Giddings, 11 Gray (Mass.) 232; Wigent v. Marra, 130 Mich. 609, 90 N. W. 423; Black v. Woodrow, 39 Md. 194; Clark v. Franklin, 7 Leigh (Va.) 1-8. Performance of an executory contract of sale of personal property may be terminated, subject to liability for damages. Arme Food Co. v. Older, 64 W. Va. 255, 61 S. E. 235, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 807; Danforth v. Walker, 37 Vt. 239.

[5] Defendant's wrongful prevention of further execution of the contract gave the plaintiff a right of action for the breach of the agreement. It was not the purpose of the injunction to rescind, cancel, or destroy the contract, or try the right to damages or fix the amount thereof, but only to prevent further execution of the contract. In the chancery cause there was no decree of cancellation, rescission, or annulment, or adjudication as to damages. The declaration admits none, nor does the special plea aver it. The plain purpose and extent of the injunction was enforcement of the defendant's election to stop further performance by the plaintiff and nothing more.

[6, 7] It does not reach the subject-matter of this action, and constitutes no bar by estoppel or otherwise. We are of the opinion, therefore, that this ground of demurrer and the action of the court in rejecting the special plea are governed by principles applicable to pleas of former suit pending, and that these principles neither sustain the demurrer nor the special plea. "To sustain the plea of a former suit pending, it must appear that the subject-matter and the relief sought in the second suit are the same as in the first suit." Stafford v. Board of Canvassers, 56 W. Va. 870, 874, 49 S. E. 364, 365; Foley v. Ruley, 43 W. Va. 513, 27 S. E. 268; 1 Beach, Mod. Eq. Pr. § 33. This declaration goes far beyond the scope and effect of the chancery suit.

[8] The action of the court in sustaining an objection to a question propounded to the plaintiff on cross-examination is the subject-matter of another assignment of error. This question related to the completion of the work under the first contract and was a repetition of one which had been previously propounded and answered, both on the examination of the witness in chief and his cross-examination. The court clearly had discretion to prevent such repetition. The defendant already had the benefit of more than one answer to that question.

[9] The opinion of a witness as to the quantity of timber uncut and standing in the woods was objected to, and to the action of the court in overruling the objection the defendant excepted. This witness testified that he had had about 35 years experience as a woodsman, and 10 years of such experience in the state of West Virginia. He also said he had had something like 30 years experience as a contractor in respect to the cutting and manufacture of timber, and had gone over tract No. 2 for the purpose of estimating the timber on it as well as to see what kind of work the plaintiff had done. In his examination he seems not to have gone entirely over the tract of land, but he says the boundaries were pointed out to him, and he went up the main hollow on both sides, but did not know how far the timber extended back. Having stated this knowledge and experience, he was permitted to say he thought by the looks of the timber there was at least 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 feet. We think this evidence was admissible. Having been upon the ground and seen the timber, the witness was competent to give his opinion as to the quantity, but his failure to go carefully over all the ground and ascertain the boundaries was a matter for consideration of the jury in passing upon the soundness, accuracy, and probative value of his opinion. His evidence may not have been very valuable, but it was relevant and material, and therefore admissible. It proved the existence of a large amount of timber, the cutting of which, under the contract, would have been profitable to the plaintiff.

We have carefully examined all the instructions, concerning which the benefit of exceptions were saved, and find no fault with the rulings of the court thereon. No. 1 and No. 3, given for the plaintiff, read together, tell the jury to find for the plaintiff and properly state the measure of damages, if they believe the plaintiff was ready and willing to perform the contract, or had partly performed it, in a manner satisfactory to the defendant, but not in strict conformity with its terms, and had been prevented by the defendant from completing it. Substantially all the argument against them has been disposed of by the principles declared respecting the special plea. Plaintiff's instruction No. 2, relating to the credit to be accorded the testimony of witnesses, is in accord with well-settled principles and rules often declared by this court. Defendant's instruction No. 2, relying upon the effect of the injunction as a bar to the action, was properly refused for reasons already stated. Its instruction No. 4, peremptorily directing a verdict for the defendant was properly refused, since the evidence, as will be hereinafter shown, was sufficient to sustain a verdict. Its instruction No. 6, relying upon the partnership relation as a bar, was properly refused for reasons stated in passing upon the demurrer.

[10] Substantially all the evidence adduced by the plaintiff to fix the amount of damages on the basis of eight or ten million feet consists of his own testimony and that of the witness Lord, and amounts to nothing more than their opinions as to the quantity of standing timber. Neither of these witnesses shows how his estimate was made. They do not state the area of the land nor the estimated quantity of timber per acre. Lord admits that he did not know the area of the boundaries. Obviously they have given mere rough guesses as to the quantity of uncut timber. On the other hand, two witnesses for the defendant who superintended the work of taking this timber off of the land for a purchaser thereof, after the plaintiff's work was stopped, place the amount taken off, as ascertained by actual measurement, at less than 2,000,000 feet. A. J. Cook says the exact quantity taken off was 1,576,096 feet. W. O. Tomb says it was approximately 1,551,096. Both say that, after this had been taken off, there remained on tract No. 2 less than 300,000 feet. The credibility of these witnesses has not been assailed in any way, and their statements as to the quantity of timber cut by them stand upon actual knowledge and the test of measurement. What they say as to the quantity remaining uncut, after this was taken off, is not controverted. In this state of the evidence as to quantity, affecting the amount of damages recoverable, we find a decided preponderance against the assessment made by the jury, resting upon the relative completeness and accuracy of the knowledge of the witnesses for the defendant and the slowness of the knowledge of the facts on the part of the witnesses for the plaintiff. Such a preponderance or superiority of evidence must prevail.

We deem it necessary to say for the purposes of a new trial that the plaintiff's case was open to objection on the ground of variance, since he did not prove full performance of precedent conditions, in accordance with the allegations of his declaration, but did adduce evidence, without objection, of modifications of the contract and excuses for failure to comply strictly with all its terms and conditions. On the trial, the variance was waived by the failure of the defendant to take advantage of it by proper objections. Long v. Campbell, 37 W. Va. 685, 17 S. E. 197; Smith v. Lawson, 18 W. Va. 212, 41 Am. Rep. 688; Damarin v. Young, 27 W. Va. 438; Davis v. Miller, 14 Grat. (Va.) 19. It is not a total variance, or one incurable by amendment, and, if the objection had been made, no doubt the declaration would have been amended, and this should be done before a new trial is had.

For the reason stated, the judgment will be reversed, the verdict set aside, and the case remanded for a new trial.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(68 W. Va. 609)

RUNYAN v. KANAWHA WATER & LIGHT CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Feb. 7, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ELECTRICITY (§ 16*)—PERSONAL INJURY—INSULATION OF WIRES.

Workmen have right to be on any part of an iron bridge in necessary work in painting it, and an electric light company having its wires on the bridge must keep them properly insulated, so that such workmen coming accidentally in contact with the wires may not be injured thereby.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 9; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

2. ELECTRICITY (§ 19*)—INSULATION OF WIRES—NEGLIGENCE—PRESUMPTIONS.

If a person, at a place where he has right to be, is injured by contact with an electric light wire, there is a prima facie presumption that the wire was not properly insulated, which presumption, unless rebutted, will establish negligence in the owner of the wire in failing to have a properly insulated wire.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 11; Dec. Dig. § 19.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 359*)—VERDICT—SPECIAL FINDINGS—CONFLICT WITH VERDICT.

A special finding, to prevail over a general verdict, must be irreconcilably inconsistent with it, and clearly exclude every conclusion that would harmonize it with that verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 857-860; Dec. Dig. § 359.*]

4. TRIAL (§§ 350, 359*)—VERDICT—INTERROGATORIES.

An interrogatory under section 5, c. 131, Code 1906, must put only questions of fact, not of law. It cannot ask an opinion from a jury, not asking as to facts on which such opinion may rest, and a finding upon such defective interrogatory has no force to overrule a general verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 828-833, 857-860; Dec. Dig. §§ 350, 359.*]

5. TRIAL (§ 350*)—VERDICT—INTERROGATORIES.

Interrogatories requiring mere speculation by the jury as to what might or might not have been in a certain contingency should not be submitted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 828-833; Dec. Dig. § 350.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 357*)—VERDICT—INTERROGATORIES—SUFFICIENCY.

Answers to interrogatories should be direct, definite, and complete.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 855; Dec. Dig. § 357.*]

7. TRIAL (§ 352*)—VERDICT—INTERROGATORIES—SUFFICIENCY.

Interrogatories must not assume facts controverted in the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 840-845; Dec. Dig. § 352.*]

8. ELECTRICITY (§ 14*)—ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANIES—CARE REQUIRED—INSULATION OF WIRES.

An electric light company is bound to use a high degree of care to keep its wires safely insulated at places where persons may be lawfully in close proximity to them, and accidentally come in contact with them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 7; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Kanawha County.

Action by C. D. Runyan, administrator of Walter Runyan, against the Kanawha Water & Light Company. A verdict for plaintiff having been set aside, he brings error. Reversed, and judgment rendered on the verdict.

Littlepage, Cato & Bledsoe, for plaintiff in error. Chilton, McCorkle & Chilton, for defendant in error.

BRANNON, J. The Kanawha Water & Light Company, a corporation furnishing electricity for public consumption in the city of Charleston, had its wires on a bridge over Kanawha river for conveyance of electricity. Walter Runyan was an employé of the bridge company engaged in painting the bridge, and while so employed came in contact with an electric wire, and was so badly burnt by the electricity that he died. His administrator sued the Kanawha Water & Light Company, and recovered a verdict for $5,000, and, the court having set the verdict aside, the plaintiff comes to this court.

The claim is that a wire was not insulated safely, and Runyan's contact with it is the source of his death. An important question is made by the contention of defendant that the place where Runyan met his death was where the light company was under no duty to insulate its wires, and where Runyan had no right to demand such insulation, because that place was not a place where any one had right to go for work, business, or pleasure. It is law that such a corporation is not compelled to insulate its wires everywhere, but only at places where people may go for work, business, or pleasure, where they may reasonably be expected to go. Thomas v. Electrical Co., 54 W. Va. 395, 46 S. E. 217.

The bridge is a steel bridge having crossbeams some 15 to 17 feet above the floor of the roadway of the bridge. Standing on one of these crossbeams are wooden cross-arms about 10 inches high, and on these arms the wires were strung near the middle of the bridge. Runyan was engaged in painting, at just what point does not appear. For some reason he was walking on a crossbeam, and came in contact with an electric wire and was discovered hanging over it on his stomach, his clothes on fire, his body burning, a wire under him on the beam, forming a short circuit, when the wire separated from melting, and fell, and Runyan fell to the floor. The claim is that the electric company had placed its wires far away from the roadway, out of danger to the public, and it could not anticipate that any one would be walking on a beam high up in the bridge. But we say that painting or repairing of this large, costly bridge is indispensable, and the defendant was bound to expect that workmen would be upon it. Under the case of Thornburg v. Railroad Co., 65 W. Va. 379, 64 S. E. 358, we say that, as Runyan was there engaged in painting, he was lawfully there in work. It has been held that persons going on roofs of houses to do work injured by defective wires may recover, though people do not frequently go on roofs. Fitzgerald v. Edison, 200 Pa. 540, 50 Atl. 161, 86 Am. St. Rep. 732, is the case of a painter. Giraudi v. Elec. Co., 107 Cal. 120, 40 Pac. 108, 28 L. R. A. 596, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114; Joyce on Electricity, § 664; Clements v. Louisiana Co., 44 La. Ann. 692, 11 South. 51, 16 L. R. A. 43, 32 Am. St. Rep. 348.

The claim for recovery by the plaintiff rests on the theory that the electric wire was not well insulated, as a portion of the wire was uncovered by insulating material. The defense denies this, and says that no adequate proof of negligence has been made. We could dispose of this matter at once by saying that there was evidence that the wire was not insulated, and the general verdict imports that it was not, and by saying that a special interrogatory propounded to the jury the question whether the defendant failed to perform any duty which it owed to Runyan, and, if so, what and in what way; the answer being, "Yes; by failure to insulate the wire." But beyond this the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur proves negligence prima facie, and aids the oral evidence. Our cases surely apply this rule in such cases, holding, when injury comes to a person by contact with an electric wire at a place where he has a right to be, and where there should be good insulation, it is a case of negligence rendering the company prima facie liable. We need not go over this principle again. Snyder v. Elec. Co., 43 W. Va. 661, 28 S. E. 733, 39 L. R. A. 499, 64 Am. St. Rep. 922; Thomas v. Elec. Co., 54 W. Va. 395, 46 S. E. 217; Thornburg v. City Co., 65 W. Va. 379, 64 S. E. 358, and other cases. There is no room to say that this is not the rule everywhere. Winkleman v. Kansas C. Co., 110 Mo. App. 184, 85 S. W. 99, says that the fact of injury is conclusive evidence of want of insulation. This goes very far, I suppose on the idea that, if safely insulated, accident could not happen from the wire. I cite for this doctrine Alexander v. Nanticoke Co., 209 Pa. 571, 58 Atl. 1068, 67 L. R. A. 475, and 113 Am. St. Rep. 987, 999. The rule is stringent; but people must and do go about over the face of the earth, and those who use dangerous things must carry the burden, however heavy or costly, of so using them as to save life.

The main defense in the case is contributory negligence. The general verdict finds against that defense; but defendant insists that that verdict is overruled by a finding in answer to an interrogatory. This has given us some perplexity, and is the question of gravity in the case. The interrogatory is this: "If Walter Runyan had been careful, considering the knowledge he had of the wires, would he have been injured?" The answer is, "We think not." Is this inconsistent with the general verdict so as to overrule it? It must be so inconsistent that both cannot stand together. If possible, they must be construed so as to harmonize; or rather, as applied to this case, we must be able to say that the finding finds a fact which inevitably overthrows the general verdict. It must exclude every conclusion that would authorize a verdict for plaintiff. Peninsular Land Co. v. Ins. Co., 85 W. Va. 666, 14 S. E. 237. As a practical question in this case, does this finding find as a fact that Runyan was guilty of contributory negligence defeating the action? If it does not, it is not the overthrow of the general verdict. It does not find facts to enable the court to say whether such contributory negligence was a fact. This consideration at once denies this finding any force to overthrow the general verdict. This interrogatory was put to get from the jury an expression to sustain the charge of contributory negligence. It does not ask the jury whether such and such facts exist, facts which would in law constitute negligence, as it must. The law is that an interrogatory must put only questions of fact from which a legal proposition may be deduced. What facts arising on the evidence does this interrogatory inquire about? The interrogatory must ask as to facts such as, if answered as desired by the interrogator, will make a verdict for his adversary inconsistent. Any question the answer to which would be inconclusive, and which would not be so inconsistent, should not be put. 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 328. Questions which require the jury merely to answer as to acts or omissions which may or may not in their opinion be evidence of care or negligence, or from answers to which, either way, the court cannot say, as a matter of law, whether care or negligence is the result, are not material. Clementson on Special Verdicts, 73. This interrogatory, without specifying facts on which to base the opinion, simply asks the jury whether in its opinion Runyan exercised care. Virtually it asks the jury whether in its opinion Runyan was guilty of contributory negligence, a mixed question of law and fact—I may say of law. Such an interrogatory is not good. The failure to ask as to facts on which carelessness, or, in other words, contributory negligence, is sought to be predicated, is a fatal defect in this interrogatory, and must render its answer abortive. The answer does not find in words that Runyan was guilty of contributory negligence, and could not, since a question calling upon a jury to find on a question of law must not be submitted. 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 326; Clementson on Special Verdicts, 117, 217. He is not proven negligent. It does not appear.

But take the question and answer as they are. This finding says that, if Runyan had been careful, he would not have been injured. Does this come up to the standard of full contributory negligence? No. It does not tell in what he was careless or to what degree. Runyan having a right to be where he was in work, he could go near or over the wires, unless he knew that there was positive actual danger staring him in the face. If he by accident fell upon or caught his foot in the wires, this would not bar recovery. He might not have used the highest degree of care, and yet not be found guilty of contributory negligence defeating the action. We cannot see what was the extent of his knowledge of danger, whether or not he knew of defects in insulation. He was called on to use only ordinary care required of a prudent man under the circumstances; but this finding does not indicate what care or carelessness he used. We cannot from the finding say, or guess, whether he exercised the only care required by law, ordinary, or was chargeable with gross negligence. In the one case he would not be guilty of contributory negligence defeating the action; in the other he would. We cannot say which from the question and answer. The main verdict finds no negligence, and we are asked to say from the special finding that there was, and thus make the special finding inconsistent with the main verdict, when the special one does not give facts which in law impute contributory negligence.

There is another defective feature of this finding to show its inadequacy to overcome the general verdict. It is in the inconclusive language, "We think not." "Answers expressing only the inclination of the minds of the jury, as to say, 'We think not,' are insufficient, and too uncertain to base a judgment on." Hopkins v. Stanley, 43 Ind. 554. Eminent authority there cited says: "An opinion is not a legal verdict, and verdicts must be positive, certain, and free from all ambiguity." This position may be assailed as technical; but remember that special finding, to overcome general verdicts, must be certain and clearly and plainly inconsistent with it. I grant that there are authorities holding otherwise. 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 344. I cannot say that I would for this defect alone reject the answer; still it must be said that the answer is indefinite and leaves the mind in doubt whether the jury intended to find a definite fact. Why did it not say "No," if so intended? The law says that answers to interrogatories should be "direct, definite, certain, and complete." 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 342.

Again, this question 10 called upon the jury to say whether, if Runyan had been careful, he would have been hurt. "Only such questions as can be fairly and intelligently answered should be submitted. Interrogatories requiring the jury to speculate as to what might have happened in a certain contingency should not be submitted." Atchison, etc., v. Lannigan, 56 Kan. 109, 42 Pac. 343. Therefore we must regard the answer mere speculation, and not on specific facts, not a flat finding. Findings must be free of obscurity. "They must destroy the general verdict, if at all, only by their own inherent clearness and strength." Clementson on Special Verdicts, 135. Thompson on Trials, § 2698, says: "The court will not strain the language of the special findings to override the general verdict. If possible, they will be interpreted to support the verdict rather than overturn it. No presumption will be made in their favor; nor will they control the general verdict, unless they are invincibly antagonistic to it."

Another objection to this finding depriving its answer of force is that it assumes a very material fact, that is, that Runyan knew the condition of the wires, their danger, etc. This had a tendency to lead the minds of jurors to conclude that Runyan had such knowledge, that even the judge thought so, else he would not have allowed such an interrogatory. An interrogatory must not assume material facts. 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 322; Elllott v. Reynolds, 38 Kan. 274, 16 Pac. 698; Toledo R. Co. v. Goddard, 25 Ind. 185. A ladder was standing on the bridge floor and resting against the crossbeam on which Runyan was. A special interrogatory was propounded, "Would Runyan have been injured if he had stood on the wooden ladder while painting?" Answer was, "No." Evidence goes to show that Runyan did not have or use this ladder, but that it was brought there after he was down burning on the crossbeam. I think the court would have been justified in refusing this interrogatory, because not in the case on evidence. 20 Ency. Pl. & Prac. 331. If so, the answer is out of the case. But the interrogatory was put. Now, it does not appear that Runyan was on the ladder or using it; and I say that, if he had been, he was not confined to it, but could lawfully go on the crossbeam in working, if the place where he was painting or intended to paint required it. We do not know, no evidence shows, where he was painting. We know nothing about where his work called him. Now, this interrogatory does not ask as to facts from which the jury or court could form an opinion as to safety, and what has been said as to interrogatory 10 applies to this one. It calls for mere opinion regardless of found facts.

Complaint is made of plaintiff's instruction No. 1. It says that electric companies must use very great care to keep the insulation of its dangerous wires perfect at places where people have right to go for work, and if Runyan, while working on the bridge, and in a place he had right to be, came in contact with a wire or wires of the company, and through defect in insulation received a shock from which he died, they must find for the plaintiff unless Runyan was guilty of contributory negligence. It is said that it assumes the wires were dangerous. We surely know that wires conveying electricity are dangerous from our knowledge of things. The court say they are dangerous unless insulated. It is said it applies the rule of a man's right to go for work at certain places to any work that Runyan might do on this bridge. He had right to go on the bridge where work might call, as we have shown above. It is said against the instruction that it assumes that Runyan died from a shock, whereas he died from falling on a wire pressing it on a crossbeam, causing a short circuit which caused him to be burnt. The instruction does not so assume, but makes it depend on evidence, there being evidence on both theories.

It is assigned as error that defendant's instructions Nos. 4, 6, and 7 were refused. Instruction 1 says that if Runyan while working on the bridge and when injured was warned not to touch the wires, and "disregarded the instructions and touched the wires," and thereby a circuit of electricity was formed through his body, which shocked and burned him, then, whether the wires were insulated or not, the jury must find for the defendant. A criticism might be made of this instruction that it imports that Runyan rashly, carelessly, and voluntarily took hold or otherwise touched a wire. No evidence of such contributory negligence. It does not appear how he came in contact with the wire. An interrogatory, 3, asked whether he stepped or fell on it or caught hold of it, and was answered, "Fell on the wire." If the language quoted does not mean to convey the idea of wilful negligence by voluntary touching of the wire, then this binding instruction says that merely because he had been warned not to touch the wire his mere contact with it charged him with contributory negligence. Suppose that while close to the wire in working or passing to a place to work he fell on a wire, or his foot caught in trying to cross over the wires, or in any way by accident he came in contact with the wire; would this exonerate the defendant for failure to insulate its wires, if the harm came from that? Surely not. Being where he was lawfully engaged in work, using ordinary care, this accident might befall him. Owner of electric wires stringing them over a bridge so near to its top that it is impossible to make repairs on the bridge without coming in contact with them is chargeable with negligence. A workman engaged in repairing a bridge over which electric wires with apparently safe insulation are strung, where he must come in proximity with them in performing his work, has right to assume that contact with them will not be dangerous. Perham v. Portland Elec. Co., 33 Or. 451, 53 Pac. 14, 24, 40 L. R. A. 799, 72 Am. St. Rep. 730. "An electric light company is bound to use the very highest degree of care practicable to avoid injury to every one who may be lawfully in proximity to its wires, and liable to come accidentally or otherwise in contact with them." Daltry v. Media E. L. Co., 208 Pa. 403, 57 Atl. 833. This authority allows Runyan to do work, though in proximity to the wires, and leaves room for unfortunate accident; whereas the instruction does not allow him to go near them, though his work should call for it, and leaves no allowance for accident. If such be law, then our case of Thomas v. Elec. Co., 54 W. Va. 395, 46 S. E. 217, is not sound. Cases cited in the early part of this opinion show that workmen on roofs, walls, and bridges are not held guilty of contributory negligence where there is no gross negligence. No. 6 is substantially the same as instruction 1. It denies Runyan right to go near the wires in his work, and would debar action even for mere accident, though Runyan was using ordinary care.

No. 7 is much the same. It is binding, and leaves no room for accident. Moreover, it says that the occurrence raised no presumption of negligence, for the reason, as I understand, that Runyan had knowledge that the wires were in bad condition. I do not see how Runyan's knowledge would do away with the presumption of negligence from the occurrence of the accident. Besides, the instruction is not clear in import. I think, also, that instructions given the defendant presented its claim fully and fairly on the subject of contributory negligence.

A witness, Alexander, was asked if he knew whether or not from the construction of the bridge in painting any part of the bridge it would be necessary to touch the wires, and the question was not allowed to be answered. Of course, it might not be necessary to touch the wires voluntarily. The question is not whether it would be necessary to paint near the wires, but to touch the wires. It would be necessary to paint the crossbeams near the wires, and in so doing Runyan might accidentally touch them. And, though not necessary to paint near the wires, Runyan had right to pass over the wires walking on the crossbeam in going to paint elsewhere. If answered as desired, it would not be material. Moreover, it is sufficient to say that it does not appear what answer was expected, nor can we say with certainty from the form of the question.

Therefore, we reverse the order setting aside the verdict, and render judgment upon that verdict for the plaintiff.

(69 W. Va. 181)

LITZ et al. v. LOWRY et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
April 18, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 19, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TAXATION (§ 848*)—FAILURE TO LIST LAND—FORFEITURE.

Land omitted from the land books for the years 1865 to 1874, inclusive, was forfeited, for such omission, by chapter 125 of the Acts of 1869, inflicting forfeiture for such omission for any period of five years, either prior or subsequent to the passage of said act, subject to certain exceptions therein specified.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1664; Dec. Dig. § 848.*]

2. TAXATION (§ 855*)—LANDS FORFEITED FOR OMISSION FROM LAND BOOK—ACQUISITION.

A tract of land, granted in 1851, sold by the grantee by title bond, occupied by the vendee and successive assignees of his until 1873, omitted from the land books until 1875, conveyed by one of such assignees, in 1873, to his assignee and successor in possession, entered upon the land books for taxation in 1875, in the name of the grantee in the deed of 1873, forfeited for omission from the land books from 1865 to 1869, was subject to acquisition by said last-mentioned assignee and those claiming under him and succeeding him in possession, by transfer under section 3 of article 13 of the Constitution (Code 1906, p. lxxxiv).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1672; Dec. Dig. § 855.*]

3. TAXATION (§ 855*)—ACQUISITION—LANDS FORFEITED FOR OMISSION FROM LAND BOOK.

Such assignee's deed constituted color of title, and the relation of privity between him and the vendor did not preclude him from acquiring title under said section; he having been under no duty to pay the taxes for the year for which the forfeiture occurred, and being neither an heir nor devisee of any person or persons for whose default the land was forfeited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1672; Dec. Dig. § 855.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Raleigh County.

Action by A. Z. Litz and others against James D. Lowry and others. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants bring error. Affirmed.

McGinnis & Hatcher, File & File, and Campbell, Brown & Davis, for plaintiffs in error. M. O. Litz, J. Lewis Bumgardner, Ritz & Ritz, and Sanders & Crockett, for defendants in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. In an action of ejectment brought by A. Z. Litz and others against James D. Lowry and James H. Gilmore, trustees, and Joseph Bolen, in the circuit court of Raleigh county, for the recovery of a small tract of land containing about 65 acres, the defendants demurred to the evidence of the plaintiffs, and the court, deeming the evidence sufficient to warrant a verdict, overruled the demurrer and rendered a judgment for the plaintiffs.

The case is peculiar, in this, that both the plaintiffs and the defendants claim under the same title. Though the plaintiffs set up an additional claim under a different and strange title, their principal claim is under the same title which defendants claim. The history of that title is as follows: About the year 1849, Christian Cline entered upon the land in controversy and had a survey thereof made with intent to obtain a patent for it. The patent was issued August 1, 1851. Before he obtained the patent, Cline sold the land to Anos Walker and gave him a title bond therefor. Walker sold it to Sire Meadows, who moved on the land when Cline left it. He sold it and transferred the possession to Peter Meadows, who sold it to Alias Read. Read sold to John H. Smith. In all these instances the title bond was assigned. On the 3d day of April, 1875, John H. Smith sold the land to William Smith and executed to him a deed purporting to convey it. He also left the title bond with him. William Smith conveyed it to John A. Smith in the year 1883. John A. Smith conveyed it to John A. Cadle December 13, 1884. Cadle and others conveyed it to Litz and others December 16, 1890. Though the fact is questioned, this land was occupied and portions of it inclosed and cultivated successively, by the parties just named, from a time prior to April, 1875, until after the year 1890. The house on the land burned down at a date not fixed definitely by the evidence; but John A. Cadle testifies positively that he occupied the house and held possession of the land for Litz for a period of two years after he had conveyed it to him. The land appears on the land books for the first time in the year 1875. It seems to be admitted that, prior to that year, it never had been entered for taxation, and that no taxes had been paid thereon. Christian Cline, in whom the legal title was vested by the patent, issued in 1851, never conveyed the land to any of said parties. Moses C. Cline, one of his heirs at law, having obtained the interests of all the other heirs, conveyed it to Lowry and Gilmore, by deed dated March 29, 1907. These grantees placed Bolen on the land as their tenant, and Litz and others brought this action.

[1] The controlling inquiry is whether the plaintiffs' claim of title, by forfeiture, for nonentry of the land upon the land books for taxation, and transfer of the forfeited title to them by operation of section 3 of article 13 of the Constitution, is well founded.

We have already said this land was never entered upon the land books under the title of Cline or any claimant under that title until 1875. If any forfeiture had occurred prior to 1863, section 4 of article 9 of the Constitution of 1863 released it, since it released "all lands forfeited for the failure of the owners to have the same entered on the land books of the proper county and charged with the taxes chargeable thereon since the year 1831, where the tract does not contain more than one thousand acres." This tract did not contain 1,000 acres. An act of the Legislature, passed on the 24th day of February, 1866 (Acts 1866, c. 66) released "all persons and property, either real or personal, from all liability for taxes of 1861 to 1864, inclusive, in any county in which the same had not been assessed, or, having been assessed, the assessment had not been returned to the auditor's office. In this act there was an exception of lands owned by nonresidents. By section 7 of chapter 125 of the Acts of 1869, it was made the duty of any person owning any real estate to cause the same to be entered upon the land books and charged with taxes, for the year 1832, or any year thereafter, before or after the date of the passage of that act, not released, paid or in any manner discharged. It then provided that "when any person owning real estate has not, or shall not have for five successive years, been charged on such books with taxes on such real estate, the same, and all the title, right and interest of the owner, legal and equitable thereto, shall without any proceeding be absolutely forfeited to and vested in this state. Provided, however, that such owner may within one year after the passage of the said act cause such real estate to be charged with such taxes, chargeable for any such years heretofore, and thereby prevent a forfeiture for the failure so to charge the taxes for such years." This statute is clearly retroactive to and including the year 1865 as to all lands, as well as prospective. It says there shall be a forfeiture when any person owning real estate has not, or, for five successive years, shall not have, been charged with taxes. The preceding clause contains an exception of taxes previously released. Some other exceptions are made by this act; but this case does not fall within any of them. This land was not entered upon the land books at any time between 1865 and 1875, a period of more than five years. Obviously, therefore, the title was forfeited for such omission by the force and effect of this statute.

[2] The title thus forfeited was transferred to and vested in the plaintiffs and those under whom they claim, if they were such persons as are mentioned as eligible transferees in section 3 of article 13 of the Constitution, and had complied with the conditions found in either of the three clauses, creating classes of transferees for the purposes of that section. Clearly they were in possession for more than 10 years after the forfeiture occurred. Their possession was actual and continuous. That forfeiture extinguished the title of Christian Cline. His entire interest became vested in the state. If, therefore, the Smiths, Cadle, and Litz, being in the actual possession of the land for more than 10 years, and paying all the taxes thereon as they did, were such persons as could take the forfeited title by transfer, it clearly vested in them. The first clause of said section says the forfeited title "shall be, and is hereby transferred to, and vested in any person (other than those for whose default the same may have been forfeited or returned delinquent, their heirs or devisees), for so much thereof as such person has or shall have had actual continuous possession of, under color or claim of title for ten years, and who, or those under whom he claims, shall have paid the state taxes thereon for any five years during such possession."

[3] When William Smith obtained his deed from John A. Smith, though it vested no legal title in him, he caused the land to be entered upon the land books and paid the taxes thereon. All of his successors did likewise. Prior to the acquisition of their deeds, they were under no duty to pay the taxes on this land. William Smith, the first grantee, had been under no such duty. The forfeiture did not result from any failure of duty on their part. They paid all taxes accruing after they received their deeds. They were remote assignees of Christian Cline, but not his heirs nor devisees. Hence they are not excluded by the exception. The alleged friendly character of their possession up to the date of the forfeiture does not preclude them from taking title under this clause. It does not require open, notorious, exclusive, and hostile possession. It requires only actual and continuous possession. After the forfeiture there was no title in Christian Cline. They could not be his tenants, nor could they hold either adversely to him or in subordination to his title or for his benefit. All of his previous right, title, and interest in and to the land became vested by the forfeiture in the state. Upon the happening of a forfeiture, the statute of limitations ceases to run between adverse claimants. The forfeiture produces a new order of things. If, before the forfeiture, title has been acquired by adverse possession, the state takes the title forfeited subject to the new title so acquired; but, if there is only one title by grant, and that is forfeited, and no other has been acquired by adverse possession, the title vests in the state free from all claims, and the statute no longer runs as between the parties. "If, at the time of the forfeiture or afterwards, the forfeiture is declared by law to inure to the benefit of the party in possession, a deed subsequently made by the commissioners would of course pass nothing to the purchaser. And so if,

at the time of the forfeiture, the claimants of the title so forfeited had been barred of their right to recover by the long-continued adversary possession of the party holding, under the statute of limitations, the commonwealth would only take the title in the same plight and condition in which the claimants held it, and the commissioners' deed would be inoperative to convey to the purchaser any other or better right to recover. But, if the party in possession had acquired no such rights at the time of the forfeiture, from that time his adversary possession and the statute of limitations must cease to run as against the commonwealth, and the commissioners' deed would pass her title thus acquired unaffected by the continued possession of the party holding with whatever claim of title." Smith v. Chapman, 10 Grat. (Va.) 464. Such being the force and effect of the forfeiture, there could be no adverse possession while the title remained in the state. There was no outstanding title to which subsequent possession could be adverse, and this condition continued until the title again passed out of the state in some way. To obtain a transfer of the forfeited title, therefore, it was only necessary to have "actual and continuous" possession under claim or color of title for ten years and pay taxes for five. The plaintiffs and those under whom they claim had such possession under color of title and paid the taxes. Hence their title is clear.

This conclusion renders it unnecessary either to inquire whether any title vested in them under the Welch patent upon which also they rely, or to determine whether the possession under the title bond, or under the deed from John H. Smith to William Smith and subsequent deeds was adverse to Christian Cline or his heirs, questions extensively discussed in the briefs. The forfeiture and transfer gives them rather an academic character in this case.

In our opinion, the judgment is plainly right and will be affirmed.

BRANNON, J. I concur with Judge POF-FENBARGER that the plaintiffs can recover on title derived from forfeiture. But the question squarely arises: Are they entitled to recover on title derived by adversary possession under the statute of limitations? I am clear that they are. I have always been a strong advocate of a liberal application of the statute of limitations in land matters. It has been about the only panacea for the ills which have afflicted for 100 years all the country in Virginia and West Virginia west of the Alleghany Mountains springing from the many conflicting grants, sometimes three or four deep, on the same land. I am not satisfied with the position that a vendee in actual possession under an executory contract, after he has paid the purchase money and is entitled to a deed, still holds not adversely to his vendor. I assert that it ought to be the law, and is, that such possession is adverse to the vendor. It is said not to be so in Virginia and West Virginia. Not so under the generality of expression in the decisions; but I do not find any actual decision pointedly so holding. True, Judge Snyder, in stating the elements of adverse possession in Core v. Faupel, 24 W. Va. on page 244, did say so; but he was only speaking in a general way, and it was not the point of decision. As far back as Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. Ed. 388, it was held that such possession was not held in privity and for the benefit of the vendor. In Jackson v. Kamp, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 605, whilst it is held that a vendee under executory contract does not hold adversely to the vendor, yet it is said that when he has performed the conditions of his contract his possession is hostile. "After performance of a contract to purchase and an equitable title to a deed to the premises acquired, there is no good reason why the vendee's possession may not become adverse to his vendor." Briggs v. Prosser, 14 Wend. 277. Indeed, an agreement for conveyance, the consideration being paid, has been held to be tantamount to a deed as a foundation for adverse possession. La Frombois v. Jackson, 8 Cow. [N. Y.] 589 [18 Am. Dec. 463]; Clapp v. Bromaghnam, 9 Cow. [N. Y.] 530. These and others are old cases cited in Tyler on Ejectments, 878, 879, 884.

I find in 1 Cyc. 1047, this: "While the law seems to be otherwise in some states, the decided weight of authority is to the effect that a vendee of land in possession under a contract of sale, by parol or in writing, holds adversely to the vendor, from the moment of the payment or performance of the conditions of the contract; and, if this possession is continued for the statutory period, the purchaser acquires title by statute of limitations." "After payment of the purchase money, however, the possession is presumed to be antagonistic to the vendor because all duty to him has been performed, and, if it continues for the necessary period without some act of recognition or of subordination to the legal estate of the vendor, his right to action is barred." 1 Am. & Eng. Ency. L. 801, and cases cited. See, also, 1 Cyc. 1046. I observe in the very late work, 2 Ency. L. & P. 450, the following: "After the vendee has performed the conditions of the contract or bond for title and has become entitled to a conveyance, it is well settled that his continued possession will be deemed adverse to the vendor, in the absence of any recognition of the latter's title." A vast array of authorities is there cited for this proposition. Warvelle on Vendors, § 187, after stating that possession by a vendee is not adverse to the vendor, adds: "The full payment of the purchase price, however, removes the reason for the rule; and hence, where the consideration is paid and the owner consents that the purchaser may enter and hold the land as his own, such entry and possession cannot be deemed subordinate to the title of the vendor, but is adverse, and a practical disseisin. And it is immaterial, in a case of the kind, whether the contract be in writing or by parol, for the vendee, having discharged all pecuniary duty to the vendor, becomes clothed with an equity which renders his possession antagonistic both to the vendor and to strangers. If such possession is continued for the statutory period, it will form a complete bar to the vendor's right of entry or action." To Schafer v. Hanser, 111 Mich. 622, 70 N. W. 136, 35 L. R. A. 835, 66 Am. St. Rep. 403, holding that possession under a parol promise of a gift is adverse, is a note saying that "the doctrine almost universally accepted now is that one who enters by virtue of a parol gift, claiming as owner, continues for the statutory period in open, exclusive, adverse, and uninterrupted possession thereby acquires perfect title," citing a host of cases.

I therefore hold that the plaintiff, without regard to the deed purporting to convey the legal title from John H. Smith to William Smith, became vested with legal title by adversary possession under the title bond, and, having legal title acquired by adverse possession under the statute, was entitled on that ground to recovery in this action. It is the law almost everywhere. As pertinent to this subject, I will ask: Where is the reason for saying that a vendee who has paid his purchase money and is entitled to a deed is not in possession adverse to the vendor? What interest has the vendor in the land? Whose possession is it? The statute (Code 1906, c. 90, § 20) says that a vendor cannot at law recover possession from his vendee. This makes the possession that of the vendee, not of the vendor. It is the vendee's exclusive possession. One in possession under a title bond who has paid the purchase money is a freeholder. Helmondollar's Case, 4 Grat. (Va.) 536; Cunningham's Case, 6 Grat. (Va.) 695. And I observe to-day for the first time that the Supreme Court of the United States away back in 1836 said this: "Equity makes the vendor without deed a trustee to the vendee, for the conveyance of the title; the vendee is a trustee for the payment of the purchase money and the performance of the terms of the purchase. But a vendee is in no case a trustee for the vendor, as to the possession of the property sold; the vendee claims and holds it in his own right, for his own benefit, subject to no right of the vendor, save the terms which the contract imposes; his possession is therefore adverse as to the property, but friendly as to the performance of the conditions of the purchase." Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. Ed. 388. With much more force can we say so under the statute which I have mentioned. The purchase money was paid in this case.

It occurs to me to be a very refined doctrine, very technical, that in this case, where there was a possession of more than 50 years, the defendants can come in and claim this land—a peaceable possession—from which the law would presume a deed. Riffe v. Skinner, 67 W. Va. 75, 89, 67 S. E. 1075, and many cases cited. The title of the plaintiffs ought to be in peace after so great a stretch of time.

Another theory touching the statute of limitations: I incline to the opinion, pretty decidedly incline, aside from possession under the title bond, that, after Smith conveyed to Smith in 1873, the possession under that deed was adverse to the vendor and those claiming under him. It was a deed purporting to convey the legal title, and did not possession under it give notice of adverse claim? It so strikes me. Point 5 in Pickens v. Stout, 67 W. Va. 422, 68 S. E. 354, says that, if one tenant in common by executory contract or deed conveying title sell to a stranger, that stranger is entitled to the benefit of adverse possession by open, notorious, and exclusive possession. Surely as much so where one holding under a title bond makes a deed purporting to convey legal title. Smith and those under him have been in such possession under that deed 29 years. Why have they not good title under that deed by adverse possession? The statute runs against the state under Code 1906, c. 85, § 20.

(69 W. Va. 34)

EDINGER v. SOUTHERN OIL CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
March 14, 1911. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 99*)—MINING PARTNERSHIP—POWERS OF PARTNERS OWNING MAJORITY INTEREST.

Mining partners, owning the majority interest, and controlling the operations on a mining lease, have no right, without their consent, to sell and convey the interest of their co-partners, or co-lessees, in the lease, or in the product thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 99.*]

2. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 99*)—MINING PARTNERSHIP—ACCOUNTING.

But if such managing partners, on obtaining a gas well, in good faith, and for the benefit of all concerned, and for the purpose of obtaining a test of the caliber and persistency of such well, make a temporary agreement with a local gas company, to connect with the well, and take and commingle the gas therefrom with gas from other wells and to sell the same to its customers, at a monthly rental deemed reasonable by them, such managing and controlling partners having no interest in the said gas company, or in the profits to be derived by it from the sale of such gas, should not, in accounting with their co-partners for the gas used by them from such gas well, be chargeable with the price which such gas company received, or the value thereof at the point of delivery to its customers, but only for what it actually and in good faith received from the gas company therefor, and the value of any gas used by them elsewhere, the rules obtaining in general partnerships being properly applicable in such cases.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 99.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Harrison County.

Bill by Henry H. Edinger against the Southern Oil Company and others. From the decree, the mentioned defendant appeals. Reversed and rendered.

John Bassel, Charles N. Kimball, and Eugene Mackey, for appellant. Davis & Davis, for appellee.

MILLER, J. Originally plaintiff's right to the relief prayed for, or to any relief, was put in issue by the pleadings and proofs; but on this appeal it is conceded that by decree of April 30, 1907, these rights were finally adjudicated, and that the questions here presented must be governed by the principles of that decree. Thereby it was adjudged and decreed that plaintiff "is the owner of an equal one-eighth part of the working interest in and to all the gas or oil produced from the premises in the bill described, and as such is entitled to an accounting from" the defendants, Southern Oil Company, and Reserve Gas Company, "for any and all gas used therefrom by them or either of them"; and the cause was thereby also referred to a commissioner to state such an account according to direction given and to report the same to the court.

This appeal is from the final decree below, on said report, and the several exceptions of the parties thereto, pronounced on October 29, 1909, whereby said report was modified and reformed in certain particulars, and thereon as so modified and reformed, it was adjudged and decreed "that the total value of the gas marketed from the well in controversy during the period in suit was $104,733.75; that the cost of such marketing was $8,500.00; that the plaintiff Edinger is entitled in this suit to recover a sum equal to one-eighth of the net value of the gas so marketed; that he is likewise chargeable with $728.60, being his proportionate share or rentals paid, and that there is accordingly due to said Edinger from the defendant Southern Oil Company, as of the 1st day of June, 1902, the sum of $11,300.62"; and whereby it was accordingly further "adjudged, ordered and decreed that the defendant Southern Oil Company do pay to the plaintiff the sum of $16,269.07, with interest thereon from the date of this decree until paid and the costs of this suit."

The gas in controversy was the product of a well on the Thomas Thompson land, in Harrison County, under a lease to the Southern Oil Company, obtained June 6, 1899, but which the decree of April 30, 1907, held subject to the prior contract between the oil company and plaintiff relating to other leases and the operation thereof by said company, dated June 2, 1899.

The parties to said contract, as clearly appears from its terms, contemplated only the discovery of oil and operations of the leases therefor. Wherefore the special provisions mentioning oil. But gas, and not oil, was found in the Thompson well, the first drilled, and the one in controversy. It is urged, however, and correctly no doubt, that the provisions of the contract apply also to gas. It is true as argued that no provision is found specifically providing that the Southern Oil Company shall have power to market the oil. The contract does specifically provide, however, that the oil company shall control the operations and management of the property, and that in the event, the oil company, after drilling the first two wells, in order to protect the leases, shall be required to put down wells faster than plaintiff can pay for his share of the cost thereof, the oil company agrees to carry the cost thereof, for plaintiff, "the same to be paid for out of the production, which would be coming and payable or deliverable to the interest of said Edinger until such time as the amount of oil or its value shall equal the liability of said Edinger for the cost of his interest so carried." And the first condition of the contract is: "That the said Southern Oil Company, in developing said leases, or any of them for oil, shall as to the first two wells that may be put down upon any one of said leases, or one well on each lease of any two, shall carry a working interest therein to the extent of one-eighth undivided to the said H. H. Edinger free of compensation or cost to him whatever, with the right to him to take and receive one-eighth of the net production of said well or wells not exceeding two as aforesaid, other than the actual one-eighth cost of operating said wells after they are bored to the producing sand, and producing sand for the purpose of said well unless oil is obtained at a lesser depth shall be bored to what is known in that territory as the fifth sand." This provision clearly contemplates the production of oil only. So little was gas or the production thereof thought of that it is not mentioned in the contract and no provision made for disposing of it, if it should be found.

Shortly after bringing in this gas well on the Thompson farm, in 1900, and after testing it for oil at a still greater depth, on the request or demand of plaintiff without success, the Southern Oil Company, as the uncontradicted evidence shows, in order to get a test of the capacity and persistency of the well, and without other means of doing so, agreed with the Flaggy Meadow Gas Company, a small company, owning some forty miles of pipe, engaged in supplying gas locally to local drillers and operators in the oil field, that it might hitch on to the Thompson well, and temporarily use the gas therefrom. The result was a temporary agreement between the oil company, and the gas company, by which the latter company was to pay the former for the use of the gas used and to be used, one hundred dollars per month while it remained connected with the well, and to furnish the oil company with free gas to drill wells on the Smith farm. This agreement continued in force from February 2, 1900, to February 18, 1902, covering the period from the time the gas company first began to take gas until it was cut off on the latter date, a period of two years and sixteen days. During that time the gas from the Thompson well was run into the pipe line with gas from numerous other wells owned or controlled by the gas company and in which the oil company had no interest whatever. The value of the gas used by the oil company on the Smith farm is proven to have been $1,200.00, and a little gas sold by the oil company after February 18, 1902, to Phoenix and O'Gara, is proven to have brought $700.00. For all the gas sold and so used by the oil company it realized for the gas sold the Flaggy Meadow Gas Company, $2,500.00; used on the Smith farm, $1,200.00, and sold to Phoenix and O'Gara, $700.00, total $4,400.00.

It is evident from the record that Edinger knew from the beginning of the agreement with the Flaggy Meadow Gas Company, and made no objection thereto. There is some evidence that some time during the summer after the agreement was made he made some complaint to Mowris, in charge for the oil company, that he was not receiving his part of the receipts from the well, evidently referring to the oil company's receipts, for the oil company had no interest in the gas company, or in its receipts, and there is no evidence that Edinger pretended at that time to have any interest in the gas company's receipts, or that he made demand upon it therefor. It was not until after the gas company cut loose from the well in February, 1902, that Edinger began making his demands on the oil company for a share of the amount realized by the gas company, from the sale of the gas to its customers, resulting finally in the institution of this suit, and the decree of April 30, 1907.

The Southern Oil Company does not deny its liability under said decree to account to Edinger for the gas used by it from said Thompson well or the amount realized by it from the sale thereof to the gas company and others, aggregating said sum of $4,400.00, but Edinger claims and the court below has decreed to him an amount equal to one eighth of the value of 2,056,675.113 cubic feet, estimated production from the well during the period covered by the contract with the gas company, at five cents per one thousand cubic feet, and a like one eighth interest in the value of the gas used by the oil company on the Smith farm, and the amount sold Phoenix and O'Gara, less $728.60, balance due the oil company from Edinger for rentals paid for him on said leases.

The numerous exceptions to the commissioner's report and the several assignments of error present for our decision on this appeal, the single question, what is the correct basis of settlement between the parties under the decree of April 30, 1907, and the law of the contract governing them. Appellant of course contended that the settlement should be made upon the rules and principles governing mining partnerships. It claims that owning the majority interest in the Thompson well it had the legal right to make the agreement with the gas company, and temporarily dispose of the gas as it did, and should account to Edinger only for what it actually realized from the gas company, and which it used, and what it afterwards sold to others. On the other hand Edinger contends, and the court so decreed, that the oil company should account to him, for the one-eighth of the net amount which the gas company realized for the gas marketed through its pipe lines, on the principle that the oil company was a wrong doer, in so disposing of the gas without Edinger's consent, and in allowing the gas company to confuse the gas from the Thompson well with gas from other wells, and to sell it without keeping any account of the production, and that whether the oil company be treated as mining partner of Edinger, with controlling interest, or as co-tenant, its liability is the same, the rights and powers of a mining partner only authorizing him "to do what may be necessary and proper for carrying on the business, and control the work, in case all cannot agree, provided the exercise of such power is necessary and proper for carrying on the enterprise for the benefit of all concerned." The oil company does not controvert the latter proposition, and as applicable here, except in so far as its authority may have been enlarged by special contract. The proposition stated is the law of mining partnerships as declared by this court in Childers v. Neely, 47 W. Va. 74, 34 S. E. 828, 49 L. R. A. 468, 81 Am. St. Rep. 777; Blackmarr v. Williamson, 57 W. Va. 252, 50 S. E. 254; Kirchner v. Smith, 61 W. Va. 444, 58 S. E. 614; Greenlee v. Steelsmith, 64 W. Va. 353, 62 S. E. 459, all in consonance with many decisions of other states, and the leading text-books on the subject, and cited and relied on in the briefs of counsel.

At once we realize we have for decision a very close case, on the question of power to sell the gas. We give no force, however, to the theories of counsel for Edinger, of fraud or intentional wrong doing on the part of the oil company, or of any of its officers, in disposing of the gas to the gas company. None of them had the slightest interest in the gas company, or the profits realized by it from marketing the gas. They had seven-eighths, Edinger but one-eighth interest to conserve and protect. The officers of the oil company appear to have been successful and experienced operators. They evidently did what they thought they had the right to do and what they thought was for the benefit of all concerned, else they would have been voluntarily sacrificing their own large interests along with those of Edinger, which is inconceivable. Then there is strong evidence that Edinger agreed with Barnsdall, in the presence of Mowris, to release to the oil company his interest in the gas as a consideration for drilling the Thompson well deeper. Their evidence of this fact, and the evidence of other witnesses of Edinger's subsequent admissions, we think, would undoubtedly have prevailed over Edinger's denials, if Barnsdall for the oil company, by mistake, he says, had not in December, 1902, in transferring to Edinger his interest in the Thompson well, omitted to reserve the gas rights.

[1] We entirely agree with the learned counsel for Edinger that the rights of mining partners partake so nearly of the rights of cotenants that the majority interest, in case of disagreement, would have no right to sell and convey away the interest of a minority holder in a mining lease. Our decisions and the law on that subject would deny such authority. And we entirely agree with counsel, and with Stone v. Marshall Oil Co., 208 Pa. 85, 57 Atl. 183, 85 L. R. A. 219, 101 Am. St. Rep. 904, and Mining Co. v. Mining Co., 11 Colo. 223, 17 Pac. 760, 7 Am. St. Rep. 232, cited and relied on by them, that if an assignee of an oil lease, or a mining partner, in order to avoid accounting with his assignor, or with his partner, fraudulently commingles the gas product of a joint well with the product of other wells, without keeping account, or any record of the amount produced, from the joint well, he should be compelled, on the principles applicable in case of fraudulent confusion of goods, to account for the proportionate part of the whole amount of the gas produced and sold, called for by the contract.

In Stone v. Marshall, the owners of a lease, sublet a part of the leased premises to the Marshall Oil Company, with right to drill and operate for oil and gas for one year and as much longer as oil and gas should be found in paying quantities, the oil company covenanting to drill four wells within the time stipulated. The stipulation of the assignment relating to the gas was: "It is also agreed that in case gas shall be discovered and conducted off the premises for use or sale, the said parties of the first part in the proportionate interests aforesaid, shall receive one-fourth of the profits thereof above cost bonus of $700.00 to the original lessor." This assignment was duly admitted to record, and notice thereby given to the world of its provisions; binding all subsequent purchasers. The Marshall Oil Company drilling one well, a very strong gas well. It did not utilize the gas but sold it to the Washington Oil Company, another defendant. Thereafter it induced the original lessor to execute a new lease covering his whole farm, and by it and subsequent agreements to reduce the annual rent for gas wells first to $600.00, then to $500.00, and then subleased an additional portion of the farm to the Washington Oil Company. The latter company thereafter transferred the gas to the Taylorstown Natural Gas Company, practically a selling company for it. Later the Marshall Oil Company and the Washington Oil Company drilled other wells on the leased premises, and got gas which they turned into a common pipe line, with the gas from the first well and sold and delivered it to pipe line customers and refused to account to the assignors of the Washington Oil Company, according to the contract of that company with them. This was a plain case for the application of the principle, enunciated by the court, based on fraud and the fraudulent confusion of the goods, so as to deprive plaintiffs of their rights. But it does not seem to us we have any such a case presented here. The case cited was originally before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in 1898, and is reported in 188 Pa. 602, 41 Atl. 748, 1119. The principles governing it were then adjudicated. Referring to the provision of the contract reserving a part of the oil and the covenant above quoted, providing for a proportionate share of the profits realized from the sale of the gas the court says, that this provision was the "foundation of the suit." And it is said of the assignment of the plaintiffs to the Marshall Oil Company, containing the said provisions: "It is a sub-sublease, and as such subject to all the covenants of the original lease," and that the covenants therein were covenants running with the land, binding defendants.

[2] In the case at bar we have no such conditions. There is not a particle of evidence connecting the Southern Oil Company in interest with the gas company, except only in the matter of furnishing gas for drilling on the Smith farm. But no fraud was intended in this. Besides the oil company admits its liability therefor and has been charged with the value of that gas. The sale to the gas company was not intended to defraud plaintiff in any way, but done for the purposes already noted. The oil company had no gas lines, or means of marketing the gas. The gas company was a small local concern, and so far as the evidence shows the only customer to whom the gas could be sold, or who could make the tests desired. The evidence shows, however, that its small plant had involved an investment of $50,000.00. The only way those interested had of marketing the gas, as conditions then existed, was to either build a pipe line or to sell the gas well as a whole. The managing partners thought no doubt that by making a test of the well, was the way of obtaining a purchaser; and in the interest of all concerned, adopted the method complained of. We think this was within the power covered by the contract, if not by the general law controlling mining partners. There is no evidence showing that a better bargain could have been made. If defendant's act was wrongful and fraudulent it was wrong and fraud working no real wrong to him, but hurtful in a degree unheard of to the oil company, if we should allow the decree in Edinger's favor to stand against it. This we cannot consent to do. The amount of this decree, according to the evidence, is twice as much as the whole interest in such a gas well could then have been sold for, as conditions then were, or even now are. The majority had rights to protect as well as Edinger. As was said in Stone v. Marshall Oil company, supra. A share of the gas could not like oil be delivered in specie at the well, or elsewhere, the only way of sharing it, being in the proceeds of the sale. We think the oil company had the power to make suitable tests, and that the contract with the gas company was reasonably within their power.

Conceding that the oil company may not have acted with the best judgment in making the contract with the gas company, we think the law applicable to general partnerships, applicable to the facts in this case. That law is that good faith obtaining, the interests of the majority shall not be rendered liable for improvident contracts. Loss due merely to lack of discretion or judgment, not amounting to negligence or bad faith, will not put the loss all upon the interests of those responsible therefor. In such cases it must fall on all the partners as a firm. This doctrine is fully supported by numerous authorities cited and relied on by counsel for appellants. 22 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, 128; Snell v. De Land, 136 Ill. 533, 27 N. E. 183; Bank v. Gardner, 104 Iowa, 176, 73 N. W. 591; Charlton v. Sloan, 76 Iowa, 288, 41 N. W. 303; Caldwell v. Leiber, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 483; Peters v. McWilliams, 78 Va. 567.

Our conclusion, already indicated, is that the decree below is erroneous; is based on wrong principles, and should be reversed, set aside and annulled; that in settlement with Edinger appellant Southern Oil Company should be charged with $550.00, an eighth part of $4,400.00, the gross amount realized by it from the sale of gas to the gas company, and other gas used or sold by it, and credited with the balance due it from Edinger, $728.60, leaving a balance in its favor of $178.60, for which it should have a decree against Edinger, with its costs incurred in this court. A decree will be entered here in accordance with this finding.

BRANNON, J., absent.

(89 W. Va. 276)

MAXWELL v. DAVIS TRUST CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BANKRUPTCY (§ 20*)—JURISDICTION OF STATE COURT.

A state court of competent jurisdiction may enforce actionable rights under the federal bankruptcy law, as well as may a federal court that also has jurisdiction in the premises.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

2. BANKRUPTCY (§ 166*)—"PREFERENCE."

Payments of money by a bankrupt to creditors, enabling them to obtain a greater percentage of their debts than other creditors of the same class, made within four months prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition, constitute illegal and voidable preferences under the federal bankruptcy act, if the creditors receiving the payments have reasonable cause to believe that preferences are thereby intended.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 166.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 6, pp. 5495, 5499; vol. 8, p. 7759.]

3. BANKRUPTCY (§ 295*)—TRUSTEE—RIGHT TO SUE IN STATE COURT—RECOVERY OF PREFERENCES.

A trustee in bankruptcy may sue in the courts of this state to recover money preferentially paid by a bankrupt to creditors contrary to the federal bankruptcy law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

4. BANKRUPTCY (§ 295*)—RECOVERY OF PREFERENCES—ACTIONS IN STATE COURT—PROCEDURE.

When a trustee in bankruptcy resorts to the state court to recover money preferentially paid contrary to the bankruptcy law, the jurisdiction and practice are governed by the law of the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 46*)—JURISDICTION—ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW.

Equity does not have jurisdiction of cases in which the plaintiff has a full, complete, and adequate remedy at law, unless some peculiar feature of the case comes within the province of a court of equity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 151, 152, 157, 159-163; Dec. Dig. § 46.*]

6. BANKRUPTCY (§ 287*)—RECOVERY OF PREFERENTIAL PAYMENTS—RIGHT TO SUE IN EQUITY.

A bill in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy does not lie to recover payments constituting preferences, when no ground of general equity jurisdiction is alleged, and no necessity for equitable relief is shown. The case is one for an action at law as for money had and received.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 287.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Randolph County.

Bill by C. W. Maxwell, trustee in bankruptcy, against the Davis Trust Company and others. A demurrer to the bill was sustained, and plaintiff appeals. Modified and affirmed.

James A. Bent, for appellant. Samuel T. Spears and Talbott & Hoover, for appellees.

ROBINSON, J. Plaintiff is a trustee in bankruptcy. Defendants are creditors to whom the bankrupt paid debts in cash within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and at a time when defendants knew the bankrupt to be insolvent. By this equity suit in the state court, plaintiff seeks to recover from defendants the sums so paid, for the benefit of the bankrupt estate. It is alleged that the payments constitute illegal and voidable preferences, recoverable by the trustee, under the national bankruptcy act. On demurrer, the circuit court dismissed the bill. Was that dismissal proper?

Defendants say that the bill cannot be maintained, because the acts alleged do not constitute illegal preferences under the statutes of this state. They also say that, even if preferences unlawful by the state law appeared, the allegations are insufficient to make a case for the setting aside of the same. It is true that the bill does not present a case of preferences forbidden by state law. Mere payments of money in satisfaction of bona fide pre-existing debts are not declared to be preferences under the insolvency laws of West Virginia. But may not plaintiff invoke the aid of the state court for the recovery of rights arising to him by the provisions of the national bankruptcy law? The bill expressly rests the demand for relief on rights arising under the bankruptcy act. It does not invoke a remedy by state law.

[3] That a trustee in bankruptcy may sue in the state court to set aside preferences declared unlawful by the bankruptcy act, or to recover money or property transferred as a preference contrary to the provisions of that act, is settled. This right to proceed in the state forum is clearly pronounced in the terms of the act itself, and is fully recognized in the federal and state decisions. When the state court is appealed to, however, the laws and rules of that court pertaining to jurisdiction, form of action, pleading, and practice must control. The Circuit Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, in Westfall v. Avery, 171 Fed. 626, 96 C. C. A. 428, says: "A proceeding instituted by a bankrupt's trustee to set aside fraudulent conveyances or illegal preferences is not a proceeding in bankruptcy, but, while ancillary to such proceeding and authorized by the bankrupt act to be instituted in either the federal District Court or in a state court of competent jurisdiction, it must be governed, so far as pleading and practice is concerned, by the laws and rules of the court wherein it is instituted."

[4] The Supreme Court of Michigan, in Detroit Trust Co. v. Old National Bank, 155 Mich. 61, 118 N. W. 729, holds: "When a trustee in bankruptcy resorts to a state court to recover payments constituting a preference, as authorized by the bankruptcy law, the jurisdiction and practice are governed by the law of the state in which the suit is brought."

[1] The state court of competent jurisdiction may enforce rights under the bankruptcy law as well as may some federal court that also has jurisdiction in the premises. The bankruptcy act is the law of the land. It is binding on all courts. The state courts have full power to enforce its mandates in all proceedings properly before them. "Where rights conferred by the peculiar provisions of the bankruptcy act are involved, such rights are cognizable in the state court and the state court will enforce the bankrupt law wherever applicable." Remington on Bankruptcy, § 1687.

[2] The allegations of the bill present a case disclosing preferences that are clearly illegal and voidable under the bankruptcy law. Payments of money, though not expressly mentioned in the act, have been held to constitute preferences. Carson, Pirie et al. v. Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171. They have been held to come within the meaning of "transfers." Remington on Bankruptcy, § 1331. If a payment is made within four months prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition, for the purpose of enabling a creditor "to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class," and the creditor receiving the payment has reasonable cause to believe a preference is thereby intended, it is a voidable preference. The trustee may recover the money for the benefit of the bankrupt estate. If the creditor who receives the payment of his debt has intent in the transaction to deplete the trust fund in order to obtain satisfaction of the whole or a part of his own claim, the payment is an illegal preference. Just such a case is made by the bill in the case under consideration.

[5] But, as we have seen, the remedy for the recovery of the property or money transferred as an illegal preference must be governed by the law of the forum in which suit is instituted for that recovery. Plaintiff sues in equity. Can a preference under the bankruptcy act be avoided by such suit under the law and practice of this state? Clearly so, if the preference is by the transfer of title to property, such as a conveyance or bill of sale. Suits in equity are proper in cases of that character because they are more adequate and efficacious than actions at law. Equity must be called upon to set aside and avoid the illegal memorial of transfer. But is the equity forum the proper one when the preference to be avoided is one growing out of a mere voidable payment of money? Is not a suit at law to recover that money quite as adequate and effective a remedy as the trustee in bankruptcy needs to accomplish all that is due to him? Will not a suit at law itself completely avoid the preference? If plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, he is barred from equity procedure. The bankruptcy act gives the trustee the right to recover the money—vests in the trustee title to the money that has been preferentially paid.

The bankruptcy law says that the creditor has only received the money for the use of the trustee. Then may not the trustee most effectively sue for it by the ordinary action at law as for money had and received? What more can equity give him in such case than law?

[6] The bill in this case presents only a demand for mere pecuniary claims. It asks nothing but a decree for money, simply because that money is legally due plaintiff. It presents absolutely no ground of equity cognizance. It makes no case of fraud; for the preference alleged is merely an unlawful one, not a fraudulent one. It seeks no accounting or discovery in relation to that which plaintiff claims, nor does it pretend to show any necessity for such equitable proceedings. No record or memorial in relation to the transfer is sought to be cancelled and annulled. Not a single recognized ground of equity cognizance is relied on to sustain the resort to equity. The bill, in substance, alleges an indebtedness to the trustee and seeks to recover the amount thereof. It avers the exact amount that each of the defendants received and owes, and the date that he received it. Actions at law lie against each of them, and afford a complete remedy to recover the money. The doctrine that equity may be invoked to save a multiplicity of suits cannot apply.

That an action at law is the proper procedure in such a case as the one presented in the bill, is established by Laidley v. Laidley, 25 W. Va. 525, and Teter, Adm'r, v. Teter, 65 W. Va. 167, 63 S. E. 967. In the latter of these cases, it is held: "Ordinarily a court of law is the proper forum in which to establish a debt. For equity to interpose, there must be something more than a mere claim or demand; there must appear some equity in relation to such claim or demand—something remedial to plaintiff that the law does not give."

The precise point now under consideration was before the Supreme Court of Michigan, in a case exactly like this one—a suit in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover money preferentially paid creditors. Detroit Trust Co. v. Old National Bank, supra. The demurrer to the bill was sustained. It was held: "Equity does not take jurisdiction of cases where a suitor has a full, complete, and adequate remedy at law, unless it is shown that there is some feature of the case peculiarly within the province of a court of equity."

In New York, when a trustee in bankruptcy seeks a money judgment only, to cover an amount alleged to have been paid as a preference, the action is one at law. Cohn, Trustee, v. Small, 120 App. Div. 211, 105 N. Y. Supp. 287; Merritt v. Halliday, 107 App. Div. 596, 95 N. Y. Supp. 331; Stern v. Mayer, 99

App. Div. 427, 91 N. Y. Supp. 292; Coudert v. Jarvis, 188 N. Y. 584, 81 N. E. 1162.

It is true that there are federal cases holding that an equity suit is appropriate, but they do not appear to be based on careful consideration of the subject. Pond v. Bank (D. C.) 124 Fed. 992, relies on Wall v. Cox, 101 Fed. 403, 41 C. C. A. 408. The latter case was one growing out of a fraudulent sale of property, not a mere preferential payment. Of course fraud was a basis of equity jurisdiction. Then, Parker v. Black (D. C.) 143 Fed. 560, seems to have been decided on the authority of the Pond and Wall Cases, and Bardes v. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175. There is nothing in the latter case to make it an authority on the point. Besides, the case of Parker v. Black was one for an accounting, the opinion says, thus having a recognized basis for equity procedure. On appeal, Parker v. Black was affirmed on the point that jurisdiction was in equity, 151 Fed. 18, 80 C. C. A. 484, but the Circuit Court of Appeals said that it would have been of different opinion if the question had been originally presented. That court cites the Wall Case and Off v. Hakes, 142 Fed. 364, 73 C. C. A. 464, as binding on the point. It seems to have overlooked the fact that the Wall Case was properly a suit in equity for an accounting. The Off Case does not reach the point. That case was justified in equity because the surrender or cancellation of a note was involved. But it is useless further to review federal cases in this connection. They cannot control the established policy and procedure in the courts of this state, even if any of them squarely and considerately meet the point. None that we have observed do so. The settled law of this state is that a mere money demand cannot be recovered by an equity suit when there is no feature of the case peculiarly within the province of a court of equity—when the remedy at law is complete, adequate, and efficacious.

The demurrer to the bill was properly sustained. But the right to institute suits at law on the claims of the trustee in bankruptcy against the preferred creditors should have been saved by a reservation in the decree. The decree will now here be modified in that particular. As so modified, the decree will be affirmed, with costs to the appellee.

(99 W. Va. 319)

STATE v. BELCHER.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1069*)—WRIT OF ERROR—PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER—TIME—WRIT OF ERROR TO CRIMINAL COURT.

Section 16 of chapter 6 of the Acts of the Legislature, passed at the extraordinary session of 1908, creating a criminal court for the county of Mingo, provides the manner of obtaining an appeal or writ of error to the circuit court of said county from the judgment of the criminal court, and concludes as follows: "Provided, however, no such appeal, writ of error or supersedeas to said court shall be allowed unless the petition therefor be presented in six months from the date of such judgment or order." Held: (1) The circuit court has no power to award a writ of error to a judgment of said criminal court unless application therefor be made within six months from the date of the judgment. (2) It is not error for the circuit court to dismiss a writ of error which had been awarded by the judge in vacation more than six months after the date of the judgment of said criminal court. (3) This court cannot review the judgment and rulings of said criminal court when the writ of error to the circuit court was not applied for in time, or when it was properly dismissed after it had been awarded too late.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 1039.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Mingo County.

Columbus Belcher was convicted of murder, and he brings error. Affirmed.

F. H. Evans, for plaintiff in error. Wm. G. Conley, Atty. Gen., and J. O. Henson, for the State.

WILLIAMS, P. Columbus Belcher was convicted by a jury of his peers in the criminal court of Mingo county for the murder of one Kirtus Carter, and on the 4th of June, 1909, sentenced to death. On the 1st of February, 1910, in vacation, he obtained from the judge of the circuit court of Mingo county a writ of error, which the court, in term, on the 11th of March, 1910, dismissed as having been "improvidently awarded and granted because the petition for said writ of error and supersedeas was not presented within the time required by law." Thereupon defendant obtained a writ of error to this court on the 31st of May, 1910.

[1] The only question which we can inquire into is whether the circuit court erred in dismissing the writ of error to the judgment of the criminal court of Mingo county. The criminal court of that county was created by chapter 6 of the acts passed by the Legislature at the extraordinary session of 1908. It confers upon that court jurisdiction to try and determine criminal cases, whether misdemeanors or felonies. Section 15 of the act authorizes appeals and writs of error to the circuit court of the county from the judgments, rulings, and orders of the criminal court in cases involving the "freedom of a person or the constitutionality of a law." Section 16 provides the manner of applying to the circuit court or the judge in vacation for appeals and writs of error, and concludes with this important proviso: "Provided, however, no such appeal, writ of error or supersedeas to said court shall be allowed unless the petition therefor be presented in six months from the date of such judgment or order." The right and power of the Legislature to provide the manner of appeals, and to prescribe a reasonable time within which applications therefor shall be made, is unquestionable. Six months is not an unreasonably short time within which to apply for an appeal or writ of error. Final sentence in this case was pronounced by the criminal court on June 4, 1909; and the defendant did not make application to the circuit court, or to the judge thereof, for a writ of error until February 1, 1910. This was nearly eight months after the date of the judgment. There was therefore no jurisdiction in the circuit court to award the writ of error. The right of appeal was then barred by limitation. It therefore necessarily follows that the circuit court did not err in dismissing the writ of error as having been improvidently awarded by the judge in vacation.

Finding no error in the judgment of the circuit court dismissing the writ of error, we have no jurisdiction to enter upon a review of the trial of the case in the criminal court. But, even if we were permitted to do so, we could not say that the criminal court erred in refusing to set aside the verdict and grant defendant a new trial, because the evidence is not made a part of the record by bill of exceptions. We have, however, taken the pains to read the evidence appearing in the record, although it is not legally made a part of it, for the purpose of satisfying our consciences on the questions whether a fellowman may not have been convicted and sentenced to death on insufficient or improper evidence, and whether he may not have lost his right of appeal by neglect or mistake of his counsel; and we do not hesitate to say that if the evidence which we find in the printed record is the evidence on which defendant was tried, and if we were authorized to review it, we could not say that the evidence does not warrant the severe verdict which the jury found. But we do not mean to intimate by this observation upon the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant the verdict that we would or could have done otherwise than affirm the judgment of the circuit court, if we had thought the evidence insufficient to warrant the verdict.

The judgment will be affirmed.

(69 W. Va. 305)

AILES et al. v. HALLAM et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EASEMENTS (§ 12*)—CONSTRUCTION—RIGHT OF WAY.

A deed executed by a number of adjoining and neighboring property owners in a community partially laid out in town lots, for the purpose of establishing certain roads for their common benefit, conveying the fee-simple title of the strips of land constituting the roads to two of their number, and securing to the grantees and all the other parties thereto the right to use the roads "as a right of way for all purposes as completely as if they were a public street," confers upon all the parties thereto and their successors in title the right to free and wholly unobstructed use of such roads.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

2. EASEMENTS (§ 12*)—CONSTRUCTION BY CONDUCT.

The terms of such a deed being plain and unequivocal and its purpose clear, the existence of gates on such roads at the date of the deed and the subsequent maintenance thereof do not alter the construction by conduct. The rule of practical construction is not applicable to an unambiguous instrument.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

3. EASEMENTS (§ 5*)—TITLE OR RIGHT ACQUIRED—RIGHT TO MAINTAIN GATES ACROSS PRIVATE WAY.

Right to maintain a gate across a private way may be obtained by prescription.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

4. TENANCY IN COMMON (§ 3*)—RIGHTS IN RIGHT OF WAY.

A right of way vested in a number of adjoining and neighboring property owners makes them tenants in common of such way.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tenancy in Common, Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

5. TENANCY IN COMMON (§ 15*)—HOSTILE CHARACTER OF POSSESSION—ACTS OF TENANTS IN COMMON.

If one of such persons maintain a gate or gates across such a way without notice to his cotenants of any claim of right to do so, his exercise of such privilege is deemed to have been permissive, and not adverse.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tenancy in Common, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-52; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Jefferson County.

Bill by Milton E. Ailes and others against W. F. Hallam and others. Decree for plaintiffs, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Faulkner, Walker & Woods, for appellants. Forrest W. Brown, for appellees.

POFFENBARGER, J. The decree complained of here enjoins the maintenance of gates upon certain private ways, and the correctness thereof involves the construction of a deed, and an inquiry as to a claim of a prescriptive easement or right to maintain them.

Near the towns of Bolivar and Harpers Ferry, in Jefferson county, on a high ridge between the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers, certain lands owned by a corporation known as the "President and Trustees of Storer College," and adjacent lands owned by individuals, were some years ago partially sold out in small tracts with a view to the location thereon of summer residences. The first sale, embracing 18.1 acres, was made to one Col. Whitman, who erected a costly residence on it, known as the "Scottish Castle." The present owner of this piece of land is one of the defendants, Mrs. Mary Van Dake Hallam. Other sales of smaller portions of the land were subsequently made to other persons, Mary G. Moore, Emmett Truitt, Louise C. Goodman, F. M. Pennock, and one Judge Vale, now deceased. On the northern side of the Whitman property, an avenue known as Whitman avenue was laid out. Through it runs another avenue known as Prospect avenue. Neither of these was ever dedicated or opened as a public highway. Gates were maintained across them from the first.

[1] On the 22d day of May, 1895, all of the persons interested in the lands adjacent to these roads executed a deed, a recited purpose of which was to make some changes in the plat, according to which the lands had been sold, and particularly to designate certain rights of way through the lands, to be enjoyed by the several owners thereof with respect to Prospect and Whitman avenues as indicated on said plat. It further recited that the change in the plat had been made; that the parties had agreed that Prospect avenue, between two designated points, and Whitman avenue, from the Harpers Ferry turnpike to Prospect avenue, as indicated on the plat, should "be opened as a right of way for the use and enjoyment of all the parties" to the deed; and that they had "concluded and determined to dedicate the land occupied by said streets for the purpose of a right of way or road." It then granted to S. W. Lightner and N. C. Brackett, their heirs and assigns forever, all the joint and several right, title, and interest of the parties of the first part in and to all of the land occupied by Whitman avenue and Prospect avenue, defining the width of each, reserved to the grantors, including said Lightner and Brackett, their heirs and assigns forever, the right to use said avenues "as a right of way for all purposes as completely as if they were a public street," and granted the like right to the said Brackett and Lightner. Then the parties of the second part granted to the parties of the first part "a right of way for all purposes as fully as if it were a public street over said Prospect avenue and Whitman avenue." This deed seems to have vested the title in fee of these roads or strips of land in Lightner and Brackett, and then secured to them and all the other parties an easement, consisting of the right to use the same as a road.

As has been stated, these were originally farm lands, and, when the roads were established across them, gates were erected and maintained to protect them from cattle and other stock running at large. There was one at the intersection of Prospect avenue with the Charlestown pike. There was another across Whitman avenue and another on the north end of Prospect avenue. With a single exception, they seem to have been there at the time the deed was executed and have ever since been maintained. The location of one has been changed. W. F. Hallam, the owner of land adjoining the Whitman land, and purchased in 1904 of Storer College, moved one of the gates to a different location. The deed makes no reference to any of these gates. It neither secures any right to any person to maintain them, nor forbids them by name. The Hallams became the successors of the Vales to the title to the Whitman property, and, of course, acquired such rights, respecting it, as the Vales had and no other. The deed to them from Wilmer P. Vale and others, dated November 10, 1899, contains the following clause, referring to the right of way deed: "This conveyance is made subject to an easement or right of way through the land herein conveyed, known as Prospect avenue, as indicated in a deed by the said parties of the first part and others to S. W. Lightner and N. C. Brackett." Only one half of Whitman avenue was originally on the Whitman land, the other half being on land subsequently acquired by W. F. Hallam. The deed dated May 2, 1904, conveying it, contained an exception of such rights and interest as had been conveyed by the right of way deed of August 22, 1895. After the Hallams, husband and wife, had acquired these properties, they made some changes in the fences and gates, and so fixed and adjusted one of the gates as to make it more burdensome to their neighbors who used the road than it had been. They also constructed a new road in a different location, leaving it entirely open and free from gates, with the supposed intent to induce travelers to use it instead of the old one, and so ultimately get rid of the old ones, or one of them. These acts led to the present controversy. The right of the Hallams to maintain any gates at all on the roads was questioned. The matter was taken up with them, and a meeting was held at the Vale residence for the purpose of securing a better understanding of the situation. The highway deed was read and considered, and Mr. Hallam seems to have been convinced that it forbade his maintenance of gates. He had some further interviews with interested parties, and seemed inclined to consent to the removal of the gates. An agreement was prepared and submitted to him, providing for such removal, and this seems to have impressed him with the view that the highway deed, properly construed, did not deny to him the privilege of gates. He made further inquiry, and was advised that it did not. Thereupon he declined to sign the agreement or remove the gates.

Counsel for the appellants very properly insist upon the consideration of all the facts and circumstances existing at the date of the execution of the deed, the situation of the parties and their purposes, together with its terms, in seeking its true meaning and intent; and, in this connection, place great stress upon the presence of the gates across the roads in question, and continuance thereof. This fact, though important, is not necessarily controlling. It does not preclude the consideration of others, nor deny to them such force and effect as they naturally and reasonably have on the question of intent. The intent to make the section traversed by these roads one of small holdings for homes and summer residences was well known to all the parties at the date of the execution of the deed. A portion of the land had been platted off into town lots, and some of the parties to the deed were owners of such lots. A village or town had been commenced, though not incorporated. A small commencement had been made with the expectation of growth and development and the conversion of a great deal more of the Storer College and Brackett lands into such lots and residences. Around the small beginning thus made lay broad acres of land, suitable for cultivation which it was neither advisable nor provident to throw open to the public, nor economical to fence off with reference to these roads, so as to make them highways. The trustees of Storer College and Brackett, owning adjacent and neighboring lands, were deeply interested. It was their purpose to avoid the expense of fencing and breaking up the farms to such extent and in such manner as to cause unnecessary expense, or, indeed, any expense that could be avoided. They were parties to this deed. Ultimately, they expected to dispose of all the land, and their intent to make the deed broad enough to secure such right to property owners whenever they should demand it, and depend, for the time being, upon the indulgence of the gates, as a mere act of friendship and neighborly courtesy, may well be supposed. The terms of the deed indicate this. The owners of the land through which these two roads pass conveyed the fee in them to Brackett and Lightner, leaving in the adjacent landowners only a right of use. These roads were also given a greater width than is usual in the case of private ways or even country highways. For the most part they were made 40 feet wide. The extent of this right of use on the part of adjacent property owners is clearly defined. They are given the right to use the roads named as avenues and called streets "for all purposes as completely as if they were public streets." In the argument it is said this description relates to the use of the ways, and not to the ways themselves. In other words, the ways are not described nor defined as public streets. Granting this, the use which the parties are entitled to make of them includes all the purposes for which public streets are used, and there is a further extension of this right of use. The deed says they may be used for all purposes for which public streets may be used, and as completely and fully, for such purposes, as public streets are used. Viewing these terms in the light of all the facts and circumstances, obtaining at the date of the deed and the situation and conduct of all the parties thereto, we see no reason for saying the meaning, import, and effect of these terms shall be restrained. While some of the facts may indicate the possibility of intent and purpose, falling short of the terms used, other facts, circumstances, and purposes have an equally potent bearing in the opposite direction.

In thus considering surrounding facts and circumstances and the situation and purposes of the parties, some of which are not disclosed by the terms of the deed, we are treating it as ambiguous, and therefore as susceptible of construction by reference to extraneous evidence. In view of its terms and the facts and circumstances and purposes disclosed by them, we do not regard it as being in any sense ambiguous. As we have observed, it vests the fee in these roadways in Brackett and Lightner. The strips of land are severed in title from the tracts and lots to which they formerly belonged and made separate and distinct parcels of land, the use of which, for roadways, is given to all the interested parties. They are not mere rights of way granted by property owners over their own lands to owners of adjacent lands. They go beyond that and become community roads; and the right of use thereof is as broad and extensive, in respect to purposes and manner, as it was possible to make it without declaring the roads to be public highways. So we think it is not at all ambiguous. It is clear and positive in its terms, and wholly inconsistent with right in anybody to maintain gates or other obstructions across the roads so established.

[2] Treating the deed as ambiguous, counsel for the appellants rely upon prior and subsequent conduct under the rule of practical construction; but this principle has no application in the case of a plain and unequivocal instrument. Its terms cannot be annulled nor their effect destroyed by mere conduct. Camden v. McCoy, 48 W. Va. 377, 37 S. E. 637; 2 Parsons, Con. (8th Ed.) 495.

[3] As more than 10 years intervened between the date of the right of way deed and that of the first protest against the gates made to the Hallams, they claim a prescriptive right to maintain them. That such a right may be so acquired seems clear upon both principle and authority. It is not corporeal property and incorporeal property is peculiarly the subject-matter of title by prescription. Woodbridge v. Coughlin, 46 W. Va. 345, 33 S. E. 233; Jones on Easements, § 161; 22 A. & E. Enc. L. 1185. Under this principle of acquisition or rule of property, this court upheld a claim to the free use of a toll road in an individual and his family and servants. Lucas v. Turnpike Co., 36 W. Va. 427, 15 S. E. 182. The right to obstruct a private hall or entry may be so acquired. Sorkin v. Sentman, 162 Pa.

548, 29 Atl. 722. A stairway projecting into a private way owned in common by adjoining owners is also within the principle. Moon v. Mills, 119 Mich. 298, 77 N. W. 926, 75 Am. St. Rep. 390. The important and controlling inquiry then is whether Mr. and Mrs. Hallam have so acquired the right they claim. The right of way deed clearly created a right for the benefit of the properties owned by the parties thereto and annexed it to those properties. This right thereby became appurtenant to the properties passing with them through successive alienations as an appurtenance thereof.

[4] When so created and for such purpose, it was a right in common, made for all the owners of the properties and their successors in title, and intended to be exercised and enjoyed by them on equal terms. They were therefore tenants in common, and incorporeal property, such as this, may be the subject of such a tenancy. 17 A. & E. Enc. L. 668. Owners of lots abutting upon a private way established for their common benefit and appurtenant to each lot have unity of possession, and are tenants in common of such way. Goralski v. Kostuski, 179 Ill. 177, 53 N. E. 720, 70 Am. St. Rep. 98.

[5] This relationship of the parties applies certain principles which precluded Judge Vale, the predecessor in title of Mrs. Hallam, from obtaining any right in respect to the roads, adverse to his cotenants, without notice to them of his intention to claim it. Pickens v. Stout, 67 W. Va. 422, 68 S. E. 354; Clark v. Beard, 59 W. Va. 669, 53 S. E. 597. He owned the Whitman property until November, 1899, and there is no evidence of any hostile claim of right against the interests of his cotenants or inconsistent with their rights as defined by the deed. On the contrary, all the circumstances herein detailed indicate a permissive and temporary maintenance of the gates. Others, owning lands to which the ways were appurtenant, kept gates across them at times, without any claim of right to do so or belief that they had such right. The ownership and possession of Vale and his permissive and friendly exercise of the gate privilege extend to a time within 10 years before the institution of this suit. The possession of the appellants themselves was therefore less than the statutory period of 10 years, if it be conceded that they have maintained the gates with hostile intent. Even though the element of cotenancy were not involved, the acts relied upon to establish title by prescription must have been done under a bona fide claim of right. Boyd v. Woolwine, 40 W. Va. 282, 21 S. E. 1020; Rogerson v. Shepherd, 33 W. Va. 307, 10 S. E. 632. That any such claim existed on the part of Vale is completely negated by the circumstances. He was a party to the deed and fully cognizant of its purpose, as well as the reasons for allowing temporary gates. While they stood across the roads, a deed was executed by him and others owning them which plainly required their removal. Full explanation of the nonremoval thereof, immediately after the date of the deed, is found in the peculiar circumstances already adverted to. The roads were established by the deed to facilitate sales of property and induce people to establish homes in the community, and in contemplation of a largely increased number of users. The accomplishment of these purposes would shift the burden of fencing from the parties to the deed to others, distribute it among a larger number, reduce the area of agricultural land, and increase the travel on the roads to a point not reasonably consistent with the maintenance of gates thereon.

Failure to make Brackett and Lightner parties to the bill is assigned as a ground of demurrer, but they were obviously not necessary parties. Though they were parties to the deed and hold the legal title to the strips of land constituting the roads, their interest as such fee owners is not at all involved in this controversy, relating to an obstruction of the use of the roads and constituting a private nuisance to any person having the right to use them.

Perceiving no error in the decree, we affirm it.

(89 W. Va. 292)

COLLINS v. WHITE OAK FUEL CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 183*)—MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON FORTHCOMING BOND—NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS.

A proceeding by motion for judgment on a forthcoming bond, being informal in character, is not subject to the technical rules of common-law pleading and practice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Dec. Dig. § 183.*]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 183*)—MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON FORTHCOMING BOND—PROCEDURE—METHOD OF DEFENSE—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

The last clause of section 7 of chapter 121 of the Code of 1906, providing that defense to such actions may be made in the same manner and to the same extent as in actions at law, is merely permissive, not mandatory; and informal pleas, giving reasonable notice of the matters relied upon for defense, are sufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Dec. Dig. § 183.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 189*)—MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON FORTHCOMING BOND—SUFFICIENCY OF PLEADING.

Failure of the record in such an action to show a joinder of issue, or the disclosure of a technical misjoinder of issue, is not cause for setting aside a verdict, if the claims and defenses of the parties have been set out in informal pleadings with reasonable certainty and the trial has proceeded as if formal issues had been made up.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 350; Dec. Dig. § 189.*]

4. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 70*)—COAL MINING LEASES—CONSTRUCTION.

A provision in a coal mining lease for suspension of a minimum royalty clause or exemption therefrom so long as a "fault" in existence in the mine, contact with which occasioned such exemption clause, should be a hindrance and obstacle to the successful operation of the mine, and for resumption of the minimum royalty after the "fault" had been pierced and the normal vein recovered, exempts from such royalty on account of hindrance and obstruction only at the place at which the fault had been encountered at the date of the agreement, and does not extend to later and other separate and distinct obstructions by the same fault or others.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 192-197; Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

5. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 70*)—COAL MINING LEASES—CONSTRUCTION—"PIERCED"—"RECOVERED."

Under such a clause, the words "pierced" and "recovered" mean more than a mere breach of the fault and discovery of the coal on the opposite side; but, if the immediate obstacle has been overcome, the main entry put in condition for successful operation, and, together with side entries, carried into the body of the coal for several hundred feet, encountering the same obstacle or others in some of the entries, but none in others, it is for the jury to say whether the fault has been overcome within the meaning of these terms.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 192-197; Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, pp. 6019, 6020.]

6. TRIAL (§ 145*)—DIRECTION OF VERDICT.

If the evidence adduced under one of two defenses to an action goes to the entire demand and tends to defeat it wholly, and the evidence adduced under the other does not extend to the entire demand and tends only to reduce the amount thereof, it is not error to give a binding instruction applicable to the first of said defenses only, if it properly submits that defense upon the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 328; Dec. Dig. § 145.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Fayette County.

Action by Justus Collins against the White Oak Fuel Company and another. A verdict for plaintiff was set aside, and he brings error. Reversed and rendered.

Osenton & Horan and Leo Loeb, for plaintiff in error. Dillon & Nuckolls, for defendants in error.

POFFENBARGER, J. In a proceeding by motion on a forthcoming bond, by the White Oak Fuel Company, as principal, and S. Dixon, as surety, to release property from distraint under a distress warrant for rent, claimed under a coal lease and amounting to something over $6,000, Justus Collins obtained a verdict for the amount so claimed, which the court set aside. To sustain this denial of the benefit of the verdict, the defendants in error rely upon a number of alleged errors and insufficiency of the evidence.

The first assignment of error charges nonjoinder or misjoinder of issue. The defendants tendered three so-called special pleas. The first two, though concluding with verifications, bring no new matter into the case, and amount to mere denials of liability. The first one says there is no rent due; the second, in substance, that the demand of the plaintiff is made under the eighth clause of a written contract, described in the notice, and denies liability for any rent under that clause or the contract or any other. Objections to these two pleas having been overruled, they were filed, and, without reciting any replication, the order says issue was joined thereon. The third plea claims a suspension of the operation of the clause under which the proceeding was instituted, under another clause providing therefor in case of strikes by employes of the lessee or unavoidable accident, delaying shipments of coal and coke. It avers, as an unavoidable accident, an explosion in the mine on or about the 1st day of May, 1907, which it says greatly delayed and hindered the lessee from shipping coal for and during the entire period for which the rent was claimed, under the distress warrant. Objection to this plea having been overruled, it was filed, a general replication entered, and issue joined.

[1] That this is an informal proceeding, not governed in all respects by the common-law rules of pleading and practice is well established. Knox v. Horner, 58 W. Va. 136, 51 S. E. 979; Board v. Parsons, 22 W. Va. 308; White v. Sydenstricker, 6 W. Va. 46; Higginbotham v. Haselden, 3 W. Va. 266; Hale v. Chamberlain, 13 Grat. (Va.) 658. Under this view of its character, the technical requirements of formal pleading and joinder of issue have been dispensed with. Hornbrooks v. Lucas, 24 W. Va. 493, 49 Am. Rep. 277; Wallace v. McCarty, 8 W. Va. 193, 199; Land Co. v. Calhoun, 16 W. Va. 361, 375; McKinster v. Garrott, 3 Rand. (Va.) 554.

[2] The last clause of section 7 of chapter 121 of the Code of 1906 says, "Defense to such actions may be made in the same manner and to the same extent as in actions at law," and the decisions just referred to were rendered in cases submitted to the court, in lieu of a jury, for trial; but we do not regard the statute as mandatory, nor these decisions as declaring principles applicable only to cases so tried. Its language is permissive, not mandatory. It was passed long after the character of the proceeding by motion had been judicially established. Its terms are indicative of intent not to make the procedure technical. It says, not that defense shall be made in the same manner as in actions at law, but that it may be so made. At the time of the decision in McKinster v. Garrott, the statute was silent as to the mode of defense, but, after the enactment thereof, the court adhered to the rule of practice declared in that case.

[3] The old common-law rule, making a plea and joinder of issue essential to the trial of a case is still adhered to by this court in common-law actions, but is always reluctantly applied, when it appears that the parties have treated the issue as having been made up and fully submitted their respective claims and contentions to the jury. If it were possible consistently to avoid reversals for such cause, the court would cheerfully do so. It looks upon the rule with great disfavor. Simpkins v. White, 43 W. Va. 125, 27 S. E. 361. Hence we are not disposed to extend it to summary and informal proceedings in which it has not hitherto been applied. Substantial justice requires statements of the nature of the demand and the defenses sufficient to give each of the parties notice of what is asserted against him and constitute a basis for the introduction of evidence; but it does not require any particular formality in them. It is enough that the respective claims and contentions of the parties are put into the record. That has been done in this instance by the notice and special pleas. Tested by the strict rules of common-law pleading, these papers are lacking in respect to nothing except form. They so present all claims and demands in the action as to give full and complete notice thereof to the parties, the court, and the jury.

[4] A statement of salient facts is necessary to an intelligent disposition of the other assignments of error. The original lease, covering about 1,000 acres of coal, was executed by Collins to the Whipple Colliery Company, September 21, 1901. After that company had driven its main entry or hallway for some distance into the property, mining the coal on each side thereof, it encountered what is known in coal mining as a "fault," consisting of a complete loss of the vein and an obstruction in the form of solid rock. Having come to this and burrowed under it for some distance, in an effort to recover the vein, it assigned its lease to the White Oak Fuel Company by deed dated June 19, 1905. In anticipation of such purpose, a supplemental agreement was entered into by Collins, the lessor, and the White Oak Fuel Company, on the 15th day of June, 1905, by which certain modifications of the original lease were made, one of which related to the minimum royalty, the subject-matter of this proceeding. The original lease provided for the payment of 8 cents per gross ton until January 1, 1903, and thereafter a minimum annual royalty of $8 per acre, amounting to $8,088.90. The modification in the supplemental agreement, respecting the royalty or rent, reads as follows: "The rents and royalties to be paid by the party of the second part to the parties of the first part shall be at the rate provided in said deed of lease, except that no minimum royalty shall be paid so long as the fault in existence in said Whipple mine is a hindrance and obstacle to its successful operation. But after said fault has been pierced and the normal vein recovered, then there shall be a minimum royalty of eight thousand ($8,000.00) dollars per annum paid as provided in said deed of lease." The vein of coal beyond the fault was discovered not later than December,

1905. Some time before the discovery thereof, the men were taken from that portion of the mine and put to work at other points in it, but later the work there was resumed. The entry, after having been driven gradually down for some distance, had been carried from the lowest point gradually upward, and the coal was discovered above it after some explorations and tests had been made. It became necessary, then, to bring the entry up to the level of the coal, and put it in condition for use. The depression in it was from 350 to 400 feet long, and so deep as to make it impracticable for a roadway. To remedy this, the rock over the depression was shot down so as to fill it up and the surplus stone carried out. In this way the entry was raised at that point so as to conform to the bottom of the coal on each side of the fault. This done, the main entry was driven on for several hundred feet, and side entries turned from it, both to the right and the left. In the first left entry, turned near the end of the fault, the coal again became thin and practically disappeared. Two other left entries were driven in a northwesterly direction from the main entry, and there is no evidence of any obstruction in them. The first right entry, turned opposite or about opposite the first left entry, encountered an obstruction within a short distance. The second right entry was driven a distance of about 800 feet, and there the coal began to disappear. An obstruction was found in the main entry also, carried forward in a northeasterly direction, at a distance of about 1,200 feet from the first right and left entries. This extension of the main does not pursue the general course of the Collins land, which is almost due north and south. The theory and contention of the defendant are that the fault encountered in the first left, the two right, and the main entries is the same fault through which the main entry was driven; that it has not ceased to be an obstacle and hindrance to the operation of the mine; and that the normal vein has not been recovered in the full and substantial sense of the terms used in the contract. Expert mining engineers gave their opinion, based upon a geologic theory, that the fault is due to an elimination of the carboniferous matter, while in a viscous state and condition, by a current of water which cut out a channel, after the manner of rivers and creeks, into which there was a later deposit, now forming the rock. In other words, they say such faults were produced by a stream or current which washed away the coal ingredients or matter, and the winding space thus made through that substance was afterwards filled with a different kind which became solid rock. In conformity with this theory, they expressed the opinion that the fault, so created, continues through the land in a northerly direction, and constitutes the obstructions now found in said side and main entries. These and other witnesses further testify that the operation of the mine and output of coal are seriously retarded by it. It has narrowed the field of operation, rendering it impossible to work as many crews and as large numbers of miners as are necessary to the mining of enough coal to justify the payment of the large minimum royalty stipulated for. In opposition to this contention, lack of evidence of obstruction in the second and third left entries, indicative of free and untrammelled opportunity to mine in that direction, and failure to carry the main entry in the direction of the main body of the leased land, are insisted upon. Just when the work at the fault, called, in the record, the "rock heading," abandoned some time in 1905, was resumed, does not appear. The minimum royalty prior to October 1, 1907, is not demanded; plaintiff conceding exemption therefrom until that date. From the time the mine was purchased by the defendant until October 1, 1907, more than two years elapsed, and from the time of the discovery of the vein at the end of the fault until said 1st day of October, 1907, more than 18 months. In that period, some coal was necessarily taken from the Collins land, as the work beyond the fault already mentioned was done. This was paid for at the rate of eight cents per ton. The lease permitted coal from some adjacent tracts belonging to other persons to be brought out through the Collins land. There was no cessation in the operation of the mine, but the mining in the Collins land was light. On the 1st day of May, 1907, an explosion occurred in an entry, carried to the left through the Collins land, and into a tract known as the "Thurmond Land." It took place in the Thurmond entry and on the Thurmond land. The defense based upon the explosion is that for several months thereafter nervousness and fear on the part of miners deterred them from working in this mine, and rendered it impossible to keep enough of them at work in it to carry on the operations in the manner and to the extent contemplated or desirable.

An important element in the case is the construction of the suspension or exemption clause in the supplemental agreement. On this question very divergent views are expressed in the argument. The defendants claim contact with the fault, defined and understood as described by its witnesses, anywhere in the Collins land, no matter how far distant from the point at which it was originally encountered was contemplated and will work a suspension of the minimum royalty. This conclusion is reached by placing particular stress upon the words "no minimum royalty shall be paid so long as the fault in existence in said Whipple mine is a hindrance and obstacle to its successful operation." On the other hand, the plaintiff says no obstruction other than that already encountered at the time of the execution of the supplemental agreement, or at any other place, was contemplated, and that on the accomplishment of a passage through it at that point and recovery of the normal vein the suspension should cease. This rests upon the following terms: "But after the said fault has been pierced and the normal vein recovered then there shall be paid the minimum royalty," etc. We think the phrase "in existence" must be interpreted as relating to what was known to the parties at the time it was used. The obstruction in the main entry as it stood at the date of the supplemental agreement was the only fault then known. How far it extended and in what direction could not have been definitely known. While we think the phrase "in existence" must be limited to the obstruction at that point, we are also compelled to say that it must extend to the limits of that obstacle in the main entry at that point. This harmonizes with the other terms used in the first clause, exempting from the payment of royalty "so long as the fault * * * is a hindrance and obstacle" to the successful operation of the mine. The next clause stipulates the conditions under which the exemption should terminate, and the fault cease to be a hindrance and obstacle. These consequences were to ensue upon the piercing of the fault and recovery of the normal vein. If, therefore, the lessee pierced the fault and recovered the normal vein, the conditions calling for resumption of the payment of the minimum royalty were accomplished, and, once accomplished, we do not think a subsequent, distant, and wholly disconnected contact with the same fault in the further progress of the development of the mine would produce a second exemption from royalty. The contract contemplates but one suspension. There is no provision which says, after the fault shall have pierced and the normal vein recovered, there shall be another suspension or exemption. The clause does not give exemption so long as the fault exists, but only so long as it hinders and obstructs, and the terms used must be deemed to be applicable to an existing obstruction as well as an existing fault. The obstruction rather than the fault was the real subject-matter of the clause.

[7] In seeking the intention of the parties to a contract, all the provisions of the instrument, together with its purpose, the nature of the subject-matter, and the situation of the parties at the time are to be considered. All of the facts known to the parties are presumed to have entered into their negotiations, and measurably to have contributed to the final result as expressed in the contract. "It is practically impossible to state these facts in the contract, and is rarely, if ever, attempted. The court which construes the contract must therefore either disregard all the material facts which led the parties to express their intention as they did, or else admit extrinsic evidence of the surrounding facts and circumstances. In this dilemma the courts have chosen the latter alternative. It is a recognized rule of construction that the court will place itself in the position of the parties who made the contract as nearly as can be done by admitting evidence of the surrounding facts and circumstances, the nature of the subject-matter, the relation of the parties to the contract, and the objects sought to be accomplished by the contract." Page on Cont. § 1123. To the same general effect, see Gas Co. v. Oil Co., 56 W. Va. 402, 49 S. E. 548; Uhl v. Railroad Co., 51 W. Va. 103, 41 S. E. 340; Armstrong v. Ross, 61 W. Va. 38, 55 S. E. 895. The terms used in the written contract must also be construed in the light of the knowledge of the parties. All recitals and references in a deed in any way descriptive of the property are read and construed in the light of the state and condition of the property as it was at the time, unless some other time is expressly referred to. Barbour et al. v. Tompkins, 58 W. Va. 572, 52 S. E. 707, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 715; Martindale on Convey. § 91. If a deed or contract contain references to a certain thing or object and it is afterwards disclosed that there were two or more such objects, one of which was known to the parties and the others unknown, the language is applicable only to that which was known. Armstrong v. Ross, 61 W. Va. 38, 55 S. E. 895. Theoretically and scientifically it may be true that this fault holds a sinuous or serpentine course through the coal field or the land of the lessor, and may be encountered at different places in the prosecution of mining operations, but this could not have been a matter of certain knowledge to the parties. Nothing known to them indicated what course or direction the fault pursued from the point at which it was discovered. All they knew at the date of the contract was its presence and its character at the particular point at which it had been encountered. Anything in addition to this would then have been mere surmise and conjecture. If we could suppose a purpose to anticipate the possibility of subsequent contact with the same fault, we find nothing in the terms of the exemption clause, indicating intention to make such provision.

[5] On the contrary, it deals only with what was then known to the parties, and indicates belief on their part that the piercing of the fault and recovery of the normal vein would free them from its effect. These terms impliedly negative intent to make provision for contact or obstruction at other and remote places within the leased territory. The interpretation of the words "pierced" and "recovered" must, however, be reasonable. Mere discovery of the vein on the opposite side of the fault would amount to a piercing and recovery in a practical and substantial sense. The parties must have intended the allowance of a reasonable time in which to put the mine beyond the fault in a workable and productive state. As to this, there seems to be no difference of opinion. The lessor allowed more than 18 months in which to fill up the depression, put the main entry in condition for transportation of coal through it, and extend the entries into the coal lying beyond.

The respective claims and contentions of the parties and the material facts have now been sufficiently shown to enable us to consider some of the additional errors assigned. Exception was taken to the action of the court in admitting the evidence of certain witnesses, relating to the time required to overcome the obstruction. The competency of these witnesses to express their opinions upon that question is entirely clear. They were both practical mining engineers, and had personally inspected the defendants' mine and particularly the rock heading or fault, and knew its extent and character. Treating their evidence as expert testimony, it was clearly admissible. Redd v. Carnahan, 65 W. Va. 330, 64 S. E. 138; Delmar Oil Co. v. Bartlett, 62 W. Va. 70, 59 S. E. 634; Sebrell v. Barrows, 36 W. Va. 212, 14 S. E. 996; McKelvey v. Railroad Co., 35 W. Va. 500, 14 S. E. 261. In support of this assignment, the attorneys for the defendants in error have said very little in their brief, a circumstance from which we infer that at the time the exception was taken it was based largely upon the construction of the clause we have just interpreted. If their view of it were the true one, this evidence might have been inadmissible, for, if the fault had not been pierced nor the normal vein recovered, it might have been prejudicial to allow the lessor to prove a lapse of time necessary for the performance of work which did not amount to a piercing of the fault or recovery of the vein. Under our conclusion as to the force and effect of the clause, however, this argument fails.

The defendants requested a peremptory instruction to find for them, which the court refused. Upon their motion, it gave six other instructions, five of which fairly submitted to the jury the question whether the fault had been pierced and ceased to be a hindrance to the successful operation of the mine, and the other one the additional question whether the explosion of May 1, 1907, was an unavoidable accident, and delayed the shipping of coal from the leased premises for any portion of the period for which the plaintiff claims rent, and in each of those relating to the fault told the jury to find for the defendant, if it had not ceased to be a hindrance, and, in the other, told them they might take the fact of delay by the explosion into consideration. At the instance of the plaintiff, the court gave seven instructions, three of which relate to the fault, and the others to credibility of witnesses, burden of proof, the explosion, and diligence on the part of the lessee in the operation of the mine. All of these were objected to, but the brief takes no notice of any except those three which relate to the fault. The criticism upon these three instructions has been substantially disposed of in the construction of the exemption clause of the supplemental agreement. It rests largely upon the construction put upon that clause of the contract by the defendants. As their interpretation has failed, the criticism likewise fails.

[6] A further objection is made to one of them on account of its form. Though binding in form, it takes no notice of the defense based upon the explosion. This objection is also without merit, since the evidence of delay, resulting from the explosion, does not cover the whole period for which the rent is claimed. It did not make out a complete defense. All that it tends to prove could be conceded and yet there would necessarily be a verdict for the plaintiff. This instruction does not deal with the amount of the recovery. It simply tells the jury that, if they should find for the plaintiff upon the issue respecting the fault in the mine, they should render a verdict for him. It relates to the right to recover, not the amount of the recovery.

We think the defendants' peremptory instruction was properly refused. The evidence shows completion of the main entry through the fault and progress of the same for at least 1,200 feet beyond it. Though the fault was again encountered in the first left entry, in the first and second right entries and in the main entry at its terminus, it does not appear that any obstruction was found in either the second or third left entries. The jury may well have inferred that by a deflection of the main entry toward the north, so as to carry it up through the main body of the plaintiff's land instead of in the direction of the southeast line, the mine could have been operated much more successfully and to the limit contemplated by the parties. It does not appear, therefore, that the fault continued to be necessarily a hindrance or obstacle to successful operation. It is not to be supposed that either the lessee or the lessor contemplated the leaving of vast quantities of coal in the mine in the neighborhood of the fault, if it does continue its course through the land. That the lessee has been advancing its entries so as to obtain the coal up to the fault on each side, after having passed through it, so as to obtain all of the coal in that part of the mine, does not signify a continuation of the obstruction, nor impossibility of driving entries in other directions so as to work larger numbers of men and obtain larger quantities of coal. The lease gives right and imposes obligation to take out all the coal in the land that is reasonably susceptible of profitable mining. Hence it was both the right and duty of the lessee to take out the coal in the neighborhood of the fault, and its work in that part of the mine argues no impossibility of larger operations in other parts. In view of this we perceive ample room for the jury to say the lessee is simply exercising discretion, allowed it by the contract, as to method of operation. We have already said the defense asserted under the clause providing for relief on the ground of unavoidable accident does not cover the entire period nor constitute a complete defense.

The evidence introduced under the defense of unavoidable accident, if sufficient to prove delay from that cause, and not negated by any evidence to the contrary, would reduce the amount of the recovery, and justify the action of the court in setting aside the verdict, since the jury allowed the whole amount sued for. But there were circumstances tending strongly to disprove the statement that men could not be induced to work in the mine after the explosion. Just where the accident occurred is not clearly shown, but it must have been at least 600 or 700 feet from the main entry running through the lessor's property, and, 2,500 or 3,000 feet from the region beyond the fault or rock heading in which the larger body of the plaintiff's coal lies. The explosion occurred on the 1st day of May, 1907, five months before the date from which the minimum royalty is demanded. The witnesses testifying on this subject do not pretend to claim any delay on account of the explosion for a period of more than six months, and they are not as positive and specific as they might be in dealing with the reluctance of men to work in the mine. They specify no particular instance of refusal to work in that part of the mine. Besides, operations were carried on in the mine immediately after the explosion. It is a shaft mine, and the shaft is not more than 600 or 700 feet distant from the scene of the explosion. The men must have gone into and out of the mine by means of that shaft. In April, May, and June, 1907, 17,456 gross tons were taken out of the mines, nearly one-half of which came out in the months of May and June. In July, August, and September, 25,551 gross tons were taken out. In this last quarter, the quantity mined was not greatly less than the amount taken out in the quarter immediately preceding the explosion. We think these facts and circumstances made the effect of the explosion upon the operation of the mines on and after October 1, 1907, a question for the jury.

What we have said here on the subject of the peremptory instruction applies to the motion to set aside the verdict as being unsupported by the evidence or against the preponderance thereof. In sustaining it the trial court erred.

These conclusions result in the reversal of the order setting aside the verdict, reinstatement of the verdict, and rendition of judgment thereon in favor of the plaintiff in error for the sum of $6,113.64, with interest on said sum from the date of the verdict, the 14th day of February, 1910, until paid, and judgment for his costs in the court below, as well as his costs in this court.

(69 W. Va. 282)

WELCH LUMBER CO. v. PAGETON LUMBER CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. COURTS (§ 252*)—REVIEW—JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT.

If the distributable share of a creditor, in a suit to wind up the affairs of a copartnership, be less than the sum necessary to give jurisdiction, this court will not entertain his appeal from a decree denying him such distributive share.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 266*)—REVIEW—OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED BELOW.

Error, not apparent on the face of a commissioner's report, taken in connection with the pleadings, or which might be affected by extraneous evidence, will not be available as error in this court, unless the report has been excepted to on that ground in the court below.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1552-1571; Dec. Dig. § 266.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, McDowell County.

Bill by the Welch Lumber Company against the Pageton Lumber Company and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants the Graham Grocery Company and America Franklin appeal. Affirmed.

Ritz & Ritz, for appellants. T. F. Heritze and Anderson, Strother & Hughes, for appellee.

MILLER, J. This was a suit to wind up the business of the defendant B. R. Myers, trading as Pageton Lumber Company. His debts, secured and general, and their priorities, were ascertained and decreed, and his assets marshalled and distributed in accordance with sundry reports of a commissioner, to whom the cause was referred.

The defendants, Graham Grocery Company, an execution creditor, and America Franklin, administratrix of Henry L. Franklin, deceased, the latter, in her petition, filed, asserting a lien on the funds in the hands of the special receiver, prior to all other creditors, have appealed.

The commissioner, by his several reports, in effect, at least, reported, and the court decreed, that the first lien on said funds was the deed or deeds of trust of the Welch Lumber Company; the second, the lien by execution, of the Graham Grocery Company. The commissioner also reported the execution of the Graham Grocery Company the first lien on all property of said Pageton Lumber Company, not covered by plaintiff's deeds of trust.

The lien of the Welch Lumber Company, so reported and decreed, was largely in excess of the net proceeds of the sale of the lumber in the hands of the special receiver for distribution, and the court by the two decrees appealed from, the first of October 3, 1908, the other of July 8, 1909, though not in specific terms, yet in effect, confirmed the several reports of the commissioner, and directed that the balance of the money in the hands of the receiver, after payment of costs, expenses and counsel fees allowed, should be paid to plaintiff on account of its trust debt.

The commissioner in his final report, at the request of M. O. Litz, attorney for America Franklin, administratrix, also reported, "that there is due the estate of said Franklin from the Pageton Lumber Company, the sum of $732.80, as shown by the statement of said M. O. Litz, which is herewith returned." He did not, however, report this debt a lien, and it was not decreed a lien on the funds in the hands of the special receiver. Litz's statement, or evidence, before the commissioner, was purely hearsay, was objected to, as incompetent, which in fact it was. In her petition, or answer, the administratrix alleged said debt to be six hundred dollars, not seven hundred and thirty-two dollars and eighty cents, as found by the commissioner. Litz says, that he had mislaid the papers at the time of preparing said petition, and that he estimated the amount.

The findings of the commissioner in his first and second reports, as to the liens and their priorities, were not excepted to, either by appellants or appellees. The decree of October 3, 1908, so finds, and decreed distribution to plaintiff of the larger portion of the funds in the hands of the special receiver. It appears from recitals in this decree, however, that a third report, by agreement of counsel, was made up by the commissioners in open court, and filed on the same day. It is to be inferred from this decree and the arguments presented here that the agreement was, that the commissioner should make up the report on the pleadings and proofs already filed in the cause. He reported, however, that in order to ascertain the fact directed by the court to be inquired into and reported he had taken the deposition of Purcell, which he filed with his report. From this evidence he "finds and reports that the lumber taken over by the receiver in this cause was manufactured either from the logs mentioned in said deeds of trust in favor of Welch Lumber Company, or from timber mentioned in certain timber contracts referred to and embraced in said deeds of trust or some of them."

To this report and the reading of the deposition of Purcell thereon the decree recites there were exceptions indorsed on the report, but by whom the decree does not say. We find in the record, however, following the report, an exception signed by counsel for appellants, excepting thereto, "in so far as it attempts to report any property belonging to the Pageton Lumber Company, which went into the hands of receiver in this case as being covered or affected by the deeds of trust set up by the Welch Lumber Co., there being no evidence to justify such finding." The report shows also counsel for appellants was present at the taking of the deposition of Purcell, cross-examined the witness, and that no exceptions were noted to the testimony. Without passing upon this exception, the decree for the fourth time re-committed the cause to the commissioner for the purpose of taking proof, and directed him to report what property went into the hands of the special receiver; whether any property other than that covered by the deeds of trust went into his hands; whether the logs mentioned in the deeds of trust were converted into lumber after the execution thereof; whether the lumber manufactured from said logs went into his hands, and whether any lumber which went into the hands of the special receiver was sawed from timber or logs other than those mentioned in said deeds of trust.

In his fourth report, the commissioner reports his inability to ascertain all the facts called for in said decree. He refers to his report filed at a former term, in which he says he reported as nearly as he could, from the evidence, all property of the Pageton Lumber Company, and the value thereof, which had been taken over by the special receiver. He reports that a few logs cut from the lands of R. L. Johnson were not covered by said deeds of trust, but that all other logs, except those, came from the Franklin land, and were covered by the deeds of trust; also that a portion of the lumber was manufactured after the execution of the deeds of trust, and that all the timber at the mill at the time the receiver was appointed went into his hands. He was unable to report what quantity of lumber was manufactured after the deeds of trust were executed, or what logs were cut and hauled in after that time, or what logs were on the skidways at that time, that were afterwards cut into lumber and went into the hands of the receiver; he was of the opinion that it would be impossible to get information that would be sufficiently definite to report these facts. Another fact reported is that the receiver took possession of three horses levied on, under executions in favor of the Graham Grocery Company, and Henritze & Henritze, as the property of the Pageton Lumber Company. He does not report whether these horses were or were not covered by the deeds of trust. This report was excepted to by no one.

By the final decree of July 8, 1909, the cause was brought on to be heard upon the several reports of said commissioner, and it recites that, "upon consideration whereof the court doth hereby confirm the said report * * * except as herein otherwise decreed." While "report" is used in the singular, we must interpret this decree as a confirmation of all the reports, treated as one. In effect it is so. It finally disposes of all the matters in controversy.

This is a very incomplete and unsatisfactory record. To arrive at correct conclusions and to do exact justice between the parties is next to impossible. We can only do the best we can, consistent with established rules of practice, and with due regard to the findings of the commissioner, and the several decrees of the court below thereon.

[1] We will first dispose of the appeal of the Graham Grocery Company. The commissioner in his second report, reports the judgment of this company a first lien upon all the property of the defendant company, not embraced in said deeds of trust; in the fourth, that the horses levied on were turned over by the constable to the special receiver. The special receiver, in his report, has accounted for the proceeds of the sale of two horses, one at forty dollars, the other at sixty dollars. What became of the other it is not shown in the record. From the description given by the constable of one of them it is not unlikely he has gone the way of all the earth. The decree filing this report of the special receiver, directs him to sell all the remaining property and assets of the Pageton Lumber Company. In his final report, confirmed by the decree of July 8, 1909, he reports the sale of no other horse. Presumptively all the property left in his hands had then been sold and disposed of, and so far as we are permitted to see from the record before us, there was no other property shown or reported, not subject to the first lien of the plaintiff company. The first item of disbursements with which the special receiver is credited in his report is: Paid Greenwalt, Justice, costs in the case of Graham Grocery Company against Pageton Lumber Company, $20.43. There may be other items not apparent properly chargeable against the proceeds of the sale of the horses levied on. If we should find, however, that the Graham Grocery Company was entitled to all the proceeds of the sale of these horses, its distributable share would be less than the sum necessary to give this court jurisdiction of their appeal. Wees v. Elbon, 61 W. Va. 380, 56 S. E. 611, and cases cited.

Next what disposition shall we make of the appeal of America Franklin, administratrix? Her petition and answer claims a lien upon the funds in the hands of the special receiver. No seller's lien was specifically reserved in the contract exhibited with her petition. This contract, a deed under seal, granted and conveyed standing timber, with right to the purchaser to enter upon the land, and to occupy it, to the exclusion of the grantors, with mills, houses and other structures necessary to successfully operate the land for the timber thereon, and to store the manufactured lumber. One hundred dollars was paid down on the price, and an additional one hundred dollars was to have been paid, and so far as we know was paid, at the time the mill was set on the land, these sums to be deducted from the first one hundred thousand feet of lumber sawed, at the prices stipulated per thousand feet, to be determined by measurements by log rule at the small end of the log. Whether under this contract, or under the rules and principles applied in Wiggin v. Mankin, 65 W. Va. 219, 63 S. E. 1091, Buskirk Bros. v. Peck, 57 W. Va. 360, 50 S. E. 432, and Curtin v. Isaacson, 36 W. Va. 391, 15 S. E. 171, a lien existed, for the unpaid purchase money for the timber, asserted in appellants' petition, we need not, and do not decide, for in our view of the case, as presented, the decree below must be affirmed, on another ground.

[2] That ground is, that Mrs. Franklin did not except to the reports of the commissioner, finding specifically, or in effect, that the plaintiff's deeds of trust constituted the first lien on the proceeds of the sale of the lumber and timber. Our decisions hold that where a commissioner's report is confirmed without exception this court will not look into the evidence on which it was founded, or by which it might be effected, but will accept the findings of the commissioner as to all the facts depending on extrinsic evidence, as final and conclusive. Long v. Willis, 50 W. Va. 341, 40 S. E. 340; Bank of Union v. Nickell, 57 W. Va. 57, 62, 49 S. E. 1003; Gay v. Lockridge, 43 W. Va. 267, 27 S. E. 306, and cases cited. It is quite true that an error apparent on the face of the report of a commissioner, taken in connection with the pleadings, which can not be affected by extraneous evidence, may be corrected, even in this court, though not excepted to in the court below; but if it depends on extrinsic evidence, to be available as error here, the report must have been excepted to in the lower court. Bank v. Shirley, 26 W. Va. 563; Bank v. Wilson, 25 W. Va. 242; Bank v. Nickell, supra; Haymond v. Murphy, 65 W. Va. 616, 64 S. E. 855.

The result of these considerations is that the decree below must be affirmed.

(60 W. Va. 271)

DEMPSEY v. NORFOLK & W. RY. CO.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 2, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TRIAL (§ 156*)—DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE.

In considering a demurrer to evidence a proper test is whether the evidence would sustain a verdict for the party as to whose evidence the demurrer is entered, if one was returned by the jury and there was a motion to set it aside. If a verdict against the demurrant could not properly be set aside, there should be a judgment against him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 354-356; Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 378*) — TRESPASSERS ON TRACK—INFANTS.

It is the duty of a locomotive engineer to look out for helpless trespassers on the track, so far as may be consistent with other duties of his position, and when he observes a child of irresponsible age on the track to take reasonable precaution for its safety.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1281, 1282; Dec. Dig. § 378.*]

2. RAILROADS (§§ 359, 378*) — INJURY TO CHILD NEAR TRACK—NEGLIGENCE.

It is negligence, binding the railway company, for a locomotive engineer, when his other duties do not demand attention and the situation permits a view, to fail to observe a child of irresponsible age walking by the side of the track and in dangerous proximity thereto, or, when he does observe it and has distance in which to stop, to undertake to run a rapidly moving train by the child in that position.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1239, 1281, 1282; Dec. Dig. §§ 359, 378.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Mingo County.

Action by James A. Dempsey, administrator, against the Norfolk & Western Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Holt & Duncan, for plaintiff in error.
John S. Marcum and John L. Stafford, for defendant in error.

ROBINSON, J. A child sixteen months old was injured by a freight train of the defendant company so that it died. An administrator sued for damages in the premises. On the trial, defendant demurred to the evidence, the jury ascertained damages at $1,500, and the court overruled the demurrer and entered judgment for plaintiff.

Two distinct grounds are submitted for a reversal of the judgment. First, it is asserted that negligence on the part of defendant has not been established. Second, the point is made that the injury resulted from the contributory negligence of the parents and that the same is imputable to the child.

[1] The real question with which we must deal, in the determination of the propositions presented to overthrow the judgment, is this: If the jury had found a verdict for plaintiff on the evidence taken from their consideration by the demurrer, would it be proper to set aside the verdict? In other words, could a jury have found from the evidence a warranted verdict for the plaintiff? If a verdict so found could not be sustained on motion to set it aside, then the judgment on the demurrer is erroneous; otherwise, it is not. Kelley v. Railroad Co., 58 W. Va., at page 221, 52 S. E. 520, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 898. See, also, 4 Enc. Digest, Va. & W. Va., 540.

We have carefully considered the evidence. A verdict for plaintiff founded on it could not properly be disturbed. A finding of negligence on the part of defendant is sufficiently warranted. The case is very nearly controlled by Gunn v. Railroad Co., 42 W. Va. 676, 26 S. E. 546, 36 L. R. A. 575.

A jury reasonably could have believed that the child was on the track at the time the train was approaching, or so close to the track that the engine or cars were sure to endanger it. One reasonable inference is that the child wandered from its home near the railway, across the east bound track, to the space between the double tracks, and was toddling along that narrow, dangerous space in the direction its sister and other children had gone only a few minutes earlier. Again, it may be said that the little foot prints leading to the railroad, the place where the injured body was found immediately after the train had passed, and the time that elapsed after the child left the mother's sight, reasonably prove that the child was on the east bound track when the train was approaching, or across that track in the narrow space between the two tracks. These facts and circumstances place the child in a position where other evidence tends to prove that it was in full view from the engine when nearly 1,400 feet away. True, for a small part of this distance, portions of the engine, because of a curve, would cut off the engineer's view. But we deem this immaterial. There is evidence tending to establish that the distance from which the engineer first could see the child was one sufficient in which to stop the train before reaching it. The engineer testifies that he was looking ahead while running this distance and that he saw no child on the track. But a jury could say that the facts and circumstances proved in relation to the child's position contradict the engineer's testimony. They could refuse to give his testimony credibility. Besides, the engineer does not say that he did not see the child walking by the side of the track. He invariably speaks of the track itself and not the space between it and the other track. A jury could reasonably believe that he was purposely not contradicting the facts and circumstances from which it may be inferred that the child was in that space at the time he says he was looking ahead. The time that the child had been out of the mother's sight was too short, as may well be inferred, for it to have been at some hidden point beyond the other track and to have come from its hiding and approached the train after the engine had passed. And there are other reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the evidence, supporting a conclusion that the child was either on the track or in the dangerous space between the tracks at the time the engineer first could see it. It may have been on the track and some part of the engine have pitched it where it lay. The engineer says he was looking ahead. He says he saw no child "on the track." A reasonable conclusion from the evidence, disregarding the credibility of the engineer as a jury could do, is that he did see the child on the track. At no time in his testimony does he directly contradict the fact that he did not see the child between the tracks. One may accept his statement that he did not see it on the track and reasonably conclude that the engineer saw the child between the tracks and took the risk of running by it.

The conductor, who was riding in the cab at the time, says he was looking ahead. But there is a proved admission by him which contradicts his testimony in this particular. Singularly enough he also refers only to the fact that he saw no child "on the track." He does not say that he did not see the child between the tracks. The testimony of the fireman is that he saw no child "on the track," but he does not know whether he was looking ahead at this particular place or engaged in firing the engine. A brakeman also was in the cab, but he is not produced as a witness. The cab was occupied by these four persons. Another reasonable inference that a jury could use in contradicting the testimony of the crew, if indeed it needs contradiction, is that they were engaged in conversation and attention to each other. They had just left a station. There the conductor and brakeman had joined the engineer and fireman in the cab. It was a natural time for comment and discussion.

[2] It was the duty of the engineer to observe this child, and to stop. 11 Enc. Digest, Va. & W. Va., 573; 2 Wood on Railroads, 1267. He was not engrossed in duties which took his eyes from the track. He insists he was looking ahead. The weather conditions were evidently good for observation at a distance, and the light pink dress of the child was favorable as a mark clearly to be seen. If the child was on the track, he could not assume that it would get off. That rule as to adults does not apply to irresponsible looking children. If the child was walking between the two great tracks of this railway line, it was likewise the duty of the engineer to take no risk in passing it with the swiftly moving machinery and cars. He was chargeable with knowledge that an infant in such a position is likely to become bewildered and to take a step to its injury. Even adults cannot safely stand near a rapidly moving train. Grease on the child's body and clothing indicated that it might have been struck by the sides of the engine or cars. We do not know how it came to injury. But pregnant is the fact that the child was on or very near the track when the train approached and that the engineer was derelict in not observing its danger and protecting it. That the train injured the child is certain. Why did not the engineer protect it, if he was looking ahead as he says?

[3] Clearly was it negligence to undertake to run a great fast train by this little boy, if the reasonable inference that the engineer undertook that risk is adopted. A cautious man would not do so. He would know that the excitement and confusion would, in a sense, blind the child and cause its fall to injury. To undertake to run by a child in such a place would seem quite as reckless as to rely on a child's leaving the track when on it ahead of an approaching train. The law does not permit the latter, nor will it justify the former. The certain danger because of the immaturity of the child affords the reason in either instance. It is not any particular position of the child that excuses the engineer from failure to stop. The probability of injury, though the child may be wholly off the track, must impel him to stop when circumstances reasonably indicate that injury may happen if he does not do so.

Now, as to the alleged negligence of the parents. It suffices to say that they have not been shown guilty of such negligence as would bar a recovery, even were we to approve the doctrine of imputed negligence, which defendant would have us apply. As to that doctrine we express no opinion. In this case "there was not that omission of ordinary care as persons of ordinary prudence deem adequate care with their children." Gunn v. Railroad Co., supra.

On the demurrer to the evidence, the trial court properly adopted the inferences and conclusions most favorable to the party whose evidence was thereby taken from the jury. These inferences and conclusions were not overcome by any decided preponderance of probability and reason against them. The demurrer was rightly overruled, and judgment against the demurrant entered. The judgment will be affirmed.

NOTE.

I. HEARING AND DETERMINATION IN GENERAL.

[a] The only question for the consideration of the court, on a demurrer to evidence, is whether the evidence supports the issue or not; and the judgment is that it does, or does not, support it.

—(U. S. 1826) United States Bank v. Smith, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 171, 6 L. Ed. 443; (Conn. 1795) Gates v. Nobles, 1 Root, 344; (Va. 1825) Humphrey's Adm'r v. West's Adm'r, 8 Rand. 516.

[b] (Ark. 1842) In case of a demurrer to the evidence, it is error for the court to retain the jury, and, after overruling the demurrer, have the damages assessed by the same jury. A new jury should be summoned for that purpose.—Obaugh v. Finn, 4 Ark. (4 Pike) 110, 37 Am. Dec. 773.

[c] (Fla. 1852) Where the evidence is so loose, uncertain, and indeterminate that no verdict could be rendered upon it by a jury, the court, upon a demurrer to such evidence, should not give judgment, but set aside the demurrer, and award a venire de novo.—Higgs v. Shehee, 4 Fla. 382.

[d] (Fla. 1895) When the evidence demurred to is conflicting, loose, and indeterminate, and there is no statement on the record making it certain, though there be a joinder in the demurrer, it is error to give judgment thereon.—Fee v. Florida Sugar Mfg. Co., 36 Fla. 612, 18 South. 853.

[e] (Fla. 1905) A demurrer to the evidence is to be taken most strongly against the demurrant.—Mugge v. Jackson, 50 Fla. 235, 39 South. 157.

[f] (Fla. 1905) It is not the province of a demurrer to the evidence to bring before the court an investigation of disputed facts, but it is intended to state and admit the facts which the adverse party attempts to prove, and not merely the testimony which may conduce to prove them; and where a demurrer to evidence violates these principles, and a judgment is rendered therein by the trial court, it will be reversed and a new trial awarded.—Mugge v. Jackson, 50 Fla. 235, 39 South. 157.

[g] (Ga. 1853) When defendant demurs to plaintiff's evidence, it is his right to demand the judgment of the court as to the law arising from the testimony; and, if the demurrer be sustained, a nonsuit should be awarded.—Gray v. McNeal, 12 Ga. 424.

[h] (Ind. 1856) On demurrer to the evidence, the court is bound to do against the defendant all that the jury might reasonably have done.—Griggs v. Seeley, 8 Ind. 264.

[i] (Ind. 1873) The judgment rendered on a demurrer to the evidence is substantially the same as a final judgment on demurrer to the complaint or answer.—Lindley v. Kelley, 42 Ind. 294.

[j] (Ind. 1882) On demurrer to evidence, the demurrant cannot make admissions in his own favor and thereby have them influence the determination of a dispute as to the facts. If he wishes to set up any facts in his favor, he must resort to the jury to have them established.—Plant v. Edwards, 85 Ind. 588.

[k] (Ind. 1884) Where a demurrer to a complaint has been overruled, and a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence has been filed, in considering the demurrer to the evidence, defects in the pleadings cannot be taken into consideration.—Bish v. Van Cannon, 94 Ind. 263.

[l] (Kan. 1904) A demurrer to the evidence raises the question of the legal sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the issue of fact in support of which it is offered.—Coy v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 69 Kan. 321, 76 Pac. 844.

[m] (Miss. 1835) A demurrer to evidence presents an issue in law, and it is error for the court, on overruling the demurrer, to award a jury trial.—Hall v. Browder's Adm'rs, 5 Miss. (4 How.) 224.

[n] (Tex. 1873) If plaintiff demur to the evidence of defendant, and defendant join in the demurrer, the question of fact on the evidence is cast on the court. On appeal, the court will render such judgment as the testimony warrants.—Stephens v. Hix, 38 Tex. 656.

[o] (Vt. 1904) The purpose of a demurrer to the evidence is not to bring before the court an investigation of facts in dispute, nor the weight of evidence, but to refer to the court questions of law arising on the facts as ascertained.—Bass v. Rublee, 76 Vt. 395, 57 Atl. 965.

[p] (Va. 1806) On a demurrer to evidence, an unconditional verdict is not error, provided the demurrer be afterwards determined by the court.—Bigger's Adm'r v. Alderson, 1 Hen. & M. 54.

[q] (Va. 1825) After the demurrer is joined, the jury may either be discharged, and, if the judgment is that the evidence does not support the issue, a writ of inquiry will be awarded, or the jury then impeached may assess conditional damages.—Humphrey's Adm'r v. West's Adm'rs, 3 Rand. 516.

[r] (Va. 1827) A demurrer to the declaration was filed, and also a demurrer to the evidence. The jury found a verdict for plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court on the demurrer to evidence. The court decided that the demurrer to the declaration was insufficient, and rendered judgment for plaintiff. Held, that this must be considered as a judgment on the demurrer to the evidence in favor of plaintiff.—Holman v. Gilliam, 6 Rand. 39.

[s] (Va. 1904) Where the evidence is such that the jury might have found the issues in favor of the party against whom a demurrer to the evidence is interposed, the court must so find on the demurrer.—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Pierce, 103 Va. 99, 48 S. E. 534.

[t] (Va. 1905) After issue was joined on the plea of not guilty in an action for negligence, defendant obtained leave to file a plea of limitations, and liberty was granted plaintiff to reply. Defendant during vacation filed the plea, but no issue was taken by plaintiff. Plaintiff's counsel obtained for the first time on the argument of the demurrer to the evidence knowledge of the existence of the plea, and he was taken by surprise. Held, that the court of its own motion should have set aside the demurrer to the evidence and the award of damages thereon, and caused issues to be made up on the plea, and ordered a new trial.—Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Coffey, 104 Va. 665, 51 S. E. 729, petition for rehearing set aside, 52 S. E. 367, 104 Va. 665.

[u] (Va. 1905) Where, in an action for personal injuries, the evidence as to plaintiff's alleged contributory negligence is conflicting, and defendant, by demurring to the evidence, withdraws that question from the consideration of the jury, the court must find plaintiff not guilty of contributory negligence, if the jury might have so found.—Lane Bros. & Co. v. Bott, 104 Va. 615, 52 S. E. 258.

[v] (W. Va. 1886) Where defendant demurred to plaintiff's evidence, which showed that defendant was guilty of the negligence which caused plaintiff's injury, but further proved that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, the court should sustain defendant's demurrer, or ought, on motion of defendant, to exclude from the jury all of plaintiff's evidence.—Gerity's Adm'r v. Haley, 29 W. Va. 98, 11 S. E. 901.

[w] (W. Va. 1887) If a demurrer to evidence be so negligently framed that it does not contain the necessary facts on which a judgment on the merits can be safely founded, and the court, from the facts appearing on the record, judicially knows that other evidence exists, within the reach of the parties, by which the omitted facts may be supplied, the demurrer should be set aside, and a new trial awarded.—Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528, 2 S. E. 888.

[x] (W. Va. 1887) The whole proceeding upon a demurrer to evidence is under the control of the judge before whom the trial is had; and if, owing to a mistake or other causes, a material fact be omitted, without which the merits of the case cannot be decided, the demurrer should be set aside, and a new trial awarded; and this may be done on motion of either of the parties, or by the court itself before final judgment.—Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528, 2 S. E. 888.

[y] (W. Va. 1887) When it has been shown, or by the record it appears to the court, that a demurrer to evidence should be set aside, and a motion for that purpose has been made and improperly overruled, and the court afterwards renders judgment on such demurrer in favor of the party making such motion, the error in overruling such motion is prejudicial to both parties, and the party against whom such judgment on the demurrer was rendered may, upon writ of error, have the same reversed, the demurrer set aside, and a new trial awarded.—Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528, 2 S. E. 888.

[z] (W. Va. 1904) A demurrer to evidence should be overruled, though the evidence in favor of the demurree may be weak, unless on some decisive point the evidence in favor of the demurrant decisively preponderates over the evidence as to that point in favor of the demurree.—Barrett v. Raleigh Coal & Coke Co., 55 W. Va. 395, 47 S. E. 154.

II. CONSIDERATION OF EVIDENCE IN GENERAL.

[a] A demurrer to evidence admits all facts of which there is any evidence, and all conclusions and inferences which can fairly and logically be drawn from such facts.

—(U. S. 1808) Pawling v. United States, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 219, 2 L. Ed. 601; (1826) United States Bank v. Smith, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 171, 6 L. Ed. 443; (1826) Fowle v. Common Council of Alexandria, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 320, 6 L. Ed. 484; (1830) Thornton v. Bank of Washington, 28 U. S. (3 Pet.) 36, 7 L. Ed. 594; (Ala. 1829) Carrington v. Caller, 2 Stew. 175; (1855) Bryan v. State, 26 Ala. 65; (Fla. 1852) Higgs v. Shehee, 4 Fla. 382; (1887) Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 23 Fla. 193, 1 South. 863; (Ill. 1871) Fent v. Toledo, P. & W. Ry. Co., 59 Ill. 349, 14 Am. Rep. 13; (1881) Pennsylvania Co. v. Conlan, 101 Ill. 93; (1882) Morris v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., 10 Ill. App. (10 Bradw.) 389; (Ind. 1871) City of Indianapolis v. Lawyer, 38 Ind. 348; (1874) Strough v. Gear, 48 Ind. 100; (1877) Bailey v. Boyd, 59 Ind. 292; (1877) Peabody v. Peabody, Id. 556; (1877) Fouch v. Wilson, 60 Ind. 64, 28 Am. Rep. 651; (1877) Indianapolis, P. & C. Ry. Co. v. Caudle, 60 Ind. 112; (1877) Newhouse v. Clark, Id. 172; (1878) Indianapolis, P. & C. Ry. Co. v. Goar, 62 Ind. 411; (1879) Atherton v. Sugar Creek & P. Turnpike Co., 67 Ind. 334; (1881) Trimble v. Pollock, 77 Ind. 576; (1882) Indianapolis & V. R. Co. v. McLin, 82 Ind. 435; (1884) Bethell v. Bethell, 92 Ind. 318; (1885) Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. v. Foster, 104 Ind. 293, 4 N. E. 20, 54 Am. Rep. 319; (1886) North British Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Crutchfield, 108 Ind. 518, 9 N. E. 458; (Iowa, 1853) Stanchfield v. Palmer, 4 G. Greene, 23; (1856) Jones v. Ireland, 4 Iowa (4 Clarke) 63; (Ky. 1822) Middleton v. Commonwealth, 11 Ky. (1 Litt.) 347; (Miss. 1841) Chewning v. Gatewood, 6 Miss. (5 How.) 552; (1870) Mobile & O. R. Co. v. McArthur, 43 Miss. 180; (1870) Raiford v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., Id. 233; (Mo. 1890) George v. Wabash Western Ry. Co., 40 Mo. App. 433; Davis v. Clark, Id. 515; (N. Y. 1802) Forbes v. Church, 3 Johns. Cas. 159; (1806) Patrick v. Hallett, 1 Johns. 241; (N. C. 1892) Hopkins v. Bowers, 111 N. C. 175, 16 S. E. 1; (Or. 1888) Hawley v. Dawson, 16 Or. 344, 18 Pac. 592; (Pa. 1804) Peaceable v. Eason, 4 Yeates, 54; (1817) Dickey v. Schreider, 3 Serg. & R. 413; (1859) Tucker v. Bitting, 32 Pa. (8 Casey) 428; (1863) McKowen v. McDonald, 43 Pa. (7 Wright) 441, 82 Am. Dec. 576; (Tex. 1855) Booth v. Cotton, 13 Tex. 359; (1894) Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Templeton (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 135; (Va. 1827) Green v. Judith, 5 Rand. 1; (W. Va. 1875) Miller v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 W. Va. 515; (1881) Lee's Ex'rs v. Virginia & M. Bridge Co., 18 W. Va. 299; (1881) Fowler v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Id. 579.

[b] On a demurrer to evidence, the party who demurs is held to admit every fact which a jury, in the exercise of a fair and reasonable discretion, could infer from the evidence; but he is not bound to admit forced and violent inferences.

—(U. S. 1821) Jacob v. United States, Fed. Cas. No. 7,157 [1 Brock. 520]; (1830) United States v. Williams, Fed. Cas. No. 16,724 [1 Ware (175) 173]; (1842) Jones v. Vanzandt, Fed. Cas. No. 7,501 [2 McLean, 596];

(Ind. 1836) Wilkins v. Rue, 4 Blackf. 263, 29 Am. Dec. 368; (1883) Talkington v. Parish, 89 Ind. 202; (1885) Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. v. Foster, 104 Ind. 293, 4 N. E. 20, 54 Am. Rep. 319; (Mass. 1839) Copeland v. New England Ins. Co., 39 Mass. (22 Pick.) 135; (N. Y. 1841) People v. Roe, 1 Hill, 470; (Tex. 1859) Bradbury v. Reed, 23 Tex. 258; (Va. 1831) Hansborough's Ex'rs v. Thom, 3 Leigh, 147; (1835) Clopton's Adm'r v. Morris, 6 Leigh, 278.

[c] A demurrer to the evidence will be considered as admitting the truth of all introduced, and all fair inferences therefrom, and as waiving all the evidence of the opposite party which contradicts it, or the credit of which is impeached, and all inferences which do not necessarily flow from it.

—(Va. 1849) Tutt v. Slaughter's Adm'r, 5 Grat. 364; (1877) Gillett v. American Stove & Hollow Ware Co., 29 Grat. 565; (1877) Backhouse's Ex'r v. Selden, Id. 581; (1879) Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Anderson's Adm'r, 31 Grat. 812, 31 Am. Rep. 750; (1881) Creekmur v. Creekmur, 75 Va. 430; (1882) Orange, A. & M. R. Co. v. Miles, 78 Va. 773; (1895) Johnson's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co., 91 Va. 171, 21 S. E. 238; (W. Va. 1877) Stolle v. Aetna Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 546, 27 Am. Rep. 593; (1877) Levy v. Peabody Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 560, 27 Am. Rep. 598; (1885) Garrett v. Ramsey, 28 W. Va. 345; (1887) Nuzum v. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 30 W. Va. 228, 4 S. E. 242.

[d] (U. S. 1842) A demurrer to evidence waives all objections to its admissibility, and admits every conclusion that may be fairly deduced from it.—Jones v. Vanzandt (C. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 7,501 [2 McLean, 596].

[e] (U. S. 1876) Upon a demurrer to evidence, every fact which can be reasonably inferred from the evidence is taken as admitted, and a demurrer is allowed in no case where there are facts and circumstances which tend to establish the issues.—Miller v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (C. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 9,560.

[f] (Ala. 1842) On demurrer to evidence, all reasonable presumptions are to be made against the party demurring, and the court is not bound to render judgment in conformity with what should have been the verdict of the jury, but with what it legally could have been.—Dearing v. Smith, 4 Ala. 432.

[g] (Ala. 1842) Two persons by the name of D. were sued as partners with S., who, with one named D., suffered judgment by nil dicit, and the other denied making the note, and, on trial of the issue, a witness stated that "he had always understood that Mr. D. was a member of the firm," held, on a demurrer to the evidence, that the court was authorized to infer that the Mr. D. who pleaded was referred to by the witness.—Dearing v. Smith, 4 Ala. 432.

[h] (Ala. 1851) On a demurrer to evidence, the court must assume as true every fact which a jury could, with any propriety, according to the evidence, find to be true.—Holman v. Whiting, 19 Ala. 703.

[i] (Ala. 1858) A demurrer to evidence raises the question whether a verdict, with every inference a jury could legally draw, could be sustained.—Bates' Adm'r v. Bates, 33 Ala. 102.

[j] (Ind. 1872) A demurrer to evidence admits all facts and conclusions which the evidence conduces to prove. In considering a demurrer, the court must be liberal in its inferences in favor of the plaintiff, and consider every fact as proved which a jury might legally and reasonably have inferred in his favor, avoiding, however, all forced or violent inferences.—Smock v. Henderson, 1 Wils. 241.

[k] (Ind. 1882) A demurrer to evidence withdraws from consideration whatever in the evidence favors the demurrant, and allows all reasonable inferences to be taken against him.—Ruff v. Ruff, 85 Ind. 431.

[l] (Ind. 1884) On a demurrer to evidence, all intendments are against the party demurring.—Nordyke & Marmon Co. v. Van Sant, 99 Ind. 188.

[m] (Ind. 1884) A demurrer to the evidence is a waiver of all objections to its admissibility, and the court will infer from the evidence every conclusion that could reasonably have been inferred by a jury.—Stockwell v. State, 101 Ind. 1.

[n] (Ind. 1887) In considering a demurrer to the evidence the court must accept as true all facts which the evidence tends to prove, together with all such reasonable inferences as a jury might draw therefrom, and, in case there is a conflict in the evidence, only such evidence as is favorable to the party against whom the demurrer is directed can be regarded.—Palmer v. Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co., 112 Ind. 250, 14 N. E. 70.

[o] (Ind. 1892) Where, in an action against a carrier for delivering property to a person other than the consignee, the evidence tends to show that plaintiff owned the property; that the carrier, without authority, delivered it to a person other than the consignee; and that such person converted it to his own use and was insolvent—a demurrer to the evidence should be overruled, since such demurrer concedes the truth of all the facts favorable to plaintiff which the evidence tends to prove.—Hartman v. Cincinnati, I., St. L. & C. Ry. Co., 4 Ind. App. 370, 30 N. E. 930.

[p] (Ind. 1894) On demurrer to the evidence, the court must accept as true all the facts which the evidence, however slight, tends to prove, and, as against the party demurring, all such reasonable inferences as the jury might have drawn from the evidence.—Shearer v. R. S. Peale & Co., 9 Ind. App. 282, 36 N. E. 455.

[q] (Kan. 1885) A demurrer to evidence admits every fact and conclusion which the evidence most favorable to the other party tends to prove.—Christie v. Barnes, 33 Kan. 317, 6 Pac. 599.

[r] (Miss. 1873) In deciding upon a demurrer to evidence, everything which a jury might reasonably infer from the evidence demurred to is to be considered as admitted; and, when the demurrer is uncertain as to the facts proved, the court, instead of giving judgment upon it, will award a venire de novo.—Hicks v. Steigleman, 49 Miss. 377.

[s] (Mo. 1865) When an instruction which was asked by plaintiff in error, and was refused, is in the nature of a demurrer to evidence, every inference is to be taken most strongly against him.—Boland v. Missouri R. Co., 36 Mo. 484.

[t] (Mo. 1880) Plaintiff fell into an excavation which had been maintained in front of defendant's premises for many years. Plaintiff lived on the same street. Held, that the inference that plaintiff knew of the excavation was not to be indulged in, on defendant's demurrer to the evidence.—Buesching v. St. Louis Gaslight Co., 73 Mo. 219, 39 Am. Rep. 503.

[u] (Mo. 1886) A demurrer to the evidence admits every fact which the evidence tends to prove, or which the jurors might with propriety infer from it; and the demurrer should be allowed only when the evidence, so considered, wholly fails to prove some essential allegation.—Noeninger v. Vogt, 88 Mo. 589.

[v] (Mo. 1892) A demurrer to evidence in an equity case has the same effect as in a law case, and concedes every fact which such evidence tends to prove, and every inference fairly deducible from the facts proved.—Healey v. Simpson, 113 Mo. 340, 20 S. W. 881.

[w] (Mo. 1893) On a demurrer to the evidence, the party on whom the burden of proof rested is entitled to the benefit of all the facts before the court at the time the instruction is given, as well as to all reasonable inferences therefrom, whether those facts were developed by plaintiff or by defendant.—City of St. Louis v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 114 Mo. 13, 21 S. W. 202.

[x] (Pa. 1826) On demurrer to evidence, the court are to take all the facts sworn against the demurring party as true.—Feay v. Decamp, 15 Serg. & R. 227.

[xx] (Pa. 1850) Where evidence is demurred to, the truth of all the evidence and all inferences which may be legally drawn from it is admitted, and the party demurring cannot impugn their truth; but the evidence must be left to the jury as in other cases, for the demurrer does not substitute the court in place of the jury.—Davis v. Steiner, 14 Pa. (2 Harris) 275, 53 Am. Dec. 547.

[y] (Tex. 1873) Where the plaintiff's evidence is verbal, the defendant, by demurring thereto, not only admits the facts proved, but also every material fact which the evidence tends to prove, such demurrer going to the competency, and not to sufficiency of the evidence; and the judge is to decide whether or not any competent evidence has been offered.—Hollimon v. Griffin, 37 Tex. 453.

[yy] (Va. 1857) On a demurrer to evidence, the court is to consider all the demurrant's evidence in conflict with that of the demurree withdrawn, the credibility of the latter's witnesses admitted, and all the facts admitted which the demurree's evidence, thus considered, proves or conduces to prove, or which may be reasonably inferred from his whole evidence, both direct and circumstantial; and if several inferences may be drawn from that evidence, differing in degrees of probability, the court must adopt those most favorable to the demurree, provided they be not forced, strained, or manifestly repugnant to reason.—Horner v. Speed, 2 Pat. & H. 618.

[z] (Va. 1887) In an action to recover for injuries sustained through the negligence of defendant, a motion by defendant to exclude relevant and material evidence offered by the plaintiff, on the ground that it does not establish a case of negligence against the defendant, is not an admission by defendant of the facts; but it leaves them a disputed question for the jury, and it is error for the court to exclude such evidence.—Roberts v. Alexandria & F. R. Co., 83 Va. 312, 2 S. E. 518.

[zz] (W. Va. 1883) Where a party withholds evidence under his control, which would render certain a fact material to his success, the presumption is against him, on a demurrer to the evidence introduced by the adverse party.—Heflebower v. Detrick, 27 W. Va. 16.

III. ADMISSIONS AND INFERENCES FROM EVIDENCE.

[a] Upon a demurrer to evidence, it is to be taken most strongly against the party demurring.

—(U. S. 1808) Pawling v. United States, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 219, 2 L. Ed. 601;

(Iowa, 1853) Stanchfield v. Palmer, 4 G. Greene, 23.

[b] Where a party demurs to the evidence of his adversary, his own evidence, or evidence favorable to him, is not to be considered upon such demurrer.

—(Ind. 1881) Fritz v. Clark, 80 Ind. 591; (1882) Ruddell v. Tyner, 87 Ind. 529; (1882) Adams v. Slate, 87 Ind. 573; (1884) Wright v. Julian, 97 Ind. 109; (1885) Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. v. Foster, 4 N. E. 20, 104 Ind. 293;

(Mass. 1839) Copeland v. New England Ins. Co., 39 Mass. (22 Pick.) 135;

(Mo. 1888) St. Clair v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 29 Mo. App. 76.

[c] (Ill. 1902) A motion to instruct the jury to find the defendant not guilty is in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence, and the court, in passing on that motion, is limited to determining whether there was, or not, evidence which, if true, reasonably tended to support the plaintiff's case.—O'Donnell v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 100 Ill. App. 424.

[d] (Ind. 1879) When either party demurs to the evidence, the demurrer must be ruled on in view of all the evidence which has been given at the time the demurrer is filed.—Thomas v. Ruddell, 66 Ind. 326.

[e] (Ind. 1887) Where there is a conflict in the evidence, only such evidence as is favorable to the party against whom the demurrer is directed can be considered, and that which is favorable to the demurring party is deemed to be withdrawn.—Palmer v. Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co., 14 N. E. 70, 112 Ind. 250.

[f] (Kan.) Upon a demurrer to evidence, the court cannot weigh conflicting evidence, but must assume that all the evidence demurred to is true, unless there may be some which should be excluded altogether. The sufficiency of the evidence, in law, is the only question.—(1877) Bequillard v. Bartlett, 19 Kan. 382, 27 Am. Rep. 120; (1884) Wolf v. Washer, 32 Kan. 533, 4 Pac. 1036.

[g] (Kan. 1894) On demurrer to the evidence, the court may strike out or disregard incompetent testimony.—Gillett v. Burlington Ins. Co., 53 Kan. 108, 36 Pac. 52.

[h] (Kan. 1899) On demurrer to evidence, the court can consider only that portion which tends to prove the case of the party resisting the demurrer.—Fuller v. Torson, 8 Kan. App. 652, 56 Pac. 512.

[i] (Kan. 1904) When considering a demurrer to the evidence the court should not weigh the evidence to settle conflicts in it, and should not allow the motion unless it was able to say that, admitting every fact proven which was favorable to plaintiff, and everything inferable from the evidence which was favorable to plaintiff, yet he failed to make out some material fact of his case.—Buoy v. Clyde Milling & Elevator Co., 68 Kan. 436, 75 Pac. 466.

[j] (Kan. 1905) On a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence, the court can take into consideration only those facts and those inferences of fact which are favorable to the plaintiff, and cannot consider defendant's evidence which tends to break down plaintiff's case.—Missouri Can Co. v. Ross, 72 Kan. 669, 83 Pac. 616.

[k] (Miss. 1852) Where a plaintiff, who has introduced proof on his part, demurs to the evidence of defendant, the court cannot invade the province of the jury, and find the facts which the evidence of plaintiff conduces to prove, or institute a comparison between the facts admitted by the demurrer and those proved by the testimony of plaintiff.—Goodman v. Ford, 23 Miss. (1 Cushm.) 592.

[l] (N. C. 1903) In an action for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter, a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence presents the question whether the plaintiff's testimony is sufficient to sustain a finding of such loss of service as is necessary to maintain the action.—Snider v. Newell, 132 N. C. 614, 44 S. E. 354.

[m] (Okl. 1896) Under the provisions of St. 1890 relative to procedure, where defendant demurs to the evidence, only such evidence as tends to make out plaintiff's case can be considered, and defendant's evidence must be regarded as withdrawn.—Jaffrey v. Wolf, 4 Okl. 303, 47 Pac. 496.

[n] (Okl. 1903) On demurrer to the evidence, the court cannot weigh conflicting evidence.—Edmisson v. Drumm-Flato Commission Co., 13 Okl. 440, 73 Pac. 958.

[o] (Tenn. 1898) Evidence unfavorable to a plaintiff will be considered on a demurrer to his evidence, if it is not shown by the other evidence to be incorrect.—Corbett v. J. Allen Smith & Co., 101 Tenn. 368, 47 S. W. 694.

[p] (Va. 1839) On a demurrer by defendant to plaintiff's evidence, the court may consider, in ascertaining the facts established by any one witness, everything stated by him, as well on his cross-examination as on his examination in chief, and facts imperfectly stated in answer to one question may be supported by the answer to another.—Ware v. Stephenson, 10 Leigh, 155.

[q] (Va. 1839) Where defendant demurs to plaintiff's evidence, the court must look to the whole of it, to ascertain what facts the evidence establishes.—Ware v. Stephenson, 10 Leigh, 155.

[r] (Va. 1898) Where plaintiff's testimony was positive respecting a material fact, testimony introduced by defendant, tending to disprove the fact, will be disregarded on demurrer to the evidence.—Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Goode, 95 Va. 751, 30 S. E. 366.

[s] (Va. 1901) Where, in an action for personal injuries, the defendant demurs to the evidence, the circumstance that the evidence adduced on his behalf is in serious conflict with that of plaintiff must be disregarded.—Watts v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., 100 Va. 45, 40 S. E. 107, 3 Va. Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

[t] (Va. 1902) On a demurrer to evidence, demurrant is entitled to the benefit of all of his unimpeached evidence not in conflict with that of his adversary, and of all inferences that necessarily follow therefrom.—Bowers v. Bristol Gas & Electric Co., 100 Va. 533, 42 S. E. 296.

[u] (Va. 1906) Under the rule applicable to a demurrer to the evidence, the testimony of a witness discredited by two witnesses to whom he had made contradictory statements, and the testimony of a witness inconsistent in itself and in conflict with his testimony before a coroner's jury should be disregarded.—Poplin's Adm'r v. Southern Ry. Co., 105 Va. 514, 54 S. E. 45.

[v] W. Va. 1883) On a demurrer to evidence, the only question for the consideration of the court is whether the evidence supports the issue.—Riddle v. Core, 21 W. Va. 530.

[w] (W. Va. 1896) By demurrer to evidence, the demurrant does not waive any of his evidence which is competent; but where it conflicts with that of the demurree it will be regarded as overcome unless decidedly preponderant.—Talbot v. West Virginia C. & P. Ry. Co., 42 W. Va. 560, 26 S. E. 311.

[x] (W. Va. 1901) On demurrer to evidence, the rule is to certify and consider the whole evidence as though on motion to set aside a verdict in favor of the demurree.—Bowman v. Dewing, 50 W. Va. 445, 40 S. E. 576.

[y] (W. Va. 1902) On a demurrer to the evidence the demurree is not entitled to the benefit of evidence offered by him, nor to any inference to be drawn therefrom, where the evidence is incompetent, but has been improperly admitted over the objections of the demurrant.—Huntington Nat. Bank v. Loar, 51 W. Va. 540, 41 S. E. 901.

[z] (W. Va. 1903) Where there is a demurrer to the evidence, the court must consider the evidence on both sides as if there were a motion to set aside a verdict for the demurree, that is, discard all evidence of the demurrant conflicting with that of the demurree, or the credit of which is impeached, and all inferences which do not fairly arise from his own evidence, and as admitting all that may be fairly and reasonably inferred from the evidence of the demurree.—Stewart v. Lyons, 54 W. Va. 665, 47 S. E. 442.

[zz] (W. Va. 1906) On demurrer to the evidence by defendant, if the plaintiff's evidence is sufficient to sustain his case, oral evidence by defendant conflicting with that of plaintiff is ignored and the demurrer overruled, unless the oral evidence of defendant so clearly preponderate over that of plaintiff that a verdict for plaintiff would be set aside.—Kelley v. Ohio River R. Co., 58 W. Va. 216, 52 S. E. 520.

(39 S. C. 41)

STATE v. JONES.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 958*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—COUNTER AFFIDAVITS.

On motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence, the state may introduce counter affidavits disproving the grounds for new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2402; Dec. Dig. § 958.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 945*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—HEARING BEFORE COURT.

The court, on motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence, may relax the rules of evidence applicable to trials, leaving it to its discretion to be governed in reaching its conclusions by such evidence as legitimately should have that effect.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2324-2327; Dec. Dig. § 945.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 959*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—HEARING BEFORE COURT.

The court, on motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence, is not restricted to a consideration only of the grounds brought to its attention by accused, but he must ascertain if injustice has been done, and exclude nothing which can legitimately aid it in guarding the rights of accused and the interests of the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 959.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 958*)—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS—OPPOSING AFFIDAVITS.

Where accused, convicted of the murder of his wife by strychnine poisoning, sought a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, disclosing that his wife had been addicted to taking strychnine to allay nervousness, and for other specified purposes, affidavits offered by the state to the contrary were properly considered by the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2402; Dec. Dig. § 958.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 958*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—DILIGENCE.

The act of the court, on motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, in admitting in evidence the recognizance of witnesses for accused, who will give the newly discovered evidence, is within its discretion, as bearing on accused's diligence in procuring the testimony of such witnesses at the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 958.*]

6. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 956*)—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS—AFFIDAVITS.

Where, on a motion for new trial on the ground of prejudice of jurors, an affiant averred that he was in the courthouse at the time of the impaneling of the jury and heard a juror express his hostility to accused, an affidavit that the affiant was absent from the courthouse at the time was properly received by the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2375; Dec. Dig. § 956.*]

7. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 956*)—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS.

On motion for new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence and prejudice of jurors, evidence of what occurred prior to the trial, as to remarks of counsel protesting against delay and urging a speedy trial, was properly excluded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 956.*]

8. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 940*)—NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS—AFFIDAVITS.

Where accused, convicted of the murder of his wife by strychnine poisoning, sought a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence that she had been addicted to taking strychnine for specified purposes, evidence of the wife's use of ergot and coppers was properly disregarded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Dec. Dig. § 940.*]

9. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 939*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—DILIGENCE OF ACCUSED.

Where accused had witnesses present at the trial, but neglected to use them, he is not entitled to a new trial to have another opportunity to use such witnesses.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2318; Dec. Dig. § 939.*]

10. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 938, 939, 945*)—NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE.

To justify a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, accused must show that the newly discovered evidence would probably have changed the result, if it had been presented to the jury; that it was not known at the time of the trial; and that by due diligence it could not have been ascertained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2308, 2318, 2324; Dec. Dig. §§ 938, 939, 945.*]

11. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 923*)—NEW TRIAL—BIAS OF JURY.

One on trial will be deemed to know whether the jurors were prejudiced against him, because he has ample opportunity to test the impartiality of the jurors, and because he knows that under Civ. Code 1902, § 2946, all objections to jurors, if not made before the jury is impaneled, are waived, and hence cannot be made ground for a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2225; Dec. Dig. § 923.*]

and relied upon were bound over by the prisoner, and were in attendance upon the court at the time of his trial. He did not have them sworn and examined. Indeed, he put up no testimony. If they had been sworn to tell the truth, and examined, would not this secret habit of the deceased, of which they now swear that they then had knowledge, have been brought out, and the prisoner received the benefit of it? Having them present as witnesses and neglecting to make use of them, must the judgment of the court be set aside, in order that he may be offered another opportunity? To do so would be to encourage the withholding of testimony, in order that applications of this character may be made when the judgment is unfavorable. This the court ought carefully to refrain from doing." This, we think, a complete answer to this exception.

The elaborate and able arguments of the zealous counsel for the appellant deal principally with three features of the case, upon which the motion for a new trial was based, and upon which the decision of the circuit judge is assailed: (1) That the charge against the defendant being that he caused the death of the deceased, who was his wife, by administering or causing to be administered to her strychnine poison, and that he is now able and does produce a large array of witnesses who swear that to their knowledge the deceased was addicted to the habit of taking strychnine to allay nervousness, caused by her taking ergot and copperas to prevent conception and to produce miscarriages, and that she took in this way a sufficient quantity of strychnine to account for the appearance of that poison in her stomach after death. (2) The bias and prejudice of certain jurors who had formed and expressed opinions adverse to the prisoner before the trial. Incidentally the decision of the circuit judge is attacked upon other grounds, such as the admission of irrelevant testimony and the exclusion of relevant testimony, but principally upon the two grounds named.

[10] The grounds upon which new trials are granted after conviction and upon after-discovered evidence are that the said evidence must be such as would probably have changed the result, if it had been before the jury, second, that it was not known to the accused at the time of his trial, and, third, that by due diligence it could not have been ascertained. Sams v. Hoover, 33 S. C. 403, 12 S. E. 8.

As to the first position, is it likely or probable that the testimony contained in these affidavits on the part of the prisoner, when refuted by that embraced in the affidavits on the part of the state, would have produced a different result? It should be kept in view at all times that this, as well as other questions of a like nature, is primarily for the circuit judge, who held that the evidence would not, or at least that it was not sufficiently strong to, justify a reversal of the judgment upon this ground. It should also be borne in mind that this evidence, if the witnesses had been interrogated, would have become known to the counsel for the defendant, who have conducted the case with unusual zeal and conspicuous ability from the beginning even unto the end. To permit one on trial to hold back evidence which he may have in his possession, or which he failed to use due diligence to obtain, and then use it as the grounds of a motion for a new trial in the event of an adverse verdict, would be destructive of the efficient administration of justice, and subversive of the rule that it is to the interest of society to have an end to litigation. For these reasons, and in obedience to the rules of law we shall refer to, we cannot do otherwise than sustain the circuit decision.

[11] We come now to the attack upon the jury—that certain jurors had formed and expressed opinions adverse to the defendant, before they were sworn upon the trial. Nothing is of more frequent occurrence than for men, upon sudden impulse or upon ex parte representations of a case, to give expression to their opinions in reference thereto, often in the most violent and feeling manner, and yet these same men, when sworn as jurors and given the opportunity to make up their minds from the evidence adduced, the arguments of counsel and the charge of the judge, and forced to act upon the solemnity of their oaths and the responsibility of their office, make the most exemplary jurors, and frequently decide in opposition to their preconceived opinions. Be this as it may, the law gives an ample opportunity to one on trial to test the impartiality of jurors by swearing them upon their voir dire, when they are invariably asked "if they have formed or expressed opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused"; and the accused has the opportunity of examining them upon any other matter. One upon trial is not only deemed to know everything which, by the exercise of due diligence, he might discover, but he is informed by our statute (section 2946, Code of Laws) that all objections to jurors, if not made before the jury is impaneled or charged with the trial, shall be deemed waived, and if made thereafter shall be of non effect.

[12] It must be borne in mind that the evidence on this point is not after-discovered with respect to this motion. The defendant not only knew of the objections to these jurors at the former motion for a new trial, but made it the ground of his former motion for a new trial before the judge who tried the case, excepted to his decision on this, as well as upon other, grounds, and made it the subject of appeal to the Supreme Court. As well said by the circuit judge, it is now res judicata.

[13] This rule is too well settled to be disturbed at this late day, even if we felt inclined to do so, which we do not, that such motion, i. e., for new trial on after-discovered evidence, rests exclusively in the discretion of the circuit judge, and no appeal lies from his decision, except in the case stated below. We quote from the decision in the case of State v. Workman, 15 S. C. 547: "This motion was addressed to the discretion of the circuit judge, and, unless his discretion was abused, or some rule of law was violated, we have no authority to interfere," and we can also adopt the expression of the view of the court in that case as our own in this. "In this case, so far from their having been any abuse of discretion, or any violation of the rules of law, we agree fully with the circuit judge that the showing upon which the motion was based was altogether insufficient, both in form and substance." The same rule is indorsed in State v. Nance, 25 S. C. 174; State v. Sweat, 16 S. C. 624.

In the case of State v. Don Carlos, 38 S. C. 226, 16 S. E. 832, we have this subject very fully and very ably discussed, and feel that we cannot do better than to restate what is there set forth, reaffirm and adopt it for the purpose of this decision. Mr. Chief Justice McIver says: "In the early judicial history of this state, such motions as this seem to have been very rarely, if ever, granted, for the reason given in State v. Harding, 2 Bay, 268: 'That it might have a very mischievous tendency to establish a precedent of this kind, after a trial and conviction and after all the evidence on the part of the state had been fully disclosed, as it was easy to foresee that a man whose life was in danger would, in every case, even to gain time, make use of a pretext of this kind to create delay; but more especially, by the assistance of confederates, he might be enabled to procure unprincipled men to be witnesses, to contradict the evidence on the part of the state, and thereby defeat the ends of justice.' See, also, Faber v. Baldrick, 1 Tread. Const. 374; Ecfer v. Des Condres, 1 Mill, Const. 69 [12 Am. Dec. 609]; Evans v. Rogers, 2 Nott & McC. 563, and other authorities cited by the solicitor. Now, however, when such motions seem to be received with more favor, it is still the well-settled rule that motions of this kind should be entertained with the utmost caution, 'because, as is said by a learned judge, there are but few cases tried in which something new may not be hunted up, and also because it tends to perjury.' Per Simpson, C. J., in State v. David, 14 S. C. 432, citing with approval State v. Harding, supra.

"It is also well settled that a motion for a new trial upon the ground of after-discovered evidence is addressed to the discretion of the circuit judge, and unless his discretion was abused, or some rule of law was violated, this court has no authority to interfere in a case like this. State v. Workman, 15 S. C. 547; State v. Nance, 25 S. C. 174. As was said by Mr. Justice McGowan, in the case last cited: 'In the class of cases to which this belongs (law cases), this is only a court for the correction of errors of law, and has no power to hear an original motion for a new trial upon the ground of subsequently discovered evidence, or to review the order of a circuit judge refusing such a motion, except in the single case where the circuit judge refuses to grant such a motion upon the ground that he has not the power to do so. The power to grant or refuse a motion for a new trial belongs exclusively to the circuit judge, and from his decision on the subject there is no appeal to this court.' To the same effect, see State v. Sweat, 16 S. C. 624, and Hyrne v. Erwin, 23 S. C. 231 [55 Am. Rep. 15].

[14] "The circuit judge seems to have refused this motion upon two grounds: (1) Because it was not shown to his satisfaction that the newly discovered evidence could not, by the use of due diligence, have been discovered in time to be used on the trial. (2) Because he did not think that the new evidence, if offered at the trial, could or should have influenced the result, or made it different from what it was. If the circuit judge was right in either of these conclusions, he was entirely justified in refusing a new trial, as shown by the case of Sams v. Hoover, 33 S. C. 403, 404 [12 S. E. 8]. Both of these grounds rest upon conclusions of fact, and therefore, under the authorities above cited, are not reviewable here. As was said in Durant v. Philpot, 16 S. C. 124, 'the question of diligence is one of fact,' and whether the new evidence was material was so likewise; and certainly the circuit judge, who had just heard the whole case, was much more competent to determine the question of materiality than this court could possibly be."

In the recent case of State v. Harvey Bradford, 87 S. C. 546, 70 S. E. 308, it is said by Mr. Justice Woods: "We are deeply impressed with the force of the affidavits made on those and other points on behalf of the defendant. Yet it cannot be doubted that some of the affidavits are cumulative, and that, if the statements contained in all of them had been admitted in evidence at the trial, there would have remained a sharp issue of fact, which might have been decided for or against the defendant according to the view taken by the jury of the credibility of the witnesses." It cannot be said, therefore, that the affidavits must necessarily lead any reasonable mind to the inference that the newly discovered evidence would probably change the result. Nothing short of this would justify the conclusion that the circuit court abused its discretion in refusing the motion. This being so, the law does not allow this court to reverse the decision of the circuit court that a new trial should not be granted. In the recent case of Mills v. Atlantic C. L. R. Co., 87 S. C. 152, 69 S. E. 97, it is said: "The rule is well settled that a motion for a new trial on after-discovered evidence is addressed to the discretion of the circuit court, and the refusal of such motion will not be reviewed, unless it appears that there was abuse of discretion, or that the exercise of discretion was controlled by some error of law. State v. David, 14 S. C. 432; State v. Workman, 15 S. C. 547; Sams v. Hoover, 33 S. C. 404 [12 S. E. 8]; Seegers v. McCreery, 41 S. C. 549 [19 S. E. 696]; Peeples v. Werner & Co., 51 S. C. 405 [29 S. E. 2]. Such a motion must generally depend on matters of fact, over which this court has no jurisdiction in actions at law." The motion for a new trial was based, also, upon the alleged misconduct of the jurors in the trial of the case.

It is the judgment of this court that the decision of the circuit judge be affirmed, and the appeal dismissed.

JONES, C. J., GARY, A. J., and WOODS, J., concur.

(39 S. C. 15)

MURPHY v. ATLANTA & C. AIR LINE RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1123*)—AFFIRMANCE—DIVIDED COURT.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to a yard conductor crushed between cars through alleged negligent switching of other cars, held, by a divided court, that a judgment of nonsuit was proper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4421-4427; Dec. Dig. § 1123.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Greenville County; Robt. Aldrich, Judge. "To be officially reported."

Action by J. P. Murphy against the Atlanta & Charlotte Air Line Railway Company. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Jas. A. McCullough, for appellant. Cothran, Dean & Cothran, for respondent.

WOODS, J. Under the facts set out in the opinion of Mr. Justice HYDRICK, I think the judgment of nonsuit was proper for these reasons:

First. There was no evidence whatever that Corn, plaintiff's subordinate, had any reason whatever to even suspect that the plaintiff or any one else would be between the cars on track No. 3, or that any injury would result from running the cars on that track, and it was therefore not negligence toward the plaintiff or any one choosing to take a position between the cars for Corn, who was temporarily in charge of the train, to treat the instruction to enter track No. 2 first and track No. 3 afterwards as a direction allowing him discretion in handling the cars.

According to the well-established rule as to negligence and proximate cause, the test was whether by the exercise of ordinary care Corn ought to have foreseen that any injury might reasonably be anticipated from his act of backing the train on track No. 3. Harrison v. Berkeley, 1 Strob. 550, 47 Am. Dec. 578; Mack v. South Bound R. R. Co., 52 S. C. 323, 29 S. E. 905, 40 L. R. A. 679, 68 Am. St. Rep. 913; Hale v. Columbia, etc., Ry., 34 S. C. 293, 13 S. E. 537; 29 Cyc. 495. There are vital differences between this case and Trimmer v. Atlanta & C. A. L. Ry., 81 S. C. 203, 62 S. E. 209. In that case there was evidence of a switch negligently left open, and the backing of the cars on a track where the conductor Allison was walking in the discharge of his duty with his back to the car that ran on him. Those in charge of shifting cars always have reason to suspect that other employes may be on or near the tracks in the yards of a railroad company, and for that reason must be on the lookout for such persons. So it was held in that case that there was some evidence of negligence to go to the jury. On the contrary, in this case there was no reason whatever for Corn to suppose that Murphy or any one else was between the cars. Surely it cannot be that a railroad company before moving the cars must be on the lookout for persons who choose to go between its cars entirely out of sight of its employes operating the train. This conclusion that there was no negligence on the part of Corn makes testimony as to his competency irrelevant.

Second. Even if negligence towards the plaintiff could be attributed to Corn, the evidence admitted of no other inference than that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in that he undertook to cross between the cars on track No. 3, knowing that they were likely to be struck and moved by other cars at any moment, and did not look nor take any other precaution for his own safety. According to the plaintiff's own testimony, if he had looked, he could not have failed to see the approaching cars.

The court being equally divided, the judgment of this court is that the judgment of the circuit court be affirmed.

HYDRICK, J. On September 11, 1907, plaintiff was a yard conductor in defendant's employ at Greenville. It was his duty, with the aid of a switching crew, to make up trains. There were four side tracks connecting the main line and what is called the lead track. These were numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4, counting from the main line toward the lead track. The train being made up stood on the lead track, and the cars were being placed in the side tracks for the purpose of assembling them together according to their destination, and so arranging them in the train. Seven or eight cars had been placed on No. 3, and some on No. 2. There were none on Nos. 1 and 4. Plaintiff was on the lead track, and had cut loose some cars from the train, preparatory to placing them on the side tracks, but having a call of nature, he handed his switch list to the head brakeman, C. K. Corn, the man next under him in authority, and told him to switch the cars for track No. 2 to that track first, and then switch those for No. 3 to that track. Having given those orders, he proceeded across track 4 and was climbing over the bumpers between two cars about midway the seven or eight standing on track No. 3, when they were struck by cars which were run in on that track, and plaintiff was knocked down, and his leg was run over and crushed, so that it had to be cut off. Plaintiff's purpose was to get between tracks 2 and 3, where he would be hid from view by the cars on those two tracks. That was the nearest and most convenient place for him to get out of sight of people passing along the main line. The nearest privy was something over a quarter of a mile away. By walking the length of three or four cars, he could have gone around the cars, instead of climbing over the bumpers between them. He said, however, that he thought it perfectly safe to go between them, because he expected Corn to obey his instructions and switch the cars for No. 2 to that track first; and, if he had done so, it would have been safe, and he would not have been hurt. He said, also, that was the proper way for the switching to be done.

Plaintiff proved that Corn had been discharged from the service of the company twice, in March and October, 1903, for carelessness, and that he had the reputation of being careless. He proved also by F. C. Worley, a former general yardmaster, that some time in 1904 he was short of hands and wanted to employ Corn; that his superior officer objected to his doing so, and he carried the matter to the trainmaster, who had authority over him in such matters; that he, too, disapproved of his employing Corn. Upon objection of defendant's attorneys, the court refused to allow Worley to state the reasons given by the trainmaster for his disapproval. This witness also said that Corn had the reputation of being a dangerous man when drunk, but all right when sober.

The specifications of negligence are: (1) In backing the cars on track No. 3 first, contrary to plaintiff's instructions. (2) In backing the cars on track No. 3, without warning or signal to plaintiff. (3) In employing an incompetent fellow servant. (4) In failing to provide a suitable privy. At the close of plaintiff's testimony, defendant moved for a nonsuit on the following grounds: "(1) There is no testimony tending to establish the negligence alleged in the complaint as the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. (2) The evidence shows that the cause of plaintiff's injury was his own negligence. (3) The evidence shows that the cause of plaintiff's injury was the negligence of a fellow servant. (4) The evidence shows that plaintiff's injury was due to his own contributory negligence. (5) The evidence fails to show that plaintiff's injury was due to the actionable negligence of the defendant." The court granted the motion, holding: (1) That there was no evidence of negligence, because there was no evidence that Corn knew or had any reason to believe that his changing the order of shifting the cars on tracks 2 and 3 would probably result in injury to any one; (2) that, if there was, it was the negligence of a fellow servant, for which the master was not liable; (3) that the evidence as to the incompetency of Corn related to his discharge from the service of the company six years ago, but that he was afterwards employed and there was no evidence of any complaint after the last employment; furthermore, that plaintiff's witness had testified that he was competent when he was sober, and there was no evidence that he was drunk on the occasion in question; (4) that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in going between the cars on track No. 3, when he knew that cars were likely to be backed in on that track at any moment, and because plaintiff said he could have seen the engine and cars coming in on that track, if he had looked, but that he did not look.

The first assignment of error is in refusing to allow the witness Worley to say what reasons were assigned by defendant's trainmaster for his refusing to allow him to employ Corn. The contention of respondent that this exception cannot avail appellant, because it does not appear what the witness would have said is untenable, because, on respondent's objection, the court would not allow him to say anything as to the reasons assigned. The master owes a duty to each of his servants to exercise reasonable care in the selection of all other servants for their mutual protection. If he fails to discharge that duty, and a servant is injured as a proximate result, the master is liable, unless the injured servant waived his right to hold the master liable by continuing in the service after knowledge of the failure. Where the master is charged with negligence in the employment of an incompetent servant, the inquiry whether the master knew, or ought from the circumstances to have known, of the servant's incompetency, is one of vital importance. It was therefore relevant to the issue to show that defendant knew through its trainmaster, the person who had authority to employ him, of Corn's incompetency, or of his reputation for carelessness, and the declaration of the trainmaster was competent to prove the fact, first, because it showed knowledge on the part of the company; and, second, because the declaration was made in the act of refusing him employment. It was therefore made within the scope of the trainmaster's authority, gave character to his act, and was admissible as part of the res gestæ. State v. McDaniel, 68 S. C. 304, 47 S. E. 384, 102 Am. St. Rep. 661.

The most important question, however, is whether there was any evidence tending to prove the specifications of negligence alleged; for it matters not what Corn's reputation was and had been, if he was careful on the occasion in question. So the real question is: Could more than one inference have been drawn from the testimony as to Corn's conduct on this occasion? If so, then the question should have been submitted to the jury. It would not be proper to intimate any opinion as to what the proper inference should be, for that is exclusively the province of the jury; but clearly the evidence is such that more than one inference can be reasonably drawn from it, and therefore the jury should have been allowed to say what the proper inference was. In Trimmier v. Ry. Co., 81 S. C. 203, 62 S. E. 209, Allison, a freight conductor, carried his train into the yard at Spartanburg. He heard orders given that a certain train in the yard should be placed on track No. 4. In the discharge of his duties, he was either standing or walking on track No. 1, when he was struck and killed by the train which, according to the orders given, should have been switched to track No. 4. The court held that the question of negligence was properly submitted to the jury. In this case, it may have been reasonably inferred from the testimony that Corn knew where plaintiff was going and for what purpose; at any rate, that he knew that plaintiff was only temporarily absent, and that he was somewhere on the yard. Therefore, in view of the circumstances and of the instructions given Corn by the plaintiff, it should have been left to the jury to say whether plaintiff had the right to assume that his orders would be obeyed, and that the cars would be placed on track No. 2 before any were placed on track No. 3, and therefore whether he had a right to assume that it would be safe for him to climb over the bumpers between the cars on track No. 3; in other words, whether plaintiff and Corn acted as ordinarily prudent persons would have acted under the circumstances. It is not necessary that Corn should have reasonably foreseen the consequences of his act. Bodie v. Railway, 66 S. C. 302, 44 S. E. 943; Pickens v. Railway, 54 S. C. 503, 32 S. E. 567; Harrison v. Berkley, 1 Strob. 525, 47 Am. Dec. 578.

This being so, the next question is: Whether, if Corn was guilty of negligence, his relation to plaintiff was such as to prevent a recovery on the ground that plaintiff was injured by the negligence of a fellow servant. When it appears that the offending servant was incompetent, and that his incompetency was known, or ought, by the exercise of due diligence, to have been known to the master, and that his incompetency was the proximate cause of injury to another servant, a prima facie case of liability is made out against the master. In Hicks v. Railway, 63 S. C. 559, 575, 41 S. E. 753, the court said: "We see no reason why it should not be prima facie evidence of negligence to employ an incompetent servant as well as to furnish defective machinery. Nor do we see why a servant should be held to assume the risk of negligence on the part of an incompetent fellow servant when he does not assume the risk arising from defective machinery, especially since it has been decided that the word 'appliances' includes the persons necessary to operate the machinery." Whether Corn was in fact incompetent, and, if so, whether his incompetency was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury, were questions which should have been left to the jury.

But it is argued that Corn's reputation in 1903 and 1904 ought not to have been admitted upon the question of his competency in 1907—three years later. Why not? The testimony was competent. Its weight and sufficiency were for the jury, not the court. Moreover, the plaintiff did not confine his testimony to Corn's reputation in 1903 and 1904; but said generally that he had the reputation of being careless, without saying to what particular time he referred. The testimony was therefore competent, and it was for the jury to say to what time the plaintiff referred; and, even if they found that he referred to his reputation in 1903 and 1904, still it was for them to say what weight it should have.

Reversed.

GARY, A. J., concurs with HYDRICK, J.

JONES, C. J. I favor affirmance for the reasons stated by the circuit court in granting nonsuit, and because there was no prejudicial error in ruling as to admissibility of testimony.

(39 S. C. 11)

TIMMONS et al. v. BOYD et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. CONTRACTS (§ 68*)—PURCHASE BY JUDGMENT CREDITOR FOR BENEFIT OF DEBTOR—CONSIDERATION.

The withdrawal of an answer alleging payment of a judgment interposed by an heir of the judgment debtor in a suit to revive the judgment and the allowance of the revival of the judgment are a sufficient consideration to support the judgment creditor's promise to purchase the land under the judgment, and allow the heir to pay the price and receive a conveyance for life, and, after her death, to any other heirs of the judgment debtor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

2. CONTRACTS (§ 187*)—AGREEMENT BY JUDGMENT CREDITOR TO PURCHASE FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE DEBTOR—ENFORCEMENT—RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS.

Under the rule that a third person may enforce a valid contract made for his benefit, the coheirs on the heir's death could enforce the judgment creditor's agreement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 798-807; Dec. Dig. § 187.*]

3. CONTRACTS (§ 187*)—AGREEMENT BY JUDGMENT CREDITOR TO PURCHASE FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE DEBTOR—ENFORCEMENT—RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS.

Where a judgment creditor purchased the land under the judgment, pursuant to an agreement to allow an heir of the deceased judgment debtor to pay the price and receive a conveyance for life and after her death to other heirs of the debtor, a tender by the heir of the amount due fixed her rights and the rights of the coheirs, and the coheirs on her death, being ready and willing to make good the tender, could enforce the contract made for their benefit by the heir, and a failure to enforce the contract while the heir remained in possession did not defeat an action by the coheirs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 798-807; Dec. Dig. § 187.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Williamsburg County; R. W. Memmlinger, Judge.

Action by Mary J. S. Timmons and another against M. L. Boyd and another. From an order sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, plaintiffs appeal. Reversed.

Kelley & Hinds, for appellants. Gilland & Gilland and Lee & Fishburne, for respondents.

HYDRICK, J. This appeal is from an order sustaining a demurrer to the complaint herein, which, omitting unnecessary details, alleges: That S. B. Green died in 1832 seised of a certain tract of land in Williamsburg, containing 1,300 acres. That judgment had been rendered against him in the court of common pleas for said county in 1837 in favor of Sarah A. Steele for $285. That D. Z. Martin became the owner of said judgment, and in 1885 caused a summons to be issued out of said court, directed to the heirs of S. B. Green, requiring them to show cause why said judgment should not be revived. That issue was thereupon joined by the filing of an answer by Margaret Julia Green, one of the heirs, pleading payment among other things. That said issue was pending until February, 1887, when, in consideration of the withdrawal of her answer and of her consenting to the revival of said judgment, said Martin agreed, in writing, with said Margaret Julia Green as follows: That said tract should be sold under said judgment and bought by him for the amount due thereon, and he would allow her to pay him the purchase money, with interest, and convey the same to her for life, and after her death to any child or children of said S. B. Green living at the time of her death, but, if there were none such, then said tract should revert to said Martin. That, pursuant to the agreement, the land was sold in December, 1887, and bought by Martin for $455, the amount then due on the judgment, and said Margaret Julia Green remained in possession thereof until her death in 1905. That in June, 1885, she tendered Martin the amount due him under the contract in compliance therewith, but the tender was refused. That plaintiffs are and have ever been ready and willing to make good said tender. That at the death of Margaret Julia Green, the plaintiff Mary J. S. Timmons and Annie E. Skinner, who has since died, leaving the other plaintiffs as her heirs, were the only living children of S. B. Green. That Martin died in 1908, leaving a will of which the defendants Boyd and Tisdale are executors, and by which he devised all his real estate to the defendants. Judgment for specific performance of the contract was prayed for. The defendants demurred to the complaint for insufficiency, on the ground that it appears therein: (1) That said agreement was without consideration. (2) That plaintiffs were not parties to the agreement or privies to the consideration thereof, and have no right to enforce it, there being no mutuality therein. (3) That plaintiffs are barred by laches. (4) Because it does not appear that plaintiffs are or have been in possession of said land and have themselves offered to comply with said contract, and their offer has been refused. The demurrer was sustained on all the grounds stated.

[1] The withdrawal of her answer and allowing the judgment to be revived without further contest was sufficient consideration to support the agreement alleged to have been made by Martin with Margaret Julia Green. In Corbett v. Cochran, 3 Hill, 41, 30 Am. Dec. 348, the court said: "The consideration to support an agreement need not of necessity be a pecuniary one, nor even a beneficial one, to the person promising. If it be a loss, or even an inconvenience to the promisee, the relinquishment of a right as the discharge of a debt, or the postponement of a remedy, as the discontinuance of a suit, or a forbearance to sue, it is enough."

[2] A third person may enforce a valid contract made for his benefit. Duncan v. Moon, Dud. 332; Brown v. O'Brien, 1 Rich. 270, 44 Am. Dec. 254; Harris v. Railroad Co., 31 S. C. 87, 9 S. E. 690.

[3] When Margaret Julia Green tendered Martin the amount due him, she did all that the agreement or law required her to do to fix her rights and those of the plaintiffs thereunder. From that time she could safely rest upon her possession of the land, and was bound to do nothing more, until some attempt was made by Martin or those claiming under him to disturb her possession. Why should she have incurred the trouble and expense of a litigation with Martin so long as he refrained from interfering with her right to the possession during her life? 22 A. & E. Ency. L. 1059 et seq.; 16 Cyc. 174; Orthwein v. Thomas, 127 Ill. 554, 21 N. E. 430, 4 L. R. A. 434, 11 Am. St. Rep. 159. Her continued possession under the contract in the face of Martin's legal title was ripening and strengthening her claim to the land, and his acquiescence therein was correspondingly weakening his. There was therefore as much if not more reason for him to act than for her. Until her death, the other parties for whose benefit the contract was made could take no steps to enforce it, because, until that event occurred, it was not certain who would be entitled to the benefit of the contract. The tender made by Margaret Julia Green inured to the benefit of all parties who were or might be interested in the contract. Therefore it was not necessary for plaintiffs to make another tender. They allege that they are and have ever been ready and willing to make good the tender which was made for their benefit as well as for that of Margaret Julia Green, and that is enough.

Reversed.

JONES, C. J., WOODS, J., and GARY, A. J., concur.

(28 S. C. 576)

STONE v. MAHON.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. May 9, 1911.)

1. QUO WARRANTO (§ 54*)—PROCEEDINGS—PLEADINGS—ADMISSIONS.

Where the return is not traversed in proceedings to require cause to be shown why one occupies a public office, the facts alleged therein must be taken as true.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Quo Warranto, Cent. Dig. § 61; Dec. Dig. § 54.*]

2. JUDGES (§ 2*)—CREATION AND ABOLITION OF OFFICE—POWERS OF CITY—ABOLITION OF MUNICIPAL COURT.

A city can repeal an ordinance enacted pursuant to statute establishing a municipal court, though an officer of such court was thereby ousted from office before the expiration of the term for which he was elected.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judges, Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Greenville County; S. W. G. Shipp, Judge.

Proceeding by Richard G. Stone against G. H. Mahon to require cause to be shown why defendant occupies a public office. Order discharging the rule to show cause, and plaintiff appeals. Appeal dismissed.

The following is the opinion of Shipp, J., of the court below:

"On the 25th day of March, 1909, upon affidavit of Richard G. Stone, hereto attached, I issued the rule against G. H. Mahon, requiring him to show cause before me at my chambers at the courthouse at Greenville, S. C., on the 30th day of March, 1909, by what authority he exercises and enjoys the office of recorder of the police or municipal court of the city of Greenville, reference to which affidavit and rule is hereby craved.

"It will be observed that in his affidavit said Richard G. Stone states that he was elected by the city council of Greenville on the 21st day of September, 1907, to the office of recorder of the police or municipal court for the city of Greenville for a term of four (4) years, in accordance with the provisions of an act of the General Assembly of said state, entitled 'An act to establish municipal courts, to define the powers and jurisdiction of such courts and to provide for the conduct of business thereof in cities over twenty thousand and not exceeding fifty thousand inhabitants,' approved on the 26th day of February, A. D. 1902; that he duly qualified and was duly commissioned and entered upon the duties of said office, etc. He further charges that the said G. H. Mahon thereafter 'usurped said office of recorder and claims to exercise the duties thereof.'

"Said G. H. Mahon answered said rule, and, among other things, denies that he is now exercising the duties of the office of recorder, and states that he is mayor of the city of Greenville, and as such presides over the police or municipal court, without compensation, at the request of the council.

"He further alleges that the office of recorder or municipal court of Greenville was abolished by an ordinance of the city council of Greenville on the 22d day of September, 1908, which ordinance repealed the ordinance of August 8, 1907, establishing said municipal court, which said ordinance, it is alleged, was passed in pursuance of an act of the Legislature, approved on the 19th day of February, 1904, authorizing the establishment of a municipal court in cities whose population is not less than 4,000 and no more than 20,000.

"The return further states that the city of Greenville obtained its charter under the general law providing for incorporation of a city under 20,000 inhabitants, and that, as a matter of fact, at the time the ordinance was passed, establishing the municipal court for the city of Greenville, and now, the said city has less than 20,000 inhabitants.

[1] "The return further alleges that after the ordinance was passed, repealing the ordinance establishing said court, the plaintiff, without protest, vacated his office and has since appeared before the said mayor's court in several cases, representing the defendant, and has never objected to the jurisdiction of said court. There is no traverse of the return of the mayor, and the facts alleged must therefore be considered as true.

"Counsel for respondent concedes that if the said Richard G. Stone held his office under the act of 1902, by which the Legislature itself established municipal courts in cities of over 20,000 people, that the city council of Greenville had no authority, by ordinance or otherwise, to interfere with the provisions of said act. They contend, however, that the said municipal court was not established by the Legislature under that act, but was established by ordinance in pursuance of the act of 1904, and which declared that: 'It shall be lawful for the city council of any city in this state whose population by the last census is not less than four thousand and not more than twenty thousand, * * * by an ordinance duly enacted, to establish in such city a municipal court for the trial and determination of all cases arising under the ordinances of such city.'

"They further contend that, inasmuch as the Legislature does not itself establish the court or create the office, but has delegated the power to certain municipalities therein mentioned, the Legislature impliedly recognizes the general right of a municipality to repeal all ordinances enacted by it, and that in this case the said ordinance was repealed.

"It is my opinion that the ordinance establishing the municipal court for the city of Greenville and creating the office of recorder was passed in pursuance of the provisions of the act of 1904, and the said Richard G. Stone did not, therefore, hold his office under the act of 1902, as contended for by him.

[2] "I am further of the opinion that the municipal authorities of Greenville, having by ordinance established said court, had the right to repeal said ordinance, if in their judgment the public interest so demanded.

"The fact that the effect of this ordinance was to oust the plaintiff from the office which he held before the expiration of the term for which he was elected does not render this legislation on the part of the city council invalid.

"The rule is thus concisely stated in Mechem on Public Officers, page 467: 'Where the Legislature has conferred upon a municipal board the authority to create offices, the board may abolish the offices so created, though the term of the incumbent has not expired.' See, also, Cyc. 28, page 401, and Cooley's Constitutional Law, page 332.

"In the case of Councilmen v. Brawner, 100 Ky. 70, 37 S. W. 951, the Supreme Court of Kentucky uses this language: 'And we know no reason why the municipal legislature that has, in the exercise of discretion given by the General Assembly, established a city office, may not, at will and at its pleasure, abolish it.'

"To sustain the same position, see Abbott on Municipal Corporations, page 1532; State

v. Jennings, 57 Ohio St. 415, 49 N. E. 404, 63 Am. St. Rep. 725; Downey v. State, 160 Ind. 578, 67 N. E. 450; Mechem on Public Officers, pages 296, 297; Cooley's Constitutional Law, pages 53, 332; Ford v. Board of Commissioners, 81 Cal. 28, 22 Pac. 280, where the following language may be found: 'So when the people directly, or through the Legislature, clothe any department of the government, or any of its boards or officers, with power, at discretion, to create an office, they clothe it with the like power to abolish the same office. The counsel for the defendant have cited cases from more than half of the states in the Union in support of this proposition that the power which creates an office may abolish it, without regard to the expiration of the term of the incumbent.'

"It is contended, however, that under the Constitution of 1895, delegating to the Legislature the authority to create inferior courts, the Legislature had no power to delegate this duty to a municipal corporation. If this contention be correct, then the act of 1904, conferring upon municipalities under 20,000 the right, by ordinance, to establish said court, was unconstitutional, and the ordinance passed in pursuance thereof was unconstitutional, and there has never been a municipal court for the city of Greenville, and the said Richard G. Stone has never held the office of recorder.

"The rule further alleges that the said Richard G. Stone, after the passage of the ordinance of September 22, 1908, repealing the ordinance of August 8, 1907, which established the municipal court for the city of Greenville, vacated said office without protest, and has since acquiesced by practicing in the mayor's court or the police court, presided over by the defendant, and without objecting to its jurisdiction. There seems to be authority for this position, but the views herein above expressed render it unnecessary to consider this question.

"It is therefore ordered that the rule heretofore issued by me be discharged."

Croft, Aiken & Croft and Cothran, Dean & Cothran, for appellant. Jos. A. McCullough, for respondent.

GARY, A. J. This is a proceeding in which a rule was issued, requiring the defendant to show by what authority he discharged the duties of the office of recorder, in the city of Greenville.

The facts are fully stated in the order of his honor, the presiding judge, discharging the rule to show cause, and his conclusion is fully sustained by the authorities which he cites. The authorities cited by his honor, the circuit judge, are not in conflict with the case of Hardy v. Reamer, 84 S. C. 487, 68 S. E. 678.

Appeal dismissed.

WOODS, J., did not sit in this case.

(155 N. C. 205)

BROWN v. HUTCHISON et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 11, 1911.)

1. BOUNDARIES (§ 39*)—ASCERTAINMENT—TRIAL—TRANSFER.

Where an action to ascertain a boundary is brought before the clerk under the direct provisions of Revisal 1905, § 326, and the issue of title is raised, the cause should be transferred to the superior court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Dec. Dig. § 39.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 353*)—DEEDS—ADMISSIBILITY.

While an unregistered deed is not competent evidence of title, yet it passes title which will be completed by registration, and as Revisal 1905, § 980, contains no limitation as to when a deed shall be registered, simply invalidating it against purchasers or creditors until registered, a deed, not registered until after the commencement of an action, is competent evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1404-1431; Dec. Dig. § 353.*]

3. EJECTMENT (§ 9*)—TITLE OF PLAINTIFF.

To maintain an action involving the title of land, plaintiff must have title at the commencement of the action, as well as at trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Cent. Dig. §§ 16-29; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

4. EJECTMENT (§ 13*)—TITLE TO SUPPORT—EQUITABLE TITLE.

An equitable title will support an action of ejectment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Cent. Dig. §§ 56-58; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

5. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 73*)—NATURE—COLOR OF TITLE.

One not the grantee may show color of title to land under a registered deed validly conveying title from the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Dec. Dig. § 73.*]

6. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 82*)—COLOR OF TITLE—DEEDS—RECORD.

Under Revisal 1905, § 980, providing for the registration of deeds, a plaintiff who has introduced a registered deed under which he may show color of title can introduce unregistered deeds to show color of title, where they are foreign to the title under which the opposite party claims.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 468-471; Dec. Dig. § 82.*]

7. EVIDENCE (§ 82*)—REGISTRATION—SUFFICIENCY.

The certificate of a justice appended to a certain deed was not signed by him, though in the following form: "I, F. M. Adams, a justice of the peace, do certify," etc. The certificate of the registration clerk recited that the certificate of the justice was correct, and that the deed should be registered. Revisal 1905, § 1002, does not expressly require the certificate of the justice to be subscribed by him, but merely prescribes that a certain form shall be followed in substance. Held, that under the maxim, "Omnia presumuntur rite esse acta," the certificate of the justice will be presumed to be correct, for the probate of a deed is a judicial act, and the presumption is that the probate and registration are correct.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 104; Dec. Dig. § 82.*]

8. REGISTERS OF DEEDS (§ 5*)—PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES.

An order by the clerk for the registration of a deed is a continuous order, and it is the duty of the register to act at any time until the deed shall have been fully recorded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Registers of Deeds, Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

9. EVIDENCE (§ 353*)—DEEDS—ADMISSIBILITY.

An original deed which purports to have been registered and properly certified by a justice of the peace is admissible in evidence to show that the certificate was in fact duly signed by the justice, and that the omission of the justice's name from the record was an error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Dec. Dig. § 353.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wilkes County; Long, Judge.

Action by A. B. Brown against J. F. Hutchison and others. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Error.

Finley & Hendren and W. W. Barber, for appellant. F. D. Hackett, Hayes & Jones, and Hackett & Gilreath, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. [1] This was an action brought originally before the clerk under the processioning act (Revisal 1905, § 326), to establish a boundary line. The issue of title being raised by the answer, the cause was properly transferred for trial to the superior court at term. Smith v. Johnson, 137 N. C. 43, 49 S. E. 62; Stanaland v. Rabon, 140 N. C. 202, 52 S. E. 417; Davis v. Wall, 142 N. C. 452, 55 S. E. 350; Woody v. Fountain, 143 N. C. 69, 55 S. E. 425; Green v. Williams, 144 N. C. 63, 56 S. E. 549.

[2] The first exception is that the judge refused to permit the plaintiff to introduce in evidence a deed from Absher to Brown, executed in December 1859, as a part of the plaintiff's chain of title, on the ground that it was not recorded till after the commencement of the action. The exception is well taken.

[3] While it is unquestionably true that the plaintiff must have title at the commencement of the action, as well as at the time of the trial (Burnett v. Lyman, 141 N. C. 501, 54 S. E. 412, 115 Am. St. Rep. 691), it is not indispensable that the deed should be recorded at the commencement of the action. The delivery of the deed conveys the title which will be perfected by registration.

[4] It is well settled that the plaintiff in ejectment may recover upon an equitable title, though it was otherwise on the law side of the docket under the former system of procedure. Condry v. Cheshire, 88 N. C. 375, and numerous cases approving that case cited in the annotated edition, among them Taylor v. Eatman, 92 N. C. 610; Geer v. Geer, 109 N. C. 682, 14 S. E. 297; Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N. C. 118, 19 S. E. 278. In Respaw v. Jones, 102 N. C. 11, 8 S. E. 770, the court says (citing Condry v. Cheshire, supra): "After the execution and delivery of a deed, the estate passes out of the grantor and vests in the grantee, to be legally perfected by registration. If, before registration, the deed is lawfully destroyed, such loss or destruction does not restore the estate to the grantor (Dugger v. McKesson, 100 N. C. 1 [6 S. E. 746])—adding that, though “the legal estate is not perfected till registration, when registered it relates back to its date of execution,” citing McMillan v. Edwards, 75 N. C. 81, and other cases. See, also, Phillips v. Hodges, 109 N. C. 251, 13 S. E. 769.

Chapter 147, Laws 1885, now Revisal, § 980, contains no limitation as to the time when a deed shall be registered. It simply provides that it shall not be valid against purchasers or creditors, except from the registration thereof. Cozad v. McAden, 148 N. C. 11, 61 S. E. 633; Hallyburton v. Slagle, 130 N. C. 484, 41 S. E. 877.

It is true that the instrument must be probated and registered to be competent as evidence of title. Jennings v. Reeves, 101 N. C. 450, 7 S. E. 897, which quotes with approval Phifer v. Barnhardt, 88 N. C. 333, and Walker v. Coltraine, 41 N. C. 79, that “it is an error to say that an unregistered deed conveys only an equity. It is a legal conveyance, which, although it cannot be given in evidence until it is registered, and is therefore not a perfect legal title, yet has an operation as a deed from its delivery.” The doctrine laid down in Phifer v. Barnhardt, supra, is affected by the act of 1885, c. 147, now Revisal, § 980, to this extent only, that a junior registered deed is valid from its registration in priority to a senior deed which is registered later.

His honor's action was based upon the ruling in Morehead v. Hall, 132 N. C. 122, 43 S. E. 542, which is not in point. In that case, when the action was begun, the grant from the state, issued in 1765, through which the plaintiff claimed, not only had not been registered, but could not have been legally registered at that time. Therefore the plaintiff could have had no title when he began his action. A subsequent act authorized the registration of the grant which at the time of the trial had been registered, but the court held that the registration could not relate back prior to the passage of the act, and validate a cause of action which did not exist when summons issued. Here the deed from Absher to Brown was valid as between them without registration, and could have been recorded at the time the action was begun. When it was registered, it related back to the delivery of the deed. The only exception to the effect of such relation back would be as to purchasers claiming under the same chain of title, or creditors.

It has been not uncommon practice, as the profession knows, that when a deed offered in a chain of title has not been registered, and therefore cannot be admitted in proof, for the parties to probate it then, and have it registered during the trial. Among many cases in which this has been recognized are Cawfield v. Owens, 129 N. C. 236, 40 S. E. 62; Cook v. Pittman, 144 N. C. 531, 57 S. E.

219, 119 Am. St. Rep. 985. This is sometimes done during a recess of the court, and there have been instances where the presiding judge, to prevent a defect of justice, in his discretion, has granted the parties time to go down to the clerk's office to probate the deed and have it registered that it may be offered in evidence.

[5] In this case the plaintiff had already introduced a grant from the state to Eli Brown, dated October, 1846, and duly registered. He could therefore have shown seven years possession under color. Gilchrist v. Middleton, 107 N. C. 663, 12 S. E. 85.

[6] The deeds from Eli Brown to Absher in 1855 and of Absher to Elijah Brown in 1859, and the deed from the latter's executors in 1862, recorded in 1885, were competent to show color of title. In Janney v. Robbins, 141 N. C. 400, 53 S. E. 863, it is held that the principle under our present registration law of 1885, c. 147, now Revisal, § 980, that an unregistered deed does not constitute color of title, does not extend to a claim by adverse possession, held for the requisite time under a deed foreign to the title, under which the opposite party claims. It is true that the plaintiff did not offer proof of possession; but he was excluded from offering the above deeds and from showing that they covered the locus in quo.

[7] The plaintiff offered to introduce in evidence a deed from the executors of Elijah Brown to himself for the locus in quo, executed in 1862 and registered in 1885. The court refused to admit the same, because the record of the certificate of the justice of the peace had omitted the signature of the justice. The certificate as recorded was as follows:

“I, F. M. Adams, a justice of the peace, do certify that James W. Brown, the subscribing witness to the foregoing deed of conveyance, came before me this day and maketh oath in due form of law that he saw the foregoing deed signed and delivered in his presence. Given under my hand and private seal this 15th April, 1885.

“North Carolina, Wilkes County.

“The foregoing certificate of F. M. Adams, a justice of the peace of Wilkes, is adjudged to be correct. Let the said deed with these certificates be registered.

“Filed 15 April, 1885, and registered.”

The plaintiff then offered the deed itself, to show that the justice had actually signed the certificate, and insisted that the register of deeds should then and there make the correction in the record. His honor refused to admit the record, or the deed itself, though he inspected the deed and saw that the justice of the peace had signed the certificate of probate.

The exceptions to the above refusals constitute the second and third assignments of error, and we think are well taken. The name "F. M. Adams, a justice of the peace," is written in the certificate, though it is not subscribed at the end thereof, and the certificate of the clerk adjudges that the certificate of "F. M. Adams, a justice of the peace," is correct. Under the maxim, "Omnia præsuntur rite esse acta," the certificate is valid. Kidd v. Venable, 111 N. C. 535, 16 S. E. 317; Etheridge v. Ferebee, 81 N. C. 312. Revisal, § 1002, does not expressly require the certificate by the justice to be subscribed by him, but provides that the form therein given shall be "in substance." The justice's name is written in the first line, and the clerk has duly adjudged the certificate to be correct. It has been often held that a will need not be subscribed by the testator, but it is sufficient if his name is written in the body thereof in his own hand; the execution in other respects being duly proven. The probate of a deed is a judicial act, and the presumption is that the probate and registration are correct. Cochran v. Improvement Co., 127 N. C. 386, 37 S. E. 496.

In Heath v. Cotton Mills, 115 N. C. 202, 20 S. E. 369, the certificate recited that the deed had been duly proven, and the attestation clause recited that the deed was duly signed, sealed, and delivered. The registration thereof did not show a copy of the seal, nor any device representing it; but the court held that if the record represented on its face in another way, as by recitals or otherwise, that the deed was sealed, and it was in fact duly sealed, this was sufficient.

[8] Besides, the order of the clerk for the registration of the deed was a continuous order, and it was the duty of the register to act at any time till the deed should be fully recorded. Sellers v. Sellers, 98 N. C. 13, 3

S. E. 917, in which Merrimon, J., says that "a reregistration of the deed was unnecessary. If the register fails at first to completely execute the order of registration, it continues in force and is mandatory until it is completely executed, and it continues to be the register's duty to execute it until he has completely done so. If he finds he has by inadvertence omitted a word, a sentence, a paragraph, or a scroll representing a seal, we think he might, in good faith, complete the registration in these respects. Of course, he could not have authority to interpolate anything that was not in the deed, or other instrument, at the time the probate was made."

[9] The court further erred in excluding the original deed when offered to show that the certificate was in fact duly signed by the justice of the peace. Strain v. Fitzgerald, 130 N. C. 600, 41 S. E. 872; Smith v. Lumber Co., 144 N. C. 47, 56 S. E. 555; Edwards v. Supply Co., 150 N. C. 175, 63 S. E. 740; Royster v. Lane, 118 N. C. 156, 24 S. E. 796.

The fourth exception is to the refusal of the court to permit the plaintiff to show that the locus in quo was embraced in the grant and in the deeds above shown. Upon this refusal the plaintiff excepted and took a nonsuit. The validity of the last exception depends, of course, upon the other three. The defendant moved to dismiss the appeal upon the ground that the nonsuit was not justified in that state of the case; that the plaintiff should have gone on and offered evidence of possession under the deed. But as his chain of title and proof that his deeds covered the locus in quo had been rejected, evidence to show possession would have been useless.

Error.

(155 N. C. 473)

STATE v. SMITH et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 26, 1911.)

1. LIBEL AND SLANDER (§ 154*)—CRIMINAL PROSECUTION—BURDEN OF PROOF—INSTRUCTIONS.

The charge on prosecution under Revisal 1905, § 3640, for slander of an "innocent woman," by a charge of incontinency, when considered as a whole, held to place on defendants the burden of disproving prosecutrix's innocence, or at least to leave in doubt and uncertainty who has the burden, though it stated that the burden of proving the charge was on the state, where it also stated that the law presumes that a woman is of good character for virtue till the contrary appears, but that, evidence having been offered of impeachment of the character of the prosecutrix, the burden was cast on the state to prove that she was an innocent woman within the purview of the statute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Libel and Slander, Cent. Dig. §§ 428, 429; Dec. Dig. § 154.*]

2. LIBEL AND SLANDER (§ 154*)—SLANDER OF INNOCENT WOMAN—BURDEN OF PROOF.

On a prosecution under Revisal 1905, § 3640, declaring guilty one who shall attempt, in a wanton and malicious manner, to destroy the reputation of an innocent woman by words charging incontinency, the innocence of the woman is one of the facts essential to the commission of the offense, which the state has the burden of showing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Libel and Slander, Cent. Dig. §§ 428, 429; Dec. Dig. § 154.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Polk County; Webb, Judge.

Elsie Smith and another were convicted of slander, and appeal. Reversed, and new trial ordered.

This is an indictment for the slander of an innocent woman under Revisal, § 3640. The exceptions are to the charge of the judge. He correctly defined the term "innocent woman" as used in the statute, and then charged upon the burden of proof as follows:

"(1) The burden of proving the charge is upon the state, and it must satisfy you beyond a reasonable doubt, and, if it fails to offer evidence which will establish the uttering of the slanderous words beyond a reasonable doubt, the offense is not made out, but, the defendants having admitted uttering the slanderous words, proof of that fact is dispensed with, and you will find that they were uttered.

"(2) The law presumes that all witnesses are of good character till same is impeached, and it likewise presumes that a woman is of good character for virtue till the contrary appears; but evidence having been offered in impeachment of the character of the woman, May Liles, the court charges you that the burden is cast upon the state to prove that she is a woman innocent within the purview of the statute, and, if you find that she is not an innocent and virtuous woman as explained to you above, then you will not convict, but will return a verdict of 'not guilty' as to both the defendants.

"(3) The court further charges you that the defendants do not have to satisfy you beyond a reasonable doubt as to the truth of the slanderous language used, but only have to offer such evidence as will cause you to entertain a reasonable doubt as to their truth, because, if you have a reasonable doubt as to the virtue of the prosecuting witness, you cannot convict, and the court so charges you.

"(4) The only question for you to determine in this case is whether the statement of the defendants that they both had had criminal intercourse with the prosecuting witness, May Liles, is true, and, if you have a reasonable doubt of this testimony, then you will not convict. The defendants testify that they have had intercourse with May Liles, and she denies it and offers evidence of her good character. All this you will consider, but, as stated above, the only question in the case is whether these statements of the defendants are true, and your verdict will turn upon your finding in this particular.

"(5) The statute was passed to protect and preserve the character of innocent women as already explained to you, and, before you can convict, it must appear that the woman is innocent and virtuous. The court has told you where the burden of proof rests, and calls the matter again to your attention to impress it upon your minds.

"(6) You will consider the evidence offered by the state as to the character of the prosecuting witness May Liles, and if you find upon the evidence and from the presumptions as explained to you beyond a reasonable doubt that said prosecuting witness, May Liles, is an innocent and virtuous woman, then you will return a verdict of 'guilty.'

The jury returned a verdict of guilty. The defendants, after moving unsuccessfully for a new trial, appealed from the judgment rendered upon the verdict.

Attorney General Bickett and Assistant Attorney General, Geo. L. Jones, for the State.

WALKER, J. [1] When the charge of the court is analyzed and its several parts compared, and after giving it a fair and reasonable construction, as a whole, which we are required to do in all cases, we are driven to the conclusion that the judge virtually told the jury that the burden was on the defendants to disprove the innocence of the prosecutrix. It may well be inferred from one or two sentences of the charge that his honor thought the burden as to this ingredient of the offense was upon the state, and this was the correct view; but, when he said that there was a presumption of law in favor of the innocence and virtue of the prosecutrix, until the contrary appears, he might as well have gone further and instructed the jury, in so many words, that, unless the defendants had satisfied them she was not an innocent woman, the presumption should prevail, and they would find the fact accordingly. A similar charge was condemned by this court in State v. McDaniel, 84 N. C. 803. We reproduce the syllabus of the case: "On trial of an indictment for slander under Act 1879, c. 156, the admission of the defendant that he spoke the words charged does not shift the burden of proof upon him to show he had not slandered an innocent woman. Her innocence is a question for the jury upon the evidence, and no presumption of her innocence should be allowed to weigh against the defendant." It will be seen at once that it decides the very point presented in this case. Instead of placing the burden by explicit words upon the state, where it belonged, the court used language which was certainly calculated, whether intended or not, to impress the contrary view upon the jury. It could make no difference what the judge intended to charge. We must deal with the charge as it is; for the jury cannot see or understand his unexpressed intention, but only what he said. This error was not cured by anything said afterwards, or by any previous utterance of the judge. On the contrary, it was, if possible, emphasized in one or two instances. What could the jury have understood the learned judge to have meant when he told them that the law presumes a woman is innocent and virtuous until the contrary appears? It could not be expected that the state would make it appear otherwise than that she was innocent, or, in other words, to defend the prisoners. Well, then, who must make this appear? Why, of course, the defendant. The court further charged that the case turned upon the truth of the charge made by defendants, leaving out of consideration the question of the woman's innocence. And again the court charged: "But, evidence having been offered in impeachment of the character of the woman May Liles, the burden is then cast upon the state to prove her to be an innocent woman." What does this mean? That the defendant must first attack the prosecutrix by evidence showing her lascivious nature and guilt of actual sexual intercourse before the burden of proof shifts to the state. This is not the law, as we understand it to be.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes 71 S.E.—20

[2] The burden is upon the state to show every fact essential to the commission of the crime, and we cannot doubt that the innocence of the woman is one of those facts. Without it, to show that her virtue and chastity have been impeached by a charge of sexual intercourse is not sufficient. It tends to prove no criminal offense, and in proving, we may say, but one-half of the offense, when the state is required to prove the whole of it. In State v. McDaniel, supra, Justice Ruffin thus clearly explains the law as to the burden of proof in prosecutions of this kind:

"As we construe it, the offense defined consists, not in the slander of a woman by falsely charging her with incontinency, but in the attempt to destroy the reputation of an innocent woman by such means. * * * The innocence, then, of the woman who is the subject of the attempt, lies at the very foundation of the offense, and constitutes its most essential element—its very sine qua non, and must of necessity be distinctly averred in the indictment. If necessary to be averred, then, under the principle declared in the cases of State v. Woodly, 47 N. C. 276, and State v. Evans, 50 N. C. 250, the burden of proof devolved upon the state, even though it involved the necessity of its proving a negative." The decision in that case was approved in State v. Mitchell, 132 N. C. 1033, 43 S. E. 938, and the general rule is fully and ably discussed by Justice Hoke in State v. Connor, 142 N. C. 700, 55 S. E. 787, where it is held that the burden of showing the innocence of the woman is upon the state. In the most favorable view we can take of the charge for the state upon this appeal, the jury were, at least, left in doubt and uncertainty as to the burden of proof, whether it rested upon the state or the defendants. The Attorney General admits in his brief that in this respect the charge was erroneous.

New trial.

(155 N. C. 326)

WRIGHT v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 28, 1911.)

1. NEGLIGENCE (§ 117*)—ACTIONS—PLEADING—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

A plea of contributory negligence is not good when it does no more than deny the negligence of the defendant, and allege that the plaintiff was injured by his own negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 195-197; Dec. Dig. § 117.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 344*)—OPERATION—INJURIES AT CROSSING—PLEADING—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Where defendant in an action against a railroad for injuries received at a railroad crossing alleged in its plea of contributory negligence that the plaintiff entered upon the track of the defendant without looking and listening, and that he recklessly attempted to cross the track in front of an approaching train, it was sufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Dec. Dig. § 344.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 139*)—TAKING CASE FROM JURY—WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

It is a preliminary question in an action for the court to decide whether as matter of law there is any legal evidence to be submitted to the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 332, 333, 338-341; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

4. TRIAL (§ 139*)—TAKING CASE FROM JURY—QUESTIONS OF LAW OR FACT—INFERENCES FROM EVIDENCE.

The court in determining the preliminary question whether there is any legal evidence to be submitted to the jury should adopt that construction of the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 338-341; Dec. Dig. § 189.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 348*)—OPERATION—INJURIES AT CROSSING—ACTION—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action against a railroad for injuries at a crossing alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence, evidence for plaintiff held sufficient to show his contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Dec. Dig. § 348.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 165*)—TAKING CASE FROM JURY—MOTION FOR NONSUIT—PLEA OF CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

On a motion to nonsuit, the defendant may avail itself of the plea of contributory negligence, if it is disclosed by the evidence of the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 373, 374; Dec. Dig. § 165.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Buncombe County; Council, Judge.

Action by Wm. M. Wright against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for personal injury, on the ground of negligence.

The defendant denies that it was negligent, and among other things alleges: "That the plaintiff's injuries were caused by his own negligence and want of due care in attempting to drive across defendant's railroad at its crossing, without looking or listening for defendant's approaching train, as it was his duty to do for his own safety. The defendant says that the plaintiff did not look or listen for the approach of defendant's engine or train, as it was his duty under the circumstances to do, and that he could, had he looked and listened, have seen and heard the approach of defendant's engine in time to have placed himself out of danger; in fact, the defendant alleges that it did blow its whistle at the usual place for blowing for said crossing, about 300 yards from said crossing, while approaching the same, and that the plaintiff, as well as other persons, heard the same, and instead of remaining in a place of safety until after defendant's engine would pass said crossing, as it was his duty to do, he carelessly, recklessly, and negligently, without due care for his own safety, violently whipped his horse, driving him and the buggy drawn by said horse across defendant's railroad track in front of defendant's approaching engine to a place of safety beyond, after which he recklessly and carelessly so drove said horse that said buggy in which the plaintiff was driving, at a distance of about 36 feet from the defendant's said railway and the crossing, struck a post, injuring said buggy and throwing the plaintiff therefrom, injuring the plaintiff thereby, without any fault or negligence on the part of the defendant or its employees, who were running said engine very slowly, not exceeding 12 miles an hour, its engineer and fireman all the while fully complying with their duty by keeping a constant lookout ahead, and who did, as soon as the plaintiff approached said railroad track or crossing near enough to become dangerous, apply the emergency brake and all the other appliances at hand and stopped said engine before reaching said crossing, or just as it reached the same, without striking said horse and buggy of the plaintiff or the plaintiff himself. Had the plaintiff looked or listened before attempting to drive across said crossing, as it was his duty to do, he could have seen and heard said east-bound engine in ample time to have avoided the accident, but, in total disregard of his own duty, he carelessly and negligently attempted to drive his horse and buggy across defendant's railroad at said crossing, and in doing so struck his horse violently with the whip, thereby frightening him and causing him to run against the said post, injuring the plaintiff, if he was injured at all."

The plaintiff introduced a rule of the defendant, which reads: "Passenger trains in the same direction must keep at least ten minutes apart; freight trains fifteen minutes apart, except when closing up at stations or at meeting or crossing points, except where block signals are used."

The following is the statement of facts and the evidence, taken from the brief of the plaintiff: "The defendant admits that on the 6th day of September, 1909, the plaintiff was injured in attempting to cross its track with his buggy, that plaintiff's horse became frightened by an approaching train, and plaintiff was thrown out against a post and injured. The plaintiff testified in his own behalf that on September 6, 1909, he was going towards Canton and had just passed a little branch and a freight train hove in sight coming from Canton; that he drove on, his mare in a slow trot, kind of cantering along. He did not see anything to stop for, as the train had just passed. He thought everything was clear, and, when he got to the railroad crossing, Hall, the man in the buggy with him, said: 'There is another train coming up there.' And plaintiff said: 'It is that train down there.' And Hall jumped out of the buggy right at the track, and said: 'Whip up your mare, or you will be caught.' And plaintiff turned his head and looked up the track and the train was about 40 or 60 feet from him, coming backwards down the track, and he struck his mare, and the smoke and steam coming out scared the mare, and she threw him against the signpost and injured him. Just before coming to the crossing where he was injured, he saw a freight train go beyond the crossing 150 yards and stop, and this led him to believe there was nothing else behind. He was pretty close to the railroad, and did not hurry, let his mare go, did not hurry her, but just as he got to the track the man that was in the buggy with him (had not quite got to the track, maybe 16 or 17 feet from it) said: 'I believe I hear another train.' Plaintiff did not stop, and he jumped out of the buggy at the railroad, and, when he jumped out and said, 'Whip up your mare or you'll get caught,' plaintiff turned his head and saw the train was coming two or three rail lengths from him and whipped his mare, and just then the steam came out, causing the mare to shy to the left. Between the little branch and the crossing is over 100 yards. It is 150 to the place. It would take two or three minutes to go from the little branch to the crossing; could walk it in two or three minutes or less time. 'It was just all right now.' Plaintiff could see nothing till he got on the track, when right at the railroad could not see 100 feet, could see about two or three rail lengths—no top on the buggy; it was open; no curtains. The embankment at the crossing comes right down to it. Just before getting to the railroad that hill makes off and makes a kind of bend."

Hall testified: "We crossed the branch, and, after we crossed it, there was a freight train coming down from Canton, and, after coming on past us, it stopped over the trestle, and we drove on to the next crossing, and there was a very high bank there that you can't see up the railroad any, and, just before we got to the crossing, I thought I heard a train blow and said, 'I believe there is a train coming'; and, as I said that, I put my hand on the side of the buggy and jumped, and when I turned my face, his mare's foot was on the track and buggy very close, and I hollered to him to whip the mare, and he crossed the track, and I saw he was going to hit the signpost, and I saw him hit the signpost and make a summer-sault. The distance from the little branch to the railroad crossing is 148 yards. I walked it in 1¼ minutes."

Thomas Wright testified that he was within 150 or 175 yards of plaintiff when the accident occurred, that he did not hear any bell ring or whistle blow, thought he could have heard.

There was a judgment of nonsuit, from which the plaintiff appealed.

Jas. H. Merrimon, and Bourne, Parker & Morrison for appellant. Moore & Rollins and W. B. Rodman, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] It is true, as contended by the learned counsel for the plaintiff, that the defendant must plead contributory negligence, and that the plea is not good when it does no more than deny the negligence of the defendant, and allege that the plaintiff was injured by his own negligence. Revisal 1905, §

483; Cogdell v. Railroad, 132 N. C. 855, 44 S. E. 618.

[2] The defendant, as appears from the answer, has done more than this, and we think it is entitled to avail itself of the defense. It has alleged that the plaintiff entered upon the track of the defendant without looking and listening, and that he recklessly attempted to cross the track in front of an approaching train.

[3] We also concur in the interesting and able discussion of the relative functions of the judge and jury, and of the importance of preventing encroachment by one on the powers of the other, but we must recognize the principle, firmly established, that the judge must decide as matter of law the preliminary question whether there is any legal evidence to be submitted to the jury.

[4] In the determination of this question, caution should be observed, and the construction of the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff should be adopted.

[5] Considering the evidence in this light, we must sustain the ruling of the judge, as it appears clear to us that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence on his own evidence.

[6] There was much controversy at one time as to the right of the defendant to avail itself of the plea of contributory negligence on a motion to nonsuit, but it is now the accepted doctrine with us that it can do so, if it is disclosed by the evidence of the plaintiff. If the plaintiff entered on the track without looking and listening, or if he looked and listened and attempted to drive in front of the train, in either case he would be guilty of contributory negligence. He says that, when he was 16 or 17 feet from the track, Hall, who was in the buggy with him, told him he heard another train and jumped out and told him to whip up or he would be caught; that he turned and saw the train two or three rail lengths from him; and that he whipped his mare to force her across. It is true he was not injured on the crossing, but he would not have been injured at all if he had not negligently placed himself in a position of danger.

The citation of authority is needless, as there is no controversy between the plaintiff and the defendant as to what the law is, but as to its application.

Affirmed.

(155 N. C. 341)

STEWART v. STEWART.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 26, 1911.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 474*)—OPINIONS—TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

In a will contest, a statement of a witness who had known testator for 25 years, and who had had numerous business transactions with him, the last about three months before his death, that he retained his mental faculties to the last, was competent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2199; Dec. Dig. § 474.*]

2. WITNESSES (§ 372*)—IMPEACHMENT—CROSS-EXAMINATION.

In a will contest, it was competent to ask a witness on cross-examination if he had not gone to the home of testator and removed some of its contents to the house of the caveator to impeach the witness, and to show his feelings in the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1192-1199; Dec. Dig. § 372.*]

3. WILLS (§ 164*)—PROBATE—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

The question was competent to show the state of feeling between testator and the caveator, a son, which might have influenced testator in the disposition of his property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 406; Dec. Dig. § 164.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 472*)—CONCLUSION—WITNESSES.

In a will contest, a question asked a witness as to what influence testator's wife seemed to exert over him was improper as calling for a conclusion of the witness on a question which was for the jury on the facts proved.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2186-2195; Dec. Dig. § 472.*]

5. EVIDENCE (§ 474*)—OPINIONS—TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY—KNOWLEDGE OF WITNESS.

The condition of testator's mind may be shown by any one having an opportunity for observation, subject to cross-examination to test the value of the opinion expressed by the witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2199; Dec. Dig. § 474.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Macon County; Ferguson, Judge.

Proceedings by Henry Stewart to contest the probate of a will propounded by Cassie Stewart. From a judgment probating the will, the caveator appeals. Affirmed.

R. D. Sisk, Robertson & Benbow, A. M. Fry, and G. L. Jones, for appellant. A. W. Horn and J. Frank Ray, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is an issue of devisavit vel non.

[1] The caveator is the son by the first marriage. The propounder is the second wife and the chief beneficiary under the will. Dobson, a witness for the propounder, testified that he had been acquainted with the testator for 25 years; was at one time his neighbor for 7 years; had numerous transactions with him, mostly in land deals, the last being about three months before his death; had seen him frequently, had never detected anything wrong with his mind, was acquainted with his handwriting; that his mental condition was good so far as he knew, and "that he still retained his mental faculties to the last." The caveator excepted to the last expression, but we think it competent. Smith v. Smith, 117 N. C. 326, 23 S. E. 270.

The exceptions as to the identification of the will were properly withdrawn in this court.

[2, 3] As to exception 7, it was competent upon cross-examination to ask the witness Webb if he had not gone to the home of the testator and removed some of its contents to the house of the caveator. This was competent to impeach the witness, and tended to show his feelings in the case and a state of feeling between the father and son which might have influenced the testator in the disposal of his property. The caveator introduced the deposition of Mrs. Durgin, and the court refused to permit the following question and answer: "Q. What influence did Cassie Stewart seem to exert over Henry Stewart, Sr.? A. She certainly seemed to do most of the talking, and he seemed to be under her thumb a good deal." The question was excluded upon the ground that it was leading.

[4] We also think that it was incompetent as the expression of a conclusion which it was the province of the jury to draw upon facts placed before them. Smith v. Smith, 117 N. C. 326, 23 S. E. 270.

[5] The condition of the testator's mind was a matter as to which any one having opportunity for observation can testify, subject to cross-examination to test the value of the opinion expressed by the witness (Clary v. Clary, 24 N. C. 78), but whether there was undue influence is a question for the jury to decide from the facts and circumstances placed in evidence. Lewis v. Mason, 109 Mass. 169, though relied upon by the appellant, sustains this view. There it was held proper to show that the person charged with the exercise of undue influence commanded the testator in an angry voice to "shut up," and that testator obeyed him. This was a fact tending to show that such person had power and inclination to exert a controlling influence over the testator, and was competent for the jury to consider. But it would not have been competent for the witness in that case, or in this, to testify that such person had a controlling influence over the testator.

The other exceptions do not require discussion.

We find no error.

(155 N. C. 344)

LANNING v. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 26, 1911.)

TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—MESSAGES—DELAY IN DELIVERY—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In an action for delay in delivering a telegram, it was error to refuse a charge that the burden was on plaintiff to show the negligence alleged, and that it was the proximate cause of the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 61-63; Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Appeal from Superior Court, Swain County; Ferguson, Judge.

Action by C. N. Lanning against the Western Union Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

G. O. H. Fearons and A. S. Barnard, for appellant.

WALKER, J. This action was brought to recover damages for mental anguish suffered by reason of the negligent failure of the defendant to transmit and deliver to the plaintiff a telegram sent by his father, who lived near Asheville, N. C., to Bryson City, N. C., near which place the plaintiff lived. The message was delivered to the defendant for transmission on Sunday, March 15, 1908, after office hours of defendant at Bryson City, and for that reason was not forwarded on Sunday, but the operator at Asheville, the next morning at 5 minutes after 8 o'clock, when his office was opened, called up the operator at Bryson City, whose office should also have been open, but failed to get any response until at 8:28 o'clock. The message was received at Bryson City at 8:30 o'clock, and prepared for delivery. It was handed to the messenger, who carried it to plaintiff's house. He was not at home, but in the field, about one quarter of a mile away. The message was delivered to him there, but not in time, as he contended, to catch the train at Governor's Island, the nearest station, and about one mile from his residence. The defendant contended that he had sufficient time, after the delivery of the message, to take the next train for Asheville at that station. The messenger went to the station and waited there 10 minutes for the train, which arrived on schedule time. The message announced the sudden and serious illness of the plaintiff's mother, and plaintiff alleged that he was delayed in reaching his mother's bedside nearly a day. We need not state any more of the facts, as our decision turns upon the refusal of the court to instruct the jury, as requested by the defendant, that the burden was upon the plaintiff to show the alleged negligence, and that it was the proximate cause of his injury. After a careful reading of the instructions of the court, we have been unable to find any response to this prayer. The defendant was entitled to the instruction. Hauser v. Telegraph Co., 150 N. C. 557, 64 S. E. 503; Shepard v. Telegraph Co., 143 N. C. 244, 55 S. E. 704, 118 Am. St. Rep. 796; Loyd v. Loyd, 113 N. C. 186, 18 S. E. 200; Hocutt v. Telegraph Co., 147 N. C. 186, 60 S. E. 980. The refusal to give the instruction was perhaps inadvertent, but it nevertheless requires that a new trial be ordered. It is not necessary to consider the other exceptions.

New trial.

(156 N. C. 296)

SIRCEY v. HANS REES SONS.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 113*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—RIGHT TO ENTER.

Where the court makes a general order extending the time to file answers due at the term of court for 30 days after final adjournment it is error to render a default judgment without notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 207; Dec. Dig. § 113.*]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 143*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—RIGHT TO OPEN—EXCUSABLE NEGLIGENCE.

Where a default judgment was entered without announcement in open court, or without notice to defendant, or its counsel who relied on the order extending the time to file answers due at the term of court for 30 days after final adjournment, and who, present in court at the time, did not know of the rendition of the judgment, and was not called on to take notice of it, the neglect of defendant, if any, was excusable, justifying the setting aside of the judgment on presenting a meritorious defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 289-291; Dec. Dig. § 143.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 145*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—RIGHT TO OPEN—MERITORIOUS DEFENSE.

A plea of release is a meritorious defense, justifying the setting aside of a default judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 292-295; Dec. Dig. § 145.*]

4. RELEASE (§ 29*) — OPERATION — JOINT WRONGDOERS.

Where a servant was injured through the joint negligence of the master and a stranger, a valid release given to the master bars an action against the stranger for the injury, under the rule that a release of one tort-feasor discharges the other, though the tort of the master grew out of contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Release, Cent. Dig. §§ 64-70; Dec. Dig. § 29.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Buncombe County; Council, Judge.

Action by W. R. Sircey against the Hans Rees Sons. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Fortune & Roberts and Chas. E. Jones, for appellant. Bourne, Parker & Morrison, for appellee.

WALKER, J. This action was brought to recover damages for an injury received by plaintiff, who was employed by the Southern Railway Company as a switchman, while moving a car of coal along a side track laid on defendant's premises for its accommodation. The particular allegation is that the plaintiff was required to mount the car while in motion, in order to perform his duties, and that in doing so he was caught between the side of the moving car and a pile of tan bark which had been placed so near the track as to endanger the employees of the railway company when moving cars on the siding. Plaintiff did not know the bark was there at the time he was hurt. He alleges that he was injured by the negligence of the defendant, though the facts stated in the complaint are also sufficient to show a case of negligence against the railway company as well, or, in other words, that the injury resulted from the joint negligence of the two companies.

[1] It appears that at February Term, 1909, which was the return term, judgment by default and inquiry was entered, but after an order had been made extending the time to file answers due at that term for 30 days after the final adjournment of the court. The judgment was handed to the judge and signed by him without any notice to defendant or its counsel of the same, and the latter relied upon the order of the court extending the time for filing answers, and therefore made no inquiry as to the order, as they were ignorant that one had been made. Defendant's counsel, as soon as they were notified of the judgment, moved to set it aside, upon the ground that the court had no power to make it without notice to defendant; and, secondly, because of excusable neglect. The judge set aside the judgment, and we think very properly. It should not have been applied for or entered without notice. It was competent for the court to have excepted this or any other case from the general order, but, having made a general order, counsel could not be expected to anticipate that it would be violated in this way, or that judgment would be entered without notice to them.

[2] The rendition of the judgment was not even announced in open court, but the judgment was merely delivered to the judge and signed by him. Calling out the defendant, when his counsel did not hear the call, is not sufficient to withdraw the protection of the law from him. Such a thing was not looked for. One of defendant's counsel was in court, but did not know of the judgment, and was not called upon to take notice of it, under the circumstances. If there was any neglect at all, and we think there was not, it was certainly excusable. Branch v. Walker, 92 N. C. 87; Griel v. Vernon, 65 N. C. 76 (Anno. Ed. and cases cited); Long v. Cole, 74 N. C. 267; Wynne v. Prairie, 86 N. C. 73; Taylor v. Pope, 106 N. C. 267, 11 S. E. 257, 19 Am. St. Rep. 530; Clark's Code (3d Ed.) § 274, and note, especially page 312 et seq. We are satisfied the judge would not have signed the judgment had he known the facts. The defendant had a meritorious defense, because he defeated the plaintiff in the trial of the case. This is a very fair test of a good defense. Cases cited by plaintiff's counsel are not in point. In all of them the facts were different.

[3] We cannot agree with the learned counsel that the plea of a release is technical, and does not present a meritorious defense. Plaintiff thereby acknowledged full satisfaction of his claim, and he is entitled to have no more. Nor can we assent to the suggestion that a plaintiff should be allowed two satisfactions for one and the same demand. Such a doctrine would shock the moral sense and violate a cardinal maxim of the law, if not the defendant's constitutional right. Plaintiff excepted to the order setting aside the judgment by default, and appealed from the final judgment dismissing the action. We have treated the case as if he had preserved his exception, and it is not necessary to decide whether he should have appealed at once from the order of vacation. At the trial the defendant relied on a release given by the plaintiff to the Southern Railway Company. The execution and validity of the release were admitted, and thereupon the court, on motion of the defendant, dismissed the action and plaintiff appealed.

[4] There was no error in the judgment. With reference to the plaintiff, the defendant and the railway company were joint tortfeasors, and, besides, the evidence shows that they jointly participated in the wrong and were co-delinquents. Even if the tort of the railway company was one growing out of contract for the plaintiff's services, the rule that the release of one tort-feasor will discharge the other will nevertheless apply. Whether the plaintiff had sued in tort, or had waived the tort and sued on the contract, if he could do so, can make no difference. He has received what he regarded as full compensation for his injury, and the law will not give him more than he said was enough, whatever may be the technical form of the action he might have brought against the railway company. Hale on Torts, pp. 195, 196; Eastman v. Grant, 34 Vt. 387.

We have had occasion to consider this rule as to the effect of a release at the present term. Howard v. Plumbing Co., 70 S. E. 285; Gregg v. Wilmington, 70 S. E. 1070. It is true that in the case last cited the release was alleged to have been given by the plaintiff to Wolvin, who as between himself and the city was primarily liable, but in the former case Justice Brown says: "Assuming that this defendant is jointly liable with Ayers to the plaintiff, she has released Ayers for a valuable consideration paid to her by him, and that releases this defendant. She cannot be allowed to recover two compensations for the one injury. If she recovers of one, she cannot recover of the other. It is immaterial, so far as plaintiff is concerned, to consider which joint tort-feasor is primarily liable. The question of primary and secondary liability is for the offending parties to adjust between themselves. The injured party has his remedy against either. Dillon v. Raleigh, 124 N. C. 188, 32 S. E. 548; Buswell on Personal Injuries, § 190. It is well settled that a release of one or more joint tort-feasors, executed in satisfaction for an injury, is a discharge of them all on the ground that the party can have but one satisfaction for his injury. 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 306, where cases from nearly all the American courts are collected.

Brown v. Louisville, 126 N. C. 701, 36 S. E. 166, 78 Am. St. Rep. 677; Burns v. Womble, 131 N. C. 173, 42 S. E. 573." For a general discussion of the liability of tort-feasors, see Raleigh v. Railroad, 129 N. C. 265, 40 S. E. 2, and Lexington v. Indemnity Co., 71 S. E. 214, at this term. Judge Cooley, in his treatise on Torts, relying on many English and American authorities, thus states the rule: "It is to be observed in respect to the point above considered, where the bar accrues in favor of some of the wrongdoers by reason of what has been received from or done in respect to one or more others, that the bar arises, not from any particular form that the proceeding assumes, but from the fact that the injured party has actually received satisfaction, or what in law is deemed the equivalent. Therefore, if he accepts the satisfaction voluntarily made by one, that is a bar to all. And so a release of one releases all, although the release expressly stipulates that the other defendants shall not be released. And this rule is held to apply, even though the one released was not in fact liable. It does not lie in the mouth of such a plaintiff to say that he had no cause of action against one who paid him for his injuries, for the law presumes that the one who paid committed the trespass and occasioned the whole injury." 1 Cooley on torts (3d Ed.) p. 234 et seq. While separate suits may be brought against the wrongdoers, the plaintiff having the right of election as to whether he will sue them separately or jointly, the liability being joint and several, and while there may be recovery against each, there can be but one satisfaction. It is immaterial whether the satisfaction is obtained by judgment and final process in execution of it, or by amicable adjustment without any litigation of the claim for damages. The essential thing is satisfaction. Hale on Torts, 195. The wronged party may elect whom he will sue or de melioribus damnis, but the full payment of one judgment satisfies the cause of action, for it is the same cause against all the tort-feasors, so far as he is concerned. Hale on Torts, p. 192; Babcock v. Pioneer Iron Works (C. C.) 34 Fed. 338. Coke (section 376) thus states the principle, as laid down by Littleton, in his quaint language: "Also if two men doe trespassse to another, who releases to one of them by his deeds all actions personalls, and notwithstanding sueth an action of trespassse against the other, the defendant may well shew that the trespassse was done by him, and by another, his fellow, and that the plaintife by his deed (which he sheweth forth) released to his fellow all actions personalls, and demand the judgment (in his favor) and yet such deed belongeth to his fellow, and not to him. But because hee may have advantage by the deed, if he will shew the deed to the court, he may well plead this." Coke, in commenting on this passage, says: "If two men doe trespassse to another," etc. Here by this section it is to be understood that when divers doe a trespassse, the same is joynt or severall at the will of him to whom the wrong is done, yet if he release to one of them, all are discharged, because his own deed shall be taken most strongly against himself, but otherwise it is in case of appeals of death, etc. As if two men bee joyntly and severally bounden in an obligation, if the obligee release to one of them, both are discharged; and seeing the trespassers are parties and privies in wrong, the one shall not plead a release to the other without shewing of it forth, albeit the deede appertaine to the other." Referring to Coke's statement, it is said in Babcock v. Pioneer Iron Works, supra: "This seems to be good law to this day. 2 Greenl. Ev. § 30; Eastman v. Grant, 34 Vt. 387. A plaintiff is entitled to but one satisfaction of his cause of action, whether but one or many may be liable, or whatever the form of action may be. Fowell v. Forrest, 2 Saund. 48a; Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 18 L. Ed. 129. If the damages are actually paid by one, that is a sufficient satisfaction for all. If such payment is acknowledged by deed, the actual consideration cannot be inquired into. If the plaintiff had brought suit against the Pioneer Iron Works alone, on the proofs in this case, as here understood and considered, judgment would have been recovered for all the infringement involved. After the satisfaction of such judgment, no action could be maintained against the Safety Steam Generator Company for the same infringement, because the plaintiff would be fully satisfied for that. The infringement by one is the same as that by the other; and, when satisfaction is made for that, the whole is satisfied." The idea is well expressed in the leading case of Eastman v. Green, 34 Vt. 387: "The principle is well settled, and is not controverted by counsel in this case, that a release of one of two or more joint trespassers is a release of all, but, to have such effect, it must be a technical release; that is, by an instrument under seal. The reason why a release of one discharges all is that it legally imports full payment, and, being under seal, its consideration cannot be inquired into, so that it is conclusive, even though it was given without consideration in fact. The rule is the same whether the claim is based upon a tort or a contract. Indeed, the rule as to the effect of a release, is but another method of stating the universal rule that full payment by one who is jointly liable with others is a discharge of all. In the one case the law regards the claim as paid, and will not allow the party to deny it by proof. In the other it is paid in fact. The effect upon the rights of all is the same in both cases." And again at page 390, 34 Vt.: "The plaintiff's claim rested solely in damages. There was no criterion by which the amount could be definitely determined. It was a matter of mere estimation, based on opinion and judgment, not of computation based on any fixed data. If the question were submitted to a jury, they could determine it only by estimation. Here the plaintiff and the BOWENS got together and determined the matter for themselves. They estimated the damages and fixed upon the amount of the plaintiff's claim against them, and they paid it, and were discharged. What further claim could the plaintiff have upon them, even though no discharge had been given them? Clearly not any. There is nothing in the case to indicate that the amount paid was not the full amount of the damages and the extent of the plaintiff's claim upon them. If the plaintiff had brought his action against the BOWENS, and had received two hundred dollars damages, and they had paid the judgment, that clearly would have discharged all. If these parties agree upon the amount without the intervention of a court or jury, and the amount is paid, the effect we apprehend must be the same. The plaintiff's claim is the same against all the parties engaged in the trespass. He may pursue them jointly or severally to enforce it, but, when that claim is once paid, it is canceled as to all the parties." The rule has been approved in the following well-considered cases: Tompkins v. Railroad, 66 Cal. 165, 4 Pac. 1165; Seither v. Phila. Traction Co., 125 Pa. 397, 17 Atl. 338, 4 L. R. A. 54, 11 Am. St. Rep. 905; City of Chicago v. Babcock, 143 Ill. 358, 32 N. E. 271. In Seither's Case, supra, the court, referring to the allegation of the plaintiff that the party to whom he gave the release was not really in fault, and therefore it did not affect his right to recover against the defendant, says: "A case so unique as this might be supposed to stand alone in the books. Tompkins v. Railroad Co., 66 Cal. 165, 4 Pac. 1165, is, however, its exact counterpart. There a woman was injured by a collision of street railway cars. She received compensation from the carrying company and executed a release. She then sued the other railway company, contending that her release was not intended as a satisfaction, but because the carrier was without fault, and the existing defendant was the real wrongdoer. The court held in a vigorous opinion that she could not recover. So we say here. The plaintiff was not entitled to recover, and the learned court below was entirely right in directing a verdict for the defendant." Satisfaction by one joint tort-feasor, or whatever is equivalent to it, will therefore release the others. 1 Jaggard on Torts, p. 344, § 117.

The case was ably and learnedly argued, with well-prepared briefs, but upon a review of it, in the light of the facts it discloses and the law, as we understand it, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, and the judge was right in so directing.

Affirmed.

(155 N. C. 304)

WHITMIRE v. HEATH.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. TRIAL (§ 46*)—RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE—OFFER OF PROOF—NECESSITY.

Where the original defendant died, the exclusion of testimony as to what he said on a former trial was proper when it did not appear what was expected to be proven by this testimony, for the court must pass upon the competency and materiality of the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 115-117; Dec. Dig. § 46.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 582*)—TESTIMONY AT FORMER TRIAL.

A witness cannot testify as to what another witness, now deceased, said at a former trial, unless he can state the substance of all his testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2420; Dec. Dig. § 582.*]

3. SALES (§ 53*)—FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In an action upon a note for the price of a horse, where the defense was that the seller had made false representations, evidence of false representations held to raise a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

4. SALES (§ 52*)—FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

Where the maker of a note, defended on the ground that it was given for the price of a horse which was sold with fraudulent representations, a postal written by the seller to the purchaser, telling him that he had a horse, a little thin, but mending fast, was admissible on the question of fraudulent representations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. § 129; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 837*)—REVIEW—FINDINGS OF FACT—EVIDENCE.

Where written evidence was improperly excluded, the appellate court in reviewing the propriety of taking an affirmative defense from the jury for lack of proof will consider this writing as if it were a part of the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3262; Dec. Dig. § 837.*]

6. FRAUD (§§ 13, 20*)—DECEIT—CAUSE OF ACTION—REQUISITES.

To create a right of action for deceit by false representations, there must be a false representation, which the party making knows to be false, and it must have misled the other party and induced him to enter the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 3, 17; Dec. Dig. §§ 13, 20.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Transylvania County; Justice, Judge.

Action by T. T. Whitmire against J. N. Heath, as administrator of A. N. Heath. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed and remanded.

W. W. Zachary, for appellant. Geo. A. Shuford, for appellee.

WALKER, J. This action was brought to recover the amount of certain notes given to the defendant for the price of a horse and other articles of personal property, and secured by a mortgage upon the property sold. The defendant in his answer alleged that the plaintiff, at the time he sold the horse to him, had made false, fraudulent, and deceitful representations as to his age and qualities, stating that the horse was seven years old, when he was much older, and that he was sound and in good condition, except that he had distemper, but was better, though he still had a little of it. There was evidence for the defendant that the horse had a bad case of glanders, his nose sloughed, lumps appeared on him, and at times the odor emitted from his body and nose was very offensive. He was also lame and was gradually weakened by his disease, so that he became worthless. Without entering more into particulars, we may safely say that there was sufficient evidence to show the falsity of the warranty and the deceit, provided the plaintiff made the alleged representations, and the case turns upon the sufficiency of the evidence to establish this fact. The defendant introduced the written "recommendation" of the horse by the plaintiff, which was given to A. N. Heath, dated May 26, 1910, at the time of the sale, and which reads as follows: "I have owned the horse six months. He has been at home during that time about four weeks. He has had the distemper during that time, and appears to have it a little yet. As to his eyes, they are good so far as I know. His working qualities are good, and if wind-broken he has never shown it in the least; and if affected with any internal disease I do not know it. I bought the horse from Hawe Galloway, and he recommended him to be sound except the distemper. T. W. Whitmire. Witness: D. L. English." Defendant then introduced a postal card, mailed to A. N. Heath by the plaintiff, of which the following is a copy: "Brevard, 5-25-1905. Dear Sir: Your card received. Will say in reply that I have a black horse 7 years old, a little thin, but mending fast. I would sell, but you will have to come and look at him before I would make you a price. T. W. Whitmire." The court, upon objection by the plaintiff, excluded the card, and defendant excepted. The original defendant, A. N. Heath, having died, the present defendant, J. N. Heath, his father and administrator, was made a defendant. The execution of the notes being admitted, the court held that the defense had not been made out by the evidence, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

[1] The defendant proposed to prove by a witness what A. N. Heath had testified at a former trial of the case, which was excluded by the court, and exception again taken. It did not appear what he expected to prove by this witness was said by A. N. Heath—that is, the nature or substance of the evidence—so that the court could see that it was relevant to the case, and for this reason the ruling was proper. A court can never pass intelligently upon evidence, unless it knows what the evidence is, in order that its bearing upon the issue may be determined. The defendant should have stated what he intended to prove was said by A. N. Heath, otherwise the evidence should be excluded, not because it is incompetent, but because it cannot be seen to be competent. The court must judge of its materiality—not the witness. This is the settled rule, and is also the "rule of reason." Overman v. Coble, 35 N. C. 1; State v. Pierce, 91 N. C. 606.

[2] Besides, a witness cannot testify to what another witness, the deceased, said at a former trial, unless he can state the substance of all his testimony. Bule v. Carver, 73 N. C. 264; Paine v. Roberts, 82 N. C. 451.

[3-5] But we think the court erred in holding that there was no evidence of the representation. There was also error in excluding the postal, and we must consider the case as if it were a part of the evidence. It is perfectly manifest that what the plaintiff intended, by the written "recommendation" and the postal, the defendant should believe, was that the horse was in good condition excepting a slight attack of distemper, and in the postal he stated that he was seven years old (which was untrue), and "a little thin, but mending fast," implying that otherwise he was sound. If these statements were knowingly false and misled the defendant to his prejudice, they were such fraudulent representations as constituted actionable deceit.

[6] The three constituent elements of a deceit by false representation are: (1) The representation must be false. (2) The party making it must know that it is false, commonly called the "scienter." (3) It must have misled the other party and induced him to contract upon the faith of the representation as true. Lunn v. Shermer, 93 N. C. 164; Ferebee v. Gordon, 35 N. C. 350; Ashe v. Gray, 88 N. C. 190 (s. c. on rehearing 90 N. C. 137); Black v. Black, 110 N. C. 398, 14 S. E. 971; Unitype Co. v. Ashcraft, 71 S. E. 61, at this term. There was evidence of a false and fraudulent representation. The jury might well have inferred from all the facts and circumstances that the plaintiff made a representation as to the age and qualities of the horse, which he knew to be false and which were calculated to mislead, and did actually deceive A. N. Heath, the purchaser. We do not mean to say that the evidence is conclusive, or even strong, against the plaintiff, but merely that there is some evidence. The jury must pass upon its weight. They may find that the plaintiff did not know the condition of the horse, but acted honestly throughout the transaction and without any intent to deceive, or that he did not make any false representation.

New trial.

(155 N. C. 230)

REID v. HANS REES' SONS CO., Inc.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 288*)—TANNERIES—DEFECTIVE LADDER—ASSUMPTION OF RISK—JURY QUESTION.

Whether a tannery employé assumed the risk of being injured through a ladder slipping as he was climbing from a vat held, under the evidence, a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 288.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 289*)—TANNERIES—DEFECTIVE LADDERS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—JURY QUESTION.

Whether a tannery employé injured by slipping off a ladder as he climbed from a vat was guilty of contributory negligence held, under the evidence, a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Dec. Dig. § 289.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 101, 102*)—SAFE APPLIANCES—DUTY TO PROVIDE.

While one does not insure the safety of his employés, he must use ordinary care to furnish proper tools and appliances.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 173, 174; Dec. Dig. §§ 101, 102.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 103*)—SAFE APPLIANCES—NONDELEGABLE DUTY OF EMPLOYER.

A tannery company's duty to an employé to use reasonable care in furnishing an employé a ladder suitable and safe for his use in cleaning a vat was not delegable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 175; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

5. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 229*)—INJURY TO EMPLOYÉ—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

An employé's failure to use ordinary care to prevent injury to himself precludes recovery against his employer, if the proximate cause of injury complained of.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 674; Dec. Dig. § 229.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, McDowell County; Lane, Judge.

Action by J. W. Reid against the Hans Rees' Sons Company, Incorporated. Judgment of nonsuit, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed, and new trial ordered.

Hudgins, Watson & Johnston, for appellant. Bourne, Parker & Morrison, for appellee.

WALKER, J. Plaintiff brought this action to recover damages for injuries received while working in the defendant's tannery in Asheville. His duty was to clean out the vats, and in the performance of this duty he was required to go into the vat and throw out the ginned bark, which was placed between the hides for the purpose of tanning them. In order to go into and come out of the vats, it was necessary to use a ladder which was furnished by the defendant. This ladder had become worn at the ends which rested on the floor, so that they had a round, instead of a flat, surface, and, as the bottom of the vat was oozy and slick, the ladder was liable to slip when plaintiff was using it. The top ends of the ladder rested against the wall of the vat. Ladders used for this purpose in tanneries have spikes at the bottom to prevent slipping, but this one had no spikes, nor were there any slats or stops on the floor to brace or prop the ladder. The defective condition of the ladder was called to the attention of T. E. Brice, the foreman of defendant, by the plaintiff, and he promised to have it remedied, but failed to do so, when he was again requested to have the ladder spiked so as to make it safe for the plaintiff in doing his work, and he promised to do so, but again failed to keep his promise, and the plaintiff while using the ladder in cleaning out the vat was seriously injured by the fall of the ladder, due to its said defective condition. The court entered judgment of nonsuit upon the evidence, and plaintiff appealed.

[1-3] The case should have gone to the jury. It is true that the master does not insure the safety of his servant in the performance of his work; but it is a familiar and an elementary doctrine in the law of negligence, with reference to this relation, that he owes a duty which he neglects at his peril to furnish proper tools and appliances to his servant with which to do his work. We said as much in Marks v. Cotton Mills, 135 N. C. 287, 47 S. E. 432, and added: "He meets the requirements of the law if in the selection of machinery and appliances he uses that degree of care which a man of ordinary prudence would use, having regard to his own safety, if he were supplying them for his own personal use. It is culpable negligence which makes the employer liable." The rule as thus stated was approved in Avery v. Lumber Co., 146 N. C. 595, 60 S. E. 646; Cotton v. Railroad, 149 N. C. 227, 62 S. E. 1093; Nail v. Brown, 150 N. C. 533, 64 S. E. 434; West v. Tannin Co., 154 N. C. 44, 69 S. E. 687; Mercer v. Railroad (at this term) 70 S. E. 742. The case of West v. Tannin Co., supra, involved the same principle and substantially the same facts as does this case, and we there held that there was evidence of negligence. In Mercer's Case, there is a distinction made with reference to the duty of inspection between simple and complicated tools and implements, but we need not consider it, as it appears that the plaintiff in this case gave the defendant notice of the defect in the ladder and the latter promised to remedy it.

As to the duty of the employer, which requires him to furnish to his employé reasonably safe and suitable tools and appliances with which to perform his work, even though they may be simple in their construction, we need only refer to the cases of Orr v. Telephone Co., 130 N. C. 627, 41 S. E. 880; a. c. on rehearing 132 N. C. 691, 44 S. E. 401; and Cotton v. Railroad, 149 N. C. 227, 62 S. E.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

1093, both decided in favor of plaintiffs. In the former case the plaintiff was hurt by the failure of the defendant to see that he used the proper implements in doing his work, lowering a telephone pole for the purpose of removing it, the implements required for the purpose being "spiked poles" and "dead men," and in the latter the servant was furnished with a defective truck for transferring baggage, the pin, which kept the wheel on the spindle, having been bent so that the wheel fell from the spindle on which it revolved while the plaintiff was trucking baggage, and he was injured.

Plaintiff testified that the foreman told him the ladder had been used for some time and was safe, and that in reliance upon this assurance and the promise to repair it, which was once repeated, he continued to use the ladder. The plaintiff remained in the service a little longer, expecting daily a compliance with the promise. We cannot say as matter of law upon the evidence as it now appears that the plaintiff continued in the service for an unreasonable time after the promise to repair had been broken (Pleasants v. Railroad, 95 N. C. 195), or that the danger in using the ladder was so obvious or imminent as to charge him with having assumed the risk or with contributory negligence. Pressly v. Yarn Mills, 138 N. C. 410, 51 S. E. 69. The evidence must be construed most favorably for the plaintiff in considering a nonsuit, and whether he acted as a prudent man would have done under the circumstances is a question which is peculiarly for the jury to decide.

[4] The duty to exercise reasonable care in furnishing a ladder suitable and safe for the servant's use in cleaning the vat was a primary and absolute one, and was therefore not delegable. If the master leaves the performance of this duty to another who takes his place, he must be held liable for any negligence on his part, as much so as if he had undertaken himself to perform it. He cannot thus shift his responsibility. The plaintiff had no choice in the selection of ladders, but could only use the particular one furnished. The defendant had been told of the defect and the danger attending the use of this ladder and it was its duty to provide one reasonably safe, which it neglected to do. Mercer v. Railroad, supra. It would be going beyond the decisions of this court to hold that the plaintiff was guilty of negligence in law because he continued to use the ladder for a short time, when the defendant had promised to put it in safe condition, but failed to do so, and he had the right to rely upon this promise being kept. It was at least a question for the jury.

[5] If the plaintiff could have prevented the injury by the exercise of ordinary care, he was obliged to do so, and his negligence, if there was any, would bar his recovery, if it was the proximate cause of the injury. In Pressly v. Yarn Mills, supra, Justice Hoke said: "The employé is not in such instances absolved from all obligation to act with reasonable care and prudence, and if there is negligence on his part, concurring as the proximate cause of the injury, he cannot recover." But, to avail itself of this principle, the defendant must upon evidence show that there has been such negligence as bars the action. The defendant argues that the plaintiff is a very tall man, and should have climbed out of the vat. But the ladder was supplied by the defendant for going into and coming out of the vat and it had been safely used for this purpose, with the assurance that it was still safe and would be made safer, upon which the plaintiff relied. We cannot say upon this evidence that the plaintiff was required to climb out of the vat, even if the other method in the single instance proved to be dangerous, and for that reason the nonsuit was proper.

Our conclusion is that the case should have been submitted to the jury, with proper instructions as to the law, and there was error in dismissing the action.

New trial.

(155 N. C. 229)

HOLLAR v. SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 55*)—INJURY TO—REVERSION—NEGLIGENCE OF TENANT—EVIDENCE.

In an action against a tenant for negligently burning a building, the landlord could show that three months before the fire the tenant used a large kerosene lamp on a shelf near a low pine ceiling.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Alexander County; Long, Judge.

Action by O. L. Hollar against the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

These issues were submitted: "(1) Was the plaintiff's building destroyed by fire by the negligence of the defendant, as alleged in the complaint? Answer: Yes. (2) What damage, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to recover of the defendant? Answer: One thousand dollars."

From the judgment rendered, the defendant appealed.

W. D. Turner, for appellant. J. H. Burke and L. C. Caldwell, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. The record presents only two assignments of error:

(1) A witness, Linto Lyon, former manager for defendant, was permitted to testify that in August preceding the burning of the house on November 13th a large kerosene lamp was used by the defendant on a bracket shelf on the wall, close to a low pine ceiling; that it made the wall dangerously hot, and that he had instructed the operators not to use it there, but place it on the table. We think this evidence was competent upon the first issue to prove negligence, and to fix defendant with knowledge of the careless manner in which the lamp was used by its employees.

(2) The other assignment of error is as to refusal to allow motion to nonsuit, upon the ground that there is no sufficient evidence of the origin of the fire. While the proof is not direct and positive that the fire originated from the negligent placing of the lamp on the shelf, and so close that it set the ceiling and wall on fire, yet there is circumstantial proof of that fact of sufficient probative force to fully justify the judge in submitting the question to the jury.

No error.

(155 N. C. 450)

STATE v. YATES.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 250*)—MANSLAUGHTER—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of manslaughter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Dec. Dig. § 250.*]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 151*)—SELF-DEFENSE—BURDEN OF PROOF.

One tried for a homicide has the burden to establish self-defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 278; Dec. Dig. § 151.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 825*)—INSTRUCTIONS—REQUISITES—NECESSITY.

Accused must ask for special instructions if those given are not as full as he desires.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2005; Dec. Dig. § 825.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1038*)—INSTRUCTIONS—ERRORS—DUTY OF ACCUSED.

If instructions state a contention incorrectly to accused's disadvantage, he should call the trial judge's attention to it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2646; Dec. Dig. § 1038.*]

5. HOMICIDE (§ 340*)—INSTRUCTIONS—REVIEW.

One convicted of manslaughter is not entitled to review of an instruction on murder in the second degree.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 717; Dec. Dig. § 340.*]

6. HOMICIDE (§ 118*)—MANSLAUGHTER—CONDUCT CONSTITUTING.

One assaulted must abandon the difficulty and avoid killing his assailant if he can do so with reasonable safety, and one who enters a fight willingly, and continues in it though able to abandon it, is guilty of manslaughter at least if he kills.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 168-171; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Watauga County; Pell, Judge.

Daniel Yates was convicted of manslaughter, and he appeals. Affirmed.

This is an indictment against Daniel Yates for murder. The jury returned a verdict of "guilty of manslaughter," and from the judgment of imprisonment for seven years in the state's prison pronounced thereon the defendant appealed.

There was evidence upon the part of the state tending to show that on the morning of 16th November, 1909, the defendant, his wife, Bettie Yates, and her two daughters, met with Mrs. Liddy McGuire, wife of the deceased, Jack McGuire, and Mrs. Nancy Ward, her daughter, in a galax patch in the woods near a disputed line of their respective lands. After a conversation between the defendant and Mrs. Liddy McGuire in regard to the manner of settlement as to the disputed line, the defendant and his wife, Bettie Yates, passed on up the hill in the direction of the defendant's home, and also in the direction of Sam Hicks', where the defendant claims that he had started to have a tooth extracted. After traveling a distance of from 100 to 150 yards, they passed within a few steps of the deceased, who was coming down the ridge with a rifle gun on his shoulder; while the defendant was armed with a 16-gauge shotgun, and immediately after meeting the trouble commenced.

Mrs. Liddy McGuire, witness for the state, testified, in part, as follows: That she, her two daughters, the defendant, his wife, and her two daughters were in the woods the morning of the difficulty; that she and the defendant had a conversation about the land in dispute; that, after defendant and his wife had passed on, she heard a dispute between the defendant and the deceased some distance away in the woods; that they were disputing about the line; that she heard curse words pass; that witness asked her husband if that was he talking, and he said, "Yes." Yates said: "Yes, and by G—, I am up here too." They kept adding words back and forth. "I cannot recollect how they were spoken. Dan started off like he was going home, and my husband started down like he was going home, and Dan said: 'G— d— you, I will shoot you.' He was talking loud. He had walked between 15 and 20 steps from where I was—from McGuire—after they spoke and had this talk together. When he said that, my husband turned, and the gun fired in his face. At the time my husband was shot he had his gun on his shoulder, and when he was shot it fell breech foremost in front of him."

Mrs. Nancy Ward, daughter of deceased, corroborated the statement made by Mrs. Liddy McGuire in most essential parts.

Dr. H. B. Perry, witness for the state, said, on cross-examination, that the range of the shot in the head and face indicated that the deceased and defendant were standing face to face when the gun was fired; that there were 37 shots from the middle of the neck to just above the forehead.

The defendant, Daniel Yates, testified in his own behalf, in part: That on the day of the difficulty he started to Sam Hicks' to have a tooth extracted; that he took his wife along to show her where the line in dispute was; that in going around the line they met Liddy McGuire, wife of deceased; that, after talking to Mrs. McGuire for some time as to the location of the line in dispute, he proposed to leave the matter to disinterested parties, to which proposition she seemed to assent; that, after talking over the matter, he and his wife started up the ridge, and, after going from 100 to 150 yards, they passed the deceased coming and within eight or ten steps of him; that he spoke to deceased, and deceased muttered something which defendant did not understand; that deceased appeared to be mad. After passing deceased, the deceased called to defendant, and said: "Dan Yates I want you to get out of here. Get out of these woods, and take your G— d— set with you." Defendant told him he had a right there, and he was not going. "He said: 'Yes; G— d— you, you will leave.' I said, 'I am not going.' He said, 'Yes; you are. I will make you.' I said to him, 'D— you, show me your authority.' And he said, 'G— d— you, I can shoot you and drag you out.' And he cocked his gun and started to shoot me. The first thought that entered my mind was to ask him not to shoot. I said, 'Jack, don't draw that gun.' The next thought that run through my mind was to shoot, and I shot. He cocked his gun first and had it up. I had my gun on my shoulder when we first met and he did too. (Here witness indicated position in which the guns were held by the parties.) After he cocked his gun and had it up, then I raised mine as quick as I could and shot. * * * I shot McGuire because I thought he was going to shoot me. I thought to save myself I would shoot. In the beginning I was walking away from him. I saw he was very mad, and, when I passed, I turned facing him for fear he would shoot me, and I thought, if I should face him, we would have a few words, and he would go off, and there would be nothing of it. Before I would have shot him, I would have turned; but I was afraid he would shoot me if I turned my back. I wasn't thinking about any trouble. I knew it was his mail day. I just saw him a day or two before that and he was perfectly friendly. He proposed to sell me some hay, and I said I guessed I would buy it." Witness said he had known deceased nearly all his life; knew the general character of the deceased as being a dangerous, violent fighting man; a bad man, overbearing man, wanted everything his own way; that his wife, Bettie Yates, had told him the evening before that he aimed to kill him, and said, "By G—, he had enough money to burn him up"; that his wife told defendant deceased made that threat in the galax patch. There was evidence in corroboration of the evidence of the defendant.

T. A. Love and L. D. Lowe, for appellant. Attorney General Bickett and G. L. Jones, for the State.

ALLEN, J. [1] The evidence offered on the part of the state tended to show that the defendant was guilty of murder in the second degree, at least, while the evidence of the defendant and of the witnesses introduced to corroborate him, if believed by the jury, would have justified a verdict of not guilty. It is evident that the jury did not accept in its entirety the evidence of the state or of the defendant, and that the verdict—guilty of manslaughter—was rendered upon the theory that the defendant and the deceased fought willingly, of which there was ample evidence.

The only exceptions appearing in the record are to parts of the charge of the judge presiding, as follows:

"Now, gentlemen, did he do it in self-defense? The burden is upon him to satisfy you of the facts and circumstances constituting self-defense. Now the defendant contends that he had great fear of his life when he shot the deceased, that he did not intend to shoot him, nor did he willingly shoot him, but that it was only through dire necessity; that is, only through the fear that he would lose his own life or have serious bodily harm inflicted upon him if he did not shoot. The defendant contends that he said to the deceased man, 'If you draw that gun on me, I will shoot you'; and the defendant contends, further, that he calculated that when he did tell him, 'Not to point your gun at me, I will shoot you,' that by that expression the deceased man should have understood that, if he did not point his gun at him, he would not shoot. The defendant contends that on that occasion he was not at fault; that there was no reasonably safe way for him to escape; that he was afraid if he turned his back, and went towards his home, he would be shot in the back; that he was afraid of his life, and that it was through dire necessity that he shot him." Defendant excepts.

"Now, gentlemen, if you should find from the evidence that McGuire and Yates each held malice towards the other, and they each armed themselves with a gun for the purpose of fighting it out when they met, and they met accidentally and a quarrel ensued in which both engaged, and Yates killed McGuire, it was at least murder in the second degree, and it makes no difference whether Yates was on his own land or not; it appearing in this case that the land upon which the difficulty took place was in dispute." Defendant excepts.

"If you shall find from the evidence that McGuire sent word to Yates or told Mrs. Yates, who communicated it to her husband, that he was going to kill Yates, and Yates, for the purpose of defending himself and not for the purpose of venting his malice and satisfying his revenge upon McGuire, armed himself with a gun and met McGuire accidentally, and engaged in a dispute with McGuire, but not with unfriendliness upon his part, and McGuire attempted to shoot Yates, or acted in such manner with his gun as to cause Yates to have reasonably grounded fear that, unless he shot McGuire, McGuire would shoot him, and, acting under this apparent necessity, Yates shot McGuire, Yates would not be guilty, unless at some time before the fatal moment and after Yates had seen the danger of continuing the dispute with McGuire, and had observed McGuire's evil disposition to engage in a gun fight, Yates could have, with reasonable safety, abandoned the difficulty, and avoided the necessity of shooting McGuire; for if, after the two entered into the dispute, both having deadly weapons in their hands, Yates perceived that McGuire was going to shoot if he did not desist from the dispute, and Yates did not desist, but preferred to continue the dispute, and kept his gun in a position on equal terms with McGuire in order to get the drop on him when the dispute had gotten to such fever heat that McGuire would attempt to shoot him, then the defendant, Yates, would be guilty, at least, of manslaughter; he not being allowed, under the law in such case, to plead self-defense." Defendant excepts.

"If you shall find from the evidence that when on meeting up with McGuire the defendant, Yates, willingly entered into a dispute with McGuire, and if you shall further find that the defendant, Yates, willingly stood his ground and engaged in the quarrel with McGuire, both having deadly weapons in their hands, and if you shall further find that Yates, willing to stand his ground and willing to engage in the fight, raised his weapon every time McGuire raised his, in order that he might not let McGuire get the drop on him, and that in such fight the defendant killed McGuire, Yates would not be allowed to interpose the plea of self-defense, but would be guilty of manslaughter." Defendant excepts.

"If you shall find from the evidence that the defendant, Yates, met up with McGuire by accident, and shall find also that he did not have his deadly weapon with him for an unlawful purpose, and also find that said Yates endeavored to make peace with McGuire, but should further find that during the conversation defendant Yates got mad with McGuire, and in the heat of an ungovernable temper decided he would shoot it out with McGuire, and did shoot and kill McGuire in this heat of passion, the defendant, Yates, would be guilty of manslaughter, and you should so find, and would be so even though McGuire was in the act of drawing his own weapon upon him." Defendant excepts.

None of these exceptions can be sustained.

[2] His honor properly instructed the jury that the burden of proof was on the defendant to satisfy them of the facts and circumstances constituting self-defense, and the remaining part of the charge covered by the first exception consists of a statement of the contentions of the defendant.

[3, 4] If not as full as the defendant desired, it was his duty to ask for specific instructions, and, if the judge inadvertently stated a contention incorrectly, it ought to have been called to his attention. Simmons v. Davenport, 140 N. C. 411, 53 S. E. 225; Davis v. Keen, 142 N. C. 502, 55 S. E. 359.

[5] It is not necessary to consider the second exception, as the charge excepted to relates to murder in the second degree, and the defendant was convicted of manslaughter.

The third and fourth exceptions are to parts of the charge, which embody well-settled principles.

[6] It is the duty of one who is assaulted to abandon the difficulty and to avoid the necessity of killing, if he can do so with reasonable safety, and one who enters into a fight willingly and does not abandon it, but prefers to stand his ground and continue in the fight, is guilty of manslaughter at least if he kills.

The charge is set out in full in the record, and it shows that all phases of the evidence favorable to the defendant were presented to the jury.

No error.

(155 N. C. 276)

ROBERTS v. BALDWIN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1097*)—LAW OF THE CASE—SUBSEQUENT APPEALS.

A decision of the Supreme Court on appeal cannot be reviewed on a second appeal in the same case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4358; Dec. Dig. § 1097.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 345*)—MOTION FOR JUDGMENT—GROUNDS.

Where the complaint alleged that defendant some five years previously dug a ditch, whereby much water was cast on plaintiff's land, and that this had been done continuously up to the time of suit, and the answer denied a continuous trespass, and pleaded the three-year statute of limitations, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, based on the statute and the theory of a continuous trespass, was properly refused, in view of the answer's denial of a continuous trespass.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Dec. Dig. § 845.*]

3. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 126*)—DIVERTING SURFACE WATER—ISSUES.

Where, in an action for diverting surface water by means of a ditch dug by defendant, the complaint alleged that the ditch was cut about five years before the commencement of the action, and that thereby a large quantity of water was collected and thrown on plaintiff's land, and that that had continued until the commencement of the action, and defendant denied that he had committed a continuous trespass, and pleaded limitations of three years, and the case was tried on the theory that plaintiff could only recover for injuries sustained within three years, issues: "Was the ditch * * * dug by defendant more than three years before the commencement of this action? Was the ditch * * * used continuously to carry the surface water from defendant's land for more than three years before the commencement of this action?"—were properly refused because not embodying sufficient facts on the issue of limitations, since the ditch might have been dug and used continuously for more than three years before the commencement of the action, and the injury complained of might have occurred within the three years.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Dec. Dig. § 126.*]

4. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 126*)—DIVERTING SURFACE WATER—ISSUES.

The issues: "Did the defendant by the use of the ditch * * * divert the natural flow of the water on the lands of plaintiff? What damage has plaintiff sustained by reason of such diversion"—were sufficient to enable defendant to present his claims.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Dec. Dig. § 126.*]

5. TRIAL (§ 352*)—ISSUES—DISCRETION OF COURT.

The form of the issues submitted to the jury is within the discretion of the presiding judge, provided they are sufficient to determine the rights of the parties and to support the judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Dec. Dig. § 352.*]

6. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 125*)—DIVERTING SURFACE WATER—DAMAGES.

One suing for the wrongful diversion of surface water collected and thrown on his land may recover for loss of crops in addition to the injury to the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 140; Dec. Dig. § 125.*]

7. DAMAGES (§ 62*)—DUTY OF PERSON INJURED—WRONGFUL DIVERSION OF SURFACE WATER.

The rule requiring one injured by the wrongful act of another to do what he reasonably can to decrease the damages does not require an owner of land injured by surface water wrongfully diverted, collected, and thrown on his land by means of a ditch cut by another, to cut a ditch to take care of the water, and, where he fails to do so, his damages cannot be limited to the expenses incurred in cutting such ditch.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 119-132; Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

8. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 126*)—DIVERTING SURFACE WATER—EVIDENCE—INSTRUCTIONS.

Where, in an action for diverting surface water and throwing the same on the land of plaintiff, the evidence showed that defendant had cut a ditch and thereby collected surface water and caused the same to flow on the land of plaintiff, and that the effect of keeping open a ditch to take care of such water would be to fill up ditches on the land of plaintiff, a charge, that the measure of damages was the amount that it would cost plaintiff to dig a ditch to carry off the water from defendant's ditch, was properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 141; Dec. Dig. § 126.*]

9. TRIAL (§ 251*)—INSTRUCTIONS—ISSUES.

Where issues are submitted to the jury, an instruction not directed to the issues, and asserting that plaintiff cannot recover, is properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 587-595; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

10. TRIAL (§ 278*)—INSTRUCTIONS—EXCEPTIONS—SUFFICIENCY.

An exception to the charge as a whole is untenable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 689; Dec. Dig. § 278.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Henderson County; Council, Judge.

Action by H. M. Roberts against John J. Baldwin. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for the wrongful diversion of rain or surface water from the lands of the defendant to the lands of plaintiffs, by means of a ditch cut by the defendant. The cause was tried at a former term of the Henderson superior court, and the appeal, which was taken at that time, was heard and considered by this court at fall term, 1909. See Roberts v. Baldwin, 151 N. C. 407, 66 S. E. 346.

The plaintiffs allege that said ditch was cut about five years before the commencement of the action; that by means thereof a large quantity of surface water was collected and thrown on the lands of the plaintiffs; and that this had continued up to the commencement of the action. This is denied by the defendant. The defendant, among other things, pleads the statute of limitations of three years. The plaintiffs offered evidence to sustain the allegations of the complaint, and evidence to the contrary was offered by the defendant. The defendant moved for judgment on the pleadings before evidence was introduced, and for judgment of nonsuit at the conclusion of the evidence. Both motions were refused, and the defendant excepted as to each. The same reason was assigned in support of each of these motions, to wit: That the complaint alleged that the injury was continuous, and that it originated more than three years before the commencement of the action, and that therefore the action was barred by the statute of limitations.

The defendant tendered the following issues, which were refused, and the defendant excepted: (1) Was the ditch complained of by plaintiff dug by defendant more than three years before the commencement of this action? (2) Was the ditch dug by defendant operated and used continuously to carry the surface water from defendant's land for more than three years before the commencement of this action? (3) Did the plaintiff by her negligence, or of those acting under or for her, contribute to the damage claimed by the plaintiff? (4) Was the negligence of plaintiff, or those acting under or for her, the proximate cause of damage to plaintiff's lands? (5) Have the lands of the plaintiff, described in the complaint, been damaged by the defendant by reason of the ditch cut by him, causing water on defendant's land to be diverted from their natural course and to overflow plaintiff's land, and, if so, how much?

The court submitted the following issues: (1) Did the defendant, by the use of the ditch cut by him, divert the natural flow of the water on the lands of the plaintiffs? Answer: Yes. (2) What damage has the plaintiff sustained by reason of such diversion of the water? Answer: $150.

The defendant contended that the plaintiffs, if entitled to recover damages, could not recover for injury to crops in addition to injury to the land.

The defendant also requested the court to give the following instruction on the issue of damages, which was refused, and the defendant excepted: "In any event, if you should find all of the issues in favor of the plaintiffs, then in that case you are instructed that the measure of plaintiff's damages would be the amount that it would cost the plaintiffs to dig a ditch from B to C of sufficient capacity to carry off the water from B."

Shipp & Ewbank and Smith & Schenck, for appellant. Chas. F. Toms, Staton & Rector, O. V. F. Blythe, and J. W. Pless, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). 1. The first and second exceptions to the refusal to enter judgment for the defendant upon the pleadings, or to nonsuit on the evidence, cannot be sustained. The same question was presented and considered on the former appeal in this action (151 N. C. 408, 66 S. E. 346), and the court then said: "The defendant pleaded the three-year statute of limitations and relied upon Revisal 1908, § 395 (3): 'Action for trespass upon real property. When the trespass is a continuing one, such action shall be commenced within three years from the original trespass, and not thereafter.' His honor erred in sustaining the plea. This is not a continuing trespass. It is irregular, intermittent, and variable, dependent upon the rainfall as to quantity of water poured upon the plaintiff's land, and in frequency of occurrence. It is true the ditch, which was dug more than three years before suit brought, has been continuously there; but that is on the defendant's land. The trespass is the pouring down of water upon the plaintiff's land, which comes down at irregular periods and in varying quantities, to the injury of his crops and land. The plaintiff can recover for any injury, caused by water diverted from its natural course, within three years before the action began."

[1] It has been repeatedly decided that a judgment of this court cannot be reviewed by a second appeal. Pretzfelder v. Insurance Co., 123 N. C. 164, 31 S. E. 470, 44 L. R. A. 424; Harris v. Quarry Co., 137 N. C. 204, 49 S. E. 95; Green v. Green, 143 N. C. 410, 55 S. E. 818.

[2] If, however, there was merit in the contention of the defendant, and it had not been heretofore considered, there are no facts appearing on the record, or admitted by the pleadings, on which the court can declare, as matter of law, that the cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations. The defendant denies the allegation that he had committed a continuous trespass, which commenced more than three years before the commencement of the action, and should not complain if the court declines to act upon the allegation as a fact in the case.

Oldham v. Rieger, 145 N. C. 258, 58 S. E. 1093, in which the distinction is clearly drawn between the cases in which the court may decide the plea of the statute of limitations, as matter of law, and when it cannot do so, is in point. Justice Walker, speaking for the court, says: "When the complaint sets out a cause of action which is clearly barred and the facts are admitted by the answer, and, in addition to the admission, the statute is pleaded or relied on, then the court may decide the question as a matter of law. This was the case, as will appear by reference to the statement of the facts, in Shackelford v. Staton, 117 N. C. 73 [23 S. E. 101], and Cherry v. Canal Co., 140 N. C. at page 426 [53 S. E. 139, 111 Am. St. Rep. 850], in the last of which cases Justice Hoke says: 'The facts are uncontroverted.' But when the complaint states a cause of action apparently barred, and the answer properly denies the facts or the cause of action, and then sets up the bar of the statute, the court cannot dismiss upon a demurrer ore tenus or a motion to nonsuit, for when such a motion is made it must be decided upon the pleadings of the plaintiff or of the adversary of the party who makes the motion, and the court has no right to look at the pleading of the opposing party, except to see if the facts are admitted, so as to present merely a question of law."

[3] The defendant did not ask that an issue be submitted on the plea of the statute. The first and second issues tendered may have been so intended; but they did not embody sufficient facts. The ditch may have been dug and used continuously for more than three years before the commencement of the action, and the injury to the plaintiffs may have occurred within the three years.

In Hocutt v. Railroad, 124 N. C. 218, 32 S. E. 681, the ditches complained of had been cut and in use for more than 20 years; but it was held that the action was not barred because the right of action did not accrue until the plaintiff was injured.

The case seems to have been tried on this theory, as the plaintiffs confined their evidence to injuries sustained within three years, and the court charged the jury: "You cannot consider any damage either to crops or to the land of the plaintiffs prior to three years next before bringing this suit. You can go back three years from the time the summons was issued in this case and assess damages both to the land and the crops for that period. You cannot go beyond that in arriving at damages either as to the injury to the land or crops."

[4] 2. The issues adopted by the court were sufficient to enable the defendant to present his contentions, and to develop his case, and this is all he was entitled to.

[5] The form of the issues is within the discretion of the judge of the superior court, provided they are sufficient to determine the rights of the parties, and to support the judgment. Kimberly v. Howland, 143 N. C. 393, 55 S. E. 778, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 545; Clark v. Guano Co., 144 N. C. 71, 56 S. E. 858, 119 Am. St. Rep. 931.

[6] 3. There was no error in allowing the plaintiff to recover damages for loss of crops in addition to injury to the land. Ridley v. Railroad, 124 N. C. 38, 32 S. E. 379; Beasley v. Railroad, 147 N. C. 366, 61 S. E. 453.

The action in Ridley v. Railroad, supra, was commenced in 1892, before the act providing for the assessment of permanent damages against railroads, and was decided under the general law, and it was there held that the plaintiff was entitled to a judgment of $300, upon a verdict finding the damage of the land to be $500 and the damage to the crops $300, and it was approved in Beasley v. Railroad, supra.

[7] 4. We do not think the rule, requiring a party injured by the wrongful act of another to do what he reasonably can to decrease the damages, should be extended, as the defendant contends. To do so would set a premium on illegal conduct, and would render useless many of the drainage acts of our state. If the prayer for instruction refused by the court embodies a correct legal principle, it is unnecessary for the upper proprietor to institute legal proceedings to drain through the lands of the lower proprietor.

He may cut his ditches when and where he pleases, may collect and divert water and pour it on the lands of the lower proprietor, and then require him to cut ditches on his land to take care of this water, or, failing to do so, his damages are limited to the expenses he would have incurred in cutting the ditches.

[8] But the instruction, as framed, could not have been given in any event. The instruction limits the recovery to the cost of digging a ditch from B to C, of sufficient capacity to carry off the water from B. There is evidence in the record that there are ditches on the lands of the plaintiffs between C and the creek, and that the effect of keeping open a ditch from B to C would be to fill up these ditches. One witness said: "Q. Wouldn't it be a good thing to keep the ditch BC open? A. I think it would be a big mistake; it would fill up all Roberts' ditches between there and the creek." If the law imposed on the plaintiffs the duty of taking care of the water, surely it would not deny to them the cost of enlarging the ditches from C to the creek, made necessary by the acts of the defendant. The instruction would do so, and, if given, this evidence referred to could not be considered.

[9] 5. There were several instructions prayed for that are not set out, because none of them were directed to the issues and conclude, "The plaintiffs cannot recover." Bradley v. Railroad, 126 N. C. 740, 36 S. E. 181; Foy v. Winston, 135 N. C. 440, 47 S. E. 466; Earnhardt v. Clement, 137 N. C. 93, 49 S. E. 49. We think, however, the substance of them, where pertinent, was embraced in the charge.

[10] 6. The exception to the charge as a whole is untenable. Sigman v. Railroad, 135 N. C. 181, 47 S. E. 420. The case is similar to the case of Briscoe v. Parker, 145 N. C. 14, 58 S. E. 443, and has been correctly tried.

No error.

(155 N. C. 287)

BERRY v. CAROLINA, C. & O. RY.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. FALSE IMPRISONMENT (§ 15*)—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS—MISCONDUCT OF TRAINMEN—COMPLAINT.

A complaint in an action against a carrier, which alleges that while plaintiff was riding peaceably as a passenger on a train the agents of the carrier willfully and maliciously assaulted him, and committed a battery on him, and violently ejected him from the train, and caused his arrest on a criminal charge, and that he was discharged and the prosecution dismissed, charges a single continuing tort, for which the carrier is liable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see False Imprisonment, Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 397*)—TORTS—LIABILITY. A corporation is liable for the acts of its servants committed while engaged in the business of the corporation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 397.*]

3. CARRIERS (§ 360*)—PASSENGERS—EJECTION—GROUNDS.

A passenger may, by misconduct, justify his ejection from the train, and the conductor need not wait until an act of violence has been committed by the passenger before ejecting him, but he may anticipate violent conduct when the condition of the passenger indicates that he will become offensive to the other passengers, and the conductor need only use reasonable care not to make a mistake.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 1443; Dec. Dig. § 360.*]

4. FALSE IMPRISONMENT (§ 15*)—LIABILITY OF CARRIER—MISTREATMENT OF PASSENGERS.

A traveling passenger agent of a carrier who assists a conductor in running an excursion train, carrying numerous passengers, and who assumes authority in managing the train, acts presumably within the scope of his authority with the consent of the carrier, and has lawful authority to cause the arrest of a passenger on proper provocation, and, where he exercises his authority wrongfully and in disregard of a passenger's rights, the carrier is liable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see False Imprisonment, Cent. Dig. §§ 5-67; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, McDowell County; Lane, Judge.

Action by O. C. Berry against the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

"(1) Was the plaintiff arrested and prosecuted as alleged in the complaint. Ans. Yes.

"(2) Was the same done without probable cause? Ans. Yes.

"(3) Was the same done with malice? Ans. Yes.

"(4) Was the act of the agent of the defendant company as alleged in the complaint done willfully or wantonly or in utter disregard of the rights of the plaintiff? Ans. Yes.

"(5) Has the criminal action terminated? Ans. Yes.

"(6) What damage, if any, has plaintiff sustained thereby? Ans. $350."

From the judgment rendered the defendant appealed.

J. Norment Powell and Jas. J. McLaughlin, for appellant. John Gary Evans and Pless & Winborne, for appellee.

BROWN, J. The defendant assigns as error: (1) Overruling defendant's demurrer ore tenus to the complaint. (2) Overruling defendant's motion to nonsuit at the close of the evidence.

[1] We are of opinion that the demurrer was properly overruled. The complaint alleges "that at or near the station of Marion, in the state of North Carolina, while plaintiff was riding peaceably as a passenger on said train, the agents of the defendants willfully, wantonly, carelessly, maliciously, negligently, and in utter disregard of the rights of the plaintiff assaulted the plaintiff and committed a battery upon his person, and with violence and a strong arm ejected the plaintiff from its car, where he had a right to be, and caused the plaintiff to be arrested and charged as a criminal before a justice of the peace in the state of North Carolina." The complaint further avers that the plaintiff was discharged, and that the prosecution has terminated. It requires no citation of authority to prove that a cause of action is stated by those words, and one for which, if sustained, the plaintiff may recover damages. The complaint not only alleges the wrongful ejection of plaintiff, a passenger, from defendant's train, but that it was done willfully, wantonly, and in utter disregard of plaintiff's rights. Holmes v. Railroad, 94 N. C. 324.

The error of the learned counsel for defendant is in regarding this as an action for a prosecution solely for a supposed past offense as was the case in Minter v. So. Express Co., 153 N. C. 507, 69 S. E. 497, and Daniel v. Railway, 136 N. C. 517, 48 S. E. 816, 67 L. R. A. 455. In the former case the complaint charged that the defendant's night watchman swore out a warrant against the plaintiff for the larceny of whisky from the express company. The complaint was held to be demurrable, in the absence of an allegation that the express company authorized or ratified the act of the night watchman; the act charged not being within the general scope of his authority. In the latter case the cashier in the local office of a railroad company caused the arrest of a person whom he suspected of having stolen money from the office of the company. In the absence of proof that the act of the cashier was authorized or ratified by the corporation, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover. The difference between those cases and the one at bar is obvious. In the two former the sole purpose was to punish the offender for a past unlawful act upon his part, and thus to vindicate justice. That was no part of the agent's business, and did not come within even an implied authority, much less the actual scope of his agency. "There is no implied authority in a person having the custody of property to take such steps as he thinks fit to punish a person who he supposes has done something with reference to the property which he has not done. The act of punishing the offender is not anything done with reference to the property; it is done merely for the purpose of vindicating justice. And in this respect there is no difference between a railway company, which is a corporation, and a private individual." Allen v. Railroad, L. R. 6 Q. B. 65, quoted in Daniel v. Railroad, supra. In this case we have a very different state of facts stated in the complaint and admitted by demurrer. The tort consists, not in prosecuting the plaintiff for a past offense for the purpose of vindicating justice, but in having him illegally arrested, while a passenger on defendant's train and entitled to its protection, taken from the car and delivered into custody, all of which is alleged to have been done by and at the instance of defendant's agent. The series of acts constituted one continued tort for which the defendant is responsible.

[2] It is well settled that corporations are liable for the acts of their servants while such servants are engaged in the business of their principals in the same manner and to the same extent that individuals are liable under like circumstances. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699, 25 L. Ed. 750. As to whether the arrest and ejection of the plaintiff was actually within the scope of Mandell's authority can best be considered in passing on the motion to nonsuit as the agency is alleged and, of course, admitted by demurrer. We are of opinion that the motion to nonsuit was properly overruled. The entire evidence was introduced by the plaintiff, the defendant offering none, and tends to prove these facts. There was an excursion train operated on December 28, 1909, from Spartanburg, S. C., beyond Spruce Pine, N. C., on defendant's road. Plaintiff, being a passenger thereon, was arrested in this state by two police officers of Spartanburg, who were on the train, at the direction and command of Chas. T. Mandell, the traveling passenger agent of the defendant, removed from the train and delivered into the custody of a constable and a justice of the peace at Spruce Pine, when a warrant was issued at instance of Mandell. The plaintiff was taken under arrest to Marion, in McDowell county, Mandell accompanying the officer, and tried by a justice of the peace and discharged. The evidence shows that Mandell prosecuted the case and insisted on plaintiff's being imprisoned without bail. The motion to nonsuit brings up two inquiries: Was the plaintiff wrongfully arrested, removed from the train, and prosecuted? If so, is the defendant liable for Mandell's acts?

[3] That a passenger may forfeit his rights as such by his misconduct, and that he may be lawfully ejected from the train on that account by the carrier, is undeniable. The conductor is responsible for his train, and it is not only his right, but it is his duty, to eject a drunken or disorderly passenger. In doing this, the conductor is necessarily bound to act upon appearances, and all that the law requires is that he shall use reasonable care and caution not to make a mistake. The conductor is not obliged to wait until some act of violence has been committed by the passenger before exerting his authority. He may anticipate violent and offensive conduct when the condition of the passenger is such as to indicate that he will become offensive to other passengers. 2 Hutchinson on Carriers (3d Ed.) § 978. The answer avers that the plaintiff was arrested in his car because of his violent threats and participation in an affray on the train which resulted in the serious wounding of one of the participants.

While there is evidence of a fight in one of the cars, there is no evidence that the plaintiff participated in it. We find nothing whatever in the record which justifies or even excuses the arrest and prosecution of the plaintiff. From the plaintiff's evidence and the other testimony offered by him, it is manifest that Mandell (who was not examined) acted with precipitation, violence, and an entire disregard of plaintiff's rights. In fact, it is not contended in defendant's brief or upon the argument that the arrest, expulsion, and prosecution of plaintiff is justified by any evidence in the record, but defendant's counsel rest their defense exclusively upon the contention that the defendant is not liable for Mandell's acts.

[4] We are of opinion that such contention cannot be sustained. The evidence discloses that this was a large excursion train carrying many passengers; that Mandell, admitted to be the traveling passenger agent of defendant, was on the train; that he was assisting the conductor to manage the train, which evidently needed more than one person to conduct it properly. The attitude of the conductor and all on the train towards Mandell shows that his authority was supreme and extended throughout the train. As Mandell, the passenger agent of defendant, was assuming this authority openly on the train, it must be presumed to have been within the scope of his temporary authority and with defendant's consent, especially when the defendant offers no evidence to the contrary. When Mandell ordered the arrest and expulsion of defendant from the train, and followed it up by delivering plaintiff into the custody of the law and prosecuting him, he committed a tort for which the defendant is liable. The prosecution was not for a past offense which plaintiff had committed, as in the cases we have quoted, but it was a continuation of the same tort committed by Mandell when he ordered the arrest on the train. As he had the legal authority to order the arrest of plaintiff upon proper provocation, the act was within the scope of his general authority, and, if he exercised such authority wrongfully, wantonly, and with utter disregard of plaintiff's rights, as is alleged in the complaint and found by the jury, the defendant is liable for his conduct. The act was committed in the course of Mandell's employment at the time, in furtherance of the defendant's business, and was apparently within the scope of his authority. The principle laid down in the Daniels and Minter Cases has no application to the facts of this case. It falls rather within the principle laid down in Jackson v. Telegraph Co., 139 N. C. 354, 51 S. E. 1015, 70 L. R. A. 738; Marlowe v. Bland, 154 N. C. 140, 69 S. E. 752; Hussey v. Railroad, 98 N. C. 34, 3 S. E. 923, 2 Am. St. Rep. 312; Railroad v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597, 7 Sup. Ct. 1296, 30 L. Ed. 1146.

No error.

(155 N. C. 233)

EPLÉE v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 101, 102*)—SAFE APPLIANCES—OBLIGATION OF MASTER.

A master must furnish reasonably safe and suitable appliances and such as are in general use.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 180-184; Dec. Dig. §§ 101, 102.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 286*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—DEFECTIVE APPLIANCES—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action for injuries to a servant operating an electric drill, caused by being caught by a projecting set screw, evidence held to require submission to the jury of the issue of the master's negligence in failing to cover or countersink the screw.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1010-1050; Dec. Dig. § 286.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 289*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

An operator of an electric drill, consisting of a vertical shaft at the lower end of which was a socket in which the drill was inserted and held in place by a projecting set screw, was injured by being caught by the screw. He had never operated the drill when the foreman directed him to do the work. He informed the foreman that he did not know how to adjust it; but the foreman did not instruct or warn him. While reaching for a can of water to pour water on the iron as needed, his coat was caught in the set screw, and he was injured. Held, that he was not guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1089-1132; Dec. Dig. § 289.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 296*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

An instruction, submitting the issue of contributory negligence under the test of what a reasonably prudent man would have done under the circumstances, was sufficiently favorable to the master.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1180-1194; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

5. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 262*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

The defense of assumption of risk, to be available, must be pleaded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 858; Dec. Dig. § 262.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Buncombe County; Jas. L. Webb, Judge.

Action by Calvin Eplée against the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Civil action to recover damages for personal injury, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant.

These issues were submitted: "(1) Was the plaintiff, Calvin Eplée, injured by the negligence of the defendant, Southern Railway Company, as alleged in the complaint? (2) Did the plaintiff by his own negligence contribute to his injury as alleged in the answer? (3) What damage, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to recover?" The jury answered the first issue, "Yes"; the second issue, "No"; and the third issue, "One thousand dollars."

Moore & Rollins and W. B. Rodman, for appellant. Craig, Martin & Thomason, for appellee.

BROWN, J. As the basis of his action, the plaintiff alleged that defendant furnished him, with which to do his work, a drill that was unsafe, and negligently constructed, in that from the upright revolving shaft thereof there projected a set screw, dangerous to the person operating the machine, and which the defendant negligently allowed to project from the shaft, instead of having covered or countersunk. Defendant denied that it was negligent, and pleaded contributory negligence. Defendant, in its shops at Asheville, operated an electric drill, which consisted of a vertical shaft, at the lower end of which was a head or socket, and into this socket a drill of the size and kind desired to be used was inserted and held in place by a set screw. This screw head projected three-quarters of an inch and was neither covered nor countersunk at time of the injury. The plaintiff was drilling a hole in a piece of iron, and, in order to keep the iron cool, from time to time water would have to be applied to the hole which was being drilled. The plaintiff was standing on the left side of the drill holding the iron, and there was a can of water near by, so that he could pour the water on the iron as needed. The plaintiff had put water on the iron twice before the accident happened, and, when last using the can of water, had set it on the table to the right of and near the drill. In reaching for the can of water, plaintiff's coat sleeve caught in the set screw, which held the drill in the socket, and he was seriously injured.

The assignments of error, relied upon and discussed in the defendant's brief, present three questions for determination:

[1] 1. Is there any evidence of negligence?

It was the duty of defendant to furnish plaintiff with a drill reasonably safe and suitable for the work in which he was engaged, and such as is in general use. Hicks v. Manufacturing Company, 138 N. C. 319, 50 S. E. 703; Lloyd v. Hanes, 126 N. C. 359, 35 S. E. 611.

[2] There is abundant evidence tending to prove that for the protection of the operator such set screws in drills are usually covered or countersunk. In answer to counsel for defendant upon cross-examination, plaintiff further testified that, two days after he was injured, he saw this drill, and defendant had drilled out the set screw hole and sunk the head flush with the drill shaft, so it could not injure any one.

That there is evidence of negligence to be submitted to the jury is settled by a multitude of decisions. Pressly v. Yarn Mills, 138 N. C. 410, 51 S. E. 69, and cases cited.

[3] 2. Was the plaintiff, in any reasonable view of the evidence, guilty of contributory negligence?

The evidence tends to prove that in progress of plaintiff's work it was necessary to drill holes in an iron bar. He went to the foreman of the shop and asked where the man was that operated the drill. The foreman said he was not there, and that the plaintiff would have to do the work himself. The plaintiff stated to him that he did not want to take the responsibility of operating the drill. The foreman then went with him to the drill, adjusted it, started it running, and left him to operate it alone. The foreman told the plaintiff to hold the iron plate, and when it became hot to pour water on it. The plaintiff told him that he was unaccustomed to the machine and did not understand it. He had never operated the machine before and did not know how to adjust it. There is no evidence that the foreman called attention of plaintiff to the set screw or cautioned him.

It is manifest upon this evidence the court could not hold the defendant guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law.

[4] A man engaged in such work to which plaintiff was assigned, even if a skilled operator, cannot always be on guard against damage from exposed set screws and the like. His mind is concentrated on his work, and, when plaintiff reached for the water can, it was almost a mechanical act.

In submitting plaintiff's conduct to the judgment of the jury under the rule of the "reasonably prudent man," the court gave defendant all it was entitled to.

[5] 3. It is unnecessary to discuss the proposition contended for in defendant's brief that, owing to the character of the work in which plaintiff was engaged, the provisions of section 2646, Revisal 1905, do not apply, and that the defense of assumption of risk is open to defendant for the reason that such defense is not pleaded in the answer. Dorsett v. Manufacturing Company, 131 N. C. 254, 42 S. E. 612.

Had it been pleaded, the court could scarcely hold as matter of law that, in any view of the evidence, the plaintiff assumed the risk of the work at the drill in which he was temporarily engaged at the direction of the foreman. Marks v. Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769.

The brief of the learned counsel for defendant concludes as follows: "These several assignments of error are intended to raise and present to this court, for its decision, this question: Upon plaintiff's own evidence, is he entitled to maintain this action?"

We are of opinion that he is.

No error.

(155 N. C. 466)

STATE v. HAWKINS.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION (§ 75*)—CONSTRUCTION—CLERICAL ERROR.

Where an indictment alleged that defendant, on a date specified, in B. county with force and arms, "unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously break and enter" the town hall, etc., with intent to commit larceny therein, it was not fatally defective for failure to contain the word "did"; such omission being a clerical or grammatical error cured by Revisal 1905, § 3254.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. §§ 202-204; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

2. BURGLARY (§ 41*)—EVIDENCE.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence held to sustain a conviction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Burglary, Cent. Dig. §§ 94-103; Dec. Dig. § 41.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 968*)—FAILURE OF PROOF—REMEDY.

On the state's failure to prove ownership of the building alleged to have been burglarized, defendant's remedy is by prayer for an instruction, and not by a motion in arrest of judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2423-2444; Dec. Dig. § 968.*]

4. BURGLARY (§ 41*)—OWNERSHIP OF BUILDING—EVIDENCE.

Where, in a prosecution for burglary, a witness testified without objection that the building belonged to the town of M., and there was no evidence to the contrary, there was sufficient proof of ownership of the building to sustain a conviction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Burglary, Cent. Dig. §§ 94-103; Dec. Dig. § 41.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Burke County; Allen, Judge.

Bob Hawkins was convicted of burglary, and he appeals. Affirmed.

The defendant was tried and convicted at March term, 1911, of the superior court of Burke county, under section 3333, Revisal of 1905, upon the following bill of indictment: "The jurors for the state upon their oaths do present that Bob Hawkins, late of the county of Burke, on the 31st day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and ten, with force and arms, at and in the county aforesaid, unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously break and enter the town hall in the town of Morganton, the property of said town of Morganton, then and there situate, in the nighttime, in which said town hall there was at the time goods, chattels, dishes and other merchandise and things of value, with intent, unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously to commit the crime of larceny, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state." Upon the call of the case for trial, and before the jury was impaneled, the defendant moved the court to quash the bill of indictment on the ground that there was no allegation in said bill that defendant did commit any crime, in that the word "did" nowhere appeared in said bill. Motion denied, and defendant excepted.

The state introduced the following evidence:

C. R. Gilbert testified as follows: "I am night policeman in the town of Morganton. On the night of October 31, 1910, the ladies of the town had a Halloween party in the town hall for the benefit of Grace Hospital. They left the hall some time between 10 and 11 o'clock that night, and left some dishes, cups, pots, pans, etc., in there. Some time that night, while the party was going on, the defendant Bob Hawkins came up there, and they told him to get out, and he went down the stairway and went away. When they all left, the hall door was locked with a padlock, with hasp and staple. That night some time between 1 and 2 o'clock I heard a noise like some one working at the lock at the door of the hall. I was in my room just across the aisle in the building. I heard something like a lock break. I got up and went to the door and looked in, and the defendant sat down by the side of the stove. I pulled the door shut, went back to my room, put on my clothes, and went in and arrested defendant and took him to the calaboose and locked him up. The lock was gone, and we haven't found it yet. He said that if I would turn him loose he would go home; that a wagon was coming for him in a few minutes. I heard the noise at the lock, I suppose about five minutes. It was continuous. I heard something like some one walking down the stairway just about the time the lock was broken, and while I heard the noise at the door like some one working with the lock. I sleep in the building across the hall. The building belongs to the town of Morganton." Cross-examination: "This was some time between 1 and 2 o'clock in the night. It was dark. The lights had gone out. I searched the defendant. He had nothing on his person. I will not swear Bob Hawkins broke the door open, or that he broke the lock to the door. I did not see any one break the door open. All that I know is that I heard a noise like some one working at the door and heard something like a lock break and found Hawkins in the hall. He told me that he was hunting for a place to sleep. I told him I would give him a place to sleep and took him to the calaboose." Here the state rested.

The defendant introduced the following testimony:

Bob Hawkins, defendant, testified as follows: "I am defendant. Live some six or eight miles from Morganton. Was in town the night the ladies had a Halloween party for the benefit of Grace Hospital. I was employed by Timothy Smith to take some vegetables and other things to the hall for Mrs. Walton. I was there most of the time while the party was going on. They gave me my supper, and I stayed there until they all left. I went down street and met up with some of my friends and took a drink or two of liquor. I got cold and went back up there to get warm before starting home. Some of my friends had a wagon, and they were coming by the town hall to get me. I went up to the door, and it was standing partially open, so that I could see the glimmer of light from the stove in the dark room. I walked in and sat down by the stove, and directly the policeman came in and arrested me and took me down to the calaboose and locked me up. I did not break anything, neither did I attempt to take anything—only wanted to warm before starting for home."

Four witnesses testified to the good character of the defendant.

The defendant requested that the following instructions be given to the jury:

"(1) The court charges you that, upon all the testimony in this case, the jury should return a verdict of not guilty." Refused, and defendant excepted.

"(2) The court charges you that the fact that the prisoner was found in the building, as alleged, is not evidence that he entered it with the intent to commit any particular crime." Refused, and defendant excepted.

After the verdict the defendant moved in arrest of judgment upon the same grounds urged in support of his motion to quash, and upon the additional ground that there was no evidence that the hall was the property of the town of Morganton. Judgment was pronounced on the verdict, and the defendant appealed.

R. C. Huffman, for appellant. Attorney General Bickett and Geo. L. Jones, for the State.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] It is apparent that the failure to use the word "did" in the indictment is a clerical or grammatical error, which is cured by our statute. Revisal 1905, § 3254. The meaning of the bill is clear, and the defendant could not have been misled, nor could he have failed to understand the exact nature of the offense charged.

In Joyce on Indictments, § 201, it is said: "Though an indictment may be couched in ungrammatical language, this will not, of itself, render the indictment insufficient, provided the intention and meaning of the pleader is clearly apparent." And in section 202: "It is the general rule that an indictment is not vitiated by mistakes which are merely clerical, where they do not destroy the sense of the indictment and the meaning is apparent."

A case in point is Pond v. State, 55 Ala. 196, which holds an indictment sufficient which charged that "the defendant broke in to and entered a storehouse of R. D. with the intent to steal, in which there was at the time of such breaking and entering, goods, merchandise or other valuable things, kept for use."

In Com. v. Call, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 515, Justice Morton says: "The grammatical and critical objection, however ingenious and acute it may be, cannot prevail. The age is gone by when bad Latin or even bad English, so it be sufficiently intelligible, can avail against the indictment, declaration, or plea."

The evidence for the state, when considered in connection with that of the defendant, and the evidence of his good character, would have fully justified a verdict of acquittal; but we cannot say there was no evidence fit to be submitted to the jury, and it was for them to determine its force and conclusiveness.

The controlling principle, in determining whether there is evidence which the jury ought to consider, is well stated in State v. White, 89 N. C. 464, and approved in State v. Walker, 149 N. C. 530, 63 S. E. 77, as follows: "It is well-settled law that the court must decide what is evidence, and whether there is any evidence to be submitted to the jury, pertinent to an issue submitted to them. It is as well settled that, if there is evidence to be submitted, the jury must determine its weight and effect. This, however, does not imply that the court must submit a scintilla, very slight evidence; on the contrary, it must be such as, in the judgment of the court, would reasonably warrant the jury in finding a verdict upon the issue submitted, affirmatively or negatively, accordingly as they might view it in one light or another, and give it more or less weight, or none at all. In a case like the present one, the evidence ought to be such as, if the whole were taken together and substantially as true, the jury might reasonably find the defendant guilty. A single isolated fact or circumstance might be no evidence, not even a scintilla; two, three or more, taken together, might not make evidence in the eye of the law; but a multitude of slight facts and circumstances, taken together as true, might become (make) evidence that would warrant a jury in finding a verdict of guilty in cases of the most serious moment. The court must be the judge as to when such a combination of facts and circumstances reveal the dignity of evidence, and it must judge of the pertinency and relevancy of the facts and circumstances going to make up such evidence. The court cannot, however, decide that they are true or false. This is for the jury. But it must decide that, altogether, they make some evidence, to be submitted to the jury; and they must be such, in a case like the present, as would, if the jury believed the same, reasonably warrant them in finding a verdict of guilty."

[2] The evidence of the state tended to prove that, on the night the crime is alleged to have been committed, there was a crowd in the hall until between 10 and 11 o'clock; that, while the crowd was there, the defendant went to the hall and was told to leave, which he did; that, after the crowd left, the door was locked, a padlock, hasp, and staple being used; that property of some value was left in the hall; that between 1 and 2 o'clock in the night a policeman, who slept in the building, heard a noise like some one working at the lock of the door; that he heard something break, and he thought it was the lock; that he went immediately to the hall and found the door open and the lock gone; that the defendant was on the inside, and, when the policeman reached the door, he sat down by the stove.

If so, the jury could find from the evidence that the defendant broke the lock to the door and entered the hall, in which there was property, with the criminal intent alleged in the indictment.

"The intent may, and generally must, be proven by circumstantial evidence, for, as a rule, it is not susceptible of direct proof. It may be inferred from the time and manner at and in which the entry was made, or the conduct of the accused after the entry, or both." Cyc. vol. 6, p. 244.

In State v. McBryde, 97 N. C. 396, 1 S. E. 925, the defendant was charged with breaking into a dwelling with intent to commit larceny, and, in discussing the evidence of intent, the court says: "The intelligent mind will take cognizance of the fact that people do not usually enter the dwellings of others in the nighttime, when the inmates are asleep, with innocent intent. The most usual intent is to steal, and, when there is no explanation or evidence of a different intent, the ordinary mind will infer this also. The intent is not the object of sense—it cannot be seen or felt—and, if felonious, is not usually announced. So where no felony is committed, it would be difficult to prove a crime consisting of the intent alone, unless the jury be allowed to infer the intent from circumstances."

This is the law as announced in many decisions of this and other courts; but in its application juries should be guided by the humane rule delivered by Judge Ruffin in State v. Massey, 86 N. C. 680, 41 Am. Rep. 478: "When an act of a person may reasonably be attributed to two or more motives, the one criminal and the other not, the humanity of our law will ascribe it to that which is not criminal. 'It is neither charity nor common sense nor law, to infer the worst intent which the facts will admit of. The reverse is the rule of justice and law. If the facts will reasonably admit the inference of an intent, which though immoral is not criminal, we are bound to infer that intent.'"

The evidence of criminal intent is, we think, stronger than in State v. McBryde, supra, and in State v. Christmas, 101 N. C. 754, 8 S. E. 361, in which judgments upon convictions were affirmed. The motion in arrest of judgment upon the ground that the state failed to prove that the hall was the property of the town of Morganton was properly overruled.

[3] If there had been a failure of proof, the defendant should have taken advantage of it by a prayer for instruction, and not by a motion in arrest of judgment. State v. Baxter, 82 N. C. 606; State v. Harris, 120 N. C. 578, 26 S. E. 774; State v. Huggins, 126 N. C. 1056, 35 S. E. 606.

[4] It seems, however, there was evidence of the fact. A witness testified without objection, "The building belongs to the town of Morganton," and there was no evidence to the contrary. The fact that the defendant was in the house was a circumstance to be considered by the jury upon the question of criminal intent.

We find no error.

No error.

(155 N. C. 239)

YOUNCE v. BROAD RIVER LUMBER CO.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. DEPOSITIONS (§ 75*)—TAKING—QUALIFICATIONS OF COMMISSIONER.

The fact that the commissioner taking depositions was not a relative of either party need not appear on the face of his certificate, though Revisal 1905, § 1652, provides that the commissioner shall not be so related.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. §§ 166-189; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

2. DEPOSITIONS (§ 83*)—QUASHING—GROUNDS—RELATIONSHIP OF COMMISSIONER.

That a commissioner taking depositions was related to one of the parties, contrary to the statutory requirement, is ground for quashing the depositions, unless waived by the previous conduct of the party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. §§ 219-226; Dec. Dig. § 83.*]

3. DEPOSITIONS (§ 83*)—QUASHING—BURDEN OF PROOF.

The burden is on one moving to quash a deposition because the commissioner was related to one of the parties, contrary to statute, to prove relationship, and where it appeared that a deposition was taken on the day and place fixed, by the person designated in the order, it is presumed, in absence of contrary evidence, that it was legally taken.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. §§ 219-226; Dec. Dig. § 83.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 244*)—HEARSAY—TESTIMONY OF AGENT.

In an action for damages for breach of a contract by which plaintiff was to cut and saw timber for defendant, and manufacture it, evidence was not admissible of a conversation between witness and defendant's vice president, wherein the latter stated that his company intended to freeze out plaintiff, and not let him complete sawing the timber, by claiming that it was improperly sawed, and wherein witness asked the vice president how he could say that when he had told witness that the lumber sawed by plaintiff was better than most of it sawed by defendant's other mills; the statement not being made in the line of the vice president's official duty and hence being hearsay.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 916-936; Dec. Dig. § 244.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1050*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE—PREJUDICIAL EFFECT.

The admission of such conversation must have been prejudicial to defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4153-4160; Dec. Dig. § 1050.*]

6. EVIDENCE (§ 543*)—EXPERT TESTIMONY—QUALIFICATIONS—COST OF MANUFACTURE.

In an action for damages for breach of a contract by which plaintiff agreed to cut and saw timber for defendant and manufacture it, wherein plaintiff claimed as damages the difference between the contract price of sawing and the cost thereof, a witness of 18 or 20 years experience in the sawmill business, who was engaged therein when the contract was breached, and had expert knowledge of the cost of manufacturing lumber in the county in which the work was done, though he had never seen the particular land, could testify to the average cost of sawing and manufacturing lumber; the weight of his evidence being for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2356½-2358; Dec. Dig. § 543.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Rutherford County; Webb, Judge.

Action by C. F. Younce against the Broad River Lumber Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed, and new trial granted.

Civil action to recover damages for breach of contract between the plaintiff and defendant, by which the plaintiff undertook to cut and saw certain timber for defendant and manufacture it into lumber. The deposition of the witness Middleby as to the conversation with defendant's vice president stated that witness had a conversation with the vice president wherein the latter said that they intended to freeze out plaintiff the same as they had done the other man who operated on the same land, and that he would do it by claiming that the lumber was improperly sawed, whereupon witness asked him how he could say that when he had told witness that he had been to a number of mills throughout the South, and that the lumber sawed by plaintiff was better than the majority of the other mills.

The issues submitted were:

"(1) Did the plaintiff saw the timber for defendant in accordance with the contract made between them? Answer: Yes.

"(2) Did the defendant wrongfully prevent plaintiff from performing his contract with it as alleged? Answer: Yes.

"(3) What damage, if any, is plaintiff entitled to recover? Answer: Eight hundred [$800]."

S. Gallert and Justice & Broadhurst, for appellant. McBrayer, McBrayer & McRorie, for appellee.

BROWN, J. [1] The defendant moved to quash the deposition of J. Middleby, Jr., a witness for plaintiff, upon the ground that the certificate of the commissioner was irregular, in that it failed to state that the commissioner was of kin to neither party. Revisal 1905, § 1652. It is not necessary that this should appear upon the face of the certificate, although it is a requirement of the statute in the selection of a commissioner.

[2, 3] It is ground for quashing the deposition, unless waived by previous conduct of a party, and the burden of proof to establish the relationship would be on the one making the motion. It appearing that the deposition was taken on the day fixed, at the place named, and by the person designated in the order, the presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is that all things were done rightly. Gregg v. Mallet, 111 N. C. 76, 15 S. E. 936; Street v. Andrews, 115 N. C. 421, 20 S. E. 450.

[4, 5] The second and third exceptions are to the ruling of the court in allowing the witness Middleby, whose deposition was taken, to testify to a conversation in Reading, Pa., with one Clements, vice president of the defendant company. We are of opinion that the testimony was both incompetent and prejudicial to the defendant. It was not a declaration by an officer of the company made in the line of his official duties while acting for the company in the particular transaction, nor was the alleged statement any part of the transaction between plaintiff and defendant. It is hearsay testimony, and falls within no exception to the rule that such evidence is incompetent. It is well settled that the declarations of officers of a corporation are competent only when made in line of declarant's official duty, and while discharging it in reference to a transaction for the company. 20 Century Digest, "Evidence," § 916; 16 Cyc. 1020; 10 Cyc. 947. It is said in Smith v. Railroad, 68 N. C. 114: "But, if his right to act in the particular matter has ceased, his declarations are mere hearsay, which do not affect the principal. Cases in support of this proposition may be found in abundance with but little industry." See, also, Williams v. Williams, 28 N. C. 281, 45 Am. Dec. 494; Howard v. Stutts, 51 N. C. 372; McComb v. Railroad, 70 N. C. 178; Rumbough v. Imp. Co., 112 N. C. 751, 17 S. E. 536, 34 Am. St. Rep. 528.

[6] The fourth and fifth exceptions relate to the issue of damages. The plaintiff's alleged damages were measured by him between the contract price of sawing the timber into lumber and what he contended was the cost of doing so. The defendant offered as a witness on the cost of doing the work a man who had 18 or 20 years of experience in the sawmill business, and was so engaged in 1906 and 1907, the year in which the breach is alleged to have occurred, and had manufactured lumber in some smooth and some rough land in the western part of Rutherford county. We think his honor erred in excluding the evidence. It is true the witness had never been on this particular land, but he had expert knowledge of the cost of sawing and manufacturing lumber upon both smooth and mountainous lands in Rutherford county. It was proper for him to state the average cost of sawing and manufacturing lumber as a fact in his experience to be considered by the jury and given such weight as in their opinion it was entitled to. Wilkinson v. Dunbar, 149 N. C. 28, 62 S. E. 748, and cases cited; McKelvey on Ev. p. 230.

New trial.

(155 N. C. 250)

SHERILL v. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—DELAY IN DELIVERY OF MESSAGES—ACTIONS—EVIDENCE.

In an action for negligent delay in the delivery of a message announcing the death of a relative of the recipient, who was thereby deprived of the opportunity of attending the funeral, his testimony that, had the message been promptly received, he would have taken a train and asked for a delay of the funeral, and the testimony of the sender that, had such request been received, the funeral would have been delayed, was competent as against the objection that there was nothing to show that the train would not have been late so as to prevent the recipient from making connections; there being no presumption that the train would have been delayed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 61-63; Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

2. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—DELAY IN DELIVERY OF MESSAGES—ACTIONS—EVIDENCE.

Where the recipient of a message announcing the death of a relative sued for negligent delay of the message, depriving him of the opportunity of attending the funeral, evidence that the delay in the message caused such a shock to the recipient's mother that he could not leave on the day after the receipt of the message was competent as a reason why he could not leave after the receipt of the message.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 61-63; Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1052*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ERRONEOUS ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

Where, in an action for negligent delay in delivering a message announcing the death of a relative, the evidence showed that the recipient by taking the first train after the receipt of the message could not have reached the place of the funeral in time, the error, if any, in allowing testimony that the delay in the message caused such a shock to his mother that he could not leave, was harmless.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4171-4177; Dec. Dig. § 1052.*]

4. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—DELAY IN DELIVERY OF MESSAGE—PRESUMPTIONS—EVIDENCE.

In an action against a telegraph company for delay in the delivery of a death message, thereby preventing the recipient from attending the funeral of a relative, evidence of the feeling existing between decedent and the recipient must be shown by evidence where the relationship is distant, though affection is presumed in very near relationships.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 61-63; Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

5. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 68*)—DELAY IN DELIVERY OF MESSAGES—NEGLIGENCE—DAMAGES.

Where, in an action against a telegraph company for negligent delay in delivering a message announcing the death of an aunt, the evidence showed that the recipient lived within sight of the terminal office of the company, and was known to its agents, and that the message was delayed nearly a day, and that the recipient, if the message had been promptly delivered, would have attended the funeral, but that, because of the delay, he could not attend, and that affection existed between the recipient and decedent, the recipient could recover for mental anguish.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 69, 70; Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

6. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 52*)—DELAY IN DELIVERY OF MESSAGE—LIABILITY.

A recipient of a message announcing the death of a relative must make every reasonable effort to reach the place of the funeral before he can claim damages for loss of the opportunity, and, where by delay in delivering the message he cannot by such efforts arrive in time for the funeral, he may recover damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

7. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 74*)—NEGLIGENT DELAY IN DELIVERING MESSAGES—DAMAGES—INSTRUCTIONS.

An instruction in an action against a telegraph company for negligent delay in the delivery of a message announcing the death of a relative of the recipient, depriving him of the opportunity of attending decedent's funeral, that the jury should assess the damages at such a sum as will be just compensation for the injury, that they may not consider the grief natural to the loss of the relative, but must separate the grief for the relative's death from the grief at not attending the funeral, and only consider the anguish suffered therefrom, is sufficient on the question of damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 77; Dec. Dig. § 74.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, McDowell County; Lane, Judge.

Action by Lonnie Sherrill against the Western Union Telegraph Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Geo. H. Fearons and Alf. S. Barnard, for appellant. Pless & Winborne, for appellee.

CLARK, O. J. This is an action to recover damages for mental anguish because of the failure to deliver promptly the following message, which was filed at Johnson City, Tenn., at 3 p. m., December 21, 1909, addressed to the plaintiff at Old Fort, N. C.: "Ma died to-day. If any of you can come, will delay funeral." Though the plaintiff lived within sight of defendant's office, and was known to its agents and to the people generally at Old Fort, this message was not delivered till 11 o'clock next morning, when the plaintiff happened to go into defendant's office. The deceased was the aunt of the plaintiff. They had lived together at various times, and he testified that, if the message had been delivered promptly, he would have gone to Marion on the 8:20 train next morning, and thence to Johnson City over the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railroad, and would have sent a message asking that the funeral be delayed, and it would have been delayed till he could have been present; that, if he had taken the first train after the message was delivered, he would have had to to have gone around by way of Morristown, and could not have reached Johnson City till late at night, and knowing that the funeral could not then be delayed till the next day, which would have been the third day, he wired the relatives that he could not come. The above statement of facts established negligence beyond controversy.

[1] Exceptions 1 and 2 were because the plaintiff was allowed to testify that, if the message had been received by him the day it was sent, he would have gone to Johnson City next morning on the 8:20 train, and that he would have sent a message asking that the funeral be delayed, and exception 9 was to the admission of the testimony of J. G. Pulliam, the sender of the message to plaintiff, that, if the plaintiff had sent such message, he would have been in time for the funeral, and that it would have been delayed on that day until his arrival. The most earnest contention of the defendant is that the 8:20 train might have been behind time, and that the plaintiff might have missed connection at Marion. But the evidence of both plaintiff and Pulliam is that if the plaintiff had left on the 8:20 train, and had wired as he said he would have done, the funeral would have been delayed that day till his arrival. This testimony is uncontradicted. There is no presumption of law or of fact that the train was behind time, or that plaintiff would have missed connection, or that the funeral would not have been delayed till his arrival if he had. It does not appear how many trains passed over the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railroad each day, nor the length of time between the arrival of the train from Old Fort at Marion and the departure of the train at that point for Johnson City. The evidence of plaintiff and Pulliam is simply that if he had left Old Fort on the 8:20 train that day, sending the message he said he would have sent, the funeral would have been delayed till his arrival.

[2] Exceptions 3 and 4 are because the plaintiff was allowed to testify that the delay in the message till the next day caused such a shock to his mother that he could not have left on the next day after receipt of the message. This was not submitted to the jury as an element of damages, and was competent as one of the reasons why he could not have left after the receipt of the message at 11 o'clock next day.

[3] It was harmless, for the evidence was that, if he had left after the receipt of the message, he could not have reached Johnson City till late at night, and the funeral could not have been postponed then till the next day.

[4] The next four exceptions were to the admission of evidence as to the relationship and feeling existing between the plaintiff and the deceased. It has been long settled that feelings of affection are presumed in the very near relations of life, but between more distant relatives such feelings must be shown by evidence. Cashion v. Telegraph Co., 123 N. C. 267, 31 S. E. 493; Harrison v. Telegraph Co., 136 N. C. 383, 48 S. E. 772; Luckey v. Telegraph Co., 151 N. C. 553, 66 S. E. 596.

[5] Exceptions 10, 11, 12, and 13 are to the refusal of the court to tell the jury that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages for mental anguish. This scarcely needs consideration. The delay in the telegram was unreasonable. A letter by mail would have gone from Johnson City to Old Fort in less time. The evidence is that the plaintiff would have gone in time to have been at the funeral if the telegram had been delivered before the 8:20 train next morning, that he could not have gone in time if he had left by the first train 1:10 p. m., after the receipt of the message, and there was evidence of affection between the plaintiff and deceased, in addition to the relationship.

[6] Exceptions 14 and 15 are to the instructions of the court that, after the plaintiff received the message, he should have made every reasonable effort to reach Johnson City in time for the funeral, and if by reason of the delay in delivering the message he could not after making such efforts have reached Johnson City in time for the funeral, and there was no fault on his part, he was entitled to recover damages. In this there was no error.

[7] The sixteenth and last exception is to the instruction of the court upon the question of damages, as follows: "If you come to the issue as to damages, you should assess the damages at such a figure as would be reasonable, fair, and just compensation for the injury, and, on arriving at it, you should apply reasonable common sense methods such as reasonable business men would apply. You should not consider the grief and anguish natural to the loss of the relative. You should separate the grief at the aunt's death from the grief and anguish at not being at the funeral. It is natural to suppose that a man who loses a near relative suffers grief, and you should not consider that, but only consider the anguish and suffering he may have undergone by reason of the fact that he did not attend the funeral, if you find such failure was proximately caused by defendant's negligence." We do not see that the defendant can complain of this.

The defendant company is granted its franchise that it may serve the public by the prompt dispatch and delivery of messages whose urgency requires more speedy transmission and delivery than can be had by the ordinary course of the mail. When by the selection of inefficient agents or inefficient supervision of them such messages are unreasonably delayed, the telegraph company has failed in its duty, and the plaintiff who has sustained damages by reason of such negligence is entitled to recover therefor. It is in the power of the defendant to avoid all such actions as this by proper attention and the faithful discharge of its duties. The telegraph company has no cause to complain of any one but itself that such actions arise. It is in its power to prevent them, and it is its duty to do so.

No error.

(155 N. C. 436)

STATE v. ROWE.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 655*)—APPEAL—REVIEW—REMARKS BY COURT—PREJUDICE.

After four of the counsel had closed their addresses to the jury, and just after one of defendant's counsel had spoken, the judge told the sheriff to give the jury water, and stated that, if they wished to retire to their room, they might do so for a few minutes—"We have no band to play between the speeches." What elicited the remark did not appear, and it was not shown that it applied any more to argument of counsel for defendant than for the state. Held, that defendant was not prejudiced thereby.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1520-1523, 1527, 1535; Dec. Dig. § 655.*]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 271*)—PROVOKING DIFFICULTY—WORDS—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Defendant and deceased had previously quarreled over the habit of deceased of passing out of the usual bed of a highway where it was rough, over defendant's clover field, and each had ordered the other not to speak to him. They were enemies, and on the morning in question defendant accosted deceased, telling him that he had broken his promise not to drive over the grass, and that, if he did not drive in the road, defendant would put the law on him. This led to a difficulty, in which defendant shot deceased. Held, that it could not be said as a matter of law that defendant's words were not such as might be calculated to provoke a difficulty under the state of feeling existing between the parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 565; Dec. Dig. § 271.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 829*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—REQUESTED CHARGE—INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN.

In a prosecution for homicide, a requested charge on self-defense held covered by instructions given.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2011; Dec. Dig. § 829.*]

4. WORDS AND PHRASES—"SERIOUS."

The word "serious" has no fixed or technical meaning in the law, but is rather general and indeterminate in its signification, and, when applied to an assault, may include one made with intent to kill or to inflict great bodily harm, or one committed without such intent.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, p. 6420.]

5. HOMICIDE (§ 23*)—DEADLY WEAPON—SECOND-DEGREE MURDER.

Where decedent was killed with a deadly weapon, defendant was at least guilty of murder in the second degree, nothing else appearing; and the burden rested on him to satisfy the jury that such facts and circumstances of mitigation or justification existed as would excuse the homicide or reduce its grade to manslaughter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 35, 39, 40; Dec. Dig. § 23.*]

6. HOMICIDE (§ 340*)—DEGREE OF OFFENSE—SECOND-DEGREE MURDER—MANSLAUGHTER.

Where, in a prosecution for homicide, defendant admitted killing deceased by shooting him with a shotgun, but pleaded self-defense, the jury having disregarded such plea, it was their duty to convict him of murder in the second degree, and hence he could not complain that a conviction of manslaughter was unsustainable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 715-720; Dec. Dig. § 340.*]

7. HOMICIDE (§ 255*)—MANSLAUGHTER—EVIDENCE.

Where, in a prosecution for homicide, there was evidence justifying a finding that defendant entered into a fight with deceased willingly, if not with malice, deliberation, or premeditation, and that he pursued deceased and shot him when there was no real or apparent necessity for doing so, in order to defend his own person, and that after killing him he turned, and snapped his gun twice at deceased's son, a boy of 16 years of age, who was unarmed, and then fled, a conviction of manslaughter was justified by the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 539-541; Dec. Dig. § 255.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Mitchell County; Pell, Judge.

Charles Rowe was convicted of manslaughter, and he appeals. Affirmed.

The defendants, Charles Rowe and Wesley Rowe, were indicted for the murder of Filmore Rose. Wesley Rowe was acquitted, and Charles Rowe was convicted of manslaughter. The killing was admitted by the defendant, Charles Rowe; his plea being self-defense. The evidence is voluminous, but, for the purpose of considering the exceptions, the following statement of facts, and a portion of the evidence, will suffice:

The deceased, whose wife was a first cousin of the prisoner, had in cultivation a field about a mile from his home, and, in order to reach the field, it was necessary for him to go over an old road which was used by the public at will, across the property of the defendant. At one place the road was rough and difficult to pass. The deceased on one or two occasions drove a little out of the usual bed of the road, allowing his wagon to run over the land and clover of the defendant. On the morning of the homicide, the two defendants left home early, about 7 o'clock, one with an axe and the other with a gun, to place some poles along the road to prevent trespassing, as they alleged. From this point the evidence of the state and the defendant conflicts. The state's witness, Avery Rose, the 16 year old son of deceased, and the only one present at the homicide except deceased and the two defendants, testified: "Thursday morning father and I started to the field; got outside of Charlie Rowe's field, and quite a distance from us we saw Charlie Rowe and Wesley Rowe standing on a high knoll, about 125 yards away. Q. Were they on or near this road you were traveling? A. Yes, sir; up on a knoll, looking down the road towards us. We went on and met them. As soon as we got in sight, they came towards us. Q. What did they have in their hands? A. Wesley had a gun and Charlie Rowe had an axe. Q. What kind of gun was it? A. A double-barrel shotgun. Charlie had the axe. My father went up, and said, 'Good morning' to them, and they didn't speak to him. Charlie said: 'Now look here, Filmore, you have run over my clover and grass. If you don't drive down there in the road, I am going to put the law to you.' Father said: 'Charlie, clean out those stumps over there and fix the road so I can drive it, and I will do so.' Father went on up the road, Charlie following father, Wesley following Charlie. I was behind my father. Father went on up the road. Charlie turned around to Wesley, handed Wesley the axe. Wesley handed him the gun. I then turned, and saw there was trouble. I made for the gun, and Charlie knocked me down with the gun, and run on around and shot my father. He struck me above the right ear—side of the head. After he shot my father, he turned and snapped twice at me as I went to my father. Q. Then what happened? A. They ran; went back down the road." The witness further testified that neither he nor his father had a pistol or other weapon of any kind, and there was no evidence that one was found on the body. The wife of the deceased testified that deceased had not had a pistol for over 20 years. The appellant testified in his own behalf, and after telling about going to the place of the homicide on the morning when they met, and doing a little work on the road, continued as follows: "I was just on the bank of the road, just in the edge of the clover. Q. Did any one speak? A. I was throwing the stones out and making a racket just as they got up there, and didn't hear any one speak. Q. What was the first word spoken there that you heard? A. Just at that time they were up to us, and were just passing us, and I spoke and said: 'Filmore, you are not doing what you promised you would do, keeping off the clover.' Just at that time, he spoke and cursed me (using offensive and insulting language). Q. How far away from you was he when he said that? A. Two or three steps away. Q. What happened when he used the language you have mentioned? A. Just when he used the language I have mentioned I had seen his hand in his pocket all the time, from the time he came up, and just at that time he stooped and picked up a stone with his left hand, his right hand being in his right pocket, and Avery stooped and picked up two, a stone in each hand. Just at that time, Avery rushed at me, wildly, furiously, with the stones. As he rushed at me, he saw the axe, and he dropped the stones, and grabbed the axe. Q. Then what did he do? A. Just as he grabbed the axe, he was getting very close to me and made a blow at me with the axe, and I dodged him, the handle striking me on the left shoulder, jerking the axe out of his hand. I gave back three or four steps from him, and by then I had gotten to where my brother had stopped, and was standing with the gun on his shoulder. That was my brother Wesley. As the blow came and I dodged it, I was right at my brother and I reached and took the gun off his shoulder, and smashed him around the side of the neck or head. It staggered him considerably. He didn't fall. [Here witness indicates position of parties.] Q. When you struck him with the gun, what did you say, if anything? A. Filmore made about one step towards me with his right hand in his pocket, and as it came above his pocket, with the stone in his left hand, the right hand with the revolver in it, I fired. Q. How was he holding the pistol when you fired? [Witness indicates.] Q. Where was it when you fired? A. The butt was just above the pocket. Q. Did you see the pistol? A. Yes, sir. From the time he came up, I saw his hand was on his pocket, and I could see the bulk. It looked like the muzzle of the pistol. [Witness indicates to the jury how the pistol was held.] I could see the butt above the edge of the pocket. Q. When you saw the pistol in that position, what did you do? A. I shot. Q. Did you move from the point where you were standing when you struck Avery with the gun, as you have described? A. After I got hold of the gun and smashed him, I didn't move; stood right where I was. It was all in a minute. Q. Why did you shoot? A. Our life is dear to us, and I saw that, if I didn't shoot, I would be killed. Q. When you shot, what did Filmore Rose do? A. Just as I threw the gun up he scinged a little. He was square facing me, and, when I threw the gun up, he scinged around to the right, turning his left shoulder a little towards me. The instant I fired he began to sink down. He sank down, and at that moment I spoke to my brother, and said: 'Let's go.' Q. How did you go? A. Back towards home. Q. Did you run or walk? A. We trotted; didn't run fast; went faster than a walk. Of course, when I fired the gun, I thought Avery would go to his father, and I expected when Avery got to his father he would grab the pistol. That was why we hurried away." The witness further testified that, when he reached his home, he changed his clothing and reloaded the gun, and went with it to Spruce Pine, and surrendered himself to an officer. He took the gun with him because he thought he would be assaulted. There was evidence tending to show that the prisoner and the deceased were very unfriendly at the time of the homicide, and had been for some time before. He had spoken before to the deceased about driving on his land, and the deceased became angry and quarreled with him, though he did not quarrel himself, but spoke mildly to him. The defendant, in this connection, testified: "I had been cursed by him and told him to never speak to me any more, and he had given me orders never to speak to him any more. Q. What made him mad with you [that morning]? A. My speaking to him, I suppose. Q. Didn't you know by your experience before that time that, if you spoke to him, it would make him mad? A. He seemed to be very passionate. Q. Did he get mad when you would tell him to keep off the road and clover? A. Yes; he got mad before. Q. You expected him to get mad that morning? A. I did not know whether he would get mad. I don't know what you are going to do. I spoke as kind to him as I am talking to you. I knew he had gotten mad at other times." He further stated that he bore no malice towards the deceased at the time of the shooting; that he had learned not to entertain malice; that the clover and grass were not worth much, not over ten cents; that deceased weighed about 140 pounds and the boy Avery Rose, about 125 pounds, and that he and his brother, Wesley, each weighed about 165 pounds. There was evidence that the prisoner and his brother, Wesley, did not start from home together. They met at the river, a half mile from the place of the homicide, prisoner with the axe and Wesley with the gun, which he carried for his brother to shoot squirrels with, as he did not hunt.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

During the trial, after four of the counsel had closed their addresses to the jury, and just after one of the defendant's counsel had spoken, the judge said to the sheriff: "You can give the jury water, and, gentlemen of the jury, if you wish to retire to your room [the jury room being a private room at the right of the jury box], you can do so for a few minutes. We have no band to play between the speeches." Defendant excepted. The defendant requested the court to charge the jury that the language used by him when talking to the deceased about keeping off the clover was not calculated to provoke a difficulty or bring on a fight, if the words were spoken in a pleasant way and in a mild tone of voice. This the court refused to do and defendant excepted. The defendant requested the court to give several instructions to the jury, and, among others, the following, which is typical of all of them, and presents the question of self-defense to the jury as fully as any of them: "The court charges you that from all the evidence both for the state and the defendant the defendants were in their field where they had a right to be, and being in a place where they had a right to be, if they were without fault in bringing on the difficulty and the deceased advanced upon them or either of them with a rock or pistol, with intent to slay the prisoners or either of them, then the defendants were not required to retreat or fly, but might stand their ground and repel the assault even to the extent of taking the life of the deceased, and, if they did this, your verdict should be 'not guilty.' You are to be the judges of the reasonableness of the apprehension of the prisoners, or either of them, at the time they were assaulted, if you shall find from the evidence that they were assaulted, and, to do this, you are to place yourselves in the position and circumstances that the prisoners were placed in at the time, and say whether or not their apprehension was reasonable." The record states that this instruction was given substantially. At all events, the court charged the jury as follows:

"(1) But, when a person is without fault, and in a place where he has a right to be, and a sudden, fierce, and continuous assault is made upon him with a deadly weapon, he may stand his ground and slay his adversary, if necessary, to protect himself from death or great bodily harm. And the accused under such circumstances is not required to wait until the opportunity for successful defense is passed, but has the right to act in time to prevent death or great bodily harm, and act on the facts and circumstances as they appear to the prisoner, which facts and circumstances are considered by the jury as sufficient to put in fear of death or great bodily harm a person of reasonable firmness and self-possession; and if under such circumstances the prisoner, Charlie Rowe, shot the deceased, it would be excusable homicide.

"(2) If you should find from the evidence that Charlie Rowe was in a place he had a right to be, and I charge you that he was in a place where he had a right to be, being on his own land, and you should find that he was reasonably without fault in bringing on the difficulty, and that Filmore Rose made a sudden, serious, and continuous assault upon them, then Charlie Rowe would be allowed to stand his ground and shoot the deceased to save his own life or himself from serious bodily harm.

"(3) Whether a person who is assaulted by another will be justified in using such violence in resistance as will produce death must depend upon the nature of the assault, and the circumstances under which it was committed. It may be of such a character that the party assaulted may reasonably apprehend death or great bodily harm to his person, and, in order to protect himself from such an assault, he may kill his adversary. The law of self-defense is founded on necessity, and, in order to justify or excuse the taking of human life upon this ground, it must appear first that the slayer had reason to believe that he was in danger of losing his life or of receiving great bodily harm; secondly, it must also appear to the jury that he believed as a reasonably firm man that, in order to avoid such danger, it was necessary for him to take the life of the deceased. The danger of losing life or receiving great bodily harm must be real or honestly believed to be so at the time, and on reasonable ground, and the jury is the judge of such reasonableness of his fears. Though it may afterwards be ascertained that there was no actual danger, yet the slayer has a right to kill in self-defense if the danger is reasonably apparent. It should appear that the circumstances in which the slayer was placed were such as would have produced the fear of death or great bodily harm in the mind of a man of reasonable prudence, courage, and self-possession."

The court was also requested to charge the jury that there was no evidence of manslaughter. This was refused, and defendant excepted. Judgment was entered upon the verdict, and defendant appealed.

Hudgins & Watson, W. L. Lambert, C. E. Greene, M. L. Wilson, and Black & Ragland, for appellant. T. W. Bickett, Atty. Gen., G. L. Jones, J. W. Pless, and John C. McBee, for the State.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The remark of the judge to the jury is severely criticised by counsel as an intimation by him that the case was being argued by defendant's counsel at too great length, but we cannot draw this inference from it. Counsel for the state might just as well complain that it was directed against them. It seems to have been made indifferently. We are not informed by the record what elicited the remark, and we are unable to see that it was prejudicial to the defendant. It may have been so, but it is incumbent upon him to show it. We will not presume error. State v. Tyson, 133 N. C. 692, 45 S. E. 838; State v. Davis, 134 N. C. 633, 46 S. E. 722; State v. Lance, 149 N. C. 551, 63 S. E. 198; State v. Plyler, 153 N. C. 630, 69 S. E. 269.

[2] But it was strenuously contended and argued before us with much force and plausibility that the words of the defendant, addressed to the deceased, were not calculated, nor could they have been intended to provoke a difficulty, and therefore, if the jury accepted the defendant's version of the facts, he was without fault, while the deceased made a sudden and deadly assault upon him, thus making complete the right of self-defense. Whether language is provocative or not cannot always be determined by a mere consideration of the words by themselves. It is sometimes necessary, in order to ascertain the meaning or intention of the speaker, or the probable effect of what is said upon the person to whom he has spoken, that we should view them in their proper setting, the circumstances and surroundings of the parties, their previous relations to each other, and the state of their feelings. What is said by a friend may pass unnoticed, while, if the same words are uttered by an enemy, they are like a spark, though small it be, falling into powder, and the explosion quickly follows. In such a case a single word, though apparently innocent and harmless, will arouse the human passions of anger and resentment. An illustration may be found in McGrew v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 49 S. W. 226, in which it appeared that defendant and deceased, being unfriendly, had met casually in a saloon. Defendant ordered a glass of Dutch beer, whereupon deceased said, "I will take a glass of American beer," and a fight ensued. It was contended that the words of the deceased were not calculated to provoke a difficulty, but the court ruled otherwise, and said: "While the act of provocation must be confined to the time when the homicide was committed, yet we do not understand by this that we cannot look back to facts transpiring before this, the course of conduct of the parties, and their former conversations, in order to shed light upon and render significant some act or declaration done at the time of the homicide." The evidence in the case shows that the deceased had previously quarreled with the defendant about this same matter, and each had ordered the other not to speak to him. They were enemies, and the defendant should have known, and did know, of this state of feeling at the time he spoke to the deceased about driving over his "clover patch." According to his own testimony, he accused the deceased of bad faith, in that he had deliberately broken his promise not to injure his grass and clover, and he should have known, if he did not know, that such language was calculated to provoke a difficulty, as deceased had quarreled with him before under like circumstances, and they would have fought then if the defendant, as he says, had not exercised great self-control. The court properly instructed the jury to consider the evidence and decide whether or not the words were calculated and intended to bring on a fight, and the exception to this part of the charge must be overruled.

[3] The defendant was entitled to the instruction requested by him and which we have set out in the statement of the case, if he was entitled to any which he asked to be given, but, while the judge did not use the language of the prayer, as he was not required to do so, we think the substance of the instruction was given in the general charge to the jury, and that was a sufficient response to the prayer. It may well be said that the charge of the court was favorable to the defendant, as much so as he had any right to expect, for the jury were told that the defendant was where he had a right to be, and that, if a sudden, fierce, and continuous assault was made upon him with a deadly weapon, the law permitted him "to stand his ground," and slay his adversary, and he was not required to wait until the opportunity for successful defense had passed, but might act at once upon the facts as they appeared to him, and if the jury found, when the evidence is thus considered—that is, by putting themselves in his place—that the circumstances were such as to put a man of ordinary firmness in fear of death or great bodily harm, the killing of the deceased was excusable, and they should acquit the defendant. The following instruction was still more favorable: "If you find from the evidence that the defendant was in a place he had a right to be, and I charge you he was in a place where he had a right to be, being on his own land, and you further find that he was reasonably without fault in provoking the difficulty, and that Filmore Rose made a sudden, serious, and continuous assault upon him, then the defendant had the right to stand his ground and shoot the deceased to save his own life or himself from serious bodily harm." It will be observed that in the last instruction the court did not describe the kind of assault which would justify the taking of human life with great particularity. He did not tell the jury that it must have been committed with intent to kill or even to inflict great bodily harm, but that, if it was "sudden, serious, and continuous," and without regard to its effect upon the defendant's mind or whether calculated to excite a reasonable apprehension of death or grievous bodily injury, it would be sufficient to justify him in "standing his ground" and killing his adversary.

[4] The word "serious" has no fixed or technical meaning in the law, but is rather general and indeterminate in its signification. It may when applied to an assault include one made with the intent to kill or to inflict great bodily harm, or it may not, and the jury should have been instructed more definitely upon the character of assault that will justify a killing in self-defense, but this omission was clearly in favor of the defendant, and he has no just cause of complaint. The defendant certainly has no ground upon which to base an exception that the case has not been tried in accordance with the law as declared in former decisions of this court. State v. Dixon, 75 N. C. 275; State v. Blevins, 138 N. C. 668, 50 S. E. 763; State v. Hough, 138 N. C. 663, 50 S. E. 709.

[5] The killing with a deadly weapon having been admitted, the defendant was guilty, at least, of murder in the second degree, nothing else appearing, and the burden accordingly rested upon him to satisfy the jury that such facts and circumstances of mitigation or justification existed as would excuse the homicide or reduce its grade to manslaughter. State v. Brittain, 89 N. C. 481; State v. Barrett, 132 N. C. 1005, 43 S. E. 832; State v. Gapps, 134 N. C. 622, 46 S. E. 730; State v. Fowler, 151 N. C. 731, 66 S. E. 567. There was some evidence to show that the defendant slew Filmore Rose in self-defense, and it was fairly submitted to the jury under instructions which were at least free from any error unfavorable to the defendant. The jury decided the fact against him, and accepted the theory of the state and the evidence in support of it, that there was no felonious assault upon the defendant prior to the homicide. This being so, he was guilty either of murder in the first, or, at least, in the second degree, or of manslaughter. There was ample evidence upon which a conviction of either of the degrees of murder would have been warranted, but the jury, with merciful regard for the weakness and frailty of human nature, convicted of the inferior felony. What was said in State v. Fowler, 151 N. C. 731, 66 S. E. 567 (by Justice Brown), is peculiarly applicable to this case: "When, as in this case, the plea is self-defense and the killing with a deadly weapon is established or admitted, two presumptions arise: (1) That the killing was unlawful; (2) that it was done with malice. An unlawful killing is manslaughter, and, when there is the added element of malice, it is murder in the second degree. When the defendant takes up the laboring oar, he must rebut both presumptions—the presumption that the killing was unlawful and the presumption that it was done with malice. If he stops when he has rebutted the presumption of malice, the presumption that the killing was unlawful still stands, and, unless rebutted, the defendant is guilty of manslaughter. This is a fair deduction from the cases in this state. State v. Hagan, 131 N. C. 802, 42 S. E. 901; State v. Brittain, 89 N. C. 501, 502. At the request of defendant, the judge charged the jury very explicitly that, if they should find from the evidence offered by the defendant that the killing occurred under circumstances claimed by him and testified to by his witnesses, they should return a verdict of not guilty.

[6] The jury discarded defendant's plea, and if, as now argued by him, there was nothing in the evidence to warrant a verdict of manslaughter, it was the duty of the jury to convict of murder in the second degree. It necessarily follows that under such circumstances the defendant cannot complain of a verdict for manslaughter, a lesser degree of homicide. "An error on the side of mercy is not reversible." [7] But, as also said in State v. Fowler, we think there is in this case evidence upon which a verdict of manslaughter may well be supported, and it is not necessary to apply the rule as broadly stated in State v. Quick, 150 N. C. 820, 64 S. E. 168. The jury evidently concluded that the defendant had entered into the fight willingly, if not with malice, or with deliberation and premeditation. There was evidence on the part of the state that the defendant pursued Filmore Rose and shot him, when there was no real or apparent necessity for doing so in order to defend his own person, and that, after killing him, he turned and snapped his gun twice at his son, a boy 16 years old. There was further evidence that Filmore Rose was not armed, and that defendant must have known it, as the jury rejected his statement of the facts. He and his brother ran immediately after this tragedy he says in fear of this boy, whom he thought would take the pistol from his father's pocket, when the jury find that there was none, and shoot him. There was evidence of other facts and circumstances strongly tending to show, not only the defendant's willingness, but his eagerness, for the fray. His misfortune is that the jury did not credit his story, but repudiated it and the whole of it. He was fortunate, though, in the fact that the jury, having disbelieved him, did not convict him of murder.

We have not set out the charges of the court in its entirety. If we had done so, it would appear more clearly than it does in the few passages taken therefrom that the jury were clearly and fully instructed as to the law and its application to the facts, and that the defendant was treated with perfect fairness and impartiality. We need not consider the other numerous exceptions, as they cannot be sustained in view of what we have already said, and we find no reversible error in the rulings to which they were taken.

No error.

(155 N. C. 257)

PIEDMONT LUMBER CO., Inc., et al. v.
CHRISTENBURY et ux.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. MORTGAGES (§ 298*)—PAYMENT OF DEBT.

A logging contractor of a lumber company purchased from it a logging outfit and horses for $800 and gave his note for the price secured by a mortgage on the property. He and his wife gave a mortgage on her land as collateral security for $200. The contractor, while logging for the company, became indebted to it in excess of the sum earned, and one of the horses died. The company took back the remainder of the property, valued at $587. Held, that the mortgage on the wife's land was unpaid and could be foreclosed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 836-863; Dec. Dig. § 298.*]

2. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 105*)—EXTENSION OF INDULGENCE OF PRINCIPAL DEBTOR—EFFECT.

Mere indulgence granted to the principal debtor by the creditor, without any binding agreement so to do, does not relieve the surety from liability.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 201-210; Dec. Dig. § 105.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Burke County; Webb, Judge.

Action by the Piedmont Lumber Company, Incorporated, and another, against J. W. Christenbury and another. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Reversed.

Plaintiff company, holding a mortgage with power of sale on the land of the feme defendant, to wit, one-eighth interest in the Christopher Shuffler place, as collateral security to the amount of $200 for a debt held by company on her husband for $800, which last debt had been secured by a mortgage on personal property, advertised and sold land pursuant to the terms of the mortgage, and same was bid in by plaintiff A. O. Birdsall. Deed was made pursuant to sale, which purported to convey the said land to the purchaser. Action was instituted to have said Birdsall declared the owner according to the terms of the deed. Defendants answered claiming that the $200, the portion of the debt which the mortgage was given to secure, had been paid, and prayed judgment that this fact be declared and the land released of the lien. The cause having been duly referred, the referee heard the evidence on a full finding of fact, and held, in effect: That the mortgage debt had not been paid, but same and any part thereof was justly due. Second. That the plaintiff Birdsall had not bought the land outright for himself, but had bid the same in for the company, and that plaintiff company was entitled to judgment of foreclosure. The court, reversing conclusion of the referee, gave judgment for the feme defendant to the effect that as to her the debt secured by mortgage on her land had been paid. To this judgment plaintiffs, having duly excepted, appealed.

John T. Perkins, for appellants. J. F. Spainhour, for appellees.

HOKE, J. [1] On the hearing it was made to appear: That the male defendant, J. W. Christenbury, having undertaken to do some logging for plaintiff company, said company sold him a logging outfit, including four horses, at the price of $800, and took a note therefor, secured by a mortgage on the property bearing date July 31, 1906, payable December 1, 1906, with interest from date, and plaintiff company was to make advancements to said J. W. Christenbury in provisions and money to enable him to perform his part of the contract. That at the time of said sale, or shortly thereafter, J. W. Christenbury and wife, N. L. Christenbury, executed a mortgage to the company with power of sale on the lands of the feme defendant; said mortgage containing the stipulation as follows: "This deed is to be collateral security to a chattel mortgage of eight hundred dollars and the first payment of two hundred dollars on the same is to cancel this mortgage, then this deed to be null and void, otherwise to be in full force and effect." That defendant J. W. Christenbury entered on the performance of the contract and did a large amount of logging for the company; but the advancements made to him in provisions and money were, and continued to be, largely in excess of the amount earned even after allowing him 50 cents per thousand more for logging than the amount agreed upon, and defendant J. W. Christenbury, having become indebted to plaintiff company over and above any sum earned to the amount of $600 or $700, and one of the horses worth $175 to $200 having died in the meantime, plaintiff company some time in 1907 took back the remainder of the personal property, of value at the time $587, leaving as balance due on the mortgage debt of more than $200, and thereupon plaintiff company advertised and sold the land as heretofore stated.

On these facts, and it clearly appearing that plaintiff Birdsall bid in the land for the company, we think the referee correctly held: "As a matter of law that no payment as contemplated in the contract has ever been made which would operate as a release or discharge of the mortgage debt of $200, and that J. W. Christenbury, as principal, and N. L. Christenbury, as surety, to his debt of $200, are due the Piedmont Springs Lumber Company the sum of $200, with interest thereon from the 17th day of July, 1906, and that the plaintiff lumber company is entitled to a foreclosure of the said mortgage to satisfy the said debt, interest, and costs. (2) I find as a matter of law that no title passed to the plaintiff A. C. Birdsall at the mortgage sale." The mortgage on the land in express terms purports to be collateral security to the chattel mortgage. This in ordinary acceptance should be an additional security to the property contained in the mortgage. It does not appear at all that the personal property was taken back in cancellation of the trade, the horse that died was the loss of the purchaser and owner, J. W. Christenbury, and to hold, as defendant contends, that the value of the personal property taken back should be received in exoneration of the mortgage on the realty, would be in effect to hold that this last amounted to nothing.

[2] Nor is there any merit in the position that the feme defendant is relieved by delay on the part of the company in enforcing its claim under the chattel mortgage. The authorities are to the effect that mere indulgence of the principal debtor, without any binding agreement to do so, will not relieve the surety. Jenkins v. Daniel, 125 N. C. 161, 34 S. E. 239, 74 Am. St. Rep. 632; Deal v. Cochran, 66 N. C. 269; Thornton v. Thornton, 63 N. C. 211.

There was error in the judgment of the court below, and on the facts established plaintiff company is entitled to judgment of foreclosure, and it is so ordered.

Reversed.

(155 N. C. 240)

MILLS v. McDANIEL et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1010*)—FINDINGS—CONCLUSIVENESS.

The trial court's adoption of a finding of fact of the clerk of the superior court on petition to have a certificate of probate added to a deed executed by husband and wife, and approval of the clerk's dismissal of the petition, is not reviewable; there being evidence justifying the finding.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3979-3982; Dec. Dig. § 1010.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Rutherford County; Lane, Judge.

Action by Henrietta Mills against Roy McDaniell and others. From a judgment dismissing the proceeding, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

McBrayer & McBrayer, W. C. McRorie, and R. S. Eaves, for appellant. Pless & Coleman, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. This was a petition filed before the clerk of the superior court, alleging that in October, 1869, William Butler and his wife executed to I. J. Spurlin a deed for the tract of land described in the petition, and that in January, 1870, said Butler and his wife appeared before J. B. Carpenter, who was at that time the probate judge and clerk of the superior court of Rutherford, and then and there the said William Butler duly acknowledged the execution of such deed before said clerk, and the privy examination of the wife of said Butler was duly taken by said officer. The petition further alleged that said clerk either failed to write out and attach to said deed the certificate of probate as aforesaid, which had been taken by him, or the said certificate has since been lost or misplaced by some of the successive owners or custodians of said deed, and the petitioner asked that such certificate of probate be now written out and attached to such deed, and that the records of the court be amended to show that said acknowledgments and privy examination were duly had in January, 1870, as above duly alleged, and that such correction should be adjudged to take effect, nunc pro tunc, as of January 8, 1870, at the time the acknowledgment and privy examination and the certificate of probate thereon were in reality had.

The grave questions of law intended to be presented, and which would have been presented if the facts had been found in accordance with the allegations of the complaint, do not arise, because the clerk found it as fact, and adjudged, "that the said deed was not duly and legally proven as alleged in the petition, and that no privy examination of the wife of said Butler was taken or had as alleged in the petition, or at any other time or before any other officer." On appeal to the judge, he adopted the finding of fact of the clerk, and approved his judgment dismissing the proceeding. There was evidence which justified such finding of fact. In such case the action of the court below is not reviewable. Leak v. Covington, 99 N. C. 559, 6 S. E. 241; Brafford v. Reed, 125 N. C. 311, 34 S. E. 443.

The judgment of the court below is therefore affirmed.

(155 N. C. 235)

ELLIOTT v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 17, 1911.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—DELAY IN TRANSPORTATION—PENALTY—"PARTY AGGRIEVED."

Where goods are delivered to a carrier for transportation and a bill of lading issued, the title, in the absence of any direction or agreement to the contrary, vests in the consignee, who alone is the party aggrieved with Revisal 1905, § 2632, imposing a penalty for delay in transporting freight.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 1, pp. 273-278; vol. 8, pp. 7569, 7570.]

2. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—DELAY IN TRANSPORTATION—"PARTY AGGRIEVED."

Where goods are shipped under an open bill of lading, and the contract between the shipper and the consignee provides that the goods are not to be paid for until received, inspected, and weighed at the point of destination, and the stipulation is inserted to ascertain the quantity of the goods and the price therefor, the title remains in the shipper, who is the party aggrieved by the carrier's delay in transportation, and he alone may sue for the penalty imposed by Revisal 1905, § 2632, though the carrier is ignorant of the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

3. SALES (§ 200*)—CONTRACTS—PASSING OF TITLE.

Where it is necessary to weigh, measure, test, or do some other act with reference to the goods to ascertain the price to be paid, the title does not pass to the buyer until such act is done, unless a contrary intention appears.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 524-528; Dec. Dig. § 200.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, McDowell County; Lane, Judge.

Action by J. Luther Elliott against the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment of dismissal, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Pless & Winborne, for appellant. S. J. Ervin, for appellee.

WALKER, J. This action was brought to recover a penalty, under Revisal 1905, § 2632, for delay by defendant in transporting a car load of chestnut wood from Glenwood, N. C., to the United States Leather Company at Old Fort, N. C. The shipment was made under an open bill of lading; but the contract between the plaintiff and the consignee, United States Leather Company, provided that the wood was not to be paid for until it had been "received, inspected and weighed" at Old Fort, and of this stipulation the defendant had no notice. By consent of the parties, the judge found the facts and held that plaintiff was not the "party aggrieved" within the meaning of the statute. Judgment was rendered dismissing the action, and plaintiff appealed.

If the stipulation as to "receiving, inspecting and weighing" entitled the plaintiff, as the "party aggrieved," to sue for the penalty, it can make no difference that the defendant had no notice of it. Rollins v. Railway, 146 N. C. 153, 59 S. E. 671; Cardwell v. Railway, 146 N. C. 218, 59 S. E. 673.

[1] We held, in Stone v. Railroad, 144 N. C. 220, 56 S. E. 932, that, "when goods are delivered to a common carrier for transportation and the bill of lading issued, the title, in the absence of any direction or agreement to the contrary, vests in the consignee, who is alone entitled to sue as the 'party aggrieved' for the penalty." This decision was approved in Cardwell's Case, supra, and followed in Gaskins v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 18, 65 S. E. 518, and Buggy Corporation v. Railroad, 152 N. C. 119, 67 S. E. 251. But in each of those cases the bill of lading was an open one, and there was nothing in the contract of sale, except in Cardwell's Case, which prevented the title of the goods vesting in the consignee upon delivery by the consignor to the carrier, and there was nothing to distinguish them from the case of an ordinary and unconditional sale and shipment under an open bill of lading. All of the title and interest of the consignor was divested, and there was no reason why he should be held to have been damaged or aggrieved by the delay in the carriage of the goods to their destination. But not so in this and other cases of a like kind. It is said in Summers v. Railroad, 138 N. C. 295, 50 S. E. 714: "As to the position that no recovery at all can be had, the court is of opinion that, on the facts of this case, the plaintiff is the party aggrieved, and the only person who had the right to enforce the penalty for delay. These penalties are not given solely on the idea of making a pecuniary compensation to the person injured, but usually for the more important purpose of enforcing the performance of a duty required by public policy or positive statutory enactment. As said in Grocery Co. v. R. R., 136 N. C. at page 404 [48 S. E. 804]: 'The object in providing penalties is clearly to compel the common carrier to perform its duty to the public.' They are sometimes enforceable only by the state; sometimes they are given to any one who shall sue for them; and again the recovery is confined, as in this instance, to the party aggrieved, the person having a peculiar and special interest in enforcing the performance of the duty. In giving the penalty to the party aggrieved, the statute simply designates the person who shall have a right to sue, and restricts it to him who, by contract, has acquired the right to demand that the service be rendered. The party aggrieved, in statutes of this character, is the one whose legal right is denied, and the penalty is enforceable independent of pecuniary injury. Ordinarily, in case of a shipment of goods by a railway to a person who has ordered them, on delivery to the railway, the company receives them as the agent of the vendee or consignee, and such person would be the aggrieved party by delay in forwarding. But in this case, by the terms of the agreement between the plaintiff and Ward & Son, the plaintiff was not to get credit for the returned goods till they were received by Ward & Son"—citing Grocery Co. v. Railroad, 136 N. C. 396, 48 S. E. 801; Switzler v. Rodman, 48 Mo. 197; Qualls v. Sayles, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 400, 45 S. W. 839.

In Cardwell's Case, a package of harness had been shipped to be delivered at Effland. The delivery at the place designated being an essential part of the contract of sale, it was held that the consignor, as the party aggrieved, could recover the penalty for delay in the transportation, and also any damages he had sustained by reason of the wrongful act of the carrier. To the same effect, and alike in its facts, is Davis v. Railway, 147 N. C. 68, 60 S. E. 722. In the Cardwell Case, the delivery was to be made at Effland. In the Davis Case, at Gastonia; the lumber not to be paid for until delivery at that place was made.

[2] In this case, the delivery of the chestnut wood was to be made at Old Fort, and to be measured, weighed, and inspected there before any part of the purchase price should be due and payable. We cannot distinguish the case from those we have cited. It is not stated in the findings of fact very clearly whether the provision for weighing, measuring, and inspecting was inserted for the purpose, not only of ascertaining whether the lumber was as represented by the plaintiff, but of fixing the price for the same; but it is fairly to be inferred therefrom that it was intended for both purposes, as the price which was agreed to be paid for the lumber is not stated.

[3] "As a general rule, where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods which are in a deliverable state, but it is necessary to weigh, measure, test, or do some other act with reference thereto, for the purpose of ascertaining the price to be paid, the property in the goods, unless a contrary intention appears, does not pass until such act is done, and this rule is particularly applicable where the goods are to be paid for when delivered." 35 Cyc. of Law & Procedure, p. 283; Devane v. Fennell, 24 N. C. 36; Porter v. Bridgers, 132 N. C. 92, 43 S. E. 551. If the facts are as we have indicated, the authorities cited will apply, and, in that event, the plaintiff would certainly be the "aggrieved party."

We might pass upon the other question raised in the brief and argument before us, if the court had clearly found all the facts required for a determination of the amount of defendant's liability. The judgment of the court below dismissing the action is reversed. So far as we can now see, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the penalty, and the amount of his recovery will depend upon the facts as found by the jury, or by the court if the parties so agree. We merely declare there was error in the ruling of the court, and set aside the judgment of nonsuit, or judgment against the plaintiff, and order a new trial of the case, in accordance with the principle herein stated.

Having decided that the plaintiff is entitled to the penalty, upon the facts relating to the liability, as they now appear, it may be that the parties can settle without further litigation, and will prefer that course; there being a very small difference in amount between them.

ERROR.

(155 N. C. 466)

STATE v. BOYNTON.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. May 24, 1911.)

1. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 233*)—CRIMINAL PROSECUTION—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE—INCRIMINATING CIRCUMSTANCES—INTERNAL REVENUE LICENSE.

Revisal 1905, § 2060, provides that the possession of or issuance to any person of a license to sell whisky by the United States government in any city where such sale is prohibited by law shall be prima facie evidence that the holder is guilty of doing the act permitted thereby in violation of the laws of the state, etc., and, in a prosecution for the illicit sale of whisky, where defendant had a government license to sell at a designated place in a city, the license is admissible as tending to establish a sale at a different place in the city, as it tends to show that the defendant had the whisky on hand and was in a condition to violate the law by making the sale as charged.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 298½; Dec. Dig. § 233.*]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 233*)—CRIMINAL PROSECUTION—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE—POSSESSION OF LIQUOR AND APPLIANCES.

In a prosecution for the illicit sale of whisky, evidence that prior to the sale charged defendant had whisky in his possession at different places in the city, and that at the places under his control whisky was being sold and drunk, and that persons who had been in his places of business had seen whisky and beer therein, is admissible to show that defendant had whisky on hand in prohibited territory and was prepared to make the illegal sale charged by the indictment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 295; Dec. Dig. § 233.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 369*)—OTHER OFFENSES AS EVIDENCE—OFFENSE CHARGED—OFFENSES AGAINST LIQUOR LAWS.

The rule that evidence of one illegal sale of intoxicating liquors should not be received as evidence that another such sale had been made exists only where the sales are entirely distinct transactions, the one having no fair tendency to establish the other, and not where the testimony tends to show that defendant habitually kept liquor on hand for the purpose of making illegal sales.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 822-824; Dec. Dig. § 369.*]

4. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 233*)—CRIMINAL PROSECUTION—EVIDENCE—INCRIMINATING CIRCUMSTANCES IN GENERAL.

Defendant's possession of liquors at the time of the illegal sale charged is a circumstance admissible against him, and in general the circumstances under which liquors are kept and that they are kept at other places may be shown.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 295; Dec. Dig. § 233.*]

5. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 239*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—LICENSE.

In a prosecution for the illicit sale of whisky, an instruction that under Revisal 1905, § 2060, the possession of a government license to sell liquor in a city where its sale is forbidden is prima facie evidence that the person licensed is guilty of doing an illegal act permitted by such license, and that he is selling liquor under a license at the place specified in the indictment, and that, while the license may be considered as tending to show that defendant is exercising the privilege of selling liquor at the place specified, yet, in order to convict, the evidence must satisfy beyond a reasonable doubt that he made the sale charged in the indictment, is correct, since the place specified referred to the city, and the effect and weight of the presumption is properly stated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 331-347; Dec. Dig. § 239.*]

6. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 239*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

An instruction, in a prosecution for the illicit sale of whisky, that evidence of defendant's previous possession of whisky, and that it had been previously sold and drunk in places managed by him, was for the purpose of corroborating the contention of the state that he is a liquor dealer and had liquor in his possession, and is to be considered for that purpose only, but not to prove that he sold it to the prosecuting witness in this case, is not erroneous, since the effect allowed to such evidence was properly stated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Dec. Dig. § 239.*]

7. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 785*)—EVIDENCE—WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY—TESTIMONY OF INTERESTED PERSONS—DETECTIVE.

It is a general rule that the jury should be directed to scrutinize the evidence of a paid detective and to make proper allowance for the probable bias of one having such an interest in the outcome of the prosecution, and also as to any other facts calculated to influence the testimony of the witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1774; Dec. Dig. § 785.*]

8. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 785*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY—CHARACTER OF EVIDENCE—DETECTIVE.

Where the prosecuting witness, at the trial of defendant for the illicit sale of whisky, was a paid detective employed in the prosecution of such cases, an instruction that, when one acts in the capacity of a private detective or public officer, it becomes the duty of the jury to scrutinize his testimony and to say whether the testimony of a person so acting is biased and whether the interest he serves has influenced him to an extent that would affect his testimony, is a sufficient caution as to the weight to be given to the testimony of such witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1774; Dec. Dig. § 785;* Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 333.]

9. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 822*)—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—CHARGE CONSTRUED AS A WHOLE.

The charge in a criminal prosecution should be construed as a whole.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1990; Dec. Dig. § 822.*]

10. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 239*)—TRIAL—PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY—INSTRUCTION AS TO DUTIES OF THE JURY.

The jury, in a trial for an alleged illicit sale of whisky, were instructed that it was their duty to try the defendant under the evidence, and that juries in such cases are not privileged to try the case upon any individual ideas as to the wisdom of the laws forbidding the sale of spirituous liquors, that, if they were prohibitionists, they must try defendant as they would if they were anti-prohibitionists, and, if they were anti-prohibitionists, they must try him under the law and the evidence as if they were prohibitionists, and that they should divest themselves of prejudice, take the evidence from the witnesses and the law from the court, and determine guilt or innocence as they should find, when read as a whole, is in effect a direction to give the defendant a fair and impartial trial upon the law and the testimony and upon that alone, and is not improper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Dec. Dig. § 239.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Buncombe County; Council, Judge.

J. K. Boynton was convicted of the illicit sale of whisky in the city of Asheville, and he appeals. Affirmed.

On the part of the state, C. M. Laughter, the alleged purchaser of the whisky, testified as follows: "That on October 6, 1910, he bought a pint of rye liquor from the defendant, at No. 33 South Main street, and paid him 75 cents therefor," giving in detail the circumstances under which he purchased. On cross-examination he said that he was a carpenter, and had given up this business and accepted employment to work up liquor cases as a detective, for the city of Asheville; that he got a salary which was paid him by the city of $70 a month, as a special policeman for such purpose, and was furnished with money from time to time to purchase the whisky, which money he never accounted for and was not required to account for; that this money was furnished him by Col. Lusk, and witness used it as he was told to do. The state, over defendant's objection, then offered in evidence a list of names from the Collector of Internal Revenue Office, certified as being a list of those to whom government license had been sold to retail spirituous liquors, in Asheville, N. C.; the certificate as directly relevant to defendant's case being in terms as follows: "Record of Special Taxpayers in Buncombe County, 5th District of N. C. Name. Boynton, J. K. R. L. D. Asheville, Blomberg Bldg. Passenger Station. July 1910. Amt. of taxes $25.00. Issued June 30th, 1910. Serial Number, 145784. Transferred August 20th, 1910, to 28 W. College St., Asheville. [Signed] Geo. H. Brown, Collector of Internal Revenue, 5th District of N. C. Certified Form, 7541, issued September 19, 1910, in lieu of stamp which was lost." Defendant specifying his objections as follows: "(a) Because defendant was not charged with being a liquor dealer. (b) That the place mentioned in said list is not the place where the prosecuting witness testified that he had purchased whisky from the defendant. (c) That the paper introduced shows the defendant was not authorized to sell, under said license, at any place other than No. 28 College street, Asheville, N. C."

The state, over defendant's objection, was allowed to show that, by Watt Britt, J. B. Bryson, and others, and at some time prior to this alleged sale and within 12 months, defendant had whisky in his possession in different quarters and in places in Asheville, N. C., and that at the business places under control and management of defendant, to wit, at the American Saloon on College street, and at Lexington avenue, and at 28 College street whisky was being sold and drunk, and the record further shows "That the state was permitted to introduce many other witnesses to show that they knew the defendant, that they had been in his place of business, and had seen whisky and beer in his places often." There was verdict of guilty, and from judgment on the verdict the defendant appealed and assigned for error the rulings of the court on questions of evidence, and to the charge of the court as indicated by various exceptions, properly noted.

G. S. Reynolds and J. G. Merrimon, for appellant. T. W. Bickett, Atty. Gen., and G. L. Jones, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). Our statute (section 2060, Revisal) provides, in effect: "That the possession of or issuance to any person of a license to manufacture, sell, or rectify whisky by the United States government, in any county, city or town where such manufacture, sale, etc., are prohibited by law, shall be prima facie evidence that the person, having such license or to whom the same was issued is guilty of doing the act permitted by such license in violation of the laws of the state, etc." The occasion for the enactment of such a law and its application to a state of facts not dissimilar to those presented here were considered and passed upon in State v. Dowdy, 145 N. C. 432, 58 S. E. 1002, and it was there held that the United States license was properly admitted in evidence. True, the questions chiefly discussed and dealt with in Dowdy's Case were: (1) As to whether the certificate there presented came within the term "license," used in the statute. (2) Whether the act was in excess of the power vested in the Legislature to confer artificial weight on a given kind of proof; and (3) whether it was in violation of the right of the accused to be confronted with the witnesses against him. An examination of the facts, however, will disclose that while the license specified a particular place, to wit, 104 Queen street, it was admitted as evidence and given its proper weight as a relevant circumstance, tending to establish an illegal sale, in the city of New Bern. The case, therefore, is a direct authority in support of his honor's ruling, and on further reflection we are satisfied that on this point also Dowdy's Case was well decided.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

[1] By the terms of the statute, the license is evidence that the holder is doing the act that it permits, selling whisky by retail, in the county of Buncombe and city of Asheville, 28 College street, and this is a relevant circumstance, tending to establish a sale elsewhere in Asheville, as it shows, or tends to show, that the defendant had the whisky on hand and was in a condition to violate the law by making the sale as charged, the sale to C. M. Laughter. It is testimony in support of direct evidence of such a sale. Just as much so as if he was shown to have a barrel of whisky at 28 College street and was unlawfully engaged in selling it.

[2] And for the same reason the rulings must be upheld by which the oral evidence was admitted. It tended to show that defendant had and kept whisky on hand, in prohibited territory, and was prepared and equipped to make the illegal sale charged in the bill of indictment.

[3] There are, as defendant contends, many decisions of the court to the effect that one illegal sale should not be received as evidence that another such sale had been made; but this rule exists where they are entirely separated, distinct transactions, the one having no fair or reasonable tendency to establish the other, and should not obtain where the testimony, as it does in this case, tends to show that defendant habitually kept whisky on hand or under his control for the purpose of making illegal sales. The position is in accord with right reason and is well supported by authority.

[4] In 7 Encyclopædia of Evidence, p. 760, the author says: "Of course the possession of liquors by the defendant, at the time of the offense charged, is always a circumstance admissible against him, and in general the circumstances under which liquors are kept, and even that they are kept at other places or in other rooms, may be shown." And there are numerous decisions in support of this statement. State v. Illsley, 81 Iowa, 49, 46 N. W. 977; State v. Welch, 64 N. H. 525, 15 Atl. 146; State v. Pfefferle, 36 Kan. 90, 12 Pac. 406.

[5] Counsel for defendant, in his earnest and able argument before us, insisted that reversible error was committed, to his client's prejudice, when his honor, among other things, charged the jury, in reference to the effect of the United States revenue license, as follows: "The possession or issuance to any person of a license to manufacture, rectify, or sell spirituous liquor under section 2080 of the Code of North Carolina, laws of this state, makes the possession of such license prima facie evidence that the person having it, or to whom the same was issued, guilty of doing an act permitted by such license, forbidden by the laws of this state. In other words, the introduction of this paper, stating that he had a license issued to him for the purpose of selling whisky, makes it prima facie evidence that he is retailing and selling spirituous liquor under the provisions of that license, at the place specified and mentioned in the indictment." The objection being that as the license authorizes a sale of whisky at 28 College street, it should only be given the statutory effect as evidence at that place, and that the portion of the charge in question erroneously allows this same probative effect at the place of the alleged illegal sale, to wit, No. 33 South Main street; but we do not think the position correctly interprets his honor's charge. In telling the jury that the statute made the United States license prima facie evidence that the defendant was a retail liquor dealer at the "place specified and mentioned in the bill of indictment," the court was not referring to 33 South Main street, the place of the alleged illegal sale; nor was he ignoring the place specified in the license. "The place specified and mentioned in the bill of indictment" referred to the city of Asheville, and, so taken and understood, the charge is correct. The fact that he held a United States license to retail liquor at 28 College street, Asheville, N. C., was made by the statute prima facie evidence that he was there engaged in that business, and this was only recognized and allowed as a circumstance tending to support the direct evidence of the alleged illegal sale. To show that this was all the effect given the statutory presumption, the charge of the court immediately proceeds: "That, however, is not sufficient to make him guilty of the charge of selling liquor, as charged in the bill of indictment, to the state's witness C. M. Laughter, and while you can consider this license as evidence tending to show that the defendant is exercising the privilege of selling liquor, in Asheville, as specified, yet, before the state can convict him, it must go further and satisfy you from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he sold Laughter liquor, and you may consider the license, as before stated, as being evidence tending to show that he is a liquor dealer. The law makes it prima facie evidence that he is, in law, a dealer in spirituous liquor, under the provisions of the license referred to. But the state must go a step further and satisfy you from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that he sold to Laughter, before you can convict him of selling liquor under this indictment."

[6] And like effect was given the oral evidence objected to. Speaking to this testimony, the court in part said: "The state further contends that other evidence has been introduced that defendant sold spirituous liquor to others than Laughter, and the court has held it to be competent as a corroborating circumstance or circumstances, tending to show he is engaged in handling spirituous liquors, and the evidence which has been introduced tending to show that he was at the places of business, claimed to be the defendant's places of business, and that liquor was seen there under his control and in his possession, if there was such evidence, was for the purpose of corroborating the contention of the state that he is a liquor dealer and had liquor under his control and possession, and you can consider it for that purpose only, but not for the purpose of proving that he sold to Laughter." As heretofore stated, the court permitted the license and the oral evidence to be regarded as circumstances tending to support the direct evidence of the alleged illegal sale, and, for the reasons given as to the admission of the evidence, the effect allowed it in the charge must be upheld. Defendant further contended that the court did not properly caution the jury in reference to the testimony of the principal witness for the prosecution and especially in the failure to give certain prayers for instructions as follows: "In weighing the testimony of the witness Laughter, greater care should be exercised in relation to the testimony of a detective employed in hunting up evidence, who is interested in or employed to find evidence against the accused than in other cases, because of the natural and unavoidable tendency and bias of the mind of such person, against the person whom witness has been employed as a detective, and his evidence should be weighed with greater care than that given by a disinterested witness." And, second, the testimony of a detective must be scrutinized with unusual caution. These prayers have been upheld, and almost in this exact language, by courts of approved authority; but usually there were facts ultra tending to impeach the testimony of the witness, and in one of them, certainly, the detective was shown to have a pecuniary interest in the result of the verdict, and it was no doubt in reference to these facts that the prayer was approved, and not with a view of establishing any hard and fast formula as to the evidence of detectives.

[7] The general rule is that the jury should be directed to scrutinize the evidence of a paid detective and make proper allowance for the bias likely to exist in one having such an interest in the outcome of the prosecution and in reference to any other relevant facts calculated to influence the testimony of the witness; but, where this is done, the exact terms in which the rule may be expressed are left, by our decisions, very largely in the discretion of the trial judge.

